St. John the Evangelist Celebrates Its 79th Anniversary

The Parish in Festive Spirit All Day, Sunday, February 5th, 1933

What a day! What a day!!

It started with a whizz and ended with a bang!!!

It was typical St. John's weather, too. It snowed, it blowed, it was hot, it was cold, the sun shone, the storm clouds scudded over the skies. In short it was a boisterous day full of climatic excitement.

Why?

Because St. John's Parish was going to celebrate its seventy-ninth birthday that day.

THE MORNING SERVICE

The late ones to the morning service got an electric shock when they arrived. They had to hunt for a vacancy and the hunting was not so good. Old-timers from North, South, East and West were there and were we glad to see them! The Choir and the Chancel of the Church were filled with palms and flowers. On the Altar were four big bunches of beautiful pink carnations. In the font was a big floral cake made up of large white carnations, in the centre of which was a big "79" in pink flowers. The morning service was vivid with life and color and beauty. The Choir surpassed itself in rendering the music of the service. It was well balanced and in perfect harmony with the occasion.

The Rector was exceptionally kind and, instead of preaching a long anniversary sermon, full of dry statistics and boasting of our successes, he talked in that "Hello, folks" way he has sometimes and just said how glad he was there to help celebrate the seventy-ninth birthday of the dear, old church and how glad he was to see so many dyed-in-the-wool St. Johnites out on such a boisterous day.

The stream of communicants to the Altar almost overwhelmed the Rector. IT WAS A SILENT BUT IMPRESSIVE TESTIMONY OF THE AMAZING VITALITY OF THE PARISH. The crowds caught the Rector totally unprepared and without an assistant. He expected, of course, many more than usual would make their Communion, but he did not have the remotest idea that the Parish would turn out so unanimously, so to speak. Before the end of the ministration he began to feel panicky, there seemed to be no end to the long string of communicants pouring up the nave of the church.

THE PARISH DINNER

Then came the Parish Dinner.

And also came the diners, singly, in families, in groups, in crowds. Little babes in arms, boys and girls, men and women, everybody. It was like a grand homecoming. The big Sunday School room and the big kindergarten room were full of tables with a capacity of 150 covers. The tables were full of food and the chairs about the tables were full of people. As soon as the first relay was fed, another and another and another followed. The boys, members of the new Boys' Club, captured all the tables in the Kindergarten and held them against all-comers. It was a great sight to see the kids eating by themselves. They licked the platter clean; just like "Jack Spratt and his wife."

OUR SUNDAY SCHOOL RALLY

After we had almost depleted the commissary department we prepared for our Sunday School Rally. The big church room was filled with twisting, writhing, squirming, grinning kids from two years up. FOUR HUNDRED AND TWO, BY ACTUAL COUNT! And DID they sing and DID they put "pep" into that afternoon program! While they were shouting, "Onward, Christian Soldiers," so loud that the sailors on the ships in the Delaware must have wondered where was that heavenly choir, in walked the Bishop of the Diocese. You know how his face gets all wrinkled up and how his eyes seem to sparkle and snap when he is pleased. Well, you should have seen his face that afternoon. He didn't have to tell us he was glad to be with us. We knew it. His big smile told us so. And were we glad to have him visit us! His address was characteristic of him—full of wit and wisdom. Even the youngest kid knew what he was talking about and was glad to listen. Of course, our Bishop is in tune with life as it is in South Philadelphia; because of the many active years he himself spent there in church and parish labors.

OUR PARISH VISITING

Then we called for volunteers to visit the sick, the aged, the shut-ins, the unemployed and the poor of our Parish. This Parish Visiting stunt was a part of our Anniversary Program and was intended to carry our birthday party all through the Parish and into the homes of those whom circumstances forced to remain away. For weeks previous to our celebration the Parishioners had been asked to bring groceries, canned goods, fruit, vegetables, preserves, etc., on Anniversary Sunday to distribute among the hungry and the destitute. Our Parish Visitors took cards of invitation to all such, asking them to be sure and come Monday morning and get their share of the donations. You should have been around Monday morning and seen the crowd of happy folk who had received these invitations.

OUR PARISH SUPPER

Promptly at 5 P. M. we sat down to supper—that is, as many of us as could be accommodated at one time. Then began the eatenest up time you ever DID see. While the first relay of guests were satisfying their hunger there were hundreds impatiently waiting their turn at the tables.

Then the tragedy!

We ran out of food!!

Nothing like that ever happened before at old St. John's. And were we mortified! We simply can't express our feelings. We had laid in twice as much food as usual, but even then we did not have enough to feed such a multitude. We are far within the bounds of veracity when we say we fed over one thousand people that day.

Right here we want to thank Mrs. Pine and all her men and women aides. We are sure they will ever remember our Seventy-ninth Anniversary as the day they did the hardest work of their lives.

THE EVENING SERVICE

The Rev. Royden K. Yerkes, D. D., was the guest preacher at our Parish Organizations' Rally in the evening. Dr. Yerkes was one time Rector of St. John's. His reminiscences were most interesting. He told us how, twenty-five years ago, St. John's was pronounced dead and ought to be abandoned. He captivated the boys and girls by the attention he showed them and let them know that he was talking to them rather than the grown folk. The evening service was bright and snappy throughout. As usual, the Choir led the congregation in a feast of hymns and anthems.

It was a glorious ending to a glorious day. After the last service Dr. Yerkes was tendered a short reception in the Sunday School room, where he met some old friends and made many new ones.

Our story is not complete without an expression of thanks to our good friend, Frank Quinn, for the loan of the palms and the gift of so many flowers which did so much to add beauty to the occasion.

THE CHOIR

By Mrs. Vernon Matthews

We wish to express our appreciation to those kindly friends who congratulated us upon the musical part of the program on the occasion of the Seventy-ninth Anniversary.

Quite a few members expressed their surprise and pleasure in the rendering of the Recessional, "The Church is One Foundation." It is a new departure for our Choir and is called "Descanting." Incidentally, it was considered one of the finest parts of the program rendered by the combined Choirs of the Episcopal Church of the city, at the Academy of Music. The hymn is sung by the Choir, in its original form, with the exception of five soprano voices, which carry a special melody written in complete harmony with the other voices. The effect is beautiful, naturally, and we must be forgiven if we congratulate ourselves on being successful in our attempt to imitate the larger choirs of the city.

We are trying hard to keep St. John's Choir on a par with other volunteer choirs and, by your thoughtful words of encouragement, we feel that we are being more or less successful.

The Daily Dozen for Toleration

By William H. Jefferys, M. D.

Exercise 3.

In Exercise One we considered our fellow Christian bodies in a friendly spirit. In Exercise Two we tried to see that there is some light in all the great religions.

Let us take one more larger group for like consideration. For instance: The twenty greater Nations of the world. We cannot take newspaper impressions of our sister Nations. Politicians, backed by newspapers, are the chief causes of international wars. In his vision of the getting together of the Nations, President Wilson was probably decades ahead of his time; but he pointed us to the ideal, and some day we shall arrive. In order to appreciate our fellow Nations we have got to get to know them and real knowledge is built not only on understanding, but appreciation.

Being an Anglo-Saxon, the writer likes Anglo-Saxon people best of any in the world. Having lived in China for thirteen years, he thinks the Chinese people are the next most attractive people in the world. You see, it is a question of knowing, and understanding, and appreciating.

The two Nations that we have the most difficulty understanding at present are the French and the Japanese. I would think that we might pick either one of these two for our exercise and see if we cannot get their point of view in so far as they differ from our point of view on the questions that we do not seem to agree about; and then we might pass to a consideration, only too easy in both cases, of the magnificent qualities of both these peoples.

You remember that in our exercises we are not considering people's faults, or approaching them in a hyper-critical attitude. The newspapers keep constantly talking about the possibility that we shall have to go to war with Japan some day. I suppose that the Japanese consider the American people the greatest menace to their national integrity that exists in the world. We have the Monroe Doctrine with regard to this Hemisphere; the Japanese do not see why they should not have a Monroe Doctrine with regard to their Hemisphere, at least to their neighborhood. I could name ten magnificent characteristics of the Japanese people without moving in my chair. Well, of course, I would have to move my jaw.

The same could be said of the French. It is awfully easy to find their magnificent qualities; but we do not understand them as peoples. With the Japanese we are the most meddlesome people in the world. To the French we are in the unfortunate position of having lent them money. If we could exclude matters of jealousy, lending money to people nourishes their antagonism to us more quickly than any other one thing we can do. Most people, when they borrow money, do not mean to pay it back. They use the word "borrow" as a polite way of getting the money quickly and with what they consider self-respect. The French people, in dire necessity, borrowed huge sums of money to save their national life. They took everything that anybody would give them for the same purpose. Then, when their life was saved—it reminds me of an old gentleman whom one of my brothers picked up out of the surf when he had been rolled over until he was almost drowned. His first remark was, "Some damn fool caught me by the leg and held me under." The French politicians are teaching the French Nation to feel that way about us; but, essentially, the French are an extremely courteous, artistic, beauty-loving, home-loving, passionately patriotic Nation which has been, for centuries, surrounded by aggressors. She forgets that once upon a time a great soldier came into her national life and she did all the aggressing; but no doubt it was under the same plea that the Germans now make: that they had to go to war to defend their national existence. We can be pretty tolerant of the French people if we remember their position, their pride, their determination to live, and the reasons that they have for a perpetual sense of impending danger.

It is easy for Canada and the United States to live in peace, because we know each other and understand each other. We speak the same language; think the same way; do the same kind of things; live in the same kind of country. When we look at other Nations we must realize the different conditions under which they exist; that they have vastly different problems to meet from ours; and that the most sporting and finest game in the world to play is not football, nor baseball, nor the Olympics; but to live at peace with our neighbors; and our neighbors are the other Nations of the world.

THE LENTEN SEASON

HOW SHALL WE OBSERVE IT?

The Church has shown great wisdom in the arrangement of the Calendar. It shows a definiteness and a consistency which immediately arrests the attention. The year begins with a preparation to celebrate the greatest event in history. This particular season is Advent. At the end of the long period of spiritual relaxation we are reminded by the Church that we approach an event of major importance to every Christian, the Celebration of the Advent of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, the Redeemer of the world. It is an event too important to approach without thorough preparation. We must spend days and weeks to get our minds, our spirits in tune, so that when the happy event arrives we will be prepared to abandon ourselves to the joy of the occasion and be filled with the Spirit of Christmas and of the Epiphany.

THE BETWEEN SEASON

The joyous season passes. We are not in a state of mind and spirit to consistently enter immediately into that most solemn season of the Church year; the Lenten Season. If Lent is to impress upon us the peculiar lessons it has to teach us, we must be restored to a proper spiritual state to receive fully these lessons. The season of rejoicing must be followed by a season of adjustment. Excitement must make room for calm serenity and Christian poise. We cannot walk from the brilliant halls of festivity and fun into the silent dignity of the Cathedral without mental and spiritual adjustment. We need a BETWEEN SEASON OF PREPARATION. We must have time to divest ourselves of the regalia of joy and assume the robe of thoughtful repose before we are fit to enter into that most solemn season of the year—THE LENTEN SEASON.

The Church has provided this Between Season by appointing Septuagesima, Sexagesima and Quinquagesima Sundays as a time to quiet down and get prepared for the duties and lessons of Lent.

THE LENTEN SEASON

What a transition! Here lights are subdued; the songs of revelry are hushed; the atmosphere is changed. There is an expectancy of serious events. We feel we are treading the road of sacrifice. A distance on is the tragedy of Calvary, the Cross, the Tomb. We are reminded of the price the PRINCE OF CHRISTMAS paid for our Redemption. His sacrifice moves us to personal sacrifice. If He has so heroically died for us we ought at least make personal sacrifice to complete His scheme of Redemption. He, the Son of God, is mortified for us. We, the objects of His Divine Love and interest, must mortify and control our desires that His sacrifice be perfected in us. In this we must not make the mistake that giving up food and certain forms of pleasure is that which is required of us. When we speak of "controling our desires" we mean just that. We refer to our ego and its demands. Everything that tends to prefer self to God. Anything that dims the supreme importance of God's love to us must be eliminated from our hearts and minds. It is more than just giving up certain foods and habits and pleasures for forty days.

How cheaply some folk think Redemption can be purchased! Forty days of fasting from foods we could very well do without all the year. Forty days refraining from eating candy, theatre-going, smoking, drinking, card parties, dancing, etc., etc., etc. FORTY DAYS OF CHURCH-GOING. FORTY DAYS OF GIVING LIBERALLY TO THE CHURCH AND PERHAPS THE POOR. FORTY DAYS, out of three hundred and sixty-five days of the year, SPENT IN LIVING CLOSE TO GOD—that is the price so many think will buy eternity in heaven. Pretty Cheap Bargain!

THE TRUE PURPOSE OF LENT

All these things are just means to a very important end. Sacrifice in Lent is the only way to bring under the body to the mastery of the spirit. The spirit is given the opportunity to dominate our whole being these forty days that we may behold with clearer vision what is the real duty of man to God, to himself, to his fellow man.

The Lenten Season is a resting place in the year when we gain more strength, through repose, to tread the road of life with greater ease and surety.

As the Lenten Season approaches let us make ready, with spiritual intelligence, to use every moment of it to the Glory of God and the absolute and permanent master of our Spirits over our whole being.

God Give Us Strength To Persevere

EASTER MEMORIALS

This Idea Is Borrowed From Another Parish

Several years ago the Church of the Holy Apostles, Philadelphia, started the custom of presenting offerings on Easter Day known as Easter Memorials. It is a part of their Sunday School Lenten Offering scheme, and by means of it they are able to raise amazingly large sums for Missionary work. For years the Parish has led all the Parishes of the Diocese in the size of its Lenten Offerings.

We are not sure we have a perfect understanding of the system. However, we know enough about it to build up one like it in St. John's Parish. Of course, it is an opportunity extended to all bereaved members of the Parish to express their love for their dead and their hope in their Resurrection by means of the EASTER MEMORIAL.

We understand the Memorials are given in a special envelope at a separate time on Easter Day, at which time the names of those for whom the Memorials are given are read before the School—we suppose while the whole school is standing at attention.

We understand the Memorials vary from one to twenty-five dollars, depending upon the circumstances of the donors.

To our way of thinking the giving of Memorials on Easter Day is a beautiful idea and should be encouraged in every Parish of the Church.

We St. Johnites mean to try it this Easter and see how it works out. We have been prompted to do so by a member of the Parish who said she wished there was some way she could give three Memorials on Easter—one for her daughter and two others for dear friends. Perhaps there are others in the Parish who would welcome such an opportunity to express their love for their dead.

Understand, the Memorial is not given in the regular Sunday School Lenten Offering. That offering is taken first. Then, after singing an Easter carol, a call is made for the EASTER MEMORIALS and all who wish to present a Memorial come forward to the Chancel bringing their Memorial gifts with them. As they are presented the names, for whom the Memorials are given, are read before the whole School.

Also, in our case, these names will be printed in the next issue of the BROADCASTER under a separate heading.

Broadcasting from S. J. C.

Not long ago we made a Sunday afternoon visit on a family in the Parish. The conversation turned to church attendance and this little incident was related by the mother:

"What do you think happened last Sunday morning?"

"What?"

"Why, I let my son lie abed as long as he pleased, thinking he needed the rest. He got up about 11 A. M. and wanted to know why he had not been called in time for church."

"I told him I thought he needed the rest."

"'Yes,' he replied, 'but if I had to go to work you wouldn't have let me oversleep.'"

A brilliant smile spread over the dear mother's face as she said, "Now what do you think of that?"

We said the story was good enough to go into the Broadcaster.

So here it is. We would wager anything that every mother in the Parish would grin just as happily if their sons and their daughters would come down Sunday mornings with a grouch because they had not been called in time for church.

We, the young people of the Parish of St. John the Evangelist, must form a "Get Up Early Sunday Mornings Society and insist our mothers call us in time for church."

WHERE DO YOU FIT?

Where do you fit in this world of ours
With its hustle and bustle and work?
Are you one of the throng that helps it along—
Or are you with those who shirk?
Do you hit the job with a smile or frown?
Do you carry a grouch all day?
Are you one of the flock that watches the clock?
Are you workin' for more than pay?
Just pull in your slack and count up your score
Locate what you're aimin' to hit—
Don't waste ammunition and all your ambition
But find out just where you fit.

"Bee Hive."

SOME ARE THAT KIND

"Are you looking for a permanent investment?"

"Not too permanent."

"Why?"

"I don't want to put my money in unless there's a chance to get it out."

The Sunday School attendance is growing amazingly. Where in the world do all the scholars come from?

A REAL GENTLEMAN

A little boy was seated at the dinner table on an occasion of some importance when there were numerous guests present. Suddenly the youngster, in an awkward moment, tipped a glass of water over on the tablecloth. The man sitting next to the boy saw that he was about to cry, whereupon the man tipped his glass of water over and laughingly said: "Well, Bobby, it looks like you and I were the clumsiest folk here." It took a real gentleman to do that.

Lent is almost here. You have certain very important duties to perform during this season. See that you neglect none of them.

Isn't it peculiar? Many of our communicants who would keep their church envelopes paid up to date but cannot do so because they are out of a job. Whereas, many of our communicants, who are working steadily, stubbornly refuse to support the church at all.

How to Go Through Lent

Start full of spiritual enthusiasm. Keep going full of spiritual enthusiasm. End full of spiritual enthusiasm.

How about sending us a dollar for a year's subscription to the Broadcaster?

Here Is a New Depression Yarn

Something of the farmer's plight today may be gathered from the following letter written to a weekly magazine by a farmer in Iowa: "I heard something a couple of years ago or so how they were going to change the size of dollar bills, making them smaller. Did they, or didn't they?"

Our Sunday School Lenten Offering goal—$2000.00.

It's a Sad Tale, Mates

Editor of Sweet Peas:

Sir:—After listening to the varied protests of the new taxes, I wish to state that my present financial condition is due to the effect of Federal laws, State laws, city laws, county laws, brother-in-laws, sister-in-laws, mother-in-laws, father-in-laws and outlaws, all of which have been foisted upon an unsuspecting public.

Through all these laws I am compelled to pay a business tax, sales tax, school tax, water tax, income tax, auto tax and dog tax.

In addition to these irritating taxes I am forced by the strong arm of the law to get permits.

I am required to get a business license, a sign license, a motor license, a dog license and a marriage license.

I am expected, introspected, disrespected, suspected, informed, required, summoned, fined, commanded and compelled until all I know is that I am supposed to provide an inexhaustible supply of money for every known need, desire or hope of the human race, and simply because I refuse I am cussed, discussed, boycotted, talked to, talked about, lied to, lied about, held up, held down and robbed until I am nearly ruined.

I can tell you honestly, Mr. Editor, that failing a miracle, you will never hear from me again, and the only reason I am holding on to life is—simply to see what in heck is coming next.—Sent in by Cook Guilford.

How Ben Hur Was Written

Two infidels once sat in a railway car discussing Christ's wonderful life. One of them said, "I think an interesting romance could be written about Him." The other replied, "And you are just the man to write it. Set forth the correct view of His life and character. Tear down the prevailing sentiment as to His divineness and paint Him as He was—a man among men." The suggestion was acted on and the romance was written. The man who made the suggestion was Colonel Ingersoll; and the author was General Lew Wallace; and the book was Ben Hur. In the process of constructing it he found himself facing the unaccountable Man. The more he studied His life and character the more profoundly he was convinced that He was more than a man among men; until at length like the centurion under the Cross, he was constrained to cry, "Verily, this was the Son of God."—Diocese of Fond Du Lac.

When a Nickel Is Money

I am a nickel.

I am not on speaking terms with the candy man.

I am too small to get into the movies.

I am not large enough to buy a necktie.

I am a small consideration in the purchase of gasoline.

I am not fit to be a tip. But—believe me—
When I go to church and Sunday School
I AM SOME MONEY!

We Are Renovizing St. John's Church.

The Epiphany Ordinations

An Incident of Interest to This Parish

On the Feast of the Epiphany (January 6th) Bishop Francis M. Taitt ordained four men to the Deaconate and two Deacons to the Priesthood. The service, which was most impressive, was held in St. Matthew's Church, Eighteenth Street and Girard Avenue.

One of those ordained to the Priesthood was WENDELL W. PHILLIPS. Wendell was born in Reading, Pennsylvania, September 8, 1905. Shortly after his birth his parents moved to Philadelphia and the family lived in Germantown, where Wendell attended Public School and graduated from the Germantown High School in 1922. Later he entered Wesleyan University and graduated from that institution of learning in 1926. After completing his collegiate career he was appointed teacher of English, Ethics and Athletics in the American University, at Cairo, Egypt, where he remained from 1926 to 1929.

On the feast of the Transfiguration, August 6, 1929, Wendell was presented for Confirmation by your Rector in the Chapel of the Church House, Nineteenth and Walnut Streets, the Right Reverend Thomas J. Garland, D. D., Bishop of the Diocese, officiating. He immediately became postulant for Holy Orders from the Church of St. John the Evangelist, northwest corner, Third and Reed Streets, where he was officially registered as communicant.

On Saturday, June 28, 1930, he was married to the charming Marguerite M. Ronzevalle, whom he met while teaching in the American University in Cairo, Egypt. Miss Ronzevalle, by the way, was received into the Protestant Episcopal Church by Bishop Francis M. Taitt, D. D., at the Church of St. John the Evangelist in the Confirmation Class presented to him Sunday, June 15, 1930, just about two weeks before her lovely wedding in Calvary Church, Germantown. We are sure she will be an inspiration and a true helper to Wendell in his ministry.

He received his theological education in the Union Theological Seminary, New York. This he supplemented with a special course in the General Seminary of the same city. He graduated from the Seminary in 1931.

From 1929 to 1932 he served the Church in the capacity of Assistant Chaplain of Columbia University.

On the Sixth Sunday after Trinity, Sunday, July 3, 1932, he was ordered Deacon in the beautiful Church of All Saints, Wynnewood, after which he returned to his duties at Columbia University, where he is still engaged in pastoral work among the student body.

We congratulate the Rev. Wendell Phillips upon his elevation to the priesthood and we sincerely hope in the near future he will visit the old church whence he got his push into the deep, and will officiate at her Altar.

We are most happy to have been his sponsor through his whole theological career. May the story of the wonderful success of the Parish of his adoption be repeated in his ministerial career.

St. John the Evangelist Boys' Club

A New Venture in Boyville

Of the creation of church organizations there is no end and many folk think that the multiplicity of organizations in the parish is not conducive to the best results in Parish management. Personally, we are not so sure of that. The more organizations, the more officers, and who does not like to be an officer! Also, much may depend upon parochial conditions. What we need, for instance, is an organization to get our gang of boys, from 6 to 16 years, together and keep them together. We tried the Boy Scout movement several times with no encouraging results. Their rules do not apply to parochial conditions, the assumption of authority by a Central Board, the restrictions as to age, the need of the uniform, are features which proved inimical to the real physical and social, as well as the spiritual development of our gang. Another evil feature of national boys' organizations is the custom of admitting boys into the church troup whose families are not connected, at least nominally, with St. John's Church. At the risk of being judged a bigot (I must announce myself opposed to mixing Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish boys in the same troup). They are not congenial and they are too clanish to adjust themselves to each other. Three times Boy Scout Troops were wrecked on that rock in this Parish.

WE NEED A ST. JOHN'S BOYS' CLUB FOR ST. JOHN'S BOYS AND THEIR FRIENDS who are not Jewish or Roman Catholic and whose families are not active members of another Communion.

Such a club has been organized by Mr. Michael Guilford, a member of St. John's Parish who has spent most of his life in the United States Army. The club is under semi-military discipline and meets every Wednesday night. There are enrolled over eighty names. Boys of any age can join. It makes no difference how poor a boy's family may be, he is always a member in good standing so long as he can play the good soldier and be square. If a boy is a liar, a thief, a trouble-maker or a coward, he gets his and gets it right. If he is incorrigible and will not be decent—BANG! HE'S OUT!! And out he stays until he realizes he must come up to the standard of decency upheld by the Club.

The Club Program includes everything a boy wants in recreation and pleasure—basketball, baseball, football, hikes, military drills, military camps, etc. The dues are low and there is no expense for uniforms. The officers are as follows:

Colonel, Michael Guilford; Major, George Powell; Captain, William Clendenning; Lieutenant-Secretary, Thomas Dean; Lieutenant-Treasurer, George Wilson; Lieutenants, William Blythe, Paul Steele, Charles Clendenning, Preston Cucknell, Emmanuel Miller, Martin Miller.

The Parish House Memorial Tablet

An Answer to the Question— "When Will It Be Placed?"

Many Parishioners and friends are asking this question because they are personally interested and have invested their money in the Tablet. It is our duty and our desire to satisfy them and to give a full account of our stewardship.

The idea of the Memorial Tablet was to raise funds to pay for the building of our Parish House. The proposition was that such a Tablet should be hung in the hall or entrance of the Parish House. On this Tablet were to be inscribed the names of our beloved who had entered into rest. For each name we had put upon the Tablet we paid Ten Dollars. This money goes into the Building Fund to help pay off the mortgage on the Parish House. Thus, the Parish House is to be a monument to our beloved dead.

We entered into the matter with enthusiasm and soon had many names inscribed upon the Chart. Many of these names were paid in full, many were paid for in part.

Then General Depression came along. Parishioners could not afford to give, even so small a sum as Ten Dollars for a memorial to those who were asleep in Him; consequently, the supply of names ceased and the money was stopped. Also, those who had made part payments and owed part for the names they had placed upon the Tablet chart, found themselves in a financial position that made it impossible to meet their obligations; consequently, no new names have been added this year and the obligations of many, who had paid down a small sum, were indefinitely suspended because, in the meantime, they had lost their jobs. Not until industrial conditions are normal and work and wages are available again will we be able to complete the Roll of Names and have them paid in full, so that we can hang the Tablet in the Parish House.

However: We want to assure both the subscribers and the prospective subscribers that we are holding ourselves responsible for its erection and that the job will be done, and will be done right, eventually. The person who is most heavily interested in the Memorial Tablet is the writer. Many names of deceased members of his family appear on the Chart and the subscription price on every name is paid in full; consequently, he is personally interested in the Memorial Tablet to the sum of a few hundred dollars. He is as anxious as any to see the Tablet in place.

However, this delay in placing the Tablet is not altogether a misfortune. It has made possible one thing which may be of importance to some of our friends. We refer to the opportunity it affords to add more names to the Chart before the Tablet is cast and hung in place. Therefore, if there are any who have been bereaved recently and wish to have the name of their beloved inscribed on the Tablet, there is still time to do so. All you need do is to give the name you wish to add to the ROLL OF NAMES to your Rector, with a written pledge that you will subscribe Ten Dollars to the Memorial Fund.

A Chart with the names for the Tablet alphabetically arranged is hanging in the upper hall of the Church. As soon as you give in the name and the pledge the name will appear on the chart.

As we have said many times before, here is a chance to erect a worthy memorial to our beloved. WHY NOT TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THE OPPORTUNITY?

And remember: We are making ourselves personally responsible for the eventual hanging of the Tablet.

RELIGION

Religion is telling the truth in your trade,
Without even counting the cost,
And having the courage to stand by the right,
Though fortune and friends may be lost.

Religion is thirty-six inches per yard,
And sixteen full ounces per pound;
And sixty whole minutes of other men's time—
Not watching these minutes roll 'round.

Religion is meeting the world with a smile,
Then bringing a bright smile back home—
A joy to the loved ones who wait for your step,
No matter how far you may roam.

Religion is giving a bright word or two
To those whose dark clouds hide their sun.
If you've got the kind of religion I mean,
You'll find your day's labors well done.

AFTER LENT—WHAT?

The Church has a very definite purpose in dividing the year into certain seasons for the practice and observation of things spiritual. Among these is the Lenten season. It is unnecessary for us to enlarge upon the purpose and practice of this all important season. The observance of Lent is so universal that the youngest child is familiar with every rule and regulation of it. We know it is the season of meditation and self analysis. A time when we are bidden to carefully examine our every act, word, thought, feeling and to weigh them in the scales of righteousness to see how near the ideal of truth as it is in Christ Jesus we have advanced.

It is only by observing this season of spiritual overhauling that we can possibly "come into the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." That is, of course, if we seriously enter into the spirit of Lent. Some churchmen seem to consider that the Church has interposed the Lenten season in the Church year as sort of a social rest period between the gay doings of the winter and the strenuous vacation season festivities abroad, at the shore, in camps, etc. A sort of social isolation as it were. Of course, to such persons the Lenten season has no benefit nor value. They are simply spiritually dead. But to those who have a sense of the real value of Lent, who know it is a pause for serious and prayerful meditation—the goal of which is penitence and a determination to master our spiritual weaknesses —it is really the most important season of the Church year.

Yes, it is a time of penitence and determination. Real sorrow for our many lapses from grace in the past year and an earnest determination to overcome our moral and spiritual weakness with the help of God's Holy Spirit.

THEN WHAT?

Some of us seem to think that when Easter comes we are at liberty once more to emerge from the gloom of Lent into the glow of self indulgence and pleasure. The season of repentence is past—why worry?

Yes, but we must not forget that we not only repented, but we also determined. That determination goes beyond Good Friday and Easter. It is the restraining influence for the whole year. Next Ash Wednesday ought to find us far, far beyond our present state of sin. After Easter Day we ought to begin breaking all previous records in our race for righteousness. Our Lenten training ought to so toughen our moral stamina that we can endure all things.

If we do not mean to seriously take advantage of the experiences of Lent we are bordering on the element of insanity. For what can possibly be the sense or the reason of the sack cloth and ashes of Lent if we mean to change them for the gold and purple of self indulgence in Easter.

What we need is a pinch of consistency added to our dish of penitence. So that, when Easter comes we shall enter into its wonderful joys with a satisfying sense that we are clean and worthy to walk with our Resurrected Lord to the end of the year, ever gaining bigger and bigger victories over the sins which heretofore so easily beset us, until at last we shall be strong enough to enter into His eternal joys.

THE TEMPLE BEAUTIFUL

St. John's Church Auditorium Must Be Seen to Be Appreciated

Every year we try to do something big for St. John's Parish. This year we determined to bring to a realization our twenty-one-year-old dream of beautifying the Church Auditorium by obliterating the hideous designs and colors that decorated its walls and ceilings so many years and painting the interior to look more like a place of worship.

The Results Were Amazing

We are quite sure that the most surprised folk, when the job was finished, were those who planned and did the work. This was largely due to the really beautiful architecture of the auditorium. The lines and curves of the ceilings and walls are beautiful beyond description. All of this loveliness of outline was completely neutralized by the heavy, ugly designs and colors that originally adorned the church. We do not believe there is as beautiful a church interior in South Philadelphia.

The Chancel

The Chancel is of exquisite beauty. It is finished in a new process paint, thick as butter, and so closely resembling petrified Italian lava that many actually have thought we had used that material in our renovation. The realistic appearance of the blocking is due to Mr. Robert Gill, the architect, who planned St. John's Parish House. Mr. Gill spent two years in a stone yard getting experience. He personally scored the walls and the dome of the chancel and made it look like a solid stone vault. But whoever would have imagined the lovely lines of our Chancel! Even Mr. Gill did not realize the startling beauty of its structure until the scaffolding was down and we saw the picture.

The Chancel Lamp and Brackets

While the renovating was in the process of being done we happened to look up and noticed the old gas chandelier, which we had converted into an electric light fixture several years ago, and realized that if it was allowed to remain it would do much to detract from the beauty of the Chancel after the work was finished. Accordingly, we announced in the next service of the Church that we needed a new and more modern chandelier and as we had been taught to expect to get whatever we asked for, we were asking for a new chancel lamp to replace the ugly, old fixture that had done service so faithfully so many years.

We were not disappointed. Immediately after that service the Choir sent for us and instructed us to get a new Chancel Lamp and the members of the Choir would pay the bill. You can imagine our joy. The next day we had Mr. Gill on the wire, giving him instructions to get busy right away and design a chancel lamp to replace the old chandelier. He got very busy with the result we now have a lamp that is in keeping with the improvements. One other item we were not considering was the matter of pillar brackets. It seems the members of the Choir felt the side brackets should be in keeping with the Chancel Lamp. The result is, we now have two beautiful light brackets, one on each side of the Chancel. These, too, are an original design.

The Windows

The big Rose Window and all the other windows of the church are outlined in imitation Italian petrified lava and scored in blocks the same as the Chancel. The effect is most pleasing. If one were not in the know, he would be sure to think all the windows were lined with stone. We did not know how really beautiful was the Rose Window until the "stone" circle was finished.

The Ceiling and Walls

The ceiling is finished in white and the walls in tan with a faint cloud of green floating through it. The effect is obtained by first stippling the walls with tan paint, about as thick as butter. Immediately following a second painter daubs here and there a blotch of green paint. After him comes a third man with a painter's triangle and rubs the colors into each other. The effect is most pleasing.

The Organ

When the walls were finished they gave the organ a dingy look. We did not know what to do about it for our funds were getting mighty low and we did not know where any more were coming from. We thought and thought how we could get around the difficulty. At last, on the last day of the job, Mr. Gill and the Rector went into a huddle for half an hour and came out with a look of determination. That look meant something was going to be done. Sure enough, when the scaffolding was knocked down there was our dear old pipe organ all dressed up in a new coat of gold paint. Never mind how it was done; we did it and there it stands in our renovized church as beautiful and as fresh as anything else there.

How the Work Was Planned

As we said in the beginning, to paint the interior of the church had been our dream for years. After each improvement to the church property someone was sure to say, "Now the next thing we must do is to paint the church." The final improvement that brought the matter to a climax was the renovating of the Choir and Chancel. We realized then that the painting of the church could be delayed no longer; its ugliness was most painfully emphasized by the up-to-the-minute new Chancel. We got seriously to work. The Rector was given the job of raising the funds, Mr. Robert Gill of engineering the designing and materials, and the Rector and Mr. Gill and Mr. Frank Drumm were given the task of organizing the unemployed of the Parish to do the work. We determined that so long as the job must be done our own men would do it and receive wages for the work.

Hundreds of Dollars Paid in Wages to Our Own Men

It was a big undertaking and we knew it would take weeks to finish it. The Rector was required to raise $1300.00 to pay for materials and wages. Over half of this money was paid back to our unemployed men in wages and enabled them to support their families without resorting to charity.

We wish we could tell you how happy we were to be able to help so many of our people in this practical way. We are almost sorry the job is done and our funds exhausted. If we had $300.00 more we would finish the job by painting the upper and lower church halls and scraping and varnishing the hardwood floor in the lower hall. But to do it we must have $300.00. Which would mean that about $200.00 would go into wages.

What to Do Next

After we get this painting paid for and have the church halls renovated then we will be through, will we not?

Yes, we will not! Already the rector is in consultation with Mr. Gill and another man about another very important and a very money taking improvement. However, do not become alarmed. This something is in the future and will not materialize for a year or more. Our only object in telling you now is to keep you from getting lazy. Just keep moving and be careful how you spend your money, we will need lots of it and we don't want you to be caught short.

Say! Ain't it fun to spend money when you get so much for it?

The Cost of Painting the Church

When we started our campaign to raise funds to pay for the painting of the church we promised that the unemployed married men of the Parish would be employed to do the job. We are happy to say that we have kept our promise. More than fifty per cent. of the money went for wages to our own men and for a month they were able to provide for their families. An audit of our accounts show how the money was spent. We give it below:

Total Pay Roll wages	$ 551.45
Total Materials	546.65
	$1098.10
Architects' Commission	109.80
Premium Accident Insurance	13.00
Total	$1220.90

The figures show we paid out more for wages than we did for materials. They show also that every man who worked on the job was covered with Employer's Liability Insurance all the time he was employed.

We give a list of names of those who were employed to do the work. This list includes everybody, whether he worked as painter, carpenter, plasterer, roofer or laborer. The list includes thirty-six names. In almost every instance they are either married men with families or single men who have families to support. We give them herewith:

The Boys' Club of St. John The Evangelist

A Few Notes Upon This All-Important New Boys' Movement in St. John's Parish

We are publishing another article upon this subject by George Silbert in this same issue. In it he makes some interesting comments on the entertainment given February 28; Mrs. Mary Corson's donation of New Testaments to the boys; an announcement of the Sour Krout supper, March 30, which the boys will give to raise funds for the Sunday School Lenten Offering and a list of officers of the club.

In this article it is our desire to go a little more into detail and give the parents and friends of the boys an idea of the general scheme of the club.

Of course, the dominant thought of the organization is the raising of the moral standards and ideals of the boys of the Parish and to keep them so occupied in vacational and vocational activities that they will find little time to waste in unethical or regrettable pastimes.

It is quite evident that Col. Michael Guilford has a very clear and workable program for the boys. He is developing lines of vocations that appear to be congenial with the group of boys we have in the club now. These vocations embrace classes in wireless telegraphy, airplane construction and operation, harmonica playing, wrestling, sitting up exercises, military drills, lectures on personal hygene, instruction in self-defense, out door sports of all kinds, Catechism and Confirmation lectures, Church attendance, summer camp, hikes overland, etc. The club is gradually getting shaken down Almost all the "dead ones" have dropped out and we have left a fine array of upstanding boys.

We are most anxious to make this boy movement in the Parish a success. So many organizations have been started, but none of them have lived very long because either on account of expense or the boys resented any extra parochial authority being exercised over them. Col. Guilford is an ex-Army man and a pal of the boys. They know him and he knows them. They speak a common language, therefore, there is every reason to believe St. John's Boys' Club has a bright future.

One thing we must say now. The boys are attending morning service, Sunday School and Evening Service better than any other Parish organization. Also more boys are carrying in their pockets copies of the New Testament than any other class of boys or girls in the entire city and they are not ashamed to be caught reading them.

On March 30 the boys are giving a Sour Krout supper at the church. Col. Guilford and Mrs. Pine will do the cooking and the boys will do the entertaining. We wish you would take time off and honor the boys on that occasion. It will give them the thrill of a life time if you would drop in and eat with them. They are giving the supper to raise money for the Sunday School Lenten Offering.

Daily Dozen for Toleration

EXERCISE No. 4

The reason that we do not like certain people, as we say instinctively, is because our power to love is limited. We cannot adjust ourselves to that much of a strain on our tolerance. "Charity beareth all things," but our love cannot bear certain degrees of tension. The remedy, of course, is the extension of our power to love. We can begin by never hurting those people to whom we do not feel attracted; never saying anything unpleasant to them, or about them; not sitting in judgment on them. Then, without straining the point too suddenly, we can make a sort of a decent approach to them and, without any particular sense of self-righteousness, be nice to them. Sometimes we shall surprise ourselves in how easily the battle is won.

There are certain people that, every time we hear their names mentioned, we tend to say something unpleasant about them. There are probably about twenty such people in the relationships of the average Christian—the very mention of whose names produces in us an illogical, unintelligent impulse to be unpleasant. We tend to hate those people; to quarrel with them; to do them some harm, small or great. I think it would be well to try making a list of such in our own lives and, by analysis, seeing if the fault does not really lie in our own selves: our prejudices, our conservatisms, our narrow-mindednesses, and our tendency towards small spitefulnesses. We are not so hot—not so very interesting, not so very attractive ourselves. Let us go have a look in our mirror of life.

There may be certain people whom we really hate; they are few and far between and, in the case of these, we should be tremendously on our guard. If our list grows, make it a regular subject of intercessory prayer, not that they may improve, but that we may improve.

Love is the will to fellowship. It is not necessary to love a person, that we should wish to fondle them or be on specially intimate terms. It is sufficient for the needs of our souls and for the welfare of the world that we should be thoroughly tolerant to the point where we would do them no harm, and would help in case of need.

"Tolerance is that characteristic by which one, through contact with God, sees things, events, and, last but not least, our fellow-men in their right proportion." (Mary I. Howe). And Gretchen A. Palmer says of it: "Tolerance is a Christian hospitality broad enough to uphold the heaviest of burdens."

The cure of intolerance towards individuals is a matter of our own growth in the power to love, in the deliberate breaking down of the walls of misunderstanding and separation between ourselves and other individuals. I have (it is too long to quote) a creed, every word of which is taken from the Gospel of St. John. It begins "God is Love," and the whole creed of Christianity is included in those three words. See if you can write such a creed, not with a view of substituting this for the Church's creeds, but with a view of so formulating Christian life in accordance with the teaching of Jesus that you can say with Him, "This is the whole law and the Commandments."

The Charles Little Memorial Gate

One of the most needed improvements to our church group of buildings was the new iron gate between the Church and the Parish House. How appropriate it is to have it dedicated to that staunch Christian character, CHARLES LITTLE, who gave so much of himself to the work of building Christ's Kingdom in the Parish of ST. JOHN THE EVANGELIST.

How that old board fence, which formerly stood where the Little Memorial Gate now hangs, used to irritate Charles. It was an eyesore he could not tolerate. He concocted scheme after scheme to get it removed, but nothing ever happened. Before he could accomplish anything God called him. Then his mother, a faithful disciple of Jesus Christ and a loyal member of St. John's Parish, conceived the thought of putting up this beautiful iron gate, a memorial to him. It has wonderfully improved the appearance of the property and we are most grateful to Mrs. Mary Little for the Memorial.

EASTER DAY LESSONS

Thoughts Suggested by the Most Beautiful of Christian Feasts

1. Jesus Christ Is Stronger Than Death

With the beginning of the ministry of Jesus, Satan set himself the task of neutralizing his efforts and discrediting Him in the eyes of men. His first attack was in the wilderness where he met with crushing defeat. From that time he laid down a campaign of hate against Jesus, determined to thwart Him in all He did. Though he fought desperately to alienate the hearts of men he had the chagrin of seeing the daily increase of the multitudes following Jesus with growing confidence. Driven to desperation he conceived the lie of lies by inspiring the minds of wicked men to crucify Him and exhibit to all mankind His dead body nailed to the cross. "If He be the Son of God here is His opportunity to prove it."

Jesus Christ accepted the challenge and, true to His promise, before His death, on the third day, He arose from the grave. Death could not restrain Him. He is stronger than death. Satan is forever discredited.

2. He Killed the Fear of Death

Man, made in the image of God, is endowed with the spark of eternal life. The thought of death and dissolution has always been terrorizing him. The Resurrection of Jesus Christ has raised the curtain of horror and revealed to our astonished gaze a brilliant scene of rare beauty beyond, of the country of eternal life. When Jesus Christ came forth from the tomb, and men beheld Him alive and as other men, He killed the fear of death and filled our hearts with joy.

3. He Is a Living Saviour

By His Resurrection He exposed the lie of Satan who would have men think Jesus of Nazareth is a dead leader, forever removed from the stage of the world. "He is not dead but liveth." He has descended from the cross; He has arisen from the grave; He has broken the seal of the tomb; He comes forth a radiant, living Saviour of mankind, and, through His heroic sacrifice, has forever redeemed man and placed him beyond the power of Satan. Man is no longer tied and bound with the chain of sin but is made free through Jesus Christ.

THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS CHRIST FOREVER DESTROYED THE PRESUMPTIOUS POWER OF SATAN. WHOEVER SERVES SATAN NOW DOES IT WILLINGLY AND OF HIS OWN VOLITION.

St. John The Evangelist Boys' Club

By George K. Silbert

An event of interest took place in the Parish House on February 28 when the new organization called St. John the Evangelist Boys' Club entertained about 300 people, parents of the boys and members of the parish. The program for the evening was furnished by the boys themselves under the direction of Mr. Michael Guilford, their director. It is the desire of the Rector that the parents cooperate with the boys in all their Spiritual and Social activities, giving them encouragement in attending with them the church services, coming with them to their Holy Communion and all other spiritual activities.

We wish to thank Mrs. Mary Corson for donating the New Testaments to each of the boys in the club. Her wonderful thought of the spiritual side of the boy's life deserves great love and admiration of our younger generation, to bring them to be proper churchmen and citizens.

The following are the officers of the club: M. C. Guilford, G. K. Silbert, G. Powell, F. Drumm, Asst. E. Pine, Asst. H. Kirby, Wm. MacAvoy, Pres. Wm. Clendinning, V. P. Ed. Smith, Sec. Thomas Dean, Treas. George Wilson.

A-Company—Lt. Chas. Clendinning, 1st Sgt. R. Drumm, Sgt. George Powell, Jr., Sgt. J. Dingler, Corp. Winthrop Munion, Philip Meckling.

B-Company—Lt. Wm. Blythe, 1st Sgt. J. Hartman, Sgt. G. Raymond, Corp. Wm. Welch, Sgt. Wm. Cunningham, Sgt. A. Schaffer.

C-Company—Lt. Paul Steal, 1st Sgt. J. Millman, Sgt. Chas. Bowden, Sgt. J. Barnnett, Corps. Wm. Ward, R. Gallagher, H. Henderson.

D-Company—Captain Wm. MacAvoy, 1st Sgt. Ed. Prettyman, Sgt. J. Millman, Sgt. T. Winters, Corps. J. MacAvoy, Jas. Boyd, J. Dilmore, J. Davis.

Mothers of the club are Miss H. Nuttall and Mrs. Pine.

The Boys' Club will give a Sour Krout Supper on March 30 for the Lenten Offering and hope that members and friends of the Parish will make every effort to come and enjoy this supper which is under the direction of Mrs. Frank Pine. The entertainment will be furnished by members of the Boys' Club.

The interior of the church is painted at last. Our twenty year-old dream is realized.

The cheerful idiot wants to know "why not sell hens by the peck, music by the choir, shoes by the foot, hammers by the pound and grass by the yard."

Times are mighty hard. We had better start our Easter Offering Early. Let's put aside a little every day so that our name will be on the Roll of Honor in the next issue of the Broadcaster.

"Oh, yes, sir."
"Could you tell me something that is in it?"
"I could tell you everything that's in it."
"Indeed!" and the minister smiled.
"Sister's young man's photo is in it," said Eve, promptly, "and mother's recipe for face cream is in it, and a lock of my hair cut off when I was a baby is in it, and the ticket for dad's watch is in it."—Tit Bits.

In connection with what two great events is hyssop mentioned?

Finish the quotation: "Ho, every one that thirsteth."

We are greatly pleased over the way the Parish is attending the Wednesday and Sunday evening services. Every service is crowded as never before.

Remember, Easter is a Day of Obligation.

"Is your husband much of a provider, Malindy?"

"He ain't nothin' else, ma'am. He gwine to git some new furniture, providin' he gits de money; he gwine to git de money, providin' he go to work; he gwine to go to work, providin' de job suits him. I never see such a providin' man in all mah days!"—From the Watchman-Examiner.

Considering the way some of our parishioners are growing more and more delinquent in paying their church dues, we are getting suspicious that most of the "hoarders" have moved downtown.

We DO meet an honest man now and then. The other day a friend of ours said to us: "Sometimes I feel so bad I take a drink." Then how do you feel?" we inquired. "Then I feel twice as bad," said he.

Our new Chancel will be charming if it is adorned on Easter Day with Easter lillies and other blooms.

The Inquirer tells of a woman who, after the service, thanked the minister for his sermon. "I found it so helpful," said she.

The minister replied: "I hope it will not prove as helpful as the last sermon you heard me preach."

"Why! What do you mean?" asked the woman.

"Well," said the minister, "that sermon lasted you three months!"—From the Christian Register.

Some men deem the thirty-minute sermon too long. So they substitute the 1152-column Sunday paper.—John Andrew Holmes, in The Reformed Church Messenger.

I'D RATHER

One must expect battles on the journey through life. If one falls, why, rise again! One may be sorely bruised and soiled with the fall, but is that any reason for giving up the struggle?

I'd rather lose than win, as some men win;
I'd rather quit where many men begin;
I'd rather walk the paths that others pave
Than know my winning dug my neighbor's grave.
I'd rather fall and stay there as I fell
Than climb to heights on which I am to dwell
Where from my fortune's hanging in a scale
That only figures when I see them fail.

I'd rather wear my suits with patches strewn
Than pick a wardrobe from the man in ruin;
I'd rather have my soles feel of the chill
Of winter snow than gain through any ill
Adventure or through ways, where to expand,
I practiced in a manner underhand,
Or revel in a deal I put across
To raise me by some other fellow's loss.

I'd rather be just what I am than know
That I have caused the world a mite of woe,
For failure in itself is filled with pride;
To feel it proves, at least, that I have tried.
So when they count my failures on the sheet
Which tallies out the score I made, complete,
What numbers they shall find I do not care,
Providing each will show I played it fair.

CONFIRMATION

Mission of The Transfiguration

Our congregation was visibly disappointed this year by Bishop Taitt's inability to be with us to confirm our 1933 Class. We were, however, delightfully compensated with the presence of Bishop Abbott, of the Diocese of Lexington, Kentucky.

In his address, the Bishop counselled us to look at our spiritual enrichment rather than to material attainment. He pointed out that in all lives there is a cross to be borne, and, that if during the present situation our needs are merely a lack of material things, we should indeed be grateful to God. His words of greeting and advice to the Confirmation Class were equally impressive. They, by confirmation, had become the Standard Bearers of the Episcopal Church and as such, he cautioned them to diligently guard their conduct, lest they betray the sacred Baptismal vows which they, by the Laying-on-of-Hands had taken upon themselves.

The Confirmation Class, which had been under rigid instruction for a period of several weeks, numbered fifteen; ten children and five adults, with which our Rector, the Rev. H. Cresson McHenry, was well pleased.

The attendance was splendid, there being 103 present. The Altar was appropriately decorated with white carnations. The musical program consisted of an anthem, "God so loved the World," and an Offertory, "Love Divine," both by Stainer. The regular choir was augmented by guest singers, including those of the Philadelphia Men's Choir. Many compliments were received.

After the service the Bishop, accompanied by the Rector and the Layman-in-charge, were conveyed to the home of Mr. Reuben S. Conn, where the Sacrament of Confirmation was administered to Mr. and Mrs. Conn. Mr. Conn has been seriously ill for some months and we pray that the Holy Spirit will rest upon and comfort him in his hour of suffering.

The names of those confirmed are as follows:

EASTER DAY AT ST. JOHN'S

The Weather Was the Only Unsatisfactory Factor in the Day's Program

The glory of St. John's Easter was enhanced by the beauty of the newly renovated interior of the Church. The Choir and Chancel, which has been so greatly improved by the new Italian petrified lava effect and the graceful Chancel Lamp and wall brackets, looked lovely, adorned as it was with a veritable garden of Easter Lilies, Azalias, Hydrangias, Roses and many other blooms, the names of which are unfamiliar to us.

The new 300-watt lamp in the skylight, high up in the dome of the Chancel, flooded the whole Chancel with rich violet rays, which added indescribable beauty, almost like that of fairyland, to the Chancel and the blooms.

Many Surprised at the Changes in the Interior of the Church

Many of the Parishioners had not seen the interior of the Church since its renovation. It made us extremely happy to listen to the expressions of astonishment and admiration from everybody. We did not hear one word of adverse criticism from a single soul at either service. One young man, who had not been to church for many months, said he was never so pleasantly shocked as when he saw how beautiful was his church. A woman parishioner, one of those fine, old-fashioned, consecrated saints of God, said she felt she was on the borderland of heaven sitting in that beautiful church listening to that wonderful choir.

THE EARLY SERVICE

Long before 6.30 o'clock the congregation began to gather for the first Easter Celebration of the Holy Communion. When the hour arrived the Church was comfortably filled with worshipers. Promptly on the minute was the service begun with the Processional. The arrangement of the service was very simple, but beautiful and dignified. The program was:

Processional , "Welcome Happy Morning"
Anthem, "Christ, Our Passover," by Fred Schilling
Ante-Communion, to the Nicene Creed
Announcement of the Activities of the Day
Easter Offering, Anthem, "King of Kings" by Caleb Simper.
Communion Service
Post Communion Service, Gloria in Excelsis, by Caley
Recessional, "Jesus Christ Is Risen Today"

TWO HUNDRED AND FORTY MADE THEIR EASTER COMMUNION AT THIS FIRST SERVICE

The Mission of the Transfiguration

After the 6.30 service, the Rev. John Lever, who assisted the Missionary-in-charge in all the Celebrations, took entire charge of the 9 o'clock service at the Mission of the Transfiguration at Seventh and Bigler Streets. On his return to St. John's Church for the 11 o'clock celebration, he was quite enthusiastic over the big attendance at the service and fine way our little choir rendered the musical numbers of the service. He thinks our Lay Missionary, Ed Proffitt, deserves a great deal of credit for the work he is doing at the Mission.

We have learned later that the Mission will be able to report success in raising their expectations for 1933, which amounted to $100.00.

We sincerely congratulate the Mission for so courageously "coming through" in such a year of depression.

The Third Easter Celebration

The final Easter Communion Service at 11 o'clock was identical to that of the early Celebration, with the exception that the Processional Hymn was changed to "Come, Ye Faithful, Raise the Strain." The congregation was much larger. The number of Communicants receiving at this service was 235. As this figure does not include any members of the Choir, all of whom had made their Communion at the early service, it shows actually many more of the congregation received their Easter Communion at this late service than at the first service.

The number of Communicants receiving at both services was 475
Those receiving at the Mission of the Transfiguration 60

Total receiving their Easter Communion ... 535

When one considers the inclemency of the weather on Easter Day and the state of unemployment prevailing in the Parish, we have every reason to feel that such an Easter demonstration shows pretty accurately the fine spiritual condition of the Parish. For this is the largest celebration ever held in St. John's Parish.

THE CHOIR

It is unnecessary to comment upon the excellency of the musical parts of the services. Much of the beauty of the services was due to the efficient and masterly rendering of the Anthems, hymns and responses. Our Choir is fast winning the reputation of being one of the leading volunteer choirs of South Philadelphia. There are very few Parishes that can boast of so many natural-born singers among their members.

The Sunday School Easter Service

Promptly at 3 o'clock we launched our Sunday School Easter service. We had a crowded afternoon before us and did not dare to waste a minute if we hoped to get through before dark. Briefly our program was:

1. Hymn, "Jesus Christ Is Risen Today."
2. The Creed, Lord's Prayer, Easter Collects by the Rector.
3. Presentation of the S. S. Lenten Offering by classes.
4. Hymn by the Intermediate Department, "He Is Risen, He Is Risen."
5. Reading of the Easter Story as contained in St. John's Gospel, 20th Chapter, by entire Sunday School in concert. It was most inspiring!
6. Conferring of the Silver Cross on 65 boys and girls for regular attendance at Lenten Services.
7. Awarding Prayer Books to Adults for loyalty to the Church.
8. Conferring Diplomas on 28 teachers and scholars for perfect attendance and proficiency in Sunday School work.
9. Distributing Easter eggs to the younger scholars of the Sunday School.
10. Sending Easter flowers and potted plants to the sick and shut-ins of the Parish. The distribution was made by scholars who volunteered their services.
11. The announcement of the Sunday School Lenten Offering, which was $1,248.72.
12. The Doxology, by a church full of tired, but happy, people. It was the climax of months' of heart-breaking struggle against heavy odds to preserve the reputation of the dear old parish as one of the most active Missionary centers in our Diocese. Some of the sacrifices of our folk were heroic.

WE ARE PAYING BACK TO THE DIOCESE ONE THOUSAND PER CENT. OF INTEREST AND THE WHOLE OF THE PRINCIPAL THE DIOCESE INVESTED IN OLD ST. JOHN'S TWENTY-ONE YEARS AGO. Nor do we yet consider our debt as cancelled. As a Parish we are solemnly pledged forever to the cause of Missions and are prepared to make any sacrifices imposed upon us, for such a cause, up to the limit of our ability.

THE EASTER OFFERING OF THE PARISH TO DATE IS $425.26.

Honor Roll for Perfect Attendance and Efficiency for Year 1932-33

The following is a list of names of teachers and scholars, who, since the fall session of the Sunday School, have maintained a 100 per cent. record for attendance and have shown a distinguished proficiency in work. We congratulate each for making such a creditable record and we are sure they set a worthy example for others to emulate. Each was awarded a Diploma of Merit for their work:

Daily Dozen for Toleration

By William H. Jefferys, M.D.

EXERCISE No. 5

Last month we had an exercise on toleration as applied to individuals. In order to be tolerant, it is not necessary to think the other person perfect or to agree with him about everything. It is sufficient to give others their place in the sun; to recognize them as children of God of equal importance with ourselves; and to help them in case of need.

This month I have a double exercise to propose. We cannot divide individuals into pieces. Therefore we have gotten down to the least common multiple of toleration, or to the unit; but mentally we can divide people into pieces and we do so constantly. We divide them into their opinions, for instance, and if their opinions agree with us we like those opinions, or that much of them. If we do not, we dislike those opinions or that much of them.

Tolerance requires giving the other fellow his personal liberty and his chance to grow. It requires keeping our mouths shut frequently. It requires allowing the other fellow to have his own conscientious opinion. Probably the most intolerant people of the world are the religious fanatics such as those, for instance, who have been responsible for putting thousands of people for thousands of years into the hell of penitentiary life because they did not agree that the Eighteenth Amendment was a benefit to society, and, being Anglo-Saxon for the most part, did what our ancestors did in Boston Harbor.

Unless somebody protests against a bad law, especially a bad law forced on the majority by a minority, how on earth are we going to get the thing corrected?

Well, here are two exercises. Perhaps they cannot be carried out literally, but the idea can be gotten very easily. Say your prayers some night, without giving yourself warning, into a dictograph. Then take each item in turn and consider it from this point of view: in the first place, does it mean anything at all? In the second place, is it in accordance with God's will, or merely a matter of your own will? In the third place, having decided that it is good, do you really want it to happen enough to pay quite a price to bring it about? If you do not, you had better leave it out of your prayer until you do. You are only fooling with the thing and lying to God. Make this application particularly in respect to your prayers for others. In the first place, did you pray at all for others, or did you pray only for yourself? Then, did the love of your prayer for others reach only into the next room, or did it really reach around the world?

The second exercise is like this. Write a creed, not with a view of substituting your creed for the Church's Creed (credo means I believe), but with the view of formulating your life in accordance with Christ's power to love. That is not a creed of belief at all. It is a creed which is a living thing—a creed which, if followed all one's days, will bring one at last to be like Him because we can love as He loved.

Begin your creed this way: "I believe that God is Love."

This Is Station S.T.J.C.

Now comes Confirmation, June 18th.

Also the Rector's 21st anniversary, June 18th.

Slogan for 1933—"Get Your Candidate

The parishioners who volunteered to paint the Sunday School rooms and Sacristy will be proud to know that their time and labor were actually worth $250 to the Church. In other words, this is what it would have cost the Church had the job been done by contract. That was a Lenten Offering of real value.

If you can give neither time nor labor to the service of God, how much will you give in dollars and cents?

Are you satisfied that your offerings to God equal God's blessings to you?

Would you like your children treat you with the same casual neglect and sneering indifference as you see men treat God every day?

Suppose you gave to the Church Every Month—

1. The price of your supply of tobacco, cigars or cigarettes—
2. The price of your supply of candy—
3. The price of your amusements—
4. The price of your baseball games and movie pictures—
5. The price of your ice cream—
6. The price of your supply of soft and hard drinks—
7. The price of running your car and garage rent

—How much would be the income of the Church?

Roughly guessing I would say it would be about $3500.00 a month. At present the annual income is about that. Folks say "figures don't lie." That being the case we sure love ourselves a lot more than we do God.

"Until we love our friends more than Christ loves them there is no danger of loving them too much." (anon.).

Our Sunday School Lenten Offering Reached $1248.72.

Our Easter Offering Amounted to $425.26

A NEIGHBORLY SHOVE

It was a winter morning when Fred DiPerna, tired from trying to crank a frozen car, heard someone ask, "Want a shove?" "Sure," replied Fred. With the help of the motorist his car was soon started.

In the afternoon of the same day Fred came upon a motorist having the same trouble he had in the morning. "Want a shove?" asked Fred. "Sure," answered the motorist. Then as he looked up both were surprised to see the other was the fellow they met in the morning in reverse positions.

"Thanks," said the man after the car started.

"Don't mention it," replied Fred. "That makes us even."

This is a new high figure for the Church and the Mission.

"The Story of Calvary," by Schnacker, was rendered by St. John's Choir before a large and an appreciative congregation on Good Friday Night. The choir work was commented on most favorably by the worshippers. They deserved all the nice things that were said about them, for the Cantata was beautifully and very feelingly interpreted.

A BROTHER

"Just today we chanced to meet,
Man to man upon the street;
And I questioned, "Tell me true,
Are you Christian or a Jew?
Are you English, German, Russian,
French, Italian, Turk or Prussian?

Ere you pass upon your way,
What's your native land, I pray?
Then he gave me this reply,
With his head uplifted high:
"What I am by race or birth
Matters not one whit on earth;
For at heart I am no other
Than to every man—a brother."

WHY?

Certain Questions and Answers Concerning Christianity and the Church

By H. Cresson McHenry

1. Why Was I Christened in Infancy When I Could Not Give My Consent?

To complete my coming into being. As I was born into the world by the act of my parents and without my consent, it was their moral and spiritual duty to see that I be protected from temptation and sin both from without and within by being spiritually born.

2. Why Am I Bound to Do and Believe as My Sponsors Promised in My Name?

Because my sponsors promised in my name to observe the fundamental laws of God; which are the laws of all order and harmony. If I ignore or break them, I bring confusion and disorder upon the world; the end of which is suffering and ruin for myself and others.

3. Why Must I "Ratify and Confirm" the Promises and Vows Made by My Sponsors When I Come of Age to Know the Difference Between Right and Wrong? I Did Not Ask Them to Assume Any Such Responsibility for Me.

Every man and woman must eventually assume their moral responsibilities towards the state. After the age of maturity the state holds the son responsible for his every act and justly punishes him if he trespasses upon the law. So it is after our spiritual birth. When we reach the age where we can distinguish between right and wrong our sponsors are absolved from all their responsibilities and we must assume the responsibility of spiritual citizenship in the Kingdom of God.

4. Why Cannot I Exercise My Own Judgment in the Matter and Refuse to Be a Member of the Kingdom of God if I So Choose?

I can refuse to be a member of God's Kingdom if I so choose. Not even God can compel me to do what I do not wish to do. I can repudiate all the vows and promises made for me by my sponsors. I can do as I please in all moral and spiritual matters. All God can do is to offer me the opportunity to become His adopted son and a prince in His Kingdom. It is His way of showing His love for me. If I accept I enter into a state of supreme and eternal happiness; if I refuse I throw away the great opportunity of my career. Common sense, therefore, compels me to seriously consider my act of repudiation before I make it.

5. Why Must I Go to Church?

To learn about God the Father, God the Son and God the Holy Ghost. To worship the Triune God; to confess my trespasses of His love and to receive His pardon; to listen to the reading of His Holy Word that I may be more familiar with His will; to encourage my fellows to approach the Throne in humility and prayer, and to receive the Holy Sacraments regularly.

6. Why Must I Worship God?

Because He is my Father, my Saviour and my Protector. Every minute of the day He is performing some loving act for me. If I should refuse to worship Him I would forever brand myself an ingrate.

7. Why Must I Confess My Sins?

Because if I confess my sins God is faithful and just to forgive me my sins and to cleanse me from all unrighteousness and only through His forgiveness can I be justified.

8. Why Must I Read the Bible or Hear It Read?

The Bible contains God's Holy Word; in it is declared His love for me; it reveals His laws and His will. I cannot be an intelligent or an obedient child of God unless I do read it.

9. Why Must I Encourage Others to Approach the Throne?

By helping my fellows to apprehend God I am giving Him pleasure and increasing their eternal happiness. In doing this I am adding to my own spiritual satisfaction and joy.

10. Why Must I Receive the Holy Sacraments?

In order that my spirit may be nourished and strengthened that I may be strong enough to master all my temptations. Also every time I receive the Holy Communion, I am reminded of my Saviour's self-sacrificing love for me—He died that I might live.

11. Why Must I Pray?

It is only through prayer I can make my needs known to God and can become conscious of His presence and reality. It is also the only means through which I can express my gratitude and love to God for all He is doing daily for me.

12. Why Does Not God Answer Prayer?

God always answers every true prayer. He may not always answer it as I desire; nevertheless He answers it in whatever way is best for me. I emphatically repeat—God always answers prayer.

13. Why Are There So Many Different Denominations or Branches of the Christian Church if the Foundation of the Christian Religion Is Love and Fellowship?

It is not the will of God that these schisms exist. Rather it is because of the hardness of men's hearts and their spiritual ignorance. God meant we should all be joined together in Chirst through love.

TODAY

We shall do so much in the years to come—
But what have we done today?
We shall give out gold in a princely sum—
But what did we give today?
We shall lift the heart and dry the tear,
We shall plant a hope in place of fear,
We shall speak with words of love and cheer—
But what have we done today?

We shall be so kind in the afterwhile—
But what have we been today?
We shall bring to each lonely life a smile—
But what have we brought today?
We shall give to truth a grander birth,
And to steadfast faith a deeper worth;
We shall feed the hungering souls of earth—
But whom have we fed today?

HOW TO ENCOURAGE THE RECTOR

The Communicants Discover the Secret

We have been preaching sermons these many, many years. Often we have been held up in the vestibule of the Church, during the hand-shaking period, and congratulated upon our "fine sermon." Many folk have told us that our sermon "did them good." We have surely received our share of compliments for the efforts we have made from the pulpit. But among them there stand out two instances which we take as praise and encouragement most precious.

The one was the instance of a member being so impressed with the sermon that he walked off with the preacher's notes, after expressing his pleasure and enthusiasm over the sermon.

The other instance is contained in the letter we publish herewith. A letter that contains many thoughts and suggestions and written in such a style as to prove the sincerity of the writer. Such communications as these are among the pastor's highly prized treasures.

Dear Mr. McHenry:

Your sermon of December 4th impressed me very much. In fact, it was the finest I have had the pleasure of listening to in a long time. It made me feel sort of dumb when you mentioned the line in the Lord's Prayer—"Thy Kingdom Come." Just think, I have said those words ever so often, and did not know what I was talking about.

Don't you think that it would be a good idea if our most used prayers were discussed in our Sunday School, so that all could get a better line on what we were praying about?

Do you know, I have attended your church and Sunday School, sang in the Choir, been a member of (many parish organizations) and have been active in church affairs for the past fifteen years. And, despite these facts, I didn't know what you were referring to when you first said, "Thy Kingdom Come."

Realizing that you cannot teach everything at once, and that your Sunday School lessons are both interesting and intellectual, still I think this is a good idea, and that you will consider it sensible enough to give it a second thought.

Please don't think that I am telling you how to run your church. I am merely trying to be helpful and hope you will read this in that light.

I remain,

Sincerely yours,

(Note): This is purely personal and hope you will treat it as such.

We have not violated the trust of the writer, for we asked the privilege to publish it providing we kept it anonymous.

This is the way to encourage the Rector. Let him know you both appreciate his sermon work and wish to comment on it—either favorably or critically—and to suggest lines of work that the sermon may inspire in you. The Rector needs a lot of help and sympathy. He will appreciate it greatly if more of the parishioners will follow the lead of the writer of this helpful letter and put new ideas in his head.

Did you ever think what a job it is to prepare two sermons each Sunday? Try it some time and you will be convinced that it is no fun. You will no longer wonder why preachers do not always preach interestingly. Considering his other multitudinous pastoral duties, it is a wonder he does so well.

PATIENCE

The farmer for his grain must wait,
  The miner search to find his gold,
And Nature long no toil abate
  Ere blossom into fruit unfold.
But slowly, surely, day by day,
  Success shall all their toil repay.

Since time alone can labor test,
  And he who endeth first begins,
In one brief hour reward and rest
  No toiler finds, no sufferer wins.
But slowly, surely, both descend
  Where patience doth with labor blend.

The Fourth Monkey

There's a bit of Chinese philosophy that has come down through the ages. It is expressed in the Chinese symbol of the three monkeys. The first is the monkey who refuses to listen to evil, the second would look at no evil, and the third would speak no evil.

Since this symbol has invaded America in the form of bric-a-brac, match holders, and ash trays, a local philosopher has come to the conclusion that this monkey business of the Mongolians does not go far enough. A fourth monkey, he claims, is necessary—a monkey who would think no evil.

In fact, with this fourth monkey on duty, the other three could be discharged. And this is the way it would work:

Suppose some busybody ape came rushing up to this monkey and informed him that his sweet little sister was hanging by her tail from a tree, sticking out her tongue and making faces at her Aunt Mary. Not thinking evil, he probably would smile and say:

"Why, she is just trying to amuse the old girl."

Again, suppose he saw a traffic cop on Chimpanzee Lane accepting a cocoanut from a speeding, hopping pedestrian who had rushed by the traffic signals. Thinking no evil, he would hardly consider that it might be a bribe, but rather that probably the monk had borrowed a cocoanut from the cop and was hurrying to pay back his debt.

Now, if the fourth monkey didn't permit evil to seep through his hearing and vision, he could hardly discuss anything evil, and he would have all his time to sing sweet ditties of blue skies, moonlight on the Ganges, and be at peace with the world.

Why not make the fourth monkey our emblem as we go through life, and avoid a lot of monkey business?—George Manker Watters in "How."

DEPRESSION, LUXURY AND THE CHURCH

A Subject Inspired by a Lenten Sermon

The Rev. Allen Van Meter, our Lenten guest preacher for Wednesday, March 29th, told a startling story, in figures, of how the people of the United States so nobly deny themselves of the necessities of life in order that they may balance the National Budget of Billions for Luxuries. His figures were quoted from the "American Consumers Market" for the year 1931—the year of unemployment, starvation, nakedness, bank smashes and various other Social and Financial earthquakes and business landslides.

Here are the figures:

National Tobacco Bill	$1,651,000,000.00
National Amusement Bill, ...	1,526,209,000.00
National Soft Drinks Bill	766,500,000.00
National Candy Bill	520,088,000.00
National Sports Bill	483,837,000.00
National Fur Bill	351,880,000.00
National Ice Cream Bill	338,742,000.00
National Radio Bill	309,270,000.00
National Jewelry Bill	255,315,000.00
National Chewing Gum Bill	71,625,000.00
Grand Total for Luxuries	$6,274,466,000.00
Church Receipts for same year ...	44,016,459.90
Balance for Luxuries	$6,230,449,540.10

Now the question is how could we afford such billions of wealth to waste on luxuries in such a lean year of unemployment and famine?

Then there is the twin question as to why there is so great a discrepancy between the Nation's contribution to luxuries and its contribution to the church.

THE FIRST QUESTION

The first question presents a problem which we frankly confess is beyond our power to solve. We know in the year 1931 we had about reached the peak of Depression. Over twelve million workers were idle and many millions more were employed on part time only. Yet, as a matter of cold fact, the American man and woman could afford to squander over six billion on non-essentials.

We would call your attention to the further fact that this bill for luxuries is not at all accurate. It has to do with legitimate business only. One must remember the billions in bootlegging and the dope racket. One must not forget the billions in gambling and immorality. The "number game" alone is responsible for stealing hundreds of thousands of dollars out of the purses of the poor. It is the poor man's way of gambling. WE KNOW OF ONE FAMILY IN SOUTH PHILADELPHIA, WHO HAVE BEEN PUBLIC CHARGES FOR SEVERAL YEARS, WHO IN SOME MYSTERIOUS WAY RAISE SEVERAL DOLLARS EVERY WEEK TO PLAY THE NUMBERS.

As we said, we have no plan to stop this waste or to divert these wayward billions of dollars into legitimate channels. We wish we had. If we could do it every unemployed person, every invalid, every widow and orphan, every old man and old woman would be supported in luxury and the poor would be no longer with us.

THE SECOND QUESTION

We handed the rough notes of this article to a business friend in order to get his mental reaction on this record of waste. He was awed and perplexed by our stupendous national extravagance. Then he made a remark about the meagerness of the church receipts. He said that he thought he knew the answer to why there is such a discrepancy between our national luxury bills and our national church receipts. To his way of thinking the church is to blame for its lack of support. He personally supports the church, though he is not a church member. He frankly acknowledges that he swears a bit, and he nips a bit, and he likes clean play—but the church has little or no attraction to him, because as an institution it is not on the job. By not being on the job he seemed to mean that the priest is too sentimental and not practical enough to make church life interesting for red-blooded "he" men. Or else, they make the mistake of trying to hide their wares and "kid" the man of the world into believing that they, too, are worldly minded—that being a Christian does not necessarily mean being spiritually minded. Most men of the world are keen psychologists and know a fraud when they see one. They may act like wayward kids and get a big kick out of "bagging school," so to speak. But they don't want the teacher to "bag school" with them. It cheapens him in their estimation. He spoils their day because they feel he ought to know better. He ought to have stood out for discipline and held them kindly but firmly responsible for their spiritual lapses.

THE WORLDLY MAN DEMANDS A RELIGIOUS LEADER AND NOT A CONTEMPTIBLE CAMP FOLLOWER. If the proper wisdom and patience be exercised by a man who holds the respect of his fellow man, he would soon tame their wild spirits and they would willingly acknowledge the authority of the church and support its propaganda with their last dollar.

This is a business man's answer to the cause of the weakness of the support of the church. And maybe he is right.

OTHERS

Lord, help me to live from day to day,
In such a self-forgetful way,
That even when I kneel to pray,
My prayer shall be for—Others.

Help me in all the work I do
To ever be sincere and true,
And know that all I'd do for you
Must needs be done for—Others.

Let "self" be crucified and slain
And buried deep; and all in vain
May efforts be to rise again
Unless to live for—Others.

And when my work on earth is done;
And my new work in heaven's begun
May I forget the crown I've won
While thinking still of—Others.

Others, Lord, yes—Others,
Let this my motto be;
Help me to live for—Others,
That I may live like Thee.

What Is Confirmation Age?

How Old Should a Child Be Before He Is Confirmed?

Almost every day we are met with parents' objections that their son, their daughter, is not old enough to be confirmed. It seems to be a fixed idea that a child must reach the age of twelve before the all important step is taken.

Why the age of twelve? Why not twenty-two or twenty-five? On whose authority was twelve adopted as the confirmation age? What is there about a twelve year old child that makes him just ripe for confirmation? Are all children of twelve years eligible for Confirmation? Does the Bible teach it? Does the Church decree it? Does the Book of Common Prayer provide for it? Maybe so; but we are ignorant of any three of these sources of authority mentioning it. The only authority we have on the subject is found in the Baptismal Office of the Book of Common Prayer. The last question asked the Sponsors on behalf of the child is: "Wilt thou take heed that this child, SO SOON AS SUFFICIENTLY INSTRUCTED, be brought to the Bishop to be confirmed by him?" The answer is: "I will, God being my helper." It seems to us, therefore, that the vital question is not whether the child is twelve years of age; but rather, that he is sufficiently instructed in the fundamentals of Christianity.

Well, then, can a child under twelve be "sufficiently instructed"? Without hesitation we emphatically declare in the affirmative. Scores of children do not need to wait until the magic twelfth birthday dawns to be suddenly endowed with the power to know the difference between right and wrong and to become conscious of his spiritual contact with God. Most children are more acutely aware of that contact at a much earlier age. So much so, that Jesus declares most emphatically that unless ours is AS STRONG AND AS SIMPLE AS THE FAITH OF LITTLE CHILDREN, WE SHALL NOT ENTER INTO THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN.

Well, anyway, is it not better to leave the decision as to the child's fitness for Confirmation up to the parents? Of course, one is forced to do that in any case. But we are not so sure that the parents are generally competent to judge for the child. Often the child is able to judge for himself.

A STORY WITH A MORAL

We are reminded of a lad who years ago was most anxious to be confirmed. He was ten years of age. The mother had strong sentiments against it and would not give her consent. We examined the boy carefully and were convinced the boy knew what he was doing. We had a conference with the mother and tried to persuade her to let the boy have his way. She was adamant and would not be moved. The Bishop visited the Parish in due season and confirmed the class presented. The boy was not in the class. Presently, we noticed he was becoming irregular in his church attendance. We asked his mother what was the cause. She told us with a troubled look in her eyes that ever since Confirmation Day he seemed to lose interest in everything religious. No amount of coaxing or scolding could drive him to church. Years passed by. That ten-year-old boy was now a young man of twenty-two. He had not been in church since the day he left home. His Sundays were spent in so-called social clubs, gambling, drinking and consorting with a bunch of female vampires. His father died. His mother was left a widow, alone, penniless. He was her natural support, but his resentment towards her had never really died. The occasion of his being thwarted had no doubt been forgotten, but the disappointment had engendered resentment and resentment had destroyed respect.

Would that boy's attitude towards that broken hearted mother have been different had he been permitted to follow his desire? We wonder!

OUR PERSONAL EXPERIENCE

It has been our personal experience that age has nothing to do with a person's fitness to be confirmed. We know some boys and girls nine years of age who have a deeper knowledge of spiritual things and a clearer consciousness of their duty towards both God and man, than scores of men and women. Furthermore, we know many men and women who are less prepared for Confirmation than some children of eight years.

WHO CAN JUDGE?

But who can judge when a child is prepared to receive Confirmation? That is a stumper! However, the parents can safely leave the decision with the child and his rector. The father and mother are either too close or not close enough to get a proper perspective on the moral and spiritual growth of the child. The Priest of God, however, is a specialist in the cure of souls and, like his Master, he pleads that the parents "suffer the little children to come unto him AND FORBID THEM NOT, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

WHY OUGHT I BE CONFIRMED?

Cannot I Be a Decent, Respectable Person Without Formally Attaching Myself to the Church?

If Confirmation meant "decency" and "respectability" we would be among the first to admit that anybody can be both without it. The one thought we wish to emphasize is that Confirmation has very little to do with either decency or respectability in a major sense. It naturally follows that a confirmed person is more likely to be such than is one unconfirmed; but Confirmation is more, far more, than just a seal of respectability. It is a badge of service to God and Man. Self-interest is submerged into self-sacrifice. A confirmed person is not only a good person, he is a useful person. He is an active member of the Christian institution—the Church. He is one of many who are struggling towards a better civilization. He is the custodian of high spiritual ideals. He is the advocate of righteousness for all. He is striving always to grow more in Grace and in the power of Jesus Christ, that he may become more and more an active force for good among the children of men. He is not a reformer, he is a crusader and Jesus Christ is the Captain of the Host.

But, says somebody, I do not need to be a confirmed member of the church to be a Christian—I can worship God in the open as well as in the church.

Yes, You CAN; But You DON'T

"I'M NOT GOOD ENOUGH"

Excuse of Many Who Would Evade Their Spiritual Responsibility of Being Confirmed

Years ago, before we had experience, this peculiar and apparently humble reason for evading Confirmation—daunted us. We were too unsophisticated to realize that it is nothing more nor less than a pious fraud. However, as in many other matters, it is just as well to treat it seriously and make it a subject for discussion, if for no other reason than to expose its absurdity.

How Good Must a Person Be to Be Good Enough to Be Confirmed?

What is the object back of Confirmation? Is it a sort of initiation into a select society of superior persons? Must the candidate for initiation present credentials to prove that he is worthy to become a brother among us, and to enjoy all the rights and privileges of our Holy Society? Is the object of the Church to be a refuge for sinless souls who flee to it to escape contamination with the world? Putting it bluntly—is a confirmed member of the Church one degree more superior, morally or otherwise, than the majority? Personally, we would register an emphatic NO to that. The man or the woman who imagines that Confirmation is a sign of saintliness, is ignorant of the mission of the Church.

In other words Confirmation is a form of matriculation into the Divinely founded School for Christian development, which teaches its students all the Christian graces and how to apply them. In the Church the confirmed member is given an highly specialized course in the theory and practice of religion. The faculty is the Priesthood, the church building is the school house, the classes meet every Sunday morning, afternoon and evening for regular instruction and frequently at other times during the week for special training. A confirmed member's proficiency depends upon his regularity in attending these classes and in doing field work for practice. The member who plays truant two-thirds of the Sundays, soon shows he is a backward and unsatisfactory member of the Church. He is always the one who finds all sorts of fault with the Church, its teachings, its faculty and its faithful disciples or pupils.

Therefore, when we urge an adult to assume the responsibility of his Baptismal vows by confirming them in the presence of the Bishop and the congregation, we are telling him that this is his duty to himself in order that he may learn the will of God and his duty to his neighbor and thus develop into a perfect man in Christ our Lord.

As the little child, all ignorant and inexperienced in the paths of knowledge, enters the kindergarten and painfully plods his way through all his grades of learning until he has completed his career in the University, so does the confirmed member of the Church advance step by step from spiritual darkness and ignorance into the brilliant light of knowledge of God and the ultimate goal of His children who are perfected in Him through service.

Therefore, beloved, do not hesitate, but say to your soul—I am too ignorant of God and His great scheme of spiritual development, in which I am so intimately involved, to delay any longer. I must be confirmed now and take my place among the SEEKERS AFTER TRUTH, that I, too, may attain unto the likness of Jesus Christ.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE FOR CONFIRMATION CANDIDATES?

The Success of Our Campaign for Candidates Rests on Every Member of the Parish

The Church has gone modern in its method of getting candidates for Confirmation. In former times the Rector would notify the Parish that on a certain day in the near future the Bishop would visit the Parish for the purpose of confirming such candidates as would be presented at that time. This announcement carried a rider to the effect that the Rector would hold classes for instruction at such a time during the week. Then he would go to the church on the day appointed and instruct such as presented themselves.

Today, however, our methods are somewhat more aggressive. We are not content to wait for candidates to present themselves for instruction. We feel it is our duty to do everything in our power to bring prospective candidates to a realization of the necessity of assuming the responsibility of the Baptismal vows made in their behalf by their sponsors. It is too serious a matter to allow any such to treat it with indifference. When a person has been "sufficiently instructed" it is OUR duty to see that he is brought to the Bishop to be confirmed by him. It is not for us to say that the child should be allowed to choose for himself any more than a child should be allowed to choose whether or not he ought to go to public school. If the parents neglect to send the child to school the state applies the COMPULSORY EDUCATION law and fines the parents for not sending the child to school. As it is with the child and secular education, so ought it to be with him and spiritual education. And to a greater degree.

Such being the case it is our sober judgment that every persuasive means and every possible individual ought to be used to bring the parents to a proper state of mind in seeing to it that the child attends the Friday and Sunday Confirmation instructions.

THE PARISH ORGANIZATIONS' RESPONSIBILITY

Every Church Member's Responsibility, But the Burden to Bring Candidates for Confirmation Rests on the Church Organizations

Frequently we are told by an individual that he finds it impossible to do personal service in bringing candidates to Confirmation. He is so constituted that he is conscious of a sense of affectation and unreality when he tries to make contacts for such purposes.

We thoroughly understand that. But what one cannot do alone he may and can do if he has a pal or an organization to go with him to get his man (or her woman).

We have several Parish Organizations which ought to be scouting every nook and corner of the Parish in search of candidates for Confirmation, youth or adult, male or female.

The Woman's Auxiliary, the Daughters of the King, the Young Women's Christian League and the Women's Bible Classes, ought to be making a drive for every unconfirmed girl or woman they can find.

The Brotherhood of St. Andrew, the Men's Club, the Men's Bible Class and the Executive Committee of the Parish, ought to be rounding all the unconfirmed boys and men of the Parish.

The Young Peoples Fellowship and the Choir ought to make a special drive for the young men and women who have no church connections.

Every member of every parish organization ought to feel it is his or her solem responsibility to BRING prospective candidates to the church for instruction. Every organization ought to attend every Sunday evening service with a 100 per cent membership to add interest and enthusiasm to this service of instruction. Even the diffident man or woman can do this for his Master if he really wants to serve. In other words, coming right down to brass tacks—

YOU, whoever you are and whatever your position in the Church of the Living God, are responsible for the success of our Confirmation Service, Sunday, June 18th, at 8 P. M.

THY NEIGHBOR

Who is thy neighbor? He whom thou
Hast power to aid or bless;
Whose aching heart or burning brow
Thy soothing hand may press.

Thy neighbor? 'Tis the fainting poor
Whose eye with want is dim.
Oh, enter thou his humble door
With aid and peace for him.

Thy neighbor? He who drinks the cup
When sorrow drowns the brim;
With words of high sustaining hope
Go thou and comfort him.

Thy neighbor? 'Tis the weary slave,
Fettered in mind and limb;
He hath no hope this side the grave;
Go thou and ransom him.

Thy neighbor? Pass no mourner by;
Perhaps thou canst redeem
A breaking heart from misery;
Go share thy lot with him.

Daily Dozen for Toleration

By William H. Jefferys, M.D.

EXERCISE NO. 6

In our first exercise for toleration we aimed to get a right relationship with other Christian bodies. In our second we broadened this to include all the great religions of the world which show any definite aim to know God. In our third we shifted the emphasis to our sister nations, their right to live in the world; to have their own preferences; and to their heritage as Sons of God. In the fourth we came down to individual persons, particularly those with whom we are natural misfits. In our fifth we discussed the possibility of writing a Creed of Tolerance. Let us remember that tolerance is bearing; bearing with others, even to bearing their burdens and the bearing of burdens of others is the fulfilling of the law of Christ. That is rather a nice stepladder, isn't it?

Today let us very briefly suggest some practical, homelike exercises which will act as sacramental signs of a hoped for spiritual reality within. For instance, a scowl is a sign of inner irritation. Some kinds of smiles hurt, but others are like living sunshine. You know the Boy Scout rule, one good deed a day, and what a terrible time some of them have to think of a good deed. The practice of tolerance would give a field to keep any Boy Scout busy for the rest of his life and would be worth the while. If you have never known what the word sacrament means, cultivate the following of some such list of exercises. Make them the outward and visible sign of your inner reality and you will learn what the word Sacrament means.

A. Smile when you are expected to frown. Don't smile when you are expected to smile. Don't frown at all.

B. Don't join the mass of organized anything, except love be the motive, and then be very strong on organization. Two things are dangerous —Acting without a proper motive and organizing without an adequate end.

C. Take for granted that the other fellow knows his own business. He doesn't usually but neither do you.

D. Don't boss people. Help them. Driving people to do things doesn't help. It makes slaves.

E. In spite of the fact that your job in life may be molding young lives, you will be a happy molder if you will let them alone. Be careful not to grow mouldy yourself.

H. Cultivate the powers of self-restraint and of silence. Free speech is often a menace. Too much speech is a torture.

I. Don't run the risk of being caught in insincerity; therefore, don't talk cant and particularly don't live it. Religion is not the only field of cant. The high pressure salesman talks over the radio more cant to the inch than all the preachers who ever lived.

J. Don't criticize your fellow workers, and respect the personal integrity of those whom you serve and particularly respect the integrity of God.

THE JOB IS DONE

The Whole Interior of the Church is Renovized

You have no trouble to identify a St. Johnite in your amblings through the Parish. There he goes with a strut in his walk, with his head in the air, with a grin on his face, with a straight backbone. He is proud! He is happy! He is no longer ashamed of his dear, old church. Its whole interior is renovized.

THE BIG VOLUNTEER JOB

We described at length, in a previous issue, the great change we made in the church auditorium. On the afternoon the job was finished a group of workers and the Rector were standing around admiring the change. In our conversation some one said: "it would be fine if the rest of the church was renovized." One of the men proposed that so long as they were unemployed, why not keep the organization together and VOLUNTEER to "do" the Sunday School room as a sign of their appreciation for the work and wages that had been given them. It was agreed that if the Rector could raise the money for the paint they would start right in. The Rector could not let such a chance slip through his fingers. He got in touch with some friends and raised the necessary funds to buy the materials. The result was the men did not stop until they had painted the walls, the ceiling and woodwork of the Main Sunday School room, the Men's Bible Class room, the Reed Street hall, the Men's Vesting Room, the Stairway leading to the Sacristy, the big Sacristy, the hall leading into the kitchen and the kitchen itself. In the meantime George Downes had done some pretty high class decoration of the Sunday School Chancel.

The men's contribution to the beautifying of the church was worth not less than $500.00 to the Parish. It was a fine gesture of loyalty from them and the whole parish is proud of their work.

THE HALLS COMPLETED

In the meantime, we attacked the upper and lower halls of the church. The walls and ceiling are finished in the same style as the Church Auditorium. The women's toilet on the lower floor has been greatly improved and enlarged. The lower floor has been scraped and dressed. The foot treads on the steps have been renewed, four large plate glass panels have been placed in the inside front doors, the outside of the front doors have been painted and now we are digging down into our jeans to find a few stray coppers to buy new hall hanging lamps. When we have them our church "insides" will look swell.

WE DID IT

The point we want to emphasize is—we did it. Our own men, members of the Parish, did the whole job. That is the reason you can so easily pick out the St. Johnites in the Parish. They are so proud of the job that they simply cannot help showing it.

OUR THANKS ARE DUE

to the several interested friends of the Rector who made it possible for him to put over this big program of improvements by so generously contributing to the work. It was their dollars that did it.

REMEMBER, SUNDAY, JUNE 18TH

* * * * * *

The Parish is most grateful to the men who volunteered to paint the lower rooms of the Church and made such a good job of it.

* * * * * *

We were proud to entertain the members of the Convocation of South Philadelphia, Tuesday, May 23rd, in our newly conditioned church.

* * * * * *

Who can answer this question? What two great things happen on Sunday, June 18th?

* * * * * *

Something to think about. So often we hear it said that "the Church is after your money only." Yet, here is what St. John's Parish gave to her people, which is a great deal more than she got from them.

1. Harvest Home Festival—Food, Clothing, Money, Coal, Rent.
2. Thanksgiving Baskets—Thanksgiving Dinners for one hundred persons.
3. Christmas Baskets—Dinners for two hundred and fifty persons.
4. The "Tithing Sunday"—When all who had jobs gave one tenth of their week's wages to help the poor families—which gave us sufficient income to buy several quarter tons of coal and buy groceries for our needy.
5. Summer Vacation School—Where children were given not only useful occupations and games to keep them busy but were also supplied with milk and nourishing food at noon every day.
6. The Summer Camp, Browns Mills—Where hundreds of boys and girls of the Parish spent the hottest days of the summer in comfort.
7. The City Child's Clinic—Which has given scientific medical care of both mother and child living in St. John's Parish regardless of race, creed or color.

These are only a few of the material things St. John's folk have received because they are St. John's folk. Besides these are the spiritual things of incalculable value they have received.

Let's Try to Remember These Things When We Feel Selfishly Inclined

Now don't be foolish and spend what you cannot afford on a summer vacation.

IT MATTERS MUCH

It matters little where I was born,
Or if my parents were rich or poor;
Whether they shrank at the cold world's scorn,
Or walked in the pride of wealth secure;
But whether I live an honest man,
And hold my integrity firm in my clutch,
I tell you, brother, plain as I am,
It matters much.

It matters little how long I stay,
In a world fraught both with joy and care;
Whether in youth I am called away,
Or live till my bones and pate are bare;
But whether I do the best I can
To soften the weight of adversity's touch
On the faded cheek of my fellow-man,
It matters much.

WHY?

Certain Questions and Answers Concerning Christianity and the Church

By Rev. H. Cresson McHenry

PART II

14. Why Do Some Men Worship According to the Forms and Ritual of the Protestant Episcopal Church?

For two reasons. The first, because they were christened and confirmed in that particular branch of the Catholic Church. The second, because to their way of thinking the Protestant Episcopal Church is the Christian body that comes nearest to expressing the love and will of God.

15. Why Does the Episcopal Church Divide Itself Into so Many Different Parties, and Which of These Holds the Truth?

In many cases there are honest differences of opinion as to the value of ritualism or the interpretation of a portion of scripture and the application of that interpretation to a doctrine of the church. In many other cases the difference of opinion is due to intellectual pride and intolerance of spirit.

That party holds most of truth which hews nearest the fundamentals of the Christian faith.

16. Why Does the Episcopal Church Prefer a Ritualistic Service?

Because the worship of God ought always to be beautiful and dignified.

17. Why Do Episcopalians Use a Prayer Book?

In order that all parishes and missions throughout the civilized world may engage in one common act of worship. The tools of a churchman are one Bible, one book of praise or hymn book and one book of Common Prayer. In whatever part of the civilized world he goes, he is never embarrassed in his worship, for the same tools of worship are used wherever he may be.

18. Why Do Episcopalians Discourage Extempore Prayer?

No enlightened Episcopalian does such a thing. There are times when extempore prayers are most fitting, and are used by all sensible Christians.

19. Why Is It So Hard for a Stranger to Follow the Episcopal Service?

Because they do not follow the directions in the Prayer Book known as rubrics.

20. Why Are There Three Orders in the Episcopal Church?

It is a following of a custom found in the Book of the Acts of the Apostles. In it we are told there were Apostles, Presbyters and Deacons.

21. Why Does the Bishop Lay His Hands on the Heads of Those to Be Confirmed and Those to Be Ordained?

It is an ancient custom and extends back to Apostolic times.

22. Why Do You Use the Word "Catholic" in Saying the Creed?

Because we refer to the WHOLE church, but not to the Roman branch of the whole church.

23. Why Does Not the Episcopal Church Insist on Conversion as a Necessary Means of Grace?

Confirmation implies true conversion: i. e., the candidate publicly declares he "renounces the devil and all his works, the vain pomp and glory of the world, with all covetous desires of the same, and all the sinful desires of the flesh." He further declares that, by God's help, he "will endeavor not to follow nor be led by them." He MUST make this renunciation before he can receive the laying on of hands and be accepted into the fellowship of Christ.

24. Why Does the Episcopal Church Assert It Is Catholic?

Because it received its first orders from the Church of England, which is the true descendant of the British Church, which, in turn, was of Apostolic origin.

25. Why Do Episcopal Clergy Refrain From Inviting Other Clergy to Preach in Their Pulpits?

Because many of the clergymen of the other branches of the Christian Church do not believe in the Creeds and the two Sacraments as generally necessary to salvation, but teach their people contrariwise.

26. Why Am I Asked to Give Money to the Church?

For various reasons. It is needed to support the church as much as it is needed to support the family. It is needed to expand the business of Christ as much as it is needed in expanding commerce. It signifies our willingness to sacrifice for the cause of Christ. It enables us to express our fellowship and love to the less fortunate brethren. It helps us to show we value our religion beyond silver and gold.

27. Why Does the Christian Church Emphasize so Strongly Its Missionary Work? For Instance, Is Not a Good Jew as Good as a Good Christian? Does He Become a Better Man by Becoming a Christian?

The missionary labors of the Christian Church are in obedience to the last command of Jesus Christ: "Ye shall be witnesses unto me . . . unto the uttermost parts of the earth." See Acts 1:8.

A good Jew is indeed as good a man as a good Christian; but Christianity is more than simply a code of morals. It is the continuation and completion of a man's spiritual development and growth in Grace. If the Jew insists on stopping at the close of the Old Testament and refuses to proceed to the New Testament, he deliberately retards his spiritual development and growth in Grace As the university completes one's mental development which was begun in the primary school, so does Christianity complete one's spiritual development which was begun in the Decalogue.

WHICH LOVED BEST?

"I love you, Mother," said little John;
Then, forgetting his work, his cap went on,
And he was off to the garden swing,
And left her the water and wood to bring.

"I love you, Mother," said rosy Nell,
"I love you better than tongue can tell."
Then she teased and pouted full half the day,
Till her mother rejoiced when she went to play.

"I love you, Mother," said little Fan;
"Today I'll help you all I can.
How glad I am school doesn't keep!"
So she rocked the babe till it fell asleep.

Then, stepping softly, she brought the broom
And swept the floor and tidied the room;
Busy and happy all day was she,
Helpful and happy as child could be.

"I love you, Mother," again they said—
Three little children going to bed.
How do you think that mother guessed
Which of them really loved her best?

Twenty-one Years of Service

They Were Twenty-one Years of Exciting Adventure

Sunday, June 18th, was a glorious summer day. It was just the kind of day one would naturally pick for an anniversary celebration. The sun was bright, the temperature was low and the air was bracing. It was one of those days that simply tease you to get out and live abundantly.

The Holy Communion

At 11 A. M. we started our Twenty-first Anniversary with the Annual Parish Corporate Communion. The Collect, Epistle and Gospel used were those appointed for St. John the Evangelist's Day. The music of the service was rendered most effectively by the choir. The offertory anthem was both beautiful and difficult, but the choir did full justice to it and received the hearty commendation of the congregation after the service. As usual, on such an occasion, the parish turned out en masse for the celebration. Row after row of communicants came forward to receive the Sacrament. The Rector invited all those who were present and were to be confirmed in the evening to receive their first Communion at this service. He was surprised to see how many candidates were present and how all of them availed themselves of the opportunity and received.

The dignity and beauty of the newly renovized interior of the church added much to the service. The church has an almost cathedral appearance which is most appealing. The altar was beautifully adorned with white carnations and baby breath. Taking it all in all, the morning was perfect in every way.

A Matter of Interest

One of those present called the attention of the writer to the interesting fact that in the choir were five married couples, who, in every case, had first met in old St. John's, were married there and just continued in their sphere of service in the church. These couples are: Jeremiah K. and Elizabeth Rutter, Herman and Elizabeth Jaeschke, Vernon and Martha Matthews, John and Margaret Nelson, James and Kathryn Adgate.

The Parish Dinner

At 12.30 o'clock the parish sat down to its regular annual dinner. The big kindergarten room was filled with small tables reserved for the children. The large Sunday School room was converted into a temporary dining room with a capacity of about one hundred and fifty. All the places in both rooms were filled immediately, and we were served a delicious and abundant dinner. Ice cream, of course, constituted the dessert.

The Sunday School Rally

At 2.30 o'clock the Sunday School assembled for its annual rally. The whole school, comprising the Kindergarten, the Intermediate Department, the Senior Department, the two Women's Bible Classes and the Men's Bible Class, met in the church auditorium. All joined in singing our parochial hymn, St. John's, to the tune which Dr. Adam Giebel composed especially for our parish. The Creed and Lord's Prayer were said by the whole school, led by the Rector.

The Intermediate Department showed their proficiency in the fundamentals of Bible Study by giving the Books of the Bible, the groups to which each book belongs and the number of chapters in each book. Mrs. John Nelson, Jr., recited Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's beautiful poem, "The Builders." The Kindergarten contributed their mite to the occasion by singing a child hymn prepared especially for this anniversary. Miss Adelia Pearo recited the popular poem by Sam Walter Foss, "The House by the Side of the Road." The Senior Department continued the service with a hymn, after which the Bible lesson was read by Vernon Matthews.

Over forty scholars and teachers were awarded free excursion tickets to Riverview Beach for absolutely perfect attendance from Easter Day to Anniversary Sunday.

Parish Visiting

Many members of the parish and Sunday School brought flowers to be distributed to the shut-ins and aged of the Parish. A group of the older scholars and teachers volunteered to make them up into bouquets, after which a number of the scholars and teachers went parish visiting and distributed the bouquets among those who were confined to their homes so that they would know we were thinking of them while celebrating our anniversary.

The Parish Supper

At 5.00 o'clock everybody assembled for supper. Again the two rooms were filled to overflowing almost at once. And again Mrs. Pine and her staff of efficient workers served a very appetizing meal. And again, much to the delight of the kiddies, we had ice cream for dessert and we had lots of it. Many parishioners were forced to wait for second table. The meals were about perfect and we are sure everybody was amply served. We made sure that we had enough to eat this year and did not repeat the mortifying experience of last year when we ran out of both food and ice cream.

The Confirmation

The names of those confirmed in the class of 1933 immediately follows this record of the day. Miss Hannah Nuttall was Recorder for the women and girls. Miss M. Beatrice Fisher was Recorder for the men and boys. Mr. John Spratt was Marshal for the men and boys and Mr. John E McHenry was Marshal for the women and girls. Promptly at eight o'clock the big class was registered and ready for the service. Our beloved Bishop Francis M. Taitt was on time as usual and we got a prompt start with the service. It was Bishop Taitt's first opportunity to see the interior of the church since it was renovized. He was both surprised and pleased to see what a wonderful change it made in the appearance of the place, both up and down stairs. It is a real pleasure to work with and for a Bishop who is so encouraging and appreciative. We will long remember the gracious words he used in congratulating the parish for what they had accomplished.

After the Confirmation Service, Bishop Taitt re-consecrated the church, using a brief but beautiful adaptation of the Consecration Service.

The Bishop's Reception

We have a custom that is known as St. John's Salute. The salute is led by the choir who form a single file after the final prayer and pass before the guest of the evening, shaking him by the hand. The whole congregation line up behind the choir and do the same. The St. John's Salute is in reality an impromptu reception. On our anniversary night our last act was to give our Bishop the salute with several hundred persons in line. Before the tail of that line arrived, the Bishop was quite aware of the fact that he had been well and truly "shaken" and that he had been tendered a real reception by the members of St. John's Parish.

The Day Is Done

The day is done. Already the wonderful inspiration and pleasant experiences of our Twenty-first Anniversary are memories. But what vivid, beautiful, happy memories! How indelibly they are stamped upon our minds and hearts. For many a year we will dream of our happy Twenty-first Anniversary. Fragments of the day will drift by us, laden with a loving thought out of the past. All the laughing, tender, loving touch and look and word will come back to us, and in our gladness we will bow our heads and say, "Thank Thee, Our Father, for counting us worthy of so much joy."

The Rector's 21st Birthday Party

Everybody and His Wife Were There

The usual birthday "surprise" party was tendered the Rector on the occasion of his twenty-first anniversary, Friday, June 16, at the Parish House. A fine crowd came out to honor the occasion. The Rector was not supposed to know anything out of the ordinary was about to happen. He was invited to a choir party, which is a very commonplace affair, and then when he arrived he was to be met and greeted by the entire parish. For weeks preparations were under way and the most elaborate care was used to keep the rector unaware of what was going to happen. After awhile the atmosphere became so tense with secrecy that the Rector himself had to adopt heroic means to keep himself from finding out what was "going on." He simply had to force himself to be deaf, dumb and blind to what was happening. If he did see things he ought not to see, he was decent about it and discreetly cast down his eyes "like a shy young maiden" and looked the other way. If he did hear things he hadn't ought'a, he stuck his fingers in his ears and tip-toed away. If some innocent little thing came up and asked him if he was going to "be at" the "surprise" party the parish was giving him next Friday night, he was in honor bound to keep the secret from himself and be dumber than usual for fear of letting the cat out o' the bag.

Was He Surprised?

So, between the parish and the Parson, we had a terrible time arranging a complete and successful "surprise" for him. When the Rector walked into the parish house the big gymnasium was crowded with parishioners. Not an outsider was present—except a few who were not outsiders at all. After the Rector recovered from his "surprise" and all the little girls stopped giggling and stuffing their hankies in their many months, the fun of the evening got under way with an entertainment made up of several parts. The program started with a pansy dance by girls who "knew their stuff," camp-fire songs by the Girl Scouts, tap dancing by Marie Connelly, presentation of a gigantic birthday cake "all lit up," presentation of a big bag of flowers to Mr. and Mrs. McHenry, a very effective series of charades, illustrating the pastoral work of the Rector, presentation to Mrs. McHenry of a beautiful summer handbag with a five-dollar note tucked away in the purse, and a gift of a check for $252.00 to the Rector, which was presented by Vernon Matthews who in a speech in which he said to the Rector before his face things which were altogether too nice to say behind his back.

The Tom Thumb Wedding March

But the greatest feature of the evening was the Tom Thumb Wedding March. Hear ye! Hear ye!! Hear ye!!! All ye many sundry brides and bridegrooms. Before ye take the fatal steps to the halter, come hither and learn of our kiddies how to do the trick with dignity, poise, style and everything. The idea was to illustrate one of the many priestly functions of the Rector. And did they illustrate? They were a sensation. There comes the bride, the coolest and most collected creature in the room. Then there walks the groom, acting as though he was "mad at" the whole show—just like a real groom always looks. Then there up front of the procession are the bridesmaids, Miss Ornet Kraft, who must have been leading victims to their fate these many generations. Just look at that firm, measured tread of little feet like implacable fate marching unswerving to the crisis. Then her two aides, the Misses Claire Bartel and Betty Silbert, the expression of whose pretty faces mask the flutter of the feminine heart beating high with hope that some day they too will be the jewel of some Lochinvar. The whole episode was charming and made us old folks wonder how we get that way so young.

Then followed the parish reception. Mr. and Mrs. McHenry took the St. John's Salute at the head of the room. The long line of parishioners, after being received by the Rector and his wife, entered the Sunday School room where they were served refreshments.

We are told that to Mrs. John Nelson, Jr., goes the credit of conceiving the beautiful program. With the able assistance of her "gang" and others she certainly did put over a most interesting entertainment.

Then We All Went Home and to Bed

ANNIVERSARY SPEECH

By VERNON MATTHEWS

"Once again we have the pleasure of meeting together to celebrate the Rector's anniversary. This one marks twenty-one years of service for him in St. John's Parish.

"Twenty-one years in a boy's life means that he has reached his maturity as far as the law is concerned. Even though St. John's Church is seventy-nine years of age, we can be safe in saying that it was in its childhood or at least its second childhood, which was worse yet, when he took charge.

"When a young man reaches twenty-one years of age he usually takes stock of himself. He also feels very important to himself. But in the case of our Rector we have been taking stock of him for twenty-one years, and each one of us has come to the conclusion that he has become important to St. John's Church in general and to each one of us in particular.

"The horrible economic depression, through which our country and the countries of the world are passing, has been felt severely by St. John's Parish. Our parish is made up almost entirely of workers with but a small income, many of whom are dependent upon work where they are hired by the day. These people have suffered greatly and a large percentage of our parish at the present time are unemployed. Churches all over the city, of all denominations, have found it necessary to cut down and curtail expenses.

"We, too, have felt the results of this distress in our treasury. But we have been able to keep our heads above water and, while we cannot boast of any large balance, we at least have not had a deficit.

"In spite of all this misery and discouragement about us, Mr. McHenry has maintained a calm and serene composure and an unshakable faith in the people of St. John's Church and their willingness to meet their obligations. He has contrived, with the assistance of the Lions Club of Independence Square, to make the past Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays cheerful by giving baskets of food to as many families as possible on both of these occasions.

"On several occasions during the past year he has inspired those more fortunate to help those less fortunate by bringing either money or food to the church for distribution. When we look at the beautiful interior of our church proper and the rest of the church buildings, it becomes more satisfying when we realize that the idea of having this work done by the unemployed men of our parish, was conceived and carried through by Mr. McHenry, suggesting the grouping of the men according to their different occupations so that as many as possible might share in the work and wages.

"As a whole the work of the church in the past year has been very successful, both spiritually and financially. It has been necessary to do some things which may not have met with the approval of everyone but, after all, we are all working for the general welfare of the church and we realize that our love for St. John's will keep us working for its future success.

"The Rector has been close to the hearts of each of us. It is not necessary for me to make a long address on this, his twenty-first anniversary, for him to know the depth of our feeling and affection.

"I said at the beginning of this address that when a man reached twenty-one years of age he had reached his maturity, so far as the law is concerned. I meant by that, that twenty-one years did not necessarily mean that a boy had matured into a man with the reasoning and faculties of a man. I do not know the condition of St. John's Church on its twenty-first anniversary, but I do know the condition it was in twenty-one years ago when Mr. McHenry took charge. During these past twenty-one years he has brought us up until we have attained that sound maturity that a healthy and mentally alert man of twenty-one should have attained.

"Times have been black. We have reached the bottom as far as our economic condition is concerned. People everywhere are beginning to look up. St. John's Church feels like the matured young man of twenty-one—strong, eager, alert. We begin to look about us. We feel our power in the church at large. Our work is not done. We have just reached the age when our possibilities are the more apparent.

"We have faith in our country. Our Rector has inspired us with an unshakable faith in our God, which is so adequately expressed in the words of that old hymn—

"Faith of our Fathers living still
In spite of dungeon, fire and sword,
Oh, how our hearts beat high with joy
Whene'er we hear that glorious word
Faith of our Fathers, holy faith,
We will be true to thee till death."

"Mr. McHenry: I congratulate you on behalf of the members of St. John's Church on this, your twenty-first anniversary. This gift is not as large as we would like it to be. It is, however, a visible sign of the love and esteem of your parishioners. You have given us twenty-one years of faithful service and every man, woman and child of this parish is back of you and say to you, carry on! We go forward with you!"

DOES IT PAY?

During the season of 1932-33 we had more social gatherings, suppers and entertainments than in any previous year. The purpose of most of these functions was to raise funds for missionary and parochial purposes. In arranging for these entertainments we were persuaded, against our better judgment, to advertise dancing after the evening program. The argument was it would increase our receipts and make the occasion more of a financial success.

Now that the season is closed, we are in a position to audit our accounts and arrive at a definite conclusion as to the wisdom of our course. What we deduct is not inspiring. In every case we find that OUR EXPENSES are from 33⅓ per cent. to 50 per cent. of OUR RECEIPTS due to the amount we were forced to pay an orchestra; for, we were informed, nobody would come to the dances unless we hired good talent. This cut of one-third to one-half in our receipts was a very serious matter, because that was not all the expense incurred. There was also the heat and light and stage lighting which had to be charged to the expense account. When all was added up, including miscellaneous expenses for make-up, etc., the parish receives less than one-third of the receipts. TO THE EXPENSE OF THE EVENING OF THE ENTERTAINMENT WE MUST ADD THE EXPENSE OF HEATING AND LIGHTING THE PARISH HOUSE FOR REHEARSAL NIGHTS WHICH, IN MANY INSTANCES, COVERED SEVERAL MONTHS OF FROM ONE TO TWO NIGHTS A WEEK.

On the other hand, in every instance where an entertainment was given without a dance or the hiring of orchestra music, the turnover to the church was nearly 90 per cent. of the receipts. Even where the audiences were smaller the church received a greater sum of money because the expense of orchestral music was eliminated.

We have observed another feature which has given us some anxious moments also. There has been a gradual but definite falling off of the parishioners attending these functions and an increase of strangers who are not at all interested in the spiritual affairs of the parish and who do not seem to understand the peculiar psychology of our people. The cause of this shifting of personnel is no doubt due to the increased cost of the ticket of admission which our people cannot afford and also because they are not interested enough in dancing to pay the extra price.

As the parish house was built for the enjoyment and pastime of the members of St. John's Church, we feel we are cheating ourselves of our recreation and turning our parish house over to a group of people who have no interest in us or the church.

Besides all this, there are other and graver reasons why we have come to the conclusion that promiscuous dancing after entertainments is very undesirable. We will not go into that part of our subject, however, than to say that the members of St. John's Church strongly resent the implication that they are guilty of such acts as have been committed at the dances by strangers. That is why they have ceased to patronize our entertainments.

Our conclusion of the matter, therefore, is—in the future we will not advertise dancing as an attraction on any cards of entertainment. And we will not hire any professional or amateur orchestra at any price to supply music for dancing.

We do not mean to eliminate dancing altogether. If any group of church people or any church organization wish to have an informal dance at any time, they are at liberty to go ahead and enjoy themselves—PROVIDED THE MUSIC IS SUPPLIED BY ONE OF THEIR NUMBER WITHOUT CHARGE and as a part of the evening's enjoyment.

We are perfectly aware that there are those who will take violent exception to our decision in this matter, but for the sake of economy and for the protection of the reputation of our young folk, we must act with decision.

It has already been prophesied that if we adopt the policy of eliminating orchestral music we will not be able to make money. Well, when we consider we gave more entertainments this year and took in more receipts and paid out more than a third of what we took in and had LESS money at the end of the season than ever before and HAD MORE EXPENSE FOR FUEL AND LIGHTING, we reply to the criticism—SO BE IT!

Our motto in the future is: ST. JOHN'S

PARISH HOUSE FOR ST. JOHN'S PARISH, WHETHER WE MAKE MONEY OR GO BROKE.

What Is a Call to Service?

By WILLIAM H. JEFFERYS, M. D.

You open the door on a cold winter morning by way of taking in the morning paper, and you find lying on the step a mongrel dog with a broken leg. There are all sorts of possibilities of action and inaction. Have you any responsibility in the matter? You are the only person who knows the situation. You can do something about it. You can give it a kick; you can say "scat"; you can telephone for the police; you can call in a veterinary; you can take the dog in out of the cold; you can even pick it up in your arms and do this. A call to service, in the sense we are speaking of, is the knowledge of a need on the part of another with the ability to meet the need. Our answer is another matter. We may answer "Yes," or we may answer "No." We are speaking now of the call. Some of us would consider that call of the dog an imperative call; others would consider themselves not responsible. If the call were from a child who has upset an oil stove in the next room and caught fire, most of us, probably all of us, should consider the call more personal and imperative. If the child happened to be our child and we the mother or father, the demand would be still more imperative. It becomes, unquestionably, more directly our responsibility. We might not give our life for the dog; some few, perhaps, would. We certainly would be ready to give our life for the child, and to give it very gladly if our own child.

Our realization or acceptance of the call depends on how much and how far we love; whether we are provincial in our love, or whether our love reaches farther. I have a picture in my hand which shows a large, rough, wooden box, iron-bound, with one hole about the size of a small head in the side. It is doubly padlocked. Outside there is an empty rice bowl; that is the only thing within reach. Inside there is a woman condemned to death by starvation. It is a form of punishment which has been used in various parts of the world at various times; in this particular case within this century in Mongolia. Something is needed in Mongolia to relieve this situation. We know of the situation. A similar situation is raised in the case of China which is, comparatively speaking, without the knowledge of modern medicine. Have we any responsibility in these matters? So far as history shows, such responsibility was never recognized until the advent of Christ on earth. If that Person was God, Himself, then that was the longest reach of love of which we have any knowledge. Christian Missions are our response, as followers of Him, to His call to do the same thing; that is, to take down all barriers of love and go to the utmost limits of our knowledge.

As I understand it, the call to Christian Missions is not to the establishment of the Episcopal Church in any particular place. It is the obedience of Christ's command to "go into all the world" and do this thing. In the simple call, there is the need realized and the ability to do something about it. In the answer "Yes," there is the willingness to respond.

It would be very worth while, at this point, to test ourselves in concrete cases which will show us pretty clearly about what our present attitude to the world is, in lines of imaginative understanding, of fellowship, of the spirit of adventure, and of the power to love. We might also analyze the calls of some others as we have known about them: the call of Samuel, the call of St. Paul, the call of the Twelve, the call of Jesus.

When we come to analyze the difference between a call to service and a call to Christian service, I am not sure that we can find any words which will make any real distinction except in the complete recognition that in Christian service we accept a certain leadership which has placed the whole on a basis which recognizes human life as completely sacramental, wherein the material relief is never a primary objective but always a sign of the basic reality. "By their fruits, ye shall know them." The reality of the universe is moral; it is the life of the spirit. "Law is a necessary relation arising out of the nature of things. It is not an arbitrary decree establish by an autocratic power. What the natural law is in physical nature, the moral law is in the realm of the spirit and neither can be broken. It is not a question of ought not to break the moral law. The moral law cannot be broken, but it can break those who try to break it." The sign is expressed in the material universe. If the spirit does not bear fruit, it is not a virile thing; in proportion as it bears fruit, it is life. With deepest reverence we may accept our Lord's own verdict of His own work, of His own being. He is the "Very Image of God, the outward sign and the Thing signified in one; manhood was the outward sign and the Deity the inward reality."

Our 21st Anniversary Was a Big Success

* * * * * *

What a birthday party! There were flowers—non-sneezing variety—a big birthday cake with twenty-one flaming candles, a summer handbag with five dollars in it for Mrs. H. Cresson McHenry, a birthday check for $252.00 for the Rector, music, entertainment, ice cream and cakes for everybody.

BISHOP TAITT likes our interior decorations, if you know what we mean.

* * * * * *

It was the most remarkable confirmation class on record. There were THIRTY-FOUR women and girls and FORTY-TWO men and boys. It was the first class we ever presented where the males topped the females in number.

* * * * * *

The reason why the big class of male candidates was the hard, grinding, ceaseless work of the members of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew all year. They spent their efforts with the boys as well as the men.

You didn't know it, but all Anniversary Sunday afternoon Brotherhod men were quietly scouting through the parish, rounding up their candidates. That's why so many men and boys were confirmed.

We congratulate the choir and its leader upon the quality and the manner in which the anniversary music was rendered.

Our thanks and the thanks of the whole parish are due Mrs. Frank Pine and her corps of delicatessen experts for the very appetizing and abundant food supplied for the anniversary dinner and supper.

The Fellowship has disbanded for the summer to open in the fall with a banquet in September.

DON'T FORGET THE EXCURSION TO RIVERVIEW BEACH SATURDAY, JULY 15TH. Adults, forty cents. Children, twelve years, fifteen cents. Mr. Joseph Leach, 1235 South Second Street, is distributor of the tickets.

Forty Sunday School scholars received free excursion tickets for perfect attendance from Easter Day till Anniversary Sunday.

WE ARE ON OUR SUMMER SCHEDULE:
10 A. M.—Summer Bible School.
11 A. M.—Morning Service.
8 P. M.—Twilight Service.

Please pay your Church Debts before you take a vacation.

A HYMN

God be in my head,
And in my understanding;
God be in my eyes,
And in my looking;
God be in my mouth,
And in my speaking;
God be in my heart,
And in my thinking;
God be at mine end,

OUR FALL OPENING

LIKE THE DEPARTMENT STORES WE HAVE SEVERAL ITEMS OF INTEREST TO EXHIBIT

Now that vacation season is over and we are settling down we wish to remind you that your first duty is to give special attention to your church activities. Do not start without having a clear understanding with yourself that you must provide to use every means of grace this coming year that your spiritual career be not obstructed.

WHAT THE CHURCH OFFERS

The Church offers all sorts of opportunities to help you. The point is to use one or more of these opportunities to your utmost. First of all, there is which meets once a month. It is a World Wide Association of the women of the Church who are pledged to the twofold duty of supporting missions, both domestic and foreign, and to aid the Rector to develop every feature of the parish work. Membership is made up of all confirmed women from 18 years of age. Dues are voluntary, but that there may be regularity in payment, the minimum is 10 cents a month—if you have it. Also, every member is given a blue cardboard box for Thank offerings. In this box, which is kept in a conspicuous place, you drop in a thank offering every time you experience a special blessing from God. We want every woman in the Parish of 18 years of age and over to be present at our Woman's Auxiliary Reunion, Monday, September 25th, at 8.00 P. M. There will be a special program of entertainment—speakers—and refreshments. EVERY woman of 18 years and over is a member of the W. A., and is expected to be present at the Reunion.

THE DAUGHTERS OF THE KING

is a group of women specially consecrated to bring women to their Father's House in a missionary sense. Their's is a personal service for their acknowledged Lord and Master. They also volunteer to assist the Parish, and its Rector in every capacity. St. John's Chapter has a proud record of service and is one of the strongest chapters in the Diocese. It is an honor to be instituted a member and be permitted to wear its Cross.

On Wednesday, October 18th, the Chapter will give a supper to all the Women of the Parish, on which occasion there will be a special program offered and prominent members of the organization present. Admission by card.

THE YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN LEAGUE

is a purely Parochial Organization with no allegiance to any diocesan association. It is a group of women who meet every Monday night for worship and special parochial service of any kind or description. This year we are anxious to develop a certain definite line of Parochial work for this organization so as to keep its membership working every day of the week doing something for the development of God's work in South Philadelphia. The League will have its Fall Opening Monday, September 11th. All women who have ever been members of the Y. W. C. L., whether they have become delinquent or not, are invited to come to the Fall Opening and bring candidates for membership. The Y. W. C. L. will have a special open house on the above date and mean to leave no stone unturned to give its members and invited guests a night of real profit and pleasure. Special speakers will help make the occasion interesting.

GIRL SCOUT TROOP NO. 50

will have its opening night Tuesday evening, September 12th. The first meeting will be a party and refreshments for all the members of the Troop and the enrollment of eligible candidates for membership. All the parents of the girls will be the special guests of the Troop and Girl Scout work will be exemplified on the occasion. There will be short speeches by the Rector, the Captain and probably visiting executives of the Order. The opening night will be for the whole parish, especially for girls of Scout Age. Admission will be by Complimentary tickets issued by members of the Troop.

THE BROTHERHOOD OF ST. ANDREW

will hold a Brotherhood Reunion of all its members on Thursday evening, September 14th. At preliminary meetings a full program will be arranged for the occasion. There will be a Brotherhood Service of devotion followed by Special Speakers, followed by a smoker and refreshments. Every man of 21 years of age and over is the invited guest of the evening. THIS IS ONE OF THE LARGEST SOCIETIES OF THE PARISH. Its influence is felt throughout the Parish. Its missionary program, put over by its members, had the amazing result of having more men and boys confirmed this year than in any previous year. Also, many of its members were among those who so generously volunteered to help in renovizing the rooms of the church at the saving of many dollars to the Parish. It is considered a high honor to be accepted in full membership of this live organization.

ST. JOHN'S FELLOWSHIP

is an independent organization of young men and young women for service and pleasure. In the several years of its existence the members have been influential in many ways i. e. the raising of funds for special purposes, entertainments for young folks, Sunday evening Fellowship Services from 7.30 P. M. until 8.00 P. M., in which the study of the Bible, the Prayer Books, etc., is taken up in a popular way. The purpose of the Fellowship is to get young men and young women interested in spiritual as well as clean social affairs. On Thursday evening, September 28th, the Fellowship will open its year's work with a supper. Cards of invitation will be sent to members, ex-members and guests. On that evening we will endeavor to plan a campaign for the season as to Sunday evening service and a series of Fellowship parties during the season. Of course, the young people like to have persons of their own age join the Fellowship because it means membership that is congenial. Any young man or woman over 16 years of age is invited to apply for membership.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Last year we were very late opening our regular sessions of Sunday School on account of the quarantine against Infantile Paralysis. This year our RALLY DAY will be Sunday, October 1st, at 2.30 P. M., when we will have the Roll Call of Classes and a special religious play being prepared now by the members of the Summer Vacation School. The Rally will be held in the Parish House so that the girls can have the use of the stage.

During the year special prizes will be given for bringing new scholars to Sunday School; also for regularity and promptness of attendance and the best way for raising funds for the Sunday School Lenten Offering, which we must get under way early.

1933 CONFIRMATION CLASS

This year there were 76 men and boys, women and girls confirmed in St. John's Church. Not one of these should be allowed to wander. The Men, Women's and Young People's Organizations ought to "Rush" them and see that they are tied up to one or more of our Parochial organizations. We are hoping our Associations will see the opportunity and get busy. Do not allow them to wander from the fold. Do not let them get the idea that now they are confirmed, we care nothing about them. Join them up and make them get interested.

To those who have just been confirmed we want to say that it is up to you to get in the mixture and show a willingness to join something or other in the Parish. You are one of us now and you must claim your rights. Let us old timers feel that you are glad to join hands and be "regular fellers" with us.

ADAM GEIBEL, DOCTOR OF MUSIC

On Thursday, August 3rd, 1933, occurred the death of Dr. Adam Geibel, blind musician and composer. Dr. Geibel was confirmed in St. John's Church under the rectorship of either the Rev. J. E. Johnson or the Rev. G. D. E. Mortimer. It is difficult to say under which rectorship, because the parish records in those days were most incomplete.

He was especially dear to the members of this parish, as he was the first Organist and Choirmaster of the Church of St. John the Evangelist in 1885. He was most interested in the children of the church and formed and trained the largest children's choir in Philadelphia, to sing at the Sunday evening services. He was delegated by the Vestry to go to Boston to test a pipe organ as to tone and quality. The organ was purchased by him and used until replaced by the present one. He returned to St. John's many times after leaving his position as Church Organist, and the initial recital was given by him on the present organ.

Dr. Geibel was born at Neuenhein, near Frankfort-on-the-Main, Germany, September 15, 1855. At the age of nine days he lost his sight through the application of an eye wash prescribed through a mistake. He came to the United States when he was seven years old and entered the Pennsylvania Institution for the Instruction of the Blind in 1864, where he made rapid progress and graduated with honor, winning the Gold Medal for Composition.

His most popular composition is perhaps the melody of the negro lullaby, "Sleep, Kentucky Babe." He composed the Centennial Song for the 1876 Exposition, and fifty years later he produced the composition that was adopted as the official Sesqui-Centennial Ode.

But Dr. Geibel's real joy in composing lay in his devotional music, as can be readily seen by the large number of anthems, hymns and cantatas.

He composed two hymn tunes that are loved by the people of St. John's Church, one to the words of the St. John the Evangelist Hymn, "O Thou Who Gav'st Thy Servant Grace," the tune of which he called "McHenry," in honor of our Rector and which is played exclusively in St. John's Church. The other to the words of "Rock of Ages," composed at a special meeting of Apollo Club and named "Apollo" for the club.

Dr. Geibel was a very close and personal friend of the Rector and of your organist. It is with deep pleasure that I recall many happy incidents when I had the honor of accompanying him on some of his lectures and the opportunity to be with one whose understanding and love for all that was beautiful, in spite of his terrible handicap, was so fittingly expressed in his melodious and tuneful compositions. I feel that St. John's Church has lost a true and interested friend, and I know his music will live on forever in the hearts of those who loved him and were inspired by his greatness and his goodness.

Martha Weymann Matthews.

THE REV. GEORGE ALBERT HANNA

On Wednesday, August 2nd, 1933, occurred the death of the Reverend George Albert Hanna, Priest-in-charge of the Church of Our Saviour, Jenkintown.

His decease is of special importance to this Parish, because as a young man he practically began his career as Priest-in-charge of St. John's Church. He served us in this capacity from 1902 until 1905, when he resigned to serve as Assistant in St. Agnes Parish, New York City. After three years he left that Parish to become rector of the Church of the Holy Communion, South Orange, New Jersey, where he served until 1931. A short time ago he was appointed Priest-in-charge of the Church of Our Saviour, Jenkintown.

Many of the old communicants of St. John's Parish remember him with deep affection. He was a faithful pastor and a good organizer. His daily life was a living demonstration of his calling, pure and blameless.

As it happens, Mr. Hanna was intimately known to the present Rector. They, along with the late Rev. Robert Long, one time Assistant at the Church of the Holy Apostles, Philadelphia, and the Rev. Silas Grubb, son of Bishop Grubb, Bishop of the Menonite Church in Pennsylvania, were college pals together. Where one was you were pretty sure to find the other three nearby. This close fellowship held for many years. Then George Hanna went to New York to finish his preparation for the ministry; Silas Grubb left Philadelphia to take up special work under the auspices of the Menonite denomination and Robert Long and the present rector entered the Philadelphia Divinity School.

As we said, the Rev. Robert Long fell asleep many years ago. Now the Rev. George Hanna has ended his career of service for his Master. There still remains the right angle to the "Square of Friendship" to carry on.

We are glad we knew George Hanna so well. We shall ever treasure his memory and think of him as our college pal when the future was so rosy for him and us. He lived to fulfill his desire—to serve his Master with all his being.

God grant that he may Rest in Peace.

THE RELATIONSHIPS OF LIFE

The Relationships of Life are divided into three major classes: Our Relationship to God; Our Relationship to Ourselves, and Our Relationship to Others, which are divided into many sub-divisions, such as, our Relationships in family, business, school, church, friends, community, nation and the world.

Our Relationship to God being of paramount importance, I think it would be well for us to meditate on what relationship we bear to the Eternal Father. We all know, or should know, something of the Relationship God bears to us. At least, we know that God is kind, true, merciful, long suffering and of great goodness. We can express the relationship of God to us in those three words, "God is Love." Eternally and with no changing, we find that the essence of God's relationship to us is Love. But how different is our relationship to God. Unlike God, man's relationship to the Eternal Father is likely to be fraught with great and rapid changes. Rebellion, fear, bitterness, dishonesty, hypocrisy, greed, flattery, bargaining with God are at different times likely to enter into our Relationship to God. Assuming an attitude of patronage to God is another thing we are prone to do.

Seldom do we find that man's relationship to God is one continual oblation of faith, fear and love offered with all our hearts, minds, souls and strength. Worshipping, thanking, trusting and honoring God in Spirit and in truth is the duty of each one of God's children. I ask each of my readers to ask of themselves the question, "What is my Relationship to God?"

MAY MEAN A LOT

A little boosting now and then
Is relished by the most of men!
No matter what your job may be
If cutting hay or serving tea,
From drafting laws to making shot—
A little boost may mean a lot.
A cheery word, a kindly smile—
A friendly nod once in a while
May be the sanding of the track
For some poor chap, who's slipping back.
It isn't "blarney", "bunk, nor "show"
To give a guy a glad "Hello"—
And let him know you mean it, too—
For somehow it comes back to you
And makes for you a brighter day.
The moral is—again I say—
It's relished by the most of men—
A little boosting now and then.

A CALL TO ARMS

ST. JOHN'S PARISH HAS GONE BANKRUPT IN ITS EFFORTS TO HELP ITS POOR AND UNEMPLOYED

Like Joseph, the son of Jacob, we laid up a surplus of funds during the fat years preceeding '29 to meet the demands of relief in the lean years immediately following. We are not prophets, neither are we the sons of prophets, but it did not take a seer with a vision of the future to foresee what would be the aftermath of the wild orgies of those prosperous years when criminal extravagance and insane speculation in all sorts of wild cat ventures were absorbing the vast wealth of the nation like rain in the desert.

Our wisdom was justified. The period of silk shirts, expensive radios and luxurious automobiles suddenly collapsed like an over inflated balloon. The boys who wore silk shirts were wearing no shirts at all. The installment houses were gathering in a harvest of radios on which the families had defaulted payment. Financing companies were rounding up cars whose owners could no longer make payments. Department Stores were seizing loads of unpaid house furniture and costly bedroom suits purchased by irresponsible men and women without regard to cost, who no doubt could not read the handwriting and did not see disaster ahead.

Well, the Crash came!

The terrible depression which began in '29 gathered momentum until with blinding speed it almost sent us over the brink last winter. Only heroic efforts by the man of the hour set the brakes just in time. St. John's Parish, which is a Parish of wage earners, was among the first to feel the reaction. Our people experienced terrible suffering of hunger, sickness and lack of shelter. There is no knowing how much worse conditions would have been had not the church spent its financial strength in aiding the most urgent cases of destitution. What we did, as a parish, is now a matter of history of which we are pardonably proud.

For instance: ON "TITHE SUNDAY" last Fall, the employed members of St. John's pledged and gave one tenth of a week's wage for the relief of our unemployed brethren. We raised through our tithing a matter of $300.00 which we spent immediately for rent, fuel, groceries and clothing for families whose needs were immediate.

Then, we gave our HARVEST HOME FESTIVAL, at which time the entertainment was provided by the young folk of the parish and admission was either by money or gifts of food, clothing, etc. This gave us more ammunition with which to fight the depression. Again by a combination of funds from the church and the Independence Square Lions Club we provided 300 parish families, comprising about 1500 individuals, with THANKSGIVING AND CHRISTMAS RELIEF; including not only baskets of food, but also orders for fuel and rent. Besides these organized efforts of relief the Parish drew heavily on its funds for coal and sick diet.

RENOVIZING THE CHURCH

Our most ambitious attempt to help our unemployed was the renovizing the interior of the church. It was a big job which extended over two months and furnished work for more than fifty unemployed married men a means of support for their families at the rate of 40 cents per hour—THE RATE OF PAY SINCE ADOPTED BY THE N. R. A. The amount spent on men and materials, including the plumbing and new toilets, as well as the painting of the whole interior was $2100.00. Over two thirds of which went into the pockets of our unemployed men.

OUR ESTIMATED CONTRIBUTION OF MONEY AND MATERIAL FOR THE RELIEF OF THE POOR IN OUR PARISH FOR THE PERIOD OF 1930-1932 INCLUSIVE IS LITTLE LESS THAN $6600.00.

THE FINANCIAL STRAIN WAS TOO GREAT

We exhausted our funds and a very little money came trickling in through church envelopes. Many church families were unable to support their families, let alone the church. WE ARE HUNDREDS OF DOLLARS BEHIND IN OUR RECEIPTS AND HAVE COMPLETELY EXHAUSTED OUR LITTLE NEST EGG FOR A RAINY DAY. For the first time in twenty-one years we are not able to pay the wages of the few employed by the church. WE MUST RAISE FUNDS AT ONCE.

WHAT WE SUGGEST

We are perfectly aware that most our us cannot pay all our overdue church envelopes at once. But cannot we pay say one overdue envelope and one envelope that is due every Sunday until we have caught up on our church obligations? If that is done it will enable us to meet our obligations as well as forge ahead a little and prepare us to meet an emergency should one occur.

I am sorry to say that some of our parishioners, who have been regularly employed during the whole of the depression, have not responded very generously to the call to service. I would not have neglected this high privilege to help our unfortunate brothers had I been in their place. Misfortune is just as likely to overtake them some day and then in their time of need they will remember how deaf they were to the call of distress.

EVEN NOW THEY HAVE A CHANCE

The treasury of the church is empty. We broadcast this S. O. S. for relief. Every member is responsible to answer this call. You may need the ministrations of the church in the future the same as you received it in the past. YOU MUST NOT LET DOWN YOUR CHURCH NOW; BECAUSE IT MAY BE YOUR ONLY HAVEN OF SAFETY AND SHELTER AGAIN AS IT WAS IN 1929-1930-1931-1932.

REMEMBER

YOUR CHURCH ENVELOPES CONTAIN YOUR OFFERING TO ALMIGHTY GOD FOR ALL HIS BENEFITS AND ARE A PART OF YOUR DAILY WORSHIP. THEREFOR, BE CAREFUL THAT YOU ARE NOT STINGY TO HIM WHO HAS BEEN OVER GENEROUS TO YOU LEST YOU RECEIVE A REBUKE FROM HIM TO WHOM YOU ARE INDEBTED SO MUCH.

READ DEUTERONOMY 12:11

I Am Jesus, Your Saviour

When criticised and misunderstood, I am saying that you are my co-worker. I love you and offer you grace and strength for today.

When the world is worrying and grieving you, I am saying Peace be still. Be of good cheer, I have overcome the world.

When helpless and faint, in the struggle of life, I am offering you My body and blood to nourish and inspire you along the way.

When your heart is bleeding through the loss of dear ones, I am whispering, Thou shalt be with me in Paradise. Absent from the body to be present with the Lord.

When sin laden and weary, I am offering forgiveness and joy. "Come unto me and I will give you rest."

When desirous of helping the needy and sad, I am bidding you, Go, preach and heal and love and toil as I have done for you.

When discouraged and uncertain of the path to go, I am saying, Follow me, I am the way, the truth and the life.

When perplexed about appreciation and opposition, I am emphasizing that you receive a hundred-fold now in reward for your services.

When lonely and discouraged, I am whispering, Fight on, I will never leave you, I am alive for evermore.

WIDSOM OF THE BIBLE

The fact that the Standard Oil Company discovered oil and is operating wells in Egypt is generally known, but the reason for its going to that ancient land to look for oil is probably not so well known. It is asserted that one of the directors of the company happened to read the second chapter of Exodus. The third verse caught his attention. It states that the ark of bulrushes which the mother of Moses made for her child was "daubed with slime and with pitch." This gentleman reasoned that where there was pitch there must be oil, and if there was oil in Moses' time, it is probably there still. So the company sent out Charles Whitshott, its geologist and oil expert, to make investigations, with the result that oil was discovered. Three wells are now in operation and others are to be opened. —From the Chicago Daily News as submitted by Miss Faith R. Williams, Columbia, South Carolina.

ENDLESS CHAIN

The farmer sells a load of wheat,
And all the world grows fair and sweet.
He hums a pair of cheerful tunes,
And pays the grocer for his prunes.
The grocer, who has had the blues,
Now buys his wife a pair of shoes.
This Ten, the shoeman thinks God sent,
And runs and pays it on the rent.
Next day the rent man hands the bill
To Dr. Carver for a pill;
And Dr. Carver tells his frau
That business is improving now.
He cheers her up and says, "My dear,
You've been quite feeble for a year,
I think that you should have a rest;
You'd better take a trip out West."
And in a couple of days his frau
Is on the farm of Joshua Howe.
She pays her board to Farmer Howe;
He takes the bill, and says, "I vow,
Here is something that can't be beat;
This is the bill I got for wheat."
He hums a couple cheerful tunes,
And goes and buys a lot more prunes.

SUNDAY

Condensed from The Atlantic Monthly (May, '33) Philip Curtiss

Sunday as a day of universal rest now seems to have been judged obsolete. But sooner or later the world may be brought to realize that the old-fashioned Sunday was not a mere survival of Calvinism, but the best device ever evolved for restoring poise and judgment to a fidgety world. It forced whole communities of men, women and children to come, once a week, to a complete halt and, for 24 hours, alter entirely their physical, mental, and social habits.

My point of view is not primarily moral or religious. As a churchgoer my record has been no better than the average. But out of the untidy welter of Sunday papers and cigarette smoke that constitutes the usual present-day Sabbath, out of the chatter of golf scores and the smell of locker rooms, the hurried, tardy engagements, the rushed, undigested meals, and the long, nervous driving on crowded highways that make up a modern week-end, I find myself, with greater and greater longing, looking back to the peace and dignity of the old-fashioned Sunday as it was known to at least one small boy in a New England city in the 1890's.

The chief social value of the old-fashioned Sunday lay in its utter difference from all other days, and that difference was apparent from the moment one opened one's eyes. In a city there was a strange sense of stillness. The street cars ran on a different schedule, the sound of horses' hoofs seemed to come with a different rhythm, and only after long gaps of silence. In the country, the strokes of the church clock came across the meadows with quite a different tone. It may have been mental, of course, but even in the woods or on a ship at sea Sunday "looked" different from any other day. The second great influence began to work from the moment the boy put his foot out of bed, for at once he dressed in clean raiment from head to foot, and put on a formal dark suit of clothes; and on going downstairs, he found a company of elegants whom only custom enabled him to recognize as the members of his own family. Father had on his frock coat. Mother was a swirl of silk or satin, while Sister positively billowed in muslin or dimity.

I know that a great deal of scorn has been packed into the phrase "Sunday-go-to-meeting-best," but was there not, under these frock coats and dimities, a very sound psychological principle? Anyone will admit that there is a strong tonic effect in dressing for dinner—indeed, in changing one's clothes at any time; but, while Americans admit this fact, they are the last to practice it. The old-fashioned Sunday was the only institution that has ever made Americans realize the obligations and feel the benefits of dressing deliberately and appropriately for a given event.

The time between breakfast and church was one of the pleasantest hours of the day, an hour of complete, irresponsible leisure. No mail came to the door and no telephone rang. No Sunday papers appeared, with the modern fight for the various section and the subsequent dip into the commonplace. All tasks and games were at a standstill. The result was a state of mind in which even children found it pleasant to do nothing more than walk up and down the garden paths or sit under the apple trees. It was a state of perfect relaxation.

A well-known minister in Toledo had in his church a woman of very decided views, which she did not hesitate to express—a thorn in his flesh in many ways. One day just before vacation time she remarked to him in the presence of a group of church officials:

"There is no reason for a minister to take a whole month of vacation. The devil never takes a vacation."

"Certainly not," replied the minister. "That's why he is a devil. I'd be one, too, if I didn't take a vacation."—The Congregationalist, Reprinted in "The Christian" Section of the "Oklahoma City Star."

DON'T QUIT

When things go wrong, as they sometimes will;
When the road you are trudging seems all uphill;
When the funds are low and the debts are high,
And you want to smile—but you have to sigh!
When care is pressing you down a bit,
Rest, if you must, but DON'T YOU QUIT!

ALL GROUND UP

Teacher was telling her class little stories in natural history, and she asked if anyone could tell her what a ground-hog was. Up went a little hand, waving frantically.

"Well, Carl, you may tell us what a ground-hog is."

"Please, ma'am; it's a sausage."

Bride: "I want to buy a tie for my husband."

Clerk: "What kind, madam?"

Bride: "Well, he's an engineer, and I'd like to buy him one of those railroad ties he talks about."

* * * * * *

It was a fact that the minister was rather long-winded. During his "Sixthly" a young wife in the congregation remembered that she had left the gas on. She slipped a note to her husband, who happened to be an usher. Instead of reading it, he thought it was for the minister. So he went down the aisle and handed it to him. The minister paused, took the note with a smile, which turned into a terrific frown as he read: "Please hurry home and shut off the gas."—From the Watchman-Examiner.

SING

Sing through the darkness, and sing in the light,
Sing with the morning, and sing in the night;
Sing when your eyes have been clouded with pain,
Sing in the sunshine, and sing through the rain;
Sing when it's autumn, or winter or spring—
Nothing can touch you so long as you sing.
What though the roads may be dark, when you travel,
What though your hopes may grow snarled and unravel?
What though the hills you must climb may be steep—
What though life promises little but sleep
Sing to the future, and what it may bring Nothing can break you so long as you sing.

Christian Herald

N. R. A.

"BY THIS SIGN CONQUER"

A year ago we knew nothing of it. Today it has become so important that the big corporations, as well as the little corner stores, are striving after it. A business without the N. R. A. is a thing of suspicion and to be avoided. He who refuses to adopt the N. R. A., as his pledge of support to the business of the country and justice to the working man, has no claim for patronage from his neighbor. If he is so selfish as to refuse co-operation for the National Welfare, he ought to be given transportation to some uninhabited island in the middle of the ocean where he might go on living entirely and permanently for himself.

N. R. A. is the soundest system that has ever been devised to carry on business since the history of business began. It is not a political measure of any political party. It is a system born of the necessities of the times, and evolved by the vast scientific and business brains of the nation, regardless of politics. If it is honestly adopted as our business code many problems confronting capital and labor; family welfare and child labor, will be solved.

Already we are hearing grumblings and murmurs of discontent over the way it appears to be working out. It seems to be the opinion of many that it cannot succeed for the simple reason that dishonest business people and corporations are even now violating both the spirit and the letter of the code. Such a state of affairs is to be expected. It is hard for an unscrupulous business man to adjust himself to an honest program. A man or corporation who has been so criminal as to undercut the prices of his competitor, then proceed to victimize the buyer with shoddy goods, and reduce his overhead by employing child labor and paying sweat shop wages is a man without honor and will continue his evil business career by perverting even such a commendable code as the N. R. A.

Therefore, you must always remember that, if there is apparently an unsatisfactory element about the code the trouble lies with the dishonest business sharp and not with the N. R. A. Such men with such methods should be driven out of business. THAT IS YOUR AND MY JOB. What we must do is to scout around and see what firms are not flying the flag of the Blue Eagle and refuse to do business with them. A neighborly boycott will have a most salutary effect upon the balky business man who refuses to treat his customers and workmen with N. R. A. consideration.

As for that despicable rascal who got his Blue Eagle by false promises and is betraying his country by evading his trust, he deserves to be driven from the ranks of decent business men and ostracized.

Help the nation get back to prosperity by patronizing only such patriotic firms as do business honestly under the sign of the Blue Eagle. Your own job and your family's welfare and happiness depends upon your act. If you encourage the business sneak because he offers to sell you something a few cents cheaper than an honest business can and make a fair profit, YOU ARE AS CROOKED AS HE. YOU TOO BETRAY YOUR COUNTRY AND ENCOURAGE CHILD LABOR, STARVATION WAGES AND THE SWEAT SHOP.

Stand by and fight through with fairness and a firm resolve to support the N. R. A. It means a job eventually and decent wages for the working man. As your Rector, interested in your material well being, as well as in your spiritual development, I call upon you to be loyal to your Government and considerate of your neighbor by patronizing the stores flying the new flag, N. R. A.

OUR HARVEST HOME

Sunday, October 22nd

Though conditions are greatly improved we still have much suffering because of unemployment. This coming winter will be hard upon many families in the Parish. What has been developing for years cannot be overcome in less than seven months. Many of our family men are still looking for jobs. They are not idle from choice. If you would see how anxious they are to work and be self-supporting, just offer them jobs and see how they jump at the offer.

Every unemployed member of St. John's is OUR RESPONSIBILITY. He belongs to the family. His interests are our interests. His problems are our problems. Now that he and his family are in trouble we must "DO OUR BIT" towards helping him outride his difficulties. IF EACH OF US DO OUR LITTLE BIT BY BRINGING WHAT WE CAN AFFORD IN THE WAY OF GROCERIES, FRUITS, JELLIES, CANNED GOODS, CLOTHING, MONEY FOR FUEL OR RENT OR ANYTHING THAT A FAMILY OF HUNGRY FOLK NEED; we will have more than enough to see our needy brothers through the winter.

Every unemployed member of the parish is OUR OPPORTUNITY. Let me quote you something Jesus said about those who would enter into the Kingdom of Heaven. "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory:

And before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats:

And he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left,

Then shall the king say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my father, INHERIT THE KINGDOM prepared for you from the foundation of the world:

For I was—

HUNGRY and ye gave me MEAT:
THIRSTY and ye gave me DRINK:
A STRANGER and ye TOOK ME IN:
NAKED and ye CLOTHED ME:
SICK and ye VISITED ME:
PRISONER and ye CAME UNTO ME."

St. Matt. 25:31-36.

If this discourse of Jesus means anything at all, it means that he who sees an OPPORTUNITY to do good to his neighbor and DOES IT, has actually gripped his chance to enter into the kingdom prepared for him from the foundation of the world.

What encouragement this is to every weary son of man who has been striving to gain higher heights by overcoming his temptations and mastering his sins. For we interpret the words of Jesus to mean that IT IS NOT BY STRIVING AGAINST OUR PERSONAL SINS THAT WE GAIN HIS KINGDOM SO MUCH AS IT IS BY HELPING OTHERS IN THEIR DISTRESS.

THROUGH SERVICE TO OUR SUFFERING BROTHERS SHALL WE WIN THE LOVE OF GOD.

OUR HARVEST HOME AFFORDS US THE OPPORTUNITY to win the mark of approval from God. You, who are working, or have an income, can give at least some relief to our suffering brothers, and by so doing you will fulfill the conditions which admit you into the kingdom.

REMEMBER THE HARVEST HOME IS SUNDAY, OCTOBER 22ND

YOUR CHURCH ENVELOPES

As Important to the Church as Oil is to Machinery

I wish I had a pen with a point sharp enough to prick the conscience of the indifferent parishioner who cannot be brought to his sense of duty and obligation to his church.

If we lived in the days when they burned Christians at the stake, threw them to the wild beasts, tore them asunder with wild horses, broke them on the wheel and the rack, maimed and mutilated them, sewed them alive in sacks and threw them in the river, roasted them over slow burning fires, threw them in dungeons full of filth and vile vermin for life, I might understand why Christians did not bring offerings to the church. I could understand why the CHURCH ENVELOPE is so completely ignored by so many church members. Evidently somebody heard somebody else say, "Salvation is free." That being the case they cannot understand why they are asked to support the church financially.

Your CHURCH ENVELOPE contains your OFFERING to Almighty God for His benefits and mercies to you. IT IS NOT A GIFT FROM YOU TO GOD. It is only a miserably minute particle of what YOU GOT FROM GOD you are offering with your prayers of thanksgiving and praise to show Him your gratitude and love.

OF ALL THE BLIND FOOLS ON EARTH THE MOST HOPELESSLY BLIND IS THE ONE WHO WOULD ROB GOD.

Were God to say, "Why should I give food or air or water or shelter or health or life to mortals who never give anything of any value to me?" And were God to do to us as we do to Him, and stop giving us these needs to existence, what would become of us?

You pretend to believe in God, to love Him, to worship Him; but you are not willing to deny yourself of a pittance for an offering! What sort of love or worship is that? A NICKLE IN YOUR CHURCH ENVELOPE LOOKS AS BIG AS A FIVE DOLLAR NOTE IN YOUR WAGE ENVELOPE just because you are "giving it to God" and you don't want to.

DID YOU EVER ASK YOURSELF HOW NECESSARY GOD IS TO YOU? Well, you just sit down and think that out. Maybe, if you are honest with God, you will be ashamed to make your offering less than what you drop in the tin cup of a beggar on the street.

MY PRAYER IS THAT GOD WILL NEVER TREAT US THE WAY WE TREAT HIM. Were He ever to lose patience with us for our ingratitude we would cease to be.

Even if we have no love for God it would still be the part of wisdom to show a worldly appreciation for His blessings by offering largely of our substance in return.

I wonder why so many sinners have such big hearts while so many "Christians"—those who wear the Cross of Christ on their brow and the cloak of religion about them—have such dried up, withered and wrinkled little lumps in the place where their hearts ought to be!

AROUSE YOURSELVES! Those of you who hold all and give none. Give, give and keep on giving until you begin to feel the joy of giving. It is the only way to smash that hard heart of yours and to grow in Grace.

GIVE UP YOUR OFFERINGS NOW!

MEMBERS OF A CORPORATION

Their Responsibilities and Duties

A corporation is a group of persons chartered by the Commonwealth for the performance of certain specific work agreed upon.

A CHURCH IS SUCH A CORPORATION. It is a group of men and women under a charter from the State to hold property; to contract debts, and to raise funds to pay such debts, that may be necessary to do its particular work.

EVERY CONFIRMED MEMBER OF THE PARISH IS A MEMBER OF THE CORPORATION. Its growth depends upon the interest and support of its members. The responsibility of its progress does not depend upon the Rector alone. He is the executive head and directs its functions with the advice of the other members of the Corporation.

It has always been conceded that A LIVELY CHURCH ORGANIZATION IS A VALUABLE ACQUISITION TO THE COMMUNITY. It is the focal point of worship, education and pleasure. Consequently, if the members of the corporation are active in their support of the church, they give to the community an institution that is bound to raise its tone and make it a better place in which to live. Every member of the Corporation enjoys the blessings that the Church brings to the Community. A COMMUNITY WITHOUT A CHURCH WOULD HARDLY BE AN ACCEPTABLE ABIDING PLACE.

Now as members of St. John's Corporation what are we doing to strengthen it and make it an influential force in the locality? There are certain very definite duties each has to perform; certain definite responsibilities each must assume in order to enable the Corporation to succeed.

FIRST OF ALL, EACH MUST GIVE HIS PERSONAL INTEREST TO ITS AFFAIRS. If you neglect your church soon there will be no church to neglect. Like all mismanaged corporations it will go out of business. Your personal interest demands that you are ever on the job at every service, to give it the support of your presence. No corporation can be successfully managed if a quorum is not present.

IN THE SECOND PLACE, EACH MEMBER MUST BE PREPARED TO MAKE CONSTRUCTIVE SUGGESTIONS, NOT JUST CRITICISMS, FOR THE FURTHER DEVELOPMENT OF ITS INFLUENCE. There are lots of things said in private between perhaps two or more members that are really worth while, but die the hour they are born because they are not pushed to the notice of the whole body. EVERY PARISH NEEDS NEW IDEAS in order to keep abreast with the times and you are the one to think up and express out loud such helpful ideas.

IN THE THIRD PLACE, A SUCCESSFUL CORPORATION IS OPERATED HARMONIOUSLY AND SMOOTHLY. Any member has a right to express an independent opinion, and every such opinion must be received sympathetically and without opposition or controversy until upon analysis it proves to be useless. Also, although every member has a right to express ideas it is hardly within his right to insist that his idea be adopted if it is not for the best interests of the Corporation.

IN THE FOURTH PLACE, A CORPORATION MUST BE ADEQUATELY FINANCED. This is just as true of the church. There are salaries, fuel, light, repairs, supplies, etc., which must be financed. THIS FINANCING MUST BE DONE AS MUCH AS POSSIBLE BY THE MEMBERS OF THE CORPORATION. This is not a very heavy burden if every member will do his share in bearing it. The trouble is too many members of the church corporation want to be silent partners and non-assessable. Of course, that attitude is not fair or just to the other members. Even if we were to think of the church as just a social club, still club rules would apply. All of us know that if we default in paying our dues in any social corporation, we are black listed and suspended until we pay in full.

THE CHURCH DOES NOT FOLLOW THIS DRASTIC POLICY BECAUSE IT IS A CHURCH and must trust to the honor and loyalty of the members of the corporation to see that sufficient money is provided to meet its obligations; and this money is supplied by each member as an offering which he can, with a clear conscience, offer to God.

THEN THERE IS THE PERPETUATING THE CORPORATION. To do this two things must be done. FIRST, we must increase its membership and, SECOND, we must create a permanent fund, the interest of which will go towards financing the church in times of need. So many churches die and the thousands of dollars used to build them up are wasted because those two factors were ignored.

No corporation can possibly succeed if these simple rules are not followed.

SOME MAY SAY, BUT PERSONALLY I CANNOT SUBSCRIBE TO THE EXPENSES OF THE CHURCH BECAUSE I AM TOO POOR. It is recognized that many church members are insolvent financially; yet, they can do something for the benefit of the corporation. When I was a boy many times I was sent to the country store with a few dozen eggs or two or three pounds of butter to exchange with the storekeeper for sugar or coffee or dry goods. That's what we mean by the insolvent member giving his share of support. HE MAY NOT HAVE MONEY, BUT HE HAS STRENGTH AND TIME TO GIVE AND THE CHURCH NEEDS SUCH SERVICE SERIOUSLY.

REMEMBER

YOUR CHURCH ENVELOPES CONTAIN YOUR OFFERING TO ALMIGHTY GOD FOR ALL HIS BENEFITS AND ARE A PART OF YOUR DAILY WORSHIP. THEREFOR, BE CAREFUL THAT YOU ARE NOT STINGY TO HIM WHO HAS BEEN OVER GENEROUS TO YOU LEST YOU RECEIVE A REBUKE FROM HIM TO WHOM YOU ARE INDEBTED SO MUCH.

HOW TO LIGHTEN THE RECTORS BURDENS

From a Parishioner who Learned the Church is in Debt

August 20, 1933.

Rev. H. Cresson McHenry.

Dear Reverend:

Enclosed please find $5.00 which you may use to your best advantage. I know it is not much but it helps to lighten your burdens. I AM ALSO SENDING YOU MY ENVELOPES for the ensuing year.

Respectfully,

Mrs. M. J. D.

Note: A few such letters will lift the burden of financial responsibility entirely from the Rector's shoulders.

"YE ARE THE SALT OF THE EARTH"

St. Matthew 5:13

What Do You Know About Salt?

I received in my mail today a little book entitled "Salt" which is the most interesting and instructive I've ever had the pleasure of reading. It is issued by the Worcester Salt Company and published in the interest of its business. Upon reading it my mind reverted to the quotation used as our subject. When Jesus Christ said "YE ARE THE SALT OF THE EARTH", he made a statement of profound importance. He could not have used a more striking symbol, because Salt is without doubt as important as air or water or food or fire to all life—human, animal, vegetable.

Now if Jesus Christ declared that we "are the Salt of the earth," we should learn some facts about Salt, and I assure you there are many that are most interesting.

Salt was used in sealing contracts in ancient days. The Lord says to Aaron: "It is a covenant of Salt for ever before the Lord unto thee and to thy seed with thee." Moses says to Israel: "With all thine oblations thou salt offer Salt."

The Arab, whenever a host and his guest partake of Salt together it constitutes a pledge of protection, support and loyalty, even unto death. Hence the Egyptian saying, "There is salt between us." Persians, signifying base ingratitude or treachery, used the expression: "Untrue to Salt".

IN ARABIA Salt is burned at the outset of caravan journeys to drive away devils. As the peculiar bluish flame arises, the Arab women chant, "May you be blessed in going and coming".

IN CHINA Salt is thrown on the fire on New Year Eve, and its manner of burning is taken as an indication favorable or unfavorable of the coming year.

IN JAPAN the burning of Salt, as an offering to the gods, is a propitiatory sacrifice in time of danger.

PLATO speaks of Salt as a substance "dear to the Gods".

HOMER calls Salt "divine."

GREEKS AND ROMANS always used Salt in their sacrifices; and if it were spilt this was an ill omen. Even today spilling salt is a sign of trouble to the superstitious.

The great picture of the LAST SUPPER by Leonardo da Vinci has an overturned Salt Celler before Judas Iscariot, indicating his treachery.

Salt is placed by the RUSSIANS in the coffins of their dead as a symbol of immortality.

THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH uses it in her baptismal rite, presumably for the same reason.

Thousands of proverbs of every period of the world, in every nation of the world, use Salt as their symbol of integrity, loyalty, vitality, courage, etc. For instance: "THE SALT OF YOUTH" refers to physical vigor; "TO EAT A MAN'S SALT" signifies receiving material aid from him. The expression, "NO SALT IN HIS TEARS" indicates hypocracy. To say a man is "THE SALT OF THE EARTH" is high praise. To speak of accepting another's statement with "A GRAIN OF SALT" is to doubt him.

ROME found Salt so necessary to the efficiency of its armies that each soldier was provided with a special ration of it, or the means of purchasing it. This stipend was called Salarium Argentum. From it springs that all important word "salary."

The expression: "NOT WORTH HIS SALT" is traced back to this Roman military custom.

THE PRICE OF A SLAVE in Gala-land is a brick of Salt.

The Ancient Prayer of St. Richard of Chichester

Thanks be to Thee, my Lord Jesus Christ.
For all the benefits Thou hast given me,
For all the pains and insults Thou has borne for me.
O most merciful Redeemer, Friend and Brother,
May I know Thee more clearly,
May I love Thee more dearly,
May I follow Thee more nearly.
Amen.

WHAT PRICE COAL?

Our Annual Bug Bear

Last year we burned $400.00 worth of coal. From all indications we will use as much, perhaps more, this winter and we will need at least $400.00 to pay the bill.

We must have the cash in hand before we order the coal because we cannot run in debt for it. If YOU will give YOUR COAL OFFERING, no matter how small that offering is, so long as it is ALL YOU CAN AFFORD TO GIVE, we will raise the COAL FUND easily and will have our coal stored in the church cellar before winter comes.

But remember, YOU are responsible for YOUR SHARE of the Coal Bill. If you should DEFAULT in your payment you will greatly embarrass the whole Parish.

You will receive your COAL ENVELOPE in due time and you will be asked to bring or deliver it on COAL SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 5TH.

May I suggest that you follow the same schedule of contributing as in other years. We print the schedule below.

OUR COAL SCHEDULE

1. Boys and Girls, 8 to 12 years old, NOT LESS than 10 CENTS.
2. Boys and Girls, 13 to 16 years old, NOT LESS than 25 CENTS.
3. Boys and Girls, 17 to 19 years old, NOT LESS than 50 CENTS.
4. Adults over 20 years old, NOT LESS than $1.00.

If you will pay according to this Schedule we will have a COAL FUND large enough to pay our COAL BILL.

OUR SUNDAY SCHOOL RALLY

We want 100 per cent of Officers, Teachers and Scholars Present

Sunday, October 1st, ST. JOHN'S SUNDAY SCHOOL will open with a RALLY at 2.30 P. M., in the Parish House. The reason why we will meet in the Parish House is because one feature of the day's Program is a play arranged by the girls of the SUMMER VACATION SCHOOL. There will be other features of interest.

ST. JOHN'S SUNDAY SCHOOL always has been the most active institution in the Parish. With an enrollment of 450 scholars we have reached an attendance as high as 313. Last term our S. S. was specially well attended in spite of all the difficulties due to depression. WE KNOW FOR A FACT THAT THE NEED OF SHOES AND CLOTHING KEPT 15 PER CENT. OF OUR SCHOLARS HOME. Also, sickness due to insufficient food and improper shelter affected our attendance materially. Yet, there were but few Sundays during the term we did not have 100 per cent. of our teaching staff present and seldom less than 65 per cent. of our scholars.

THIS YEAR WE WANT TO BUILD UP OUR SCHOLARS' ATTENDANCE AS NEAR TO 100 PER CENT. AS IS HUMANLY POSSIBLE. All of us can help by making a pledge to ourselves that we will strive personally to be present unless prevented by sickness or some unavoidable circumstance.

Then, too, we will need more material in the guise of new scholars. Last term we had a remarkable register of new scholars. The actual figures are not at hand as we are writing this article, but we are well within the bounds of truth when we state we had as many as 60 men and women, boys and girls, to join us.

OUR PROPOSED SCHEDULE OF STUDY

We propose to continue our Study of THE LIFE OF CHRIST where we left off last term. When we have concluded, we will have a close review of the whole subject. After which, we will take up the study of THE PARABLES OF JESUS CHRIST.

The form of service will be built around the Catechism as in past terms. We find this constant weekly use of the Catechism is an immense aid for preparing candidates for Confirmation. It saves lots of time which the Catechist can spend in explaining many points in the history and doctrine of the Church which would be neglected were we to waste time studying the Catechism.

WE SHALL CONTINUE THE BUTTON SYSTEM, and hope to see many of our scholars win their fourth year gold and enamel button.

RELATIVES AND FRIENDS INVITED

Everybody is invited to our SUNDAY SCHOOL RALLY ON SUNDAY, OCTOBER 1ST, AT 2.30 P. M. We wish the parents of our children would show a deeper interest in the spiritual development of their offspring. Childhood is the formative period of every person's life. The impressions we get then influence us throughout our career. Consequently, going to Sunday School or staying away from Sunday School are not just unimportant incidents in a child's life. So much has been written on the importance of a Sunday School career for the child and youth that we hesitate to pile up words on the subject. Yet we feel we must speak a word of advice to the parents of our scholars and say their active interest in the Sunday School progress of their son or their daughter will profoundly influence the child's future career. Therefore, we invite you to lay aside every other interest on RALLY DAY and come out and enjoy the day with us. We will be more pleased than we will be able to express to welcome you, and we know you will be glad you came.

I cannot contend that a boy of the '90's liked church any better than a boy likes it today. But once in church, the slow hum of the service had a charm of its own. And a benefit of both church and Sunday school was that they compelled, every week, a complete stirring up and reassortment of the whole community. Then, as now, boys and girls played largely, during the week, with other boys and girls of the immediate neighborhood. On Sunday these groups split up as each member went to his own Sunday school. On Sunday mornings all the Baptist, Methodist and Catholic boys of our neighborhood disappeared entirely from my Presbyterian ken, and I found myself plunked down in a pew with an entirely new set of boys who were picked at random from all over the parish. Even the boys whom one saw frequently at other times appeared in a different relationship at Sunday school. I can remember one big bully whom I avoided like poison from Monday to Saturday, and who probably despised me as much as I dreaded him, but with whom I sat on friendly and even jocular terms in Sunday school.

What was true of us children was equally true of our elders. My father and mother had two complete sets of friend—their social friends and their church friends—and the two groups had, in their minds, almost equal importance.

In my very earliest years Sunday dinner was served at three o'clock in the afternoon, and in winter it was often dusk before we arose from the table. It was a formal affair. The best linen and silver were laid out, and the feast progressed from olives and celery through a heavy soup, a huge roast, and ice cream, to nuts and raisins. Those colossal dinners are, I know, one of the favorite modern indictments of the old-fashioned Sunday, but at least we took time to eat them and afterward, to digest them. They had the slow majesty of a banquet, and in many houses were a patriarchal affair, married sons and daughters with their entire families being present.

After dinner the whole family made for the parlor. An awful period, in the modern opinion, but we children of the '90's did not find it so because, for once, we were allowed to share completely the life of our elders. We all sat down quietly to talk or read—which, after all, was not a very strange thing for intelligent people to do.

GOD DOES NOT WEEP

"God does not weep, and why should I?" the cynic said,
"He knows. He sees the ills of earth outspread,
The famine and the torture of mankind.
And yet, within His Heaven, deaf and blind,
He lets man suffer, lifting not His hand
To stay the ravage wrecking every land."

Another joined the cynic's bitter cry;
"True. God seems not the least to know or care,
And why should I be tortured with despair?
And why should I be sacrificing day and night,
For other people"s plight,
Their sorrow graven in my very sleep,
When God, the wise Creator, does not weep?"

"Oh friends, oh thoughtless friends!" another made reply,
"We are the heart and hands of God. Yes, you and I.
The only way that God can ever speak
To save the famine-stricken, help the weak
Is through the channel of the human heart.
And you and I and all of us must do our part
To bring a finer justice to His cause.
'Tis you and I should mold the higher laws.

"For God it is who urges, through our pain
That His design for man be not in vain.
Say not 'God does not weep, God does not care'—
For God it is who suffers through the world's despair
And cries to us, who are His heart and brain:
'Go, rid the world of poverty and pain!'"
—Angela Morgan.

THANKSGIVING UNDER THE N. R. A.

Can it possibly be that such an amazing change in our mental and spiritual attitude towards the common outlook has happened since Thanksgiving Day a year ago? How well we remember our message to you then. We were in the slough of Despond and could not see our way out. We were gloomily sure that the worst was yet to come. It seemed impossible to be thankful for anything except that things could not possibly be any worse than they were.

In our groping for an excuse for being thankful at all we very logically condemned ourselves for the distressful condition we were in at that time. We were victims of unemployment. Many of us learned what it was to be hungry and hear our children cry for bread. We were forced to swallow our pride and apply to charity for relief. We could not screw up our courage to sing "PRAISE GOD FROM WHOM ALL BLESSINGS FLOW". Yet we knew our unhappy state was due to our own culpable selves. We had been guilty of criminal extravagance in the years of abundance. We spent our substance riotously. We were crazily riding the crest of plenty in an insane frenzy. At last the year of reckoning had come. The harvest of folly was ripe. We were to reap what we had sown. All God did was to let us go the limit of folly that we might learn through bitter experience that we cannot forsake His laws and live.

Yet did we thank Him. Yes, we thanked Him for bringing us to our senses and giving His penitent children another chance to confess their sins of luxury, extravagance and sinful waste. In our sorrow we still could say that we did thank Him, "Because He is good; for His mercy endureth forever."

Under the N. R. A.

A year has passed. And what a different year! The old year of misery and suffering "has passed away and behold, all things have become new." The cry of suffering is becoming more and more subdued. Just as though men were seeing the first faint rays of the rising sun of prosperity stab the gloom and give promise of dissipating the thick darkness of despair. Every day witnesses a new unfolding of the light of hope. Though we still stand in the dimness of the early dawn—vague shadows of suffering like ghosts still hover here and there—we are conscious and certain that a new day is here and the night of weeping is almost over.

Who Wrought this Change

We did through the Grace of God. God saw our suffering. He heard our cry and in pitying love He gave us courage to crush the past and raise a new standard. Our standard now is N. R. A. Behind it we are pressing to forever exterminate selfishness, greed and cruelty.

Child labor is already a thing of the past.
THANK GOD FOR THAT!
Unemployment is fading by the hundreds of thousands.
THANK GOD FOR THAT!
The National Government is taking an active interest in Social Welfare.
THANK GOD FOR THAT!
Prosperity and Plenty are already here.
THANK GOD FOR THAT!
The outlook is glorious.
THANK GOD FOR THAT!

On Thanksgiving Day

Be sure you are congregated in your Parish Church 100 per cent. strong to render thanks for the dawning of this new era. And pray earnestly unto God to give us a sense of personal responsibility for the continuance of these happy days.

The Year 1933 Is a Wonderful Year
THANK GOD FOR THAT, TOO

WHAT RELIGION MEANS TO ME

Condensed From The Forum for The Reader's Digest

MARY PICKFORD

I have always felt that religion was something to be lived, not discussed. Perhaps that is what is the matter with it; we've spent too much time talking about it and not enough trying to live it. . . .

When I learned that the term "good" was but another synonym for God, religion began taking on another meaning: thinking good, expressing good, and particularly identifying good in everybody and everything. To me the quest for good, even in the humblest task, was identical with the quest for God.

I discovered early in my spiritual explorations that the most important thing I had to contend with at all times was my thinking. I had been accustomed to watching outward effects, and it was somewhat disconcerting to find that what I saw without was the result of what I was thinking within, that as my thoughts made up my conscious existence, so in turn my conscious existence determined my outward experiences. I found that my personal private thinking was diffusing itself in all directions, and was bringing back into my experience like for like. It was like an echo, flinging back at me what I myself had sent out. It taught me never to go before an audience, or in front of motion picture cameras, without thoroughly inspecting my thinking . . . mental attitudes . . . motives, and being sure that my thought display was the best I could assemble for the occasion. We are learning slowly, but nevertheless learning, in the professional world of the stage and the theater, that even the finest acting technique and skill cannot hide the flavor of the thinking back of it.

I like to think of religion as an attitude of thought, a way of living. To me it means being one's best, doing one's best, and looking for the best in the other fellow. It requires discipline and continuous effort, but it is one of the happiest ways through the tangle of human living. I have learned through many experiences that a higher law than my own regulates all things, that love is flowing through each of us like life, vitalizing us and everything we do, if we but intelligently make way for it.

Our world is learning bitter lessons these days. Greed, selfishness, and unkindness have always brought disaster and misery, and always will. We manage to elude our man-made laws, but I am not so sure that we are so successful with the unseen, spiritual laws. Someone once said that we couldn't possibly break the Ten Commandments any more than we could break sunshine, but that jails, asylums, and other public institutions were filled with men and women that the Ten Commandments have broken. We don't break spiritual laws, but they seem to have a way of breaking us.

Everyone I know has some kind of remedy for solving our present troubles, but many of them sound like the advice about repainting the pump to improve the well water. How can we ever improve anything, ourselves or international problems, without getting back into the causes — our mental attitudes, our motives? And may I humbly ask this: Is not religion merely a practical and efficient way of cleaning our mental houses and keeping them tidy and orderly?

Frankly, I do not see how we can make real headway with our personal, national, and international difficulties until we realize that each of us is a definite part of a universal whole and that, as part of this universal whole, each of us has to live for the other fellow. This means, of course, pure giving instead of self-seeking. I know that it sounds utopian, possibly impractical, but we seem to have tried and failed with all other methods, and I have the growing conviction that behind those simple sounding directions, "Love God" and "Love your neighbor," are tremendous laws of far-reaching effect that will work harmoniously with us as soon as we are humble and wise enough to relate ourselves to them.

The old order is gone. No longer can we cling to the old supports; they have broken and let us down. The world is grasping for something beyond material effects. It wants religion, it needs religion, but more than anything else, I believe, it needs a restatement of religion, the lifting of a helpful and beautiful thing out of intricate definitions and gestures into something as simple and useful as breathing. After all, living divinely is quite simple if we can but uncomplicate ourselves.

"WHO ART THOU, LORD?"

(Two Meditations by a Layman)

First Meditation

In prayer God may reveal Himself, we may be acutely conscious of His Presence; but what grounds have we for inferring that the God we pray to is the Christ Who came on earth and lived among men in visible form?

The most convincing revelation of Christ is personal experience as illustrated by St. Paul and others. I do not say the "best" because revelation by faith is much commoner and may be, for most of us, the best.

Now, proceeding with our main question, the first part of the question takes up the promise that in prayer God may reveal Himself, make us actually conscious of His Presence. We need not limit this to prayer. He does so at times in service, at times in sleep. The reason He does so often in prayer is because in prayer we sometimes distinctly make ourselves present to God; that is, we make conditions favorable for our becoming conscious of His Presence. Service sometimes makes favorable conditions. Favorable conditions are sometimes made by the emergency of our need, our sudden turning to Him and finding Him; sometimes as a crisis in meditation. We meditate along a line for a long time until, suddenly, we arrive; God is there. Now the question asks "How can we be sure that the God we pray to is the Christ who came on earth and lived among men in visible form?"

May we leave that question for a moment and go on to the second clause, which I think will prove our better route of approach? "How can we be conscious of any one but just 'God'?" My answer to this is, we cannot, because there is only 'just God'. It is one of the strongest proofs of the Divinity of Christ that when we find Him we find God, that we realize that there is only one Mind and the Son is the manifestation of the Father. The very question, "How can personal experience prove the Son?" shows a tendency to divide the Godhead into two minds. There is no such division; there is only one God. To repeat then, "How can we be conscious of any one but just God?" The answer is, we cannot; there is just one God and none other.

Now, our second question asks, proceeding backwards, "How can personal experience prove God the Son?" What do we mean nowadays by God the Father, God the Son and God the Holy Spirit? By God the Father we mean God as Father Creator, God manifested through all the universe. By God the Son we mean God became incarnate in our humanity; it is God, but it is God become Man in the full sense of the word, fully Man as completely as it is possible for God to enter humanity. By God the Holy Spirit we mean God, God's love in dwelling in each man; it is the God in us which responds to the love of the Father. Now, when St. Paul recognized Jesus, the risen Christ, he knew Him as God, but he recognized Him in His humanity. He was thinking of the human Jesus when the light shown out and revealed to him that this Person whom he was persecuting was God indeed. It was after that that Saul knew God to be Love, because he had seen God in the Son. I do not know of any clearer proof that any one could ask than that, first, it shows us a man; then we recognize that that Man is the Divine Life; then our whole idea of God changes, we know that God is that Life. I think we have proved the thing up to the hilt. I do not know of any more convincing proof that one could possibly give. We see a person whom we do not recognize for what he is; then we recognize that that person is another Person; then it changes our whole idea of the other Person. All the Apostles went through this experience, more or less, but rather by the faith route. They saw a man; they had certain ideas about God, and a certain experience of Him. They lived with this Man; they begin to realize that this is the truly Divine Life, that this is the Life that they can aspire to and worship; this Man is Divine. Then they have changed their whole idea about God: God is that same life. "Have I been so long with you and have you not seen me?" "The Father and I are One".

THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

It Got a Good Start for the Season's Work

The Woman's Auxiliary Chapter of the Church of St. John the Evangelist held its first meeting for the season, Monday evening, September 25th, in the large Sunday School room. It seemed like old times to see the big semi-circle of chairs filled with members. We had our usual service of worship and Scripture reading first. Afterwards we held a short session for re-organization. Mrs. Frank G. Schmidt, Treasurer, and Mrs. John Nelson, Jr., Secretary, were re-appointed to their respective offices. The Standing Committees for the coming year are as follows:

Domestic Committee
Mrs. Augustus Pearo
Mrs. Sarah Cunningham
Mrs. Harry Carbarnes

Committee on Colored Work
Mrs. Frank Schmidt
Miss Anna Schabacker
Mrs. Ella Silbert

Foreign Committee
Miss Hannah H. Nuttall
Mrs. Frederick Busch
Mrs. Lillian Busch

Indian Hope Committee

THE BROTHERHOOD DINNER

An Occasion Which Will Be Stored Among Our Happy Memories

Thursday evening, September 14, the Brotherhood of St. Andrew gave its annual dinner. It was a most enjoyable occasion and marked the official opening of the Brotherhood activities for the season.

The dinner was prepared and served by Mrs. Charles Beisser, assisted by Mrs. Sarah Cunningham, Miss Mary Leach, Miss Dorothy Stenger, Miss Helen Ashman and Mrs. F. Carroll.

THE MENU

Fruit Cocktail

Chicken Croquette Peas

Saratoga Chips

Rolls and Butter

Ice Cream Coffee

Cheese and Relish

Cigars

The Dinner was followed by speeches delivered by the Director, the Vice Director and the Rector of the Parish. At a short regular meeting held later in the evening, Mr. John E. McHenry was nominated and elected a member of the Brotherhood.

A meeting for reorganization was held two weeks prior to the dinner, the officers then holding office were re-elected. They are:

Director, Mr. Vernon Matthews
Vice Director, Mr. Carl Jensen
Secretary, Mr. Frank Drumm
Treasurer, Mr. Philip Meckling

The members were urged to begin at once to start an active campaign to gather in the men and boys of the community and get them in the church. Also, they were asked to bring donations for the Harvest Home, Sunday, October 22nd.

We have every reason to feel greatly encouraged over the condition of the men's work in the Parish. There are few churches indeed that can boast of so great a portion of the congregation being men and boys.

THE GIRL SCOUT TROOP No. 50

Tuesday, October 3rd, our Girl Scout Troop entertained their parents, relatives and friends with an interesting and delightful program. There was a big crowd, much larger than we expected, present. Everybody had a good time. The evening entertainment was opened by an interesting and educational address upon the history, machinery and practical results of the Girl Scout movement. It was delivered by the Troop Captain, Helen Weir McHenry. Following the talk were rendered a series of Scout Songs by the girls of the Troop—nearly seventy in number. The girls gave one of the most beautiful and appropriate pageants ever witnessed upon our stage. The Rector was called upon to make a short address. He spoke upon the physical, the mental and spiritual aspects of the Girl Scout organization. This was followed by another group of Girl Scout songs, after which a little comedy was very well rendered by a number of the girls of the Troop.

At the end of the program the friends of the girls were served with ice cream and cakes.

The Troop has arranged to conduct Divine Service Sunday evening, October 15th. The address will be made by Captain Helen McHenry and the members of the Troop will take part in the service. We expect all the families and friends of the girls to be present that night.

The members of the Scout Troop are asked to bring donations of groceries and canned goods for our Harvest Home, Sunday, October 22nd.

THE YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN LEAGUE

The Good Attendance and Enthusiasm at Our Fall Meeting Augers Well for the Season's Work

Monday, September 11th, the members of the Y. W. C. L. met for reorganization. We were surprised and pleased with the size of the attendance and the spirit of enthusiasm shown by the members. The first order of business was the nomination and election of officers to serve for the coming year. The choice of the members was as follows:

President, Mrs. Annie Beisser
Vice President, Mrs. Sarah Cunningham
Secretary, Mrs. Emma Green
Assistant Secretary, Miss Carrie Strang
Treasurer, Miss Annie Schabacker
Chaplain, Miss Hanna H. Nuttall

An order of Business to be used at the regular meetings of the League was compiled. It is as follows:

1. Short Service of Prayer and Bible Reading by the Chaplain.
2. Calling of the Roll.
3. Reading of the Minutes.
4. Report of the Treasurer.
5. Reading of Correspondence.
6. Reports of Committees.
7. Unfinished Business.
9. Payment of Dues.
10. Recreation Period.
11. Adjournment.

After careful consideration and a discussion, the following activities were adopted for the year: Sewing, Visiting Absentee Sunday School Scholars and Delinquent Communicants, soliciting for the Annual Bazaar and giving of entertainments during the year for the support of the church.

Standing Committees

The following Committees were organized to serve for the year.

Committee on Sewing: Annie Beisser, Annie Schabacker, Hannah Nuttall.

Committee on Entertainment and Membership: Sarah Cunningham, Hanna Nuttall, Mrs. Carroll, Carrie Strang and Bella Shields.

The Harvest Home

The members were urged to bring donations for the Harvest Home to be held, Sunday, October 22nd.

RALLY DAY OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

The Parish House Was Crowded With Scholars

Everybody seemed to be glad to get back to Sunday School again. All of us enjoyed our Summer Bible School work, but vacations carry off so many of our friends that we feel a little lonely to see them again. When RALLY DAY comes we know we are going to see all our classmates again. It is a red letter day for us. Everybody is happy.

This year we departed from our usual program. The Vacation School Girls practiced several appropriate one-act plays suitable for Sunday School Sessions. On RALLY DAY the girls presented one entitled, "THE CHURCH ORGAN." We are sure the play was appreciated by the whole school. The lesson it taught was one we need to learn. It was the story of an organ in a certain church, which for some inexplicable reason stopped playing. They searched for the cause, but apparently there was nothing the matter with it. At last an old woman tells them the organ will never play again until more love is shown to the poor and the outcast of the community by the members of that church. The church members were very haughty, cold and unloving. Finally, the girls of that church took matters in hand and invited all the children of their neighborhood to come with them, to sit with them, to sing with them and to pray with them in their beautiful church. When Sunday came there came trooping in that Sunday School all sorts of boys and girls; not only poor boys and girls; but colored children, Chinese, and all sorts of children. The ice was soon broken. The haughty and wealthy children forgot to be patronizing and mean to the poor and alien children and treated them just as though they belonged to the same family. They forgot all about the organ not playing because they were so interested in their new guests. You can imagine their surprise and delight when just before the close of the Sunday School the fine old organ began to play as it had never played before, and the tunes it played were sweeter than anybody ever heard. Love had broken the silence.

We were glad to welcome seven new scholars and hope they will be just as glad they came to us as we are to receive them. At the end of the month we will publish the list of new scholars who join our Sunday School.

The attendance was remarkable when one considers it was the first Sunday School day of the season and also that it was as hot as mid-summer.

We did not try to do any S. S. work, but spent the session in getting acquainted. Now we are in full swing of our season's work. Let us put behind us the idleness of the summer months and let us work with renewed vigor in building up our Sunday School. This year the goal we have set is 500 officers, teachers and scholars. Every scholar who brings two new scholars will receive a beautiful picture of Jesus Christ.

All our Scholars are asked to bring a donation of groceries, canned goods, etc., for our Harvest Home, Sunday, October 22nd.

SUNDAY

At this time, too, another diversion might be expected—a ring at the door, and the appearance of some beaming caller. Almost every household had its own little following of what might be called professional Sunday visitors—individuals it seldom saw at any other time. Most of them were unmarried men and women who had no real homes of their own, but who, dressed in their Sunday best, had a small list of congenial houses at which they called regularly. One or two of them usually had the brevet title of "Uncle" or "Aunt," but all were welcomed by us children because we were fully privileged to sit in the circle of conversation. It was assumed that a visitor who came on Sunday came to visit the whole household.

I believe that, today, most middle-aged men and women, looking back on the pleasantest recollections of childhood, would be astonished to discover how many of them were connected with the old-fashioned Sunday. No law can ever re-establish those Sundays, but it is not at all improbable that social necessities may at length force us to recognize and renew many of their features. When hostesses begin to rebel at carload after carload of jovial motorists who pour in from morning to night; when the "tired business man," for once really tired, begins to balk at the idea of driving two or three hundred miles between dawn and midnight; when normal, adult persons begin to realize that it is actually possible to ignore the inane "features" of the Sunday paper and pick up a good book—then it will be safe to say that the tide has turned. And when that time comes I, for one, will be in the forefront of the movement — lustily cheering.

SALT

The Handy Helper

There are so many ways in which salt can help about the house, the kitchen and the bathroom, that we cannot hope to list all of them here. However, here are some of the more common uses:

BATHROOM USES

EYE WASH: After removing a foreign particle, or when the eyes are inflamed or after a severe strain, wash the eye with warm salt water to cleanse and soothe it. ½ teaspoonful of Worcester Salt to 1 pint of water.

FOR TIRED, ACHING FEET: Put new life into your feet by bathing them in hot salt water. This stimulates the circulation and removes the waste products which are responsible for the fatigue. Add two handfuls of Worcester Salt to a basin of hot water. Place your feet in it and receive their everlasting gratitude.

FOR MOSQUITO BITES AND ITCHING FROM OTHER CAUSES: The annoyance from itching can be relieved by the application of a paste of salt and bicarbonate of soda. Add a small quantity of water to a mixture of ¼ glass Worcester Salt and ¼ glass of bicarbonate of soda. If the itching is generalized or on such parts of the body where the paste cannot be applied, take a salt water bath to which has been added ½ pound of bicarbonate of soda. This will provide almost immediate relief from itching and will tend to heal the sores from the bites.

KITCHEN USES

CRACKED EGGS can be boiled without the contents oozing out if a teaspoonful of Worcester Salt is added to the water.

CREAM WHIPS VERY RAPIDLY when a pinch of Worcester Salt is added to the cream before whipping.

TO PREVENT ICING FROM SUGARING. Add a pinch of Worcester Salt to the sugar when making cooked icing.

GRAPEFRUIT is more delicious when sprinkled with a little Worcester Salt. It brings out the full flavor as nothing else can.

FISH IS MUCH MORE DELICIOUS when soaked for a few minutes before cooking in a strong solution of Worcester Salt. Try it the next time you prepare fish. Incidentally, to prevent the fish from slipping from the fingers while cleaning it dip your fingers in salt.

TO EXTRACT BLOOD FROM FRESH MEAT and to make fowl more appetizing, cover with a layer of Worcester Salt and let stand for several hours. Before cooking rinse in cold water.

FREEZE ICE CREAM QUICKLY by using Worcester Quick Freezing Ice Cream Salt. It saves time and work—and there's no waste. Pack the freezer with one part Worcester Quick Freezing Ice Cream Salt to three parts of crushed ice. While packing, turn the handle slowly in order to shake down and pack the ice. After the ice cream is frozen pour off the brine and pack with more ice and salt mixture. Note: Worcester Quick Freezing Ice Cream Salt also gives splendid results in Vacuum Freezers.

DISCOLORATION ON THE INSIDE OF THE COFFEE POT is often removed by rubbing with a little Worcester Salt. Also salt in the oven under baking tins may prevent their sorching on the bottom. The pudding will cool more quickly if its container is placed in a dish of cold water to which a quantity of salt has been added.

HOW TO PREVENT SPLASHING WHEN FRYING. A little salt sprinkled in the pan before putting in the food will prevent splashing when frying meat.

BUTTER MAY BE KEPT HARD WITHOUT ICE by placing the butter dish in another one containing cold salt water.

HOW TO CRACK NUTS PROPERLY. Meats will come out whole from nuts when you soak them in salt water overnight before cracking.

TO CLEAN DRAINS. Sinks and drains can be kept free from grease and disagreeable odors by pouring a strong solution of hot water and salt through them once a week.

HOW SALT CAN HELP YOU ON WASH DAY. Add a handful of salt to the last water on wash day and the clothes will not stick to the line in frosty weather. If clothes pins are boiled in a salt water solution before using they will last longer and will not freeze on the clothes when it is cold. A handful of salt in the rinsing water will keep bluing from streaking clothes in winter. Incidentally, when washing colored fabrics a little salt in the water will prevent the colors from running.

THE GOSPEL OF JOY

A Christmas Meditation

It has always been recognized that in an experience of some shepherds on the hillsides near Bethlehem they were made aware that something tremendous had happened nearby; that the long-expected Saviour of the world had been born in a stable; and that they could find Him in a stall if they cared enough to go see Him. It was by the guidance of a star that the Wise Men found Him later; and it was in the starlight, under the canopy of night, alone on the hills, that somehow or other a few insignificant shepherd boys became persuaded that they had had a tremendous experience—that they had received a message from God. They acted on the message; they found what they were told they would find—a human child, born of very humble parents to Whom a few days later these same parents gave the name of Jesus—the name which had been given by an angel before His conception in His mother's womb.

This message or experience of the shepherds on the hillsides came in the form also of an angel pronouncement. Angel means "a messenger," and on the pronouncement of the fact it seemed to them that the whole heavens were filled with song—a song of glory to God and of peace among men. Later on, joy and peace are two of the loveliest gifts of Jesus to His followers.

We have not mentioned yet what the original message was. It has been variously translated, but this is just about as the shepherds got it: "Put away all fear, for I am bringing to you the Gospel of a Great Joy which shall be to all people"—or "Joy for all people."

The whole scene, the whole surroundings, every character associated with Christmas night and this first proclamation of the Gospel of Jesus on earth — all of it, is associated with and is in the hands of the poorest and the humblest people. Wealth, power, dominion have nothing to do with it. Even wisdom comes on its knees finally and begs for admission to the Holy of Holies.

I have in my hand a clipping from a Philadelphia paper. It quotes a little note left by a young man who had just committed suicide. His body and the note were found beside a limousine bearing a New York State license. The note was pinned to his coat and reads as follows: "Do not mind me. My name would be useless to you; but I wish the world to know that I committed suicide because I was too happy. I always got what I wanted in my life. My parents are millionaires. I realized all that it was humanly possible to wish. I do not find life good enough to remain in it. I have a strong longing to find out what there is in another Life, and I am going away." That is the end of the letter.

These are days of peculiar stress, when even the rich are feeling poor. Poverty is a question, largely, of comparison. If we have enough at one time, and then have less, we feel poor. If we have five houses and only enough money to support two of them, we feel very poor. But if we have a little more food than we need, and a little more love than we had yesterday, and we know someone who can use one or both of them and, in the name of the Prince of Joy, we share—then we are rich indeed and inheritors of the Gospel of Joy.

THE GIRL SCOUTS SERVICE

An occasion that will long be remembered for its Beauty and Helpfulness.

Sunday evening, October 15th, was the occasion of one of the most unique and helpful services ever held in St. John's Church. For several weeks the members of the Girl Scout Troop No. 50 had been planning to conduct a religious service in which the girls themselves would serve as far as they could do so consistently. On the evening mentioned the girls congregated in the Sunday School room and formed a Choir for the evening. They chose for the Processional, Hymn 527, "SAVIOUR, BLESSED SAVIOUR." The hymn started with a few quavering tones, due entirely to stage fright, but, as the girls proceeded up the nave to the choir, the singing grew in volume and assurance until, before the end of the hymn, one would have thought the girls were in the habit of leading the congregation in singing.

After the processional the Rector began the Evening Service in the usual way up to and including the Creed. Following the Creed he made several announcements of importance. Then the congregation sang Hymn No. 363, "THERE'S A FRIEND FOR LITTLE CHILDREN." And how that Girl Scout Choir led that congregation in singing! The rendition of that hymn was truly inspiring. Some of us may not have good singing voices, but we did "make a joyful noise unto the Lord" at least.

After the Hymn, DOROTHY REDDING read Psalm 91 for the Evening Lesson. We wish to congratulate Miss Redding upon her reading ability. She did better than lots of clergymen who only too often mouth their words and sound as though they are eating their supper and reading at the same time. Dorothy's enunciation was very clear, her voice was strong and everybody understood what she read.

At the end of the lesson the Rector announced Hymn No. 240, "THERE'S A WIDENESS IN GOD'S MERCY." Again the Choir and the congregation joined most heartily in the singing. All of us felt we were a part of the service by this time and had an important share in its interest and success.

HELEN HARPER, a member of the Troop, read the prayers following the Lesson hymn. We wish to make particular mention of the way she added to the beauty and devotion of the service by her wonderfully expressive tones of worship. The prayers seemed to have a new and deeper meaning to those who heard her read them. I know God must have heard every word she said and was pleased.

The period of Prayer was followed by the singing of Hymn No. 305, "O, FOR A CLOSER WALK WITH GOD." What an appropriate hymn to sing after such prayers! We felt as we sang it that we were really expressing a wish to get just a little nearer the loving Father after such an artless and child-like talk with Him. Following the hymn the Captain, Helen Weir McHenry, B. A., Senior Student in the Philadelphia Divinity School, delivered an eloquent and helpful address which we felt was so good that a full synopsis of it should be given elsewhere in this issue.

As an Offertory the Troop sang the Hymn of Scouting beginning "O, FATHER, WE WILL BRING THEE a SCOUTSHIP STRONG AND TRUE," tune, "The Church is one foundation."

The Rector closed the services with prayers and blessing.

The Recessional was No. 530, "ONWARD CHRISTIAN SOLDIERS." Somehow as we sang the grand old hymn, we felt a new spiritual glow and inspiration. We were glad to be in the HOUSE OF PRAYER and to be led in worship by our little sisters. It was all so worth while—a blessed close of our Sabbath Day.

THE BIRTH OF A NEW CLUB

Amid shouts of laughter and sparkling flashes of wit, it came into being.

On Tuesday night, October 17, a group of merry gentlemen gathered in the Sunday School room to launch a social club for the men of the Parish. At a previous meeting a Committee had been appointed to draw up a Constitution and By-Laws to be presented at this gathering for approval. Anybody passing the church must have thought we were having a riot. Never in the history of institutions were Constitution and By-Laws framed amid such a clatter. Even the Chairman of the meeting began to express his sentiments in a language not understood by himself or the auditors. The poor secretary looked as though he was blowing bubbles and everybody present was on his two feet all at the same time offering suggestions, corrections, amendments, deletions and every other kind of an improvement after the reading of each paragraph. The forming of the Constitution of the United States could not possibly have caused greater excitement than did the framing of our new Constitution and By-Laws. To be honest, we are of the opinion, that not one of us know now what we are supposed to be or why.

However, be that as it may, after we came to some kind of an end of something or other we went into an election of officers and succeeded eventually in choosing—John Busch, President; Joseph Leach, Vice President; George Silbert, Secretary; Carl Jensen, Treasurer, and Samuel McDowell, Business Manager.

So as not to make Carl feel that his position as Treasurer was not entirely honorary, the men present paid their first week's dues and promised Carl faithfully to keep paying (every once in a while) some more dues. The men must have lots of confidence in Carl because they would not listen to having him bonded to protect their dime. Well, confidence is the golden fruit of probity. If Carl was somebody else we would protect our dime with our lives.

Now that the Men's Club is organized they are about to do missionary work in the Parish and bring men and boys into the fold. Any male child over 17 years of age and having his mother's consent, may became a member by paying two bits to our honorable Treasurer and standing for an election—if his courage is equal to the ordeal.

After electing our officers somebody was wise enough to move an adjournment and thereby averted a raid. Under cover of the night and by devious routes we sneaked forth to our many homes to lie down in restless sleep, until morning.

Oh, what a night! What a night! !

THE DAUGHTERS OF THE KING REUNION

The Reunion of the Daughters of the King held Wednesday, October 18th, was a most enjoyable affair. A delicious supper was served in the gymnasium of the Parish House. The Menu was:

Fruit Cocktail
Stewed Chicken, family style Creamed Onions
Peas Mashed Potatoes
Cole Slaw
Rolls Butter
Ice Cream
Coffee
Salted Nuts Mints

In his speech, the Rector took occasion to speak of the meal as being most enjoyable. He said the women of South Philadelphia were justly famous for their cooking ability and that St. John's Parish was able to boast of the best of South Philadelphia.

He congratulated the chapter for the splendid representation of its membership and expressed the hope that they were prepared to give the same fine demonstration of service they had always given in the past. He suggested certain lines of work in which they could co-operate effectively with other Parish organizations; such as visiting the sick, looking up those who are delinquent in church attendance and in receiving the Holy Communion, also, in making contact with women and girls of the community who have no church connections, and who can be made interested in their spiritual development through the Daughters of the King. He spoke also of the need of an early start in canvassing the Parish for candidates for Confirmation.

Last year, the Daughters of the King did a fine piece of friendly visiting on those who were behind in paying their Church dues. Several dollars were paid to the church through these visits and we were informed that on the whole, their visits were well received.

We need a stricter census of our birth rate. Our babies ought to be brought to the church for christening, without delay. The Daughters of the King could give this particular subject their particular attention. For more years than we can count we have tried to get somebody interested in a CRADLE ROLL of our Parish. We have made several starts, but the finish of the movement seemed always treading on the heels of the start and we never COULD get going. Now the Rector proposes to turn over the building up of the CRADLE ROLL an affair of the Daughters of the King and ask them as a chapter to get their whole membership back of the idea and adopt the CRADLE ROLL as their particular baby.

The Rector was forced to leave early and many ideas he had in mind to express were left in the air for the time being.

We were fortunate to have as our guest speaker Miss Clara Stackhouse, who is Diocesan President of the order. She gave a most interesting talk about the work of the order both in her own Parish and in the Diocese. The President cited many kinds of work and study which are being done by the various chapters but stated, that in visiting, the Daughters did their best work. In speaking of study, attention was called to a form of study being followed by her chapter in which they are studying chapter by chapter in the four Gospels, the Devotional Life of Jesus and then make same into kind of a scrap book. Miss Stackhouse spoke of the two kinds of chapters in the Daughters of the King and laid special emphasis on the need of a Junior Chapter wherever there is a Senior Chapter in order that as the older one dies, the younger one can take its place. The age of the Junior Chapter is, from 12 or 14 to 25 years. At the conclusion of our guest's address the Directress announced that there were many present who had at some former time belonged to the order and for some reason had dropped out. A very cordial invitation was also given to any who had never been connected with the order, but would like the opportunity to become better acquainted with it and the members.

We concluded by singing the hymn of the order "Lord Speak to Me That I May Speak." Miss Stackhouse led the prayers and Miss Fisher read part of the 25th chapter of St. Matthew which she referred to as the Daughters of the King passage. Several of the guests signified their desire to become associated with the chapter.

We closed with the motto of the order:

I am but One
But I am One
I cannot do Everything
But I can do Something
What I can do I ought to do
What I ought to do
By the Grace of God I will do
Lord, What Wilt Thou Have Me To Do?

THE HARVEST HOME

St. John's is one of the few old-fashioned parishes to have an annual Harvest House for the gathering in of fruits, vegetables, dry groceries and canned goods for the poor. On Sunday, October 22nd, the church was a sight long to be remembered. Across the choir were heaps of potatoes, onions, turnips, oranges, cabbage, apples, celery, pears and a mountain of canned goods and jellies. And pounds and pounds of coffee, flour, sugar, tea, soap, crackers, salt, etc. In fact, it was a scene of a well-stocked market. All was donated by the more fortunate members of the parish to be distributed among the less fortunate. Besides the fruit, produce, canned goods and groceries, a few gave money for coal and to pay rent. Though the total was small the gesture was fine for folk in such poor circumstances to do their best for their fellow members. The service was arranged on a Thanksgiving basis. All the hymns, prayers, Scripture lessons and the sermon had the thought of God's bountiful providence as demonstrated by the gathering in of the crops. In the afternoon the Sunday School held a mass meeting in the church. Many children brought gifts of canned goods, etc., with them. The program was most interesting. One of the features of the afternoon was the reading of Bible Verses by individuals bearing upon our duties and responsibilities towards the poor. Mr. George Cressee, our genial Superintendent, had charge of the program and managed the session in his usual efficient manner. In the evening the choir rendered a wonderful program of appropriate music. The following is the set-up of the service:

Processional, No. 510. "O, Mother Dear, Jerusalem"
Opening Service.....The Rector
Anthem, "I Will Feed My Flock," Simper...Choir
Soprano Solo, "O Love Divine," Nevin.....Mrs. Harry Hopkins
Anthem, "It Is a Good Thing to Give Thanks," Diggle ..... Choir
Bass Solo, "Come Ye Blessed," Scott.....John Nelson, Jr.
Lesson, St. Matt. 25:34—to end..Vernon Matthews
Tenor solo, "Behold, the Master Passeth By," Hammond ..... Jeremiah K. Rutter
Offertory, Anthem, "I will Extol Thee," Ohl. Choir
Closing Prayers, Benediction.....Rector
Anthem, "The Day is Gently Sinking," Martin Choir
Recessional, No. 530, "Onward Christian Soldiers."

On the following day, the young women of the Parish met and filled big carry-all bags with the donations received. They were distributed among 61 poor familes of the parish, representing 294 souls. This is a pretty good record for a parish so full of families of the unemployed.

Is there any wonder the church is so successful when its members so generously give gifts and offerings with their worship.

THE FELLOWSHIP SUPPER AND DANCE

Finally, we got together and had that much-talked-of Supper and Dance—Thursday, October 26th, at 7 P. M. Almost every member of the FELLOWSHIP was present and we had the honor of the presence of Mrs. James Adgate, who was the first Directress of St. John's Fellowship. It seemed like old times to have her in the crowd.

A most delicious supper was served by Mrs. Annie Beisser, Mrs. Sophia Hart, Mrs. Francis Kennedy and Mrs. Mary Dellak. Mrs. Hart made the chicken salad and was it tasty! Only those who were fortunate enough to be there know what a treat it was.

The supper was given in the Parish House. Instead of using long tables we served the supper on our card tables, covered with bright-colored table cloths. They had the big advantage of being easily folded up and put to one side when the folks wanted to dance.

It was an uproarious night. Everybody—even the parson—was in the games. Before we knew it closing time arrived and passed. If it had not been that Miss Helen McHenry got tongue-tied we might be going still. The crowd experimented on her with diabolical psychology and won. She resisted heroically for a long time, then a complete collapse and a grand crash of the party. We thank Mr. Joseph Leach for the loan of his radio, by means of which we were supplied with music from the best orchestras in danceland. We did not realize before how eminently satisfactory the radio is in supplying really classical music beautifully rendered by real artists for such an occasion without cost to the church.

"WHO ART THOU, LORD?"

(Two Meditations by a Layman)

Second Meditation

People to whom we are to take Christianity may already believe in God, but not God as revealed in Christ. How can personal experience prove God the Son? How can we be conscious of any one but just God?

"How can we be sure that the God we pray to is the Christ who came on earth and lived among men in visible form?" This, I think, we can prove experimentally in a number of ways. For instance, if a Christian practices the Presence of Christ in the fullest possible sense, makes Christ the Living Companion in all life's way (I am talking now about the Living Christ, not the theological Christ) the Christian will find that it becomes increasingly hard to hold on to the concrete Jesus, that the concrete tends constantly to become merged with the absolute; that is, one finds oneself really living in the Presence of God, as Jesus said "I am the Way" to the Father; "follow Me"; "abide in Me." He has all the attributes of the Godhead; He is Divine—in character, in mentality, in the power of His life, in holiness, in reliability. He teaches us what God is like and we learn in Him to recognize God. He is God in such form that we can get to know Him.

It is because of this that I have said sometimes that if there were no God, then Jesus is my God. When God is found, He will be found to be of the same substance with Christ, of the same Divinity, of the same holiness, of the same attractiveness. Why? Because He is the same.

Now I want to give a very stupid and homely and inadequate illustration, but one which as a biologist has often appealed to me. In the animal kingdom there is a very low. single-celled type which we know as an amoeba. It is like a little lump of jelly. When it wants to move, it sticks out a projection of its body and the whole body follows the projection; or, it stays stationary and engulfs the bit of food into the projection, then the projection is withdrawn into the body again. Now, let us take away all idea of the material and realize that God is pure Spirit, that historically in time He projected Himself into our humanity and became man and then withdrew, drawing our humanity with Him, and then realize that in the Incarnation there was an historic manifestation of the nature of God, that it was always in the mind of God to be incarnate, to suffer on the cross, and to give Himself to us, and to draw us into His Being, Fellowship, Life,—so we can get something from our homely illustration. The projection of God into our humanity was God and still is God. It was really into our humanity that He projected Himself. In the Holy Spirit, He projects Himself into our lives; we are temples of the Holy Spirit. It is His Life in us which we either make room for, or do not. Yes, this is all a very crude illustration, but I think it helps us to understand

The proof is in trying the thing out, but trying it out according to the rules of the game. One of the rules is that "He who loveth not, knoweth not God for God is Love". The moral of it is: try loving and find out. There are other rules; one of them is:"Blessed are the single-hearted, for they shall see God". Try it and persist in the Way—and I will guarantee the result.

Finally, "How could God pray to Himself?" I remember using the illustration of a man telling himself that he had better do something. That is, we humans speak to our own minds constantly, commune with ourselves we call it. When Jesus, the Man, sanctified Himself, as He says, it was for our sakes. When He prayed, and St. John gives us the very words, no doubt the words were for our sake; also I have no doubt at all but that our Lord knew His own Divinity and felt Himself in communion, to be absolutely at one or attuned with the Father. Even the words on the cross may have been for our sake; no doubt they were; but I am thinking of the word "Father, forgive them for they know not what they do". I do not imagine that our Lord thought for a minute that "our Father" would not forgive, or that He had to advise Him about it. I wonder if we could not get an idea of what really happened from our own consciousness. How many of us, under stress, might say of one who had wronged us "God forgive him", thereby not asking God's forgiveness, but asserting our own. "Whose sins ye remit, they shall be remitted" occurs to me, and "If ye forgive not, everyone his brother, their trespasses, how can ye expect your Father in Heaven to forgive you your trespasses?" What Jesus uttered on the cross was the word of Divine forgiveness.

BE A FRIEND

Be a friend. You don't need money,
Just a disposition sunny;
Just the wish to help another
Get along some way or other;
Just a kindly hand extended
Out to one who's unbefriended;
Just the will to give or lend,
This will make you someone's friend.

Be a friend. You don't need glory.
Friendship is a simple story.
Pass by trifling errors blindly,
Gaze on honest effort kindly,
Cheer the one who's bravely trying,
Pity him who's sadly sighing;
Just a little labor spend
On the duties of a friend.

Be a friend. The pay is bigger
(Though not written by a figure)
Than is earned by people clever
In what's merely self-endeavor.
You'll have friends instead of neighbors
For the profits of your labors;
You'll be richer in the end
Than a prince, if you're a friend.

THE MEN'S BIBLE CLASS

A New Organization With a Grand Future

Wednesday, November 14, we had a stag party and a supper at the church. Our speaker for the evening was Mr. Charles Yerger, a friend of the Rector and the director of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew. Mr. Yerger gave a fine talk on religious work among men, in which he told of the great work that is done in his community through the agency of a big Men's Bible Class, of which he is an active member. The subject proved to be most interesting to the men. After his speech, there was a prolonged discussion and finally a resolution was adopted that a Men's Bible Class be formed in St. John's Parish. The day set for its organization was Sunday, December 2, at 9 A. M.

On that day, there met in the Sunday School room: John Spratt, Frank Drumm, Joseph Leach, Harry Hopkins, John Busch, Harry Busch, William Bedlow and Rev. H. C. McHenry. The group proceeded to organize. It was felt that the question of a permanent Leader be held in abeyance in order to give us a chance to look around and get a man who would be a live wire and a good organizer. In the meantime the Rector promised to act as temporary leader. John Busch was asked to act as secretary and John Spratt as treasurer. The matters of musicians came up and the men promised to scout around for somebody who could play all sorts of hymns for us. The Class adopted the name of the Third and Reed Streets Bible Class. Our object is to give such a general name because we intend to make the class interdenominational as to its membership so far as it is possible to do so. The hour for meeting was definitely fixed at 9.30 A. M. every Sunday.

We hope to interest all the better element of the men of South Philadelphia for mutual spiritual development and learning. We are trying out a few new features in Bible Class methods which we hope will be both interesting and helpful.

First of all we started with a Bible drill. Every man was given an ordinary edition of the Bible. Then the leaders asked them to turn quickly to the fifth chapter of the Gospel according to St. Matthew. We had all sorts of fun fumbling with the Bible trying to locate the Gospel. It was an impressive demonstration of how little we know about "the Book." And it impressed us with the idea that for the foundation of our faith we knew next to nothing of the Bible and its contents. Perhaps we had always left that important knowledge to the Pastor and the Bible Class Leaders. However, now that we know how ignorant of the construction and the contents of the Bible we are, we have determined to get busy and learn by practice how to handle and read The Book.

Let me suggest a method that will be entertaining as well as helpful. Get some editions of the Holy Bible, cheap editions will do. Then start a handicap by having one person call out the names of the Books. Have a person with a watch to check up the time it takes to check up on the "hunters of the Books" then let the others get busy to see who gets the Book called first. The first two quickest hunters take the calling and watch checking jobs and the two who had acted in that capacity to join the hunters. At the end of the hunt the person who found a Book in the shortest space of time is the champion for the day. If there is a tie then the tie must be broken by the rivals hunting three more Books called by the leader. The one who wins the shortest count in the first two out of three is the champion.

Another feature we are developing is "The Question." Every Sunday one question is asked which is to be answered not by the leader but by the class-members. For instance, the question—What is your idea of Christianity? is asked. It is not answered on the same day it is asked. The members of the class are given a week to think it over, and on the following Sunday it is expected that every member has digested the question so as to give his personal view on the subject. This method will train men to think for themselves and not to permit other people to do their thinking for them. It will also screw down their thinking apparatus to subjects which ought to have the undivided attention of every man, no matter what his station in life.

Along with all this new stuff we mean to invite real speakers to address the class now and then on Spiritual and Bible subjects. But they must be men who know how and when to turn on and off their flow of eloquence. Furthermore we want speakers full of ideas and not full of words. In any case they must be full to overflowing with the Holy Spirit of God.

Every man in South Philadelphia over the age of 16 years is eligible for membership. Whether he is a member of any religious sect or whether he is not.

Just now we are scouting about for a Leader and a musician whose compensation will be a consciousness of a good job done well.

Who Applies?

A STORY WITH A HEART THROB

Don Rose

A man much respected among newspapermen was Colonel George Nox McCain, who is laid to rest today after a long and busy life. He was before my time, but at second hand I have a story of him that is worth repeating. It was told at one of Grif Alexander's famous oyster parties. Once a year a barrel of oysters would come from Chesapeake Bay, and a choice company would gather in the Franklin Inn Club to consume them. And in the mellow mood of reminiscence induced by food and friendship the Colonel told a tale of his reporting days.

He was sent to cover some disaster in St. Louis and thence ordered on to where Old Man River was gone on rampage. He collected a photographer, hired a boat and set out on the face of the waters. It was a dangerous and uncomfortable journey. The muddied flood covered all landmarks, and drifting trees, held half upright by their roots, momentarily threatened to overturn the boat. Night came too soon and the travelers were far from shore and weary. They came upon a cabin, set on stilts above flood level, and a light shone from its window. So they hailed the occupants and were invited, not too cordially, to tie up and stay for the night.

In one room four large colored gentlemen played a gloomy game of cards and drank deep from a jug of corn likker. They growled over their game and sang strange melodies over their likker. The reporter and photographer were told to take the two beds in the next room.

They didn't like the looks of it. Barbaric noises filtered through the thin partition, and outside the waste of waters was black and ominous. And on a cot in the corner sat a gangling colored boy, silent and staring at the strangers. The newspapermen had pistols and agreed to keep them handily beneath their pillows. They carried money — not much, but enough to make it worth while to slit their throats and toss the rest of them into the wandering waters, if anybody should think of such a thing. And as the game grew noisier the two in bed could think of little else.

The black boy stared and said nothing. He was watching, biding his time until the white men should be asleep. And then what? A word to those in the next room, a brief and bloody struggle, a splash in the darkness and nobody the wiser. A dusky giant came to the door and asked the two if they cared for a nightcap of corn. They said they didn't want any. He went back and there was muttering in the next room and a shout of grim laughter.

George Nox McCain whispered to the photographer. "Shut your eyes and seem to sleep," he said. "After a while begin to breathe deep. I'll keep one eye open and watch that boy. If they start anything we'll get the jump on them." The white men seemed to sleep. And in a little while the boy got softly to his feet and tiptoed across the room. He studied their faces in the dim light of the smoky lamp. Apparently he was satisfied. The white strangers were asleep.

So he tiptoed back across the room, knelt beside his cot and began to whisper, "Now I lay me down to sleep." Finished his prayers, he climbed quietly into bed and went to sleep. That's all he was waiting and watching for, until he could attend to his devotions in decent privacy. So Mr. McCain and the photographer decided there was nothing to worry about and went to sleep, too.

A LETTER FROM ALASKA

This is a private letter written from Anvik, Alaska, by the niece of your Rector, Miss Dorothea McHenry, R. N., to his daughter, Miss Helen W. McHenry. It is so interesting from a missionary slant that we feel it is too important to just read and forget.

The photograph of Miss McHenry, surrounded by some of her charges, was loaned for use in the Broadcaster by the Editor of the Spirit of Missions. There are certain passages in this remarkable letter that are of intense interest. The paragraph as to the greater financial aid for the work is a whip that ought to sting us all to action this Lenten Season.

We must sacrifice as our missionaries sacrifice. Miss Dorothea McHenry knows that reductions bear heavily on missionaries and their work. When the Anvik appropriation was cut again she paid $168.00 from her own salary of $540.00 a year for some necessary medical supplies. Miss McHenry was Superintendent of Nurses in a hospital in St. Louis, Missouri, before she went to Alaska. The sacrifices she is making, financially and otherwise, put to shame the mean, little offerings we so reluctantly make for Christ and His Church. We prate about giving one-tenth of our substance to God. Here is a young woman of an honorable profession, sacrificing everything, giving more than one-quarter of her meager little pittance of $540.00 to help "carry on."

What a Lesson in Sacrifice and Service

Christ Church Mission,
Anvik, Alaska,
November 8, 1934.

Dear Helen:

We are all keeping our ears peeled for the first winter mail due today by plane. THIS IS THE FIRST PLANE MAIL TO ANVIK, AND WE'RE QUITE EXCITED. You'd be surprised what little things cause a stir up here where one has to make their own life and amusements.

Yesterday the ice was finally ready for skating on the river and we have a great, long stretch of perfectly beautiful skating. I took all the children and we went down for a while yesterday. I love to skate but am scared to death of falling this winter and so hurting my back again. Never fell yesterday. The back is O. K. except when I get too tired, but the doctor is having me keep the brace to wear in case of trouble this year.

Tuesday the big girls went with me to set out snares for rabbits in the woods across the slough. Then yesterday I took the next oldest group and the nine and ten year olds, so we have six snares out. An Indian woman living on the trail back of the mission is anxiously waiting to see if we get any rabbits and see if we're good trappers. We may not get the rabbits, but we have lots of fun. I tried hunting with a .22, but the grouse and rabbits never stayed still long enough.

Have a roomfull of boys now, six from four to eighteen years old, all with T. B. hips, spine or lungs. The man of all work around here has helped me to fix it up like a miniature hospital, all the same kinds of beds, bedside tables patterned after hospital ones, but made of wood and a nice, roomy linen closet. As I told them up here I was the whole hospital force in one—superintendent, superintendent of nurses, doctor, supervisor, student body, orderly, maid, laundress, cook and dishwasher, sewing room woman and chaplain. Have prayers at 6.30 every night with them before closing up for the night.

Each worker has a prayer group with which she says prayers every night. We usually do a little sewing, etc., before saying them. Just now I have the nine and ten year olds, five of them, and we are embroidering doll pillows for Christmas presents. After Christmas we'll make some doll moccasins, which will be fun for them while teaching them something useful. I don't know about the bead work myself, but will learn before we begin. I have lots of fun with them.

THERE IS PLENTY OF WORK TO BE DONE UP HERE, BUT ACCORDING TO THE RADIO NEWS OF LAST CONVENTION UNLESS THE PEOPLE RAISE THE NECESSARY MONEY WE WILL ALL CLOSE DOWN. I DON'T KNOW WHAT OUR CHILDREN WILL DO IN SUCH A CASE. WE HAVE SIXTEEN WHOLE ORPHANS AND TEN HALF, AND THESE INDIANS WON'T TAKE CARE OF THEIR BROTHERS' OR SISTERS' CHILDREN OR SUCH LIKE, BUT WOULD RATHER LET THEM STARVE TO DEATH.

This is a paradise in summer, not counting the gnats and mosquitoes. But really, it's perfectly gorgeous up here, abundance of lovely wild flowers, woods and more woods of spruce, birch and willows, clear blue skies, except in August and September, our rainy season, all the land surrounded by some form of water, either lakes or rivers. We have many species of birds, wild animals. In this particular district the Indian holds reign, further southwest on the Yukon and north the Eskimos live. Our Indians are about of the lowest type, therefore very difficult to handle.

Time for exercises and afternoon lunch, then I'll visit my snare lines. Do write again and give my best to the family.

Love,

DOROTHEA.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY OF THE GIRL SCOUTS

On Thursday, November 8th, the Girl Scouts had their Hallowe'en party in the Parish House. Excitement ran high. There was the usual fun and surprise of meeting old friends in entirely new guise.

The most exciting feature of the party was the photographer's visit, and we have been waiting anxiously ever since to see our pictures.

After we had our pictures taken, the party continued with the Grand March. Girls who did not wear costumes acted as judges and awarded the following prizes:

First Prize—Ethel Vaughan—a Turkish costume, made of yellow and rose satin.

Second Prize—Thelma Ewes—an old-fashioned costume, which she made herself.

Third Prize—For the funniest—Florence Ruhn—it was funny, but we do not know yet exactly what we should call it.

Then followed many of the old Hallowe'en games—and the party ended with refreshments and songs. The Girl Scouts all agree that Hallowe'en parties are more fun than almost anything else that happens during the year.

Both Look So Pleased That It Is Difficult To Tell Who Is Getting The Dolly Ruth Gets It Finally

THE DOLL BAZAAR

The Most Attractive Booths in Our Annual Bazaar

I've often wished that the generous folk who donate these beautiful dolls had the chance to see for themselves what a lovely exhibition they make. They are always its centre of attraction in our annual bazaar. The kiddies just swarm about the booth like bees around a honeycomb. It's fun to see the sparkling eye, the flushing cheek and to hear the childish exclamations of ecstasy as one dollie after another is held high for prospective buyers to view.

All the dollies are donated by friends interested in the progress of the Christian Church in South Philadelphia.

This year the doll booth was so beautiful that we determined to plunge into the expense of having a photo taken and publishing it in the Broadcaster so that all of us will have a picture of it to keep.

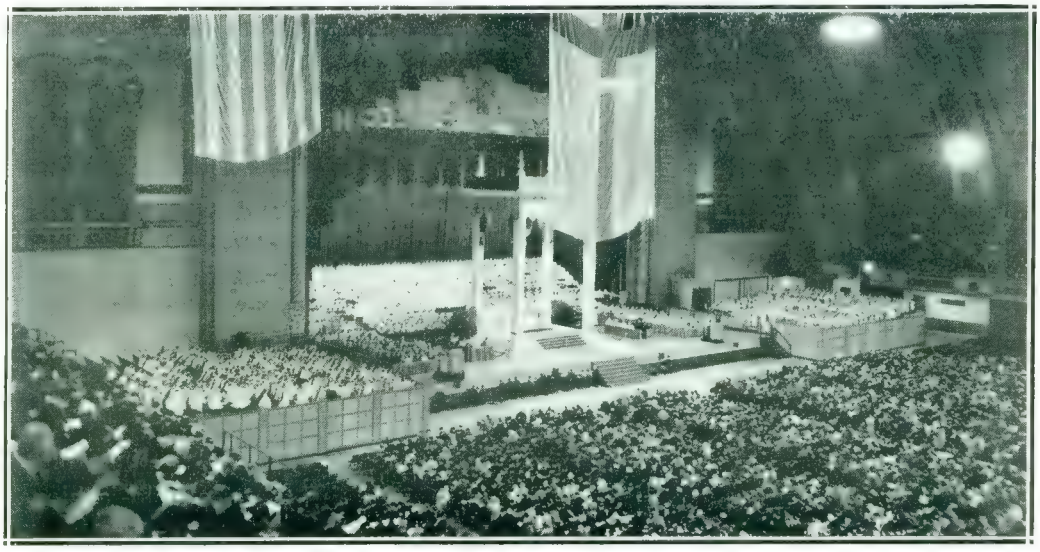
If our donors look closely I'm sure they will recognized the dolly each sent.

The damsel in the forefront of the photo is little Miss Ruth. That smile of joy on her lips and that light of happy possession in her eyes are worth the price of the most expensive doll in the booth. I wonder if it is possible for our friends to realize the deep significance of these dolls to the kiddies.

Then, too, there is the financial feature that is a big factor to the Parish. Every year this combination of beautiful dollies pulls our Parish out of financial quagmire. The Parish would be in a pretty sad plight if dolly should stop her annual visits.

We hope our donors will enjoy this photo as much as we enjoyed seeing the gathering of dolls in the booth. And we hope that the giving of the dolls gave as much joy as receiving it did.

Just look into little Miss Ruth's eyes again and I'm sure you will say I am glad I sent my dolly.



EXTRACT FROM THE PASTORAL LETTER

Atlantic City, October 23

Must Consider Spiritual Welfare

Any reckoning that leaves out of account the moral and spiritual apostacy of the Nation must fail of results. In such a crisis the mission of the Christian Church must be made evident and its great purpose zealously maintained. It is not a time to take council of our fears, or to assume an apologetic attitude. The most vital and fruitful periods in the Church's history have been those where material values have suffered impairment and the genius of men has proved inadequate to meet critical situations.

We believe that fidelity to a great cause is not impaired by privations and that the day of trial and misfortune may mark the beginning of a new era of Christian faith.

The heroic element is being evoked and a new era is at hand, and to the church men and women of America and of the world the supreme call of the conquering Saviour of mankind is making its compelling appeal. There shall be no retreat, but an advance; no restriction of those areas where the Christian standards have been raised, but an aggressive pressing forward of the lines. Privation and hardship will be gladly accepted; sacrifice will find its satisfaction in a closer companionship with Him who counted not His life dear unto Himself. With renewed consecration and quickened zeal we face the future, secure in our faith and confident of Christ's ultimate triumph. This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith in Him.

THAT BAZAAR OF OURS

Sold Everything Except the Decorations

It's history now!

And it's the kind of history we like to remember. The nights of the Bazaar were the jolliest three nights of the year. Mr. and Mrs. and all the little St. Johnites were there and greeted each other hilariously. The crowds were greater than they have been for many a year. The booths were beautiful. they were admired by everybody—especially the doll and the men's furnishings booths, which would have taken first prize at any demonstration show.

George Downes and Frank Drumm were the chief overseers of the work. The rest of us were just day laborers working under their directions. The result of our combined efforts however created a veritable fairyland for a setting for the Bazaar. It's really a shame to dismantle the booths. We are preserving the men's booth and are about to use it for a permanent candy and soft drinks counter on basketball nights.

We sold almost everything we had for sale. The grocery counter was the first to sell out under the assaults of the crowd. Much of the credit for quick sales is due to the activity of Vernon Matthews, assisted by others. When they were through selling there was nothing left on the counter but the scales. The next booth to give way to the buyers was the household goods booth. Mrs. McAvoy, who is new this year in St. John Bazaar work, took over the booth and proved her efficiency most satisfactorily

The rector made no mistake in placing the toilet articles booth under the Cresson Girls' Club. First of all because the girls themselves are very attractive personally and would naturally induce others to buy because of their charming manners, and secondly, being girls of the age when toilet accessories are most interesting they could present their goods most interestingly to others.

In the kitchen Mrs. Pine seemed to be doing some sort of a mad dance between the oven and the long table all night, and every night she was so busy trying to fill the orders for her home-cooked food for which she is so famous in the parish. Just start the rumor that Mrs. Pine has made pepper pot, or baked pies or roasted turkeys, or cooked a mess of sourkrout and you start a rush for the kitchen. Saturday night was her best show. However she stood the pace is amazing. But she did; and with the help of brand new waitresses—Mrs. Knowlton and Mrs. Gerhart, and her own little daughter who has grown to be almost six feet tall she put over a grand exhibition of speed and efficiency.

We were watching most interestedly the sales at the doll booth, you know Margaret Nelson was thrust into the position of head of that booth by the decease of Aunt Annie.

And did Margaret make good?

We'll say she did!

After the Bazaar was over and we counted the receipts we found that Margaret had topped last year's receipts by $25.00. Both she and her wonderful corps of aids are to be congratulated for such a fine advance over the previous year. We knew Margaret could do it and it gave us real satisfaction to see how well she and John and Elizabeth and Herman and Ruth and all their little sales girls came through so successfully.

The fish pond was a great improvement over last year. Since Mrs. Woodworth was forced to give up the booth we have been in trouble until this year. And all on account of not having the proper equipment. This year we solved the problem by getting two big tubs of real water and putting in them real fish—made of wood and furnishing real fishing tackle and letting the boys and girls go fishing in the real old-fashioned way. Both Lydia Maguire and Margaret Kensil, who had the fishing rights—said that the fish trade picked up wonderfully this year.

And did the candy booth do business! Directed by Helen McHenry that band of Girl Scout girls just sold candy, cakes and everything went right and left like nobody's business. The Bazaar did not last long enough for them so they captured the men's furnishings booth and set up a candy shop in the Parish House for the patrons of the basketball games Monday night. The girls hung up a record for candy and cake sales this year that beats every year since we started the Bazaar.

The Radio, like the old-fashioned political rallies, were forced to hold overflow meetings. Their big room was not big enough for the patrons of the game and they were forced to put up tables in the room adjoining. Radio is Lotto on a big scale and it is most popular with old and young. Generally there was lots of ballyhoo to drum up players, but this year prospective players were standing round, long before the game opened, impatiently waiting for things to open up.

Mrs. Schmidt over at the fancy goods' table determined she was going to do better and sell more goods than she did have. So she with the aid of "Sis" (May) Hopkins got busy when the starting whistle blew and kept pegging away until the last second of the last minute of the last hour of the last night, when she and she came under the tape with $4.15 more receipts than a year ago. The total for the table was $57.41.

Also lastly, but not leastly, comes the men's furnishings booth. As we mentioned before, it was beautiful. The line of mufflers, neckties, handkerchiefs, socks, cigars and cigarettes were well chosen and of the best quality. We started our sales with four dozen ties, one dozen mufflers, six dozen handkerchiefs and seventy-one pairs of socks. Friday night our stock was so depleted that we rushed out Saturday morning and bought 15 dozen pairs of socks, half dozen mufflers, 3 dozen neckties, and two dozen handkerchiefs more for stock. At 10.15 P. M. Saturday night all we had left were a dozen and quarter pairs of socks of off sizes we could not sell in any event.

We were most fortunate in having two salesman who were "go-getters" in the game and we mention with pride our associates, Frank Drumm and John McHenry. Just as we were on the last lap, up walks Jake Preole and says: Gimme one of them cards. We did, and in less than ten minutes he was back ordering the delivery of the goods. Then he takes another order card, and again before you could say "snipe" back he comes with that order filled—and we were sold out.

How much did we make out of the Bazaar?

Well, our gross receipts will reach about $1000. Just what our profits will be we cannot estimate at this writing because the merchandise we sold was in most cases bought and not donated. Every article was better than could be bought in any store at the same price.

Such a statement is generally supposed to be just sales talk. But we proved the real truth of the statement by testing our price for neckties with those of a large department store which caters to those of moderate means. We bought a tie in the store which was identical to those we sold, not "like" ours, but identical and paid 97 cents for it. We sold ours for 60 cents. In other words everybody saved 37 cents on the ties bought of us. As to the mufflers—the stores are charging from $1.50 to $3.00 more than we charged. That explains why we sold out so completely and so quickly.

Finally we want to thank everybody for helping us make such a great success of our Bazaar. There are a number of important folk such as Joe Leach and Martha Matthews we have not mentioned who deserve a special vote of thanks for doing their bit so fine.

The Turkey Supper Was Great

Broadcasting from S T J C

ONE CHURCH ENVELOPE IS DUE EVERY SUNDAY.

Have YOU ever robbed God?

Happy is the Christian of whom it may be said: "He gets results."

HIS RULING PASSION

From the "Friendship News," the official organ of the International Friendship League, comes the story of a Filipino boy in a mission school who wrote compositions of a consistently jingoistic character. Once in desperation the teacher instructed him to write about "The Cow." Came the essay, which began: "The cow gives milk; but as for me, give me liberty or give me death."

Some children come to Sunday School around Christmas time just to get some candy and oranges. Yes, and some little mice come around the trap to get a nice piece of cheese. Both may be caught eventually.

Results are what count. The commercial traveler who can explain conclusively why business is poor is of less value than the man who brings in orders in spite of unfavorable conditions. The same holds true about Christian service. Many reasons may be given why we fail in building up the kingdom of God on earth, but the excuses are of no practical use. Better far the Christian who accepts the difficulties, and accomplishes some positive service for truth and right.

A revised edition of the Ninth Commandment: "Thou shalt not wear false whiskers against thy neighbor." First expounded by a girl in the Intermediate Dept. of St. John's S. S.

Here is another: "He is so close that if he paid you a compliment he would expect a discount."

Start the New Year with the Resolution that it is going to be the happiest you've ever had. You are determined it shall be, because you are going to make it the best old world anybody ever saw by giving everybody the glad hand and the happy smile.

POSITIVE RESULTS

In a large business organization a promotion was to be made from among the staff. Two men who had spent years in the service of the company were candidates for the promotion. To the surprise of many, the manager awarded the promotion to the less brilliant man of the two. When asked for an explanation of his choice, he replied that the appointee always produced positive results, while the rejected applicant was more fertile in explanations than in results.

In the parable of the talents, the man to whom five talents had been given "came and brought" other five talents. The servant to whom one talent had been given only "came and said." His only return was in the form of excuses. The master who valued money more than words, commended the one servant and condemned the other.

Every male of 16 years and over, living within the Parish limits, is a potential candidate for membership in the Mens' Bible Class. It meets 9.30 A. M. every Sunday. Are you interested?

The day began with dismal doubt—
A stubborn thing to put to rout;
But all my worries flew away
When someone smiled at me today.

—Grenville Kleiser.

A FRIEND

There's one thing any man can get, an' never spend a dime;

Nobody's ever bought one yet, in all the years o' time

But it's the greatest gift that life can give from start to end

(Except a true an' lovin' wife), an' that's a faithful friend.

Yes, makin' friends'll always be the secret o' success—

I mean, that folks like you an' me will find more happiness

With one good friend than all the fools the world has ever known,

That use their fellow-men for tools, or go their way alone.

The art o' makin' friends—why, say, that's all we're livin' for;

There isn't any other way t' find the open door

To all God's beauties everywhere; you'll never reach the end

O' joy's bright pathway when you share yer gladness with a friend.

—O. Lawrence Hawthorne in "De-Ce-Co Magazine."

VALUE OF FRIENDSHIPS

"The ability to form friendships, to make people believe in you and trust you, is one of the few absolutely fundamental qualities of success," says Mr. McGuirk. "Selling, buying, negotiating are so much smoother and easier when the parties enjoy each other's confidence. The young man who can make friends quickly will find that he will glide rather than stumble through life.—Forbes.

Thank God For Life

By ISAAC GOOD

Thank God that I have lived to see
The evening sky when sunset glows.
To hear the carolling of birds.
To smell the fragrance of a rose,
To breathe the fresh sweet air at dawn.
To drink deep from a mountain spring.
When other earthly joys are gone
To just such things will memory cling.

I thank Thee I have not been spared.
The heartache that unveiled a friend.
The weariness from honest toil.
That brought sweet rest at labor's end.
The poverty that made me rich
In friendships that could not be bought.
The disappointments and defeats.
Each with its lesson clearly taught.

I thank Thee I have seen the sun.
The moon, the stars, the rolling sea.
None of these things I understand
And yet, they bring me thoughts of Thee.
I thank Thee for that "Still small voice."
That speaks to me through good or ill.
And chides me when I make the choice.
That does not yield unto Thy Will.

Our 81st Anniversary

The Older We Grow, the Younger We Feel

Sunday, February 3d, we will celebrate the Eighty-first Anniversary of the founding of St. John's Church.

In the morning we propose to have a corporate communion of the whole parish and all our communicants from far and near are urged to come. We are especially concerned in having all Ex-Communicants come out and join us in this most solemn and beautiful service.

10.45 A. M.

The hour of the service will be 10.45 A. M. Please make a note of this as it is fifteen minutes earlier than our usual celebration.

12.30 P. M.

We will have the Anniversary dinner served in the beautiful Sunday School Room.

2.30 P. M.

We will have a Sunday School Mass Meeting in the church. We hope to have a special program and a special speaker. Also the Rector has asked each class to make a drive to have 100 per cent. of their membership present. We want to make as big a demonstration of the youth of our Parish as is possible on our 81st birthday.

We hope every Sunday School scholar, man and woman, boy and girl; along with our splendid corps of teachers will put forth their best efforts to make this service the biggest gathering of youth ever in St. John's Parish.

4.00 P. M.

If we can persuade those attending the morning communion, the dinner and the Sunday School Mass meeting to bring one flower to church with them we will have a little service of flowers after the Sunday School service, then make them up in bouquets and appoint members of the school to take them around to the sick, the aged and the shut-in members of the Parish, so that they too can have part in our celebration.

5.30 P. M.

Mrs. Pine and her aides will have supper prepared for us at this hour. And we want every St. Johnite to sit down to the table with us. You simply must eat so why not be sociable and eat with us. Forget the thread bare excuse that you must go home and get supper for the children and put them to bed. Bring them to the Anniversary supper and let the Rector put them to sleep when he preaches the evening sermon.

7.45 P. M.

This is the hour for the gathering of the clans.

1. The Woman's Auxiliary.
2. The Young Woman's Christian League.
4. The Cresson Girl's Club.

The Daughters of the King.
The Girl Scout Troop No. 50.
The Brotherhood of St. Andrew.
The Cresson Men's Club.
The Sunday School Kindergarten Department.
The Sunday School Intermediate Department.
The Sunday School Senior Department.
The Sunday School Men's Bible Class.
The Sunday School Women's Bible Class. No. 1.
The Sunday School Women's Bible Class No. 2.
The Church Choir.

And we would like to have an attendance contest of all these organizations. Where a person is a member of more than one group then each group counts that person present. We would like to have a Roll Call and have the leader of each group respond how many members are present, and what percentage of their entire membership they represent. Also we would like each group report through its leader any items of interest that have occurred during the year. Also to make any suggestions for the better progress of the work of the Parish as a whole. We would like to know how many new members each group has acquired.

We mean to ask the choir to lead us in singing the old hymns our fathers and grandfathers, our great grandfathers and our great, great grandfathers sang 81 years ago.

The Anniversary Offering

Our 81st Anniversary offering we hope will be large for we want to apply it to the expenses of the Parish, which have been extraordinarily heavy because of a drop in our income and a big raise in our expenses.

So Save Your Dimes and Make Them Your 81st Anniversary Offering to the Parish of Old ST. JOHN THE EVANGELIST Sunday, February 3d, All Day

Collections—Contributions—Offerings Which?

Here we are at the start of another year. We are glad of it, for old '34 had us hot and bothered financially. Had it not been for the timely aid of a few interested friends of the Rector, old St. John's Parish would have plunged into the "red" deep. As it was we did not come through all clear. Last winter dealt us a solar plexis that jarred hard earned dollars right out of the till into the pocket of the plumber and repair man. We had a freeze up that cost the Parish over $700.00. No pipe or toilet in the Church and Parish House could stand the sub-zero weather. The ceiling of the Sunday School room was wrecked by the frost and began to fall on the heads of our scholars, and the room could not be used until the ceiling was repaired.

The unemployment situation in the Parish had already set our church finances a-teetering. This $700.00 push was all that was necessary to send us over the brink and plunge us into debt for the first time in twenty-one years. The story of our efforts to retrieve is thrilling, but too long and detailed to tell here. We are glad to report, however, that by practicing strict economy and coaxing the pennies out of the shallow pockets of our communicants, and with the aid of some friends we almost made the grade. We still need $200.00 to pay bills overdue. What is more to the point we must raise the money now. We have the reputation of paying our bills promptly and we must defend that reputation.

How Can We Do It?

Easy enough!

There are about 250 communicants of St. John's Church who are financially able to underwrite this $200.00 debt and not realize they have spent the money. If they would pay to the Church WHAT THEY OWE in Church Envelopes, Christmas Offerings, Coal Fund and Easter Offerings for last year we would be out of debt and have a healthy balance in our treasury.

It's the Delinquent Who Ruins the Credit of the Church

Also, we need the support of every member of the Parish, including our boys and girls by means of the Duplex Envelope System.

We have no excuse for not increasing our offerings 200 per cent. in 1935. There are members of the parish who have never taken a package of Church Envelopes. There is no reason why THEY should not be contributing systematically and shoulder their share of our financial burden.

No Offerings, No True Worship

May I again remind our people that THERE IS NO SUCH THING AS WORSHIP WITHOUT OFFERINGS. Even those bowed down in grossest idolatry have a strong enough sense of the fitness of things to always make offerings when they worship. The significant part of their offerings is —they usually give— not the least—but the most they can afford.

Are you prejudiced against the Jew or the Roman Catholic?

Do you thank God you are not like them? Well, in many respects your Rector would have you their twin; especially in the matter of OFFERINGS to God. Were you to take the trouble to read in the Books of Leviticus and Deuteronomy relative to the Offerings the Jewish people made daily in the Tabernacle and in the Temple, you would soon get your sense of proportion adjusted.

It is amusing, as well as tragic, to see the modern Christian's air of complacency and self approval when he "contributes" to the church's expenses. If he gives $100.00 annually he expects to see the Rector bow low and consult him on every occasion of importance in the life of the parish. Now for a comparison of this exceptional "contributor" to the Church with the offerings of the Jew. Here are his usual, not extraordinary offerings as set forth in Leviticus.

1. Burnt Offering
2. Meat Offering
3. Peace Offering
4. Sin Offering
5. Trespass Offering

The Burnt Offering

Is literally an incense offering. It must be a bullock, sheep, goats, turtle doves and young pigeons without mark or blemish. It must be offered voluntarily, cheerfully and personally. It must be from his own personal property honestly acquired. The whole of it must be consumed, no part is to be retained. It is the absolute recognition of the truth that the Faithful are privileged to give to God an offering acceptable to Him.

The Meat Offering

Refers not to flesh meat only, but food of any kind whether flesh or farinaceous. In the second Chapter of Leviticus it is of flour with oil and incense, either baked in the oven on a plate or in a frying pan. Or it is made of the first fruits in the ear—green corn dried by the fire. The materials composing the Meat Offering were flour, oil, frankincense and salt. Every part of the offering must be selected of the best and purest—not that which was worthless or could not be used.

As the BURNT OFFERING is the surrender of life to God representing the fulfillment of man's duty to God; in the MEAT OFFERING the corn and oil represented the fulfillment of man's duty to his neighbor. Hence the MEAT OFFERING is a "Memorial."

The MEAT OFFERING was for the most part consumed by man. A handful only was burnt as "the Memorial" of the offering; the rest was for Aaron and his sons—the priesthood. Yet, though it fed the priests, it was not offered to them but to the Lord.

The BURNT OFFERING and the MEAT OFFERING taken together typify God's standard of full obedience—man's duty to Him and his neighbor.

The Peace Offering

Might be offered in three cases (a) for a thanksgiving (b) for a vow (c) for a voluntary offering. It was burnt upon the burnt sacrifices—i. e. upon the ashes of the continual Burnt Offering.

In the Burnt Offering all is offered unto the Lord. In the Meat Offering He vouchsafes to share the offering with His priests. In the Peace Offering the offerer is included. GOD, HIS PRIESTS, AND HIS PEOPLE IN ONE HOLY COMMUNION.

The Sin Offering

Was offered for the ignorant or unintentional breaking of the law i. e. sins, not committed wilfully nor of set purpose, or sin due to lack of information, education, law or commandments. (Deliberate or Presumptive sins were not included.) The SIN OFFERING differs from the BURNT, the MEAT or the PEACE OFFERING in that it introduces the idea of sin for which atonement is to be made. The idea of sin and trespass being absent from the others, because they present that which is "a sweet savour unto the Lord."

The Offering is made according to the ability of the offerer—He that had much giving that which cost him much and he that had little giving to the best of his ability; yet all giving that which showed the degree of one's sincerity to be free from sin.

IF YOUR OFFERINGS AND MY OFFERINGS TYPIFIED THE DEPTHS OF OUR DESIRE TO BE PURGED FROM OUR SINS WE WOULD APPEAR TO BE WILFULLY BLIND TO THE ENORMITY AND SERIOUSNESS OF OUR SINS AND ARE RECKLESSLY INDIFFERENT AS TO GOD'S ATTITUDE IN THE MATTER.

The Trespass Offering

The difference between trespass and sin brought out in this scheme of offerings is this: "Sin" is the parent; "Trespass" is the offspring; "Sin" expresses the fault or evil which is in us; "Trespass" the results or fruits of the sin in us. "Sinful" men expresses what we are; "Trespassers" not only what we are, but what we do in consequence of what we are. There is a degree of wilfulness and deliberation generally implied in "trespass" which is usually absent from "sin."

The Lesson Taught By This System of Offerings

First, there is due God from his creatures a suitable acknowledgment of His Supremacy. This acknowledgement must be exemplified in offerings of the very best, most valued and the most costly of a man's possessions. These offerings must be made in a spirit of gladness and wholeheartedness —not with regret nor with the desire of receiving reverence or praise from men. Not even with the consciousness of God's attitude towards sin. The BURNT, the MEAT, the PEACE OFFERINGS are sacrifices of sweet savour unto the Lord."

In the second place there is due God a penalty or sacrifice for "sin" and "trespass" against His Divine Majesty. Hence, the "Sin" and "Trespass" offering represented an expiation for sin.

In all these "Offerings unto the Lord" SOMETHING WAS GIVEN OF REAL AND GREAT VALUE in the spirit that it was God's right to expect a gift of the best a man possesses.

This is the kind of offering that MUST accompany our worship. Worship without such offerings i. e. without counting the cost—is a deliberate insult to God.

Our present method of Offerings shows our utter ignorance of our dependence and obligation.

Are You Sincere or Hypocritical?

Recently, at a noon day service, the congregation sang for its closing hymn that beautiful hymn of consecration:

Take my life and let it be
Consecrated, Lord to Thee:
Take my hands and let them move
At the impulse of Thy Love.

Take my feet and let them be
Swift and beautiful for Thee.
Take my voice and let me sing
Always, only for my King.

Take my lips and let them be
Filled with messages from Thee:
Take my silver and my gold,
Not a mite would I withhold.

Take my moments and my days,
Let them flow in endless praise;
Take my intellect and use
Every power as Thou shalt choose.

Take my will and make it Thine,
It shall be no longer mine.
Take my heart, it is Thine own
It shall be Thy royal throne.

Take my love, my God I pour
At Thy feet its treasure store,
Take myself, and I will be
Ever, only, all for Thee.

After the service, and while still under the spell of that wonderful hymn of self-surrender, I was approached by a gentleman who had attended the service. His only comment was, "How ghastly! Christians sing and express such exalted surrender and do not mean a word of it."

ANNA JANE COOPER

God in His Wisdom has seen fit to take into His closer keeping ANNA JANE COOPER, who for many years gave her life to His service in helping to build His kingdom in the Parish of St. John the Evangelist.

She was born on Christmas Day, 1863, and fell asleep on Epiphany, 1935.

Mrs. Cooper was a woman of unusual characteristics. She was an ideal wife and mother and reared a family of seven children who were a credit to her wise motherhood.

She was an efficient business woman and carried her husband's business with credit and profit after he died.

She was an immaculate housekeeper. Her home was always most orderly and well kept.

She was a loving Child of God and gave her heart and life to His cause. How she found the time to do all she did for the Master is a mystery.

She, for many years, taught the WOMEN'S BIBLE CLASS of St. John's Church and was never absent.

She was the last woman president of St. John's Chapter of the Woman's Auxiliary. When she explained to the Rector that failing health enforced her to resign that important office, he took over the executive position personally that she might be its last woman president, through his administration at least.

She was the executive head of St. John's Bazaar for many years and handled all its finances.

She was President of the ST. ELIZABETH'S GUILD and continued in the executive office after it merged into the SEVENTY-TWO CLUB.

She was the confidential visitor of the Rector to the sick and little children. In winter or summer; stormy or clear weather, she went about doing good to the unfortunate in the parish.

But best of all she was a true and loyal friend. Few women of private life have such a testimonial of popularity as was shown by the multitudes who attended her last rites.

We grieve with her family for her. Yet we thank God that we were so fortunate as to be her fellow workers for Jesus Christ and His cause.

"God of the living in whose eyes
Unveiled thy whole creation lies,
All souls are thine; we must not say
That those are dead who pass away,
From this our world of flesh set free;
We know them living unto thee."

We Approve of Gossipers

And We Apologize to Everybody for Ever Uttering One Word of Criticism Against Them

The Gossip is the most valuable asset of the Parish or Community.

His or her power for good and real constructive work is illimitable. An expert Gossip is worth his or her weight in gold.

No, we are not "kidding." We mean it. We hope every man and woman, boy or girl, will develop the art of gossip to the highest degree.

We need Gossips and MORE Gossips to advertise our Church and its activities.

An half dozen scientific Gossips are more economical and of greater service than a whole page of newspaper advertisement.

If you want to "put over" anything it is good psychology to start everybody gossiping about.

Whether we own it or not we know we are influenced more by gossip than by anything else.

What people say to us—especially our friends and neighbors—stick in our mind and are ever recurring and we find ourselves believing what we hear and acting accordingly.

Not only that; but we also become gossips and pass our information along to OUR friends in a way that it sounds original to our listeners. THEY accept YOUR version of the subject as YOU did of YOUR informant.

Gossip is like a virulent disease. It breeds easily and spreads like a forest fire in every direction. You can start gossip on Titan Street, Philadelphia, and it is just as likely as not to spring up in the White House at Washington, D. C., or St. James Court, London.

Business men are building big reputations through the use of Gossips and Gossiping.

A certain department store of Detroit, Michigan, used a group of gossips to boost its sales of women's dresses. The organization sent out young women in pairs. They rode in elevators, in office buildings, at rush hours, in street cars, strolled in theatre lobbies, while one told the other of the bargains at X's store. The store is said to have sold 3000 dresses the next day.

Yep! St. John's Church wants a GOSSIP'S CLUB. There are lots of things your Rector wants you to gossip about with your family, your friends, your next door neighbor, your grocer, your milk man, your insurance agent, your ice man, your baker, your landlord and every other one of your hundreds of contacts every day. The good reputation and the progress of the parish depends upon a well planned GOSSIPING CAMPAIGN. The Rector wants twenty-five volunteers to suggest subjects of Gossip to them and give them a sales talk as to how to put it over.

Christmas at St. John's

It Was a Day of Joyous Celebration of the Birthday of Jesus Christ

The weather, early in the morning, threatened to be cold and stormy and generally unpleasant. Flurries of snow were flying as folk were coming to the early service. But before the end of the service the sky had cleared and it turned out to be an ideal winter day.

It did feel nice and cozy to come out of the cold into the warm and cheerful church. By the way we were warm and comfortable because of the efforts of Harry Hopkins and Walter Pine who did all they could to get the boilers working and on the job.

The church was simply but beautifully adorned for Christmas. There were but nine pieces used in the decorations. On the wall of the Sanctuary were two immense wreaths hanging by broad red silk ribbons. On the re-table were found potted poinsettas stretching from end to end of the altar. In each corner of the sanctuary on either side of the altar was a medium size bushy and very green Christmas tree, and outside the choir on the floor of the church to the right of the pulpit was a veritable monarch of all Christmas trees reaching from the floor to within a few inches of the church ceiling. The effect was so striking and dignified that one involuntarily stopped, caught his breath on entering the church.

The choir did a little better than their usual best.

There was a masterfulness in the way they rendered the music which clearly indicated they had worked hard to get the true interpretation of each selection rendered. The Processional was Hymn No. 73 "Christians Awake." Following the Creed the anthem "Rejoice," by Adam Geibel was beautifully rendered. The Offertory was, "There Were Shepherds," by Charles Vincent. For a presentation the congregation led by the choir, sang the "Old Hundred." After the prayer of Humble Access, the choir and congregation sang, kneeling, that extremely beautiful Christmas Carol—"Silent Night, Holy Night." The effect was electric. There seems to be a living spirit of Christmas in that Hymn that stirs one's best emotions at their centre. After the reception of the sacred elements the choir rendered Mozart's Gloria In Excelsis with wonderful power, accuracy and expression. After the Benediction the choir sang Stainer's Sevenfold Amen. And the Recessional—Adeste Fideles, "O, Come, All Ye Faithful," brought the service to a beautiful completion.

As usual the Parish turned out full force at both services. Many persons we have not seen for years were there, and we were glad for the opportunity of taking them by the hand and wishing them the compliments of the season. Then too, there were well known faces missing. Their absence was the minor chord of the Holy Celebration. Some were sick, some had already realized the ultimate of life and were in a higher and holier atmosphere rejoicing over the Advent of the Messiah. Considering everything, the Christmas Offering bids fair to be worthy of the Parish. Those, who were the least able to give, gave generously of their little. And we are sure that all others will eventually realize the significance of the blessed occasion and will bring their Offerings to the Manger too.

Our Christmas Festival

Friday, December 28th, was the Sunday School children's annual Christmas festival. The Parish House was literally crowded from stage to entrance with eager kids waiting for what was coming. The entertainment was opened by everybody yelling out of tune "Jingle Bells." Incidentally we would like to take the Rector and Superintendent aside and tell them that as song leaders they register zero. Why, they didn't even know the way to start "Jingle Bells" jingling. They didn't know the words, they went and started in the middle of the chorus and it sounded as though what they were singing was set to a tune resembling John Brown's Body or something.

Anyway, tho, the start was awful, it was at least a start. After the R. & S. retired in great confusion covered with vivid blushes and juvenile jeers St. John's Dramatic Troupe staged a Christmas drama entitled "The Old Cupboard." It was a three-act play and went over pretty good. The Rector wrote it. Margaret Nelson directed it, and Viola Young, Howard McFadden, Vernon Matthews, Frances Heisler, Joseph Robins, Ruth Rutter and several of our children acted the parts.

One of the audience told the parson after the play that he (the parson) could write almost as well as he could preach. The parson has been wondering ever since whether that remark was a compliment or a double pointed slam. It would be so satisfactory if people would not be so vague in their statements.

After the play the usual candy, oranges and toys were distributed by the teachers among the scholars. One boy, who evidently was experienced in collecting Christmas candy from many Sunday Schools he "patronized" during the year, told the Rector that the candy he got at our festival was lots better than what he got at other Sunday Schools he attended.

How'szat for a testimony from an expert!

Wonder where were the other Sunday Schools that boy operated. However, we accept his compliments in the spirit it is given and wish him a Happy New Year.

Extract From the Pastoral Letter

Atlantic City, October 23d.

Assails Degeneration of Motion Pictures

From our vantage point we make our reckoning of present trends and tendencies. We instance conditions that demand our serious consideration: The degeneration of the moving picture industry has been such that it has aroused the righteous indignation of all self-respecting people who have demanded the right to decency. The Church itself is a league of decency and all who belong to it are pledged to oppose indecency in any form.

Our action should contemplate the repression of other evils that have become emboldened in our time. The drama and much of our modern literature is erotic and panders to the base in human nature. Plays and novels cleverly conceived and written, present in gross and shameless ways and in language that is suggestive and indecent, scenes and incidents that are immoral and grossly licentious. They are symptomatic of the degeneracy of an age that is fast losing its sense of moral values.

It is to be deplored that Christian people all too frequently are the patrons of such corrupting agencies and that children and young people in particular are made the victims of their devices. Ethical and moral standards have suffered a grave impairment in this post-war age and it is our conviction that this departure from ways and practices that are clean and wholesome is a primary contributing cause of the long continued depression.

How are the New Year Resolutions Holding Out?

It would appear from the size of our Christmas Communion that the Parish is still in a pretty healthy condition in regards to active communicants at least.

"Did you give your wife that little lecture on economy you talked about?"

"Yes."

"Any results?"

"Yes—I've got to give up smoking expensive cigars."

Believe it or not—Our Sunday School attendance was larger after than before Christmas. Perhaps it was the superior quality of our Christmas candy that had pleased everybody so much that they simply could not forsake a school which served such Christmas gifts.

Teacher—"Where was the Declaration of Independence signed?"

Willie (after silence)—"At the bottom."

TELEGRAM

A telegram was rushed
Up fifty flights of the Woolworth Building
To a man named John L. Brown,
Who snatched it from the carrier's hand
And read it with a fer'rish grin:
"This day a daughter's father you were made Eight pounds and fourteen ounces more."
He smiled with joy—
And then, before he tore the missive up
He gazed upon a sticker stuck thereon
Which said,
"Call Western Union if you want a boy."

Dub—"I'm going to marry a girl who can take a joke."

Kay—"Don't worry; that's the only kind of girl you'll get."

There are still several hundred Coal Envelopes out. If you lost or mislaid yours. Put your Coal contribution in an ordinary Envelope and drop it on the Alms Bason next Sunday. Be sure you write your name on the Envelope so that we can credit it to your account.

In 1868, the New York World printed the following news item on its front pages:

A man about 43 years of age, giving the name of Joshua Coppersmith, has been arrested for attempting to extort funds from ignorant and superstitious people by exhibiting a device which he says will convey the human voice over metallic wires. He calls the instrument a "telephone" which is obviously intended to imitate the word telegraph and win the confidence of those who know of the success of the latter instrument. Well-informed people know that it is impossible to transmit the human voice over wires as may be done with signals of the Morse code. The authorities who apprehended this criminal are to be congratulated and it is hoped that his punishment will be prompt and for a long prison duration.

If you do not have a package of Church Envelopes for 1935 please apply to the Rector at once.

Your worship without Offerings is as music without sound.

Our Sunday School Offerings show a tendency to increase. That is a good sign that the boys and girls are realizing the meaning of Offerings too.

People say that they often find it hard to tell the difference between weeds and young plants. The sure way, of course, is to pull them all out. If they come up again they are weeds.

A wise Communicant remarked to the Rector: The list of Christmas Contributors is a good Directory of our Active Parishioners. The names of the drones and the close fisted are conspicuous for their absence. Even the poorest of our Communicants manage somehow or other to squeeze out a "widow's mite" for the Christmas Offering.

BE A FRIEND

Be a friend. You don't need money:
Just a disposition sunny;
Just the wish to help another
Get along some way or other;
Just a kindly hand extended
Out to one who's unbefriended;
Just the will to give or lend,
This will make you someone's friend.

Be a friend. You don't need glory.
Friendship is a simple story.
Pass by trifling errors blindly,
Gaze on honest effort kindly,
Cheer the you who's bravely trying,
Pity him who's sadly sighing;
Just a little labor spend
On the duties of a friend.

Be a friend. The pay is bigger
(Though not written by a figure)
Than is earned by people clever
In what's merely self-endeavor.
You'll have friends instead of neighbors
For the profits of your labors;
You'll be richer in the end.
Than a prince, if you're a friend.

ANON.

THE OTHER FELLOW

Are you fond of your wife and your children fair?
So is the other fellow.
Do you crave pleasures for them to share?
So does the other fellow.
Does your heart rejoice when your own are glad?
And are you troubled when they are sad?
Well, it's that way, too, in this life, my lad,
That way with the other fellow.
Do you want the best for your own to know?
So does the other fellow.
Do you stoop to kiss them before you go?
So does the other fellow.
When your baby lies on a fevered bed,
Does your heart run cold with a silent dread?
Well, it's that way, too, where all mortals tread—
That way with the other fellow.
Does it hurt when they want what you cannot buy?
It does with the other fellow.
Do you for their comfort yourself deny?
So does the other fellow.
Would you wail aloud if your babe should die
For the lack of care you could not supply?
Well, it's that way, too, as he travels by,
That way with the other fellow.

GIVE YOUR BEST

There are loyal hearts, there are spirits brave,
There are souls that are pure and true;
If you give to the world the best you have,
The best will come back to you.

Give love, and love to your heart will flow,
A strength in your utmost need;
Have faith and a score of hearts will show
Their faith in your word and deed.

Give truth and your gift will be paid in kind,
And honor will honor meet;
And a smile that is sweet will surely find
A smile that is just as sweet.

Give pity and sorrow to those who mourn;
You will gather in flowers again.
The scattered seed from your thought outborne,
Though the sowing seemed but in vain.

For life is the mirror of king and slave;
'Tis just what you are and do.
Then give to the world the best you have,
And the best will come back to you.

OUR BEHAVIOR IN LENT

What Shall We Do to get the Best out of it?

The first matter of importance is to know, WHY is Lent? Concisely speaking, it is a season appointed by the Church affording us, through appropriate and special exercises an opportunity to make special effort to overcome the sins and shortcomings which retard our growth in grace.

BEHAVIOR IN LENT THEREFORE BECOMES A MATTER OF GREATEST IMPORTANCE.

It must be more than a superficial observance of certain time honored customs of fasting and stricter adherence to Church duties. These, of course, are important. But if we are to get the good we should get from our Lenten experiences, we must be more specific as to our behavior. Fasting mechanically, Church attendance automatically, are about as helpful as a gulp of salt water to slake one's thirst. Instead of satisfying the soul, they stimulate the appetite for carnal things by this period of abstinence.

LENT MUST NOT BE A FAD BUT A FACT. It must be made a fact by our behavior. We must so conduct ourselves and so regulate our lives as to get the greatest possible personal good from the Penitential Season. The question is—how can we do it?

Self Analysis

Obviously our first act is to quietly pick ourselves to pieces, so to speak. To examine our acts, our thoughts, our feelings, our moral and spiritual emotions our ideals, our estimates, and our language microsopically. In a word, we must turn ourselves into a spiritual clinic and use ourselves as our subject under observation.

If we are conscientious in our analysis, we shall just as surely discover the germ of evil in us, as the scientist discovered the germ of typhoid.

After the source of the dis-ease is uncovered, then, begins the building up of a course of treatment that will eradicate the dis-ease.

SIN MUST BE TREATED AS A SPIRITUAL DIS-EASE and our behavior regulated accordingly.

The suggestions we would offer after you have located the cause of your spiritual lassitude are:

Prayer

Not just a general vague formula of words addressed to God. But Prayer that is built around your special spiritual dis-ease. If you concentrate your prayers upon that particular spot, God will know that you have located your ailment and realize the need of a cure, and will surely supply the specific for the dis-ease. THIS is PRAYING WITH A PURPOSE and is bound to get satisfactory results. Always remember that PRAYER is too valuable an ingredient in your remedy for sin ills to be neglected or ignored.

BROTHER, CAN YOU SPARE A DOLLAR FOR THE BROADCASTER?

Fasting

It is curious to note how similar is the treatment for physical and for spiritual ills. In case of fever the physician is almost certain to prescribe an immediate reduction of diet and the use of liquids instead of solids. Fasting is the cure for physical fevers—fasting is the cure for spiritual fevers. He who says he does not believe in fasting is either an ignoramous or a fool. There are times in one's life when he must fast. ONE OF THOSE TIMES IS WHEN THE SPIRIT OF MAN IS BURNING UP WITH THE FEVER OF SIN. We once knew a woman who was recovering from a desperate illness. Her doctor warned her against eating any solids. A friend in mistaken kindness persuaded her that a cream puff she bought was too light to seriously affect her. She ate it and we officiated at her burial a few days later.

Sometimes one makes a fatal mistake not to fast. When THE FEVER OF SIN is conquered it is much easier to affect A CURE OF THE SOUL.

Bible Reading

There is no doubt of the psychology of literature. The fact is so firmly established that certain classes of literature are outlawed because of their fatal effect upon the minds, imaginations and morals of the readers. Every propaganda, whether red, yellow or black, starts with lurid literature calculated to bias the public mind. Lascivious literature is written with the express purpose of poisoning the imaginations of its readers and driving them to acts of immorality. Nothing is so satisfying to an earnest seeker after truth than written truth. CIVILIZATION IS AS WEAK OR AS STRONG AS ITS LITERATURE. A BIBLE READING nation would quickly become a GOD FEARING and a RIGHTEOUS LOVING nation. The more we read our Bibles, the more our behavior will change and improve. The Holy Bible is the most important and most necessary book of devotion for Lenten reading. BE SURE YOU READ YOUR BIBLE DAILY AND THOUGHTFULLY. The good you get out of Lent depends upon it.

Receiving the Holy Communion

THE PHYSICIAN KNOWS THAT MEDICINE IS AS NECESSARY AS DIETING. He does not "drug" you if he knows his pharmacopia; but he does blend in his prescriptions that which he knows, from his diagnosis of you, what you need in the way of medicine to restore you to health.

Jesus Christ, on that Passover just preceding his crucifixion blended a prescription of his body and his blood that is AN EVERLASTING AND A DIVINE PRESCRIPTION for the restoration of the sin sick to strength in spirit. He who neglects to take it is a greater fool than he who refuses the prescription of his physician. That man may die for neglecting to follow the doctor's orders, but yours may be an eternal and a spiritual death if you insist on neglecting your Communion, which strengthens you and purges you of your sins.

Offerings

Last month we wrote so exhaustively on this subject that we can say very little more. IN ALL TIMES AND IN ALL RELIGIONS A SYSTEM OF OFFERINGS HAS BEEN A CONSPICUOUS PART OF WORSHIP. There can be no true WORSHIP without a suitable OFFERING. Offerings mean sacrifices. Sacrifices mean a spiritual urge towards sincerity in worship. IT IS THE OUTWARD AND VISIBLE SIGN OF OUR ANXIETY TO PAY OUR DEBT TO GOD TO THE UTMOST. IT IS A GESTURE OF LETTING GO OF MATERIAL VALUES THAT WE MAY, WITH EMPTY HANDS, REACH OUT AND GRASP TRUE WEALTH OF ETERNAL VALUE.

Our EASTER OFFERINGS will be in proportion to our sincere desire to gain the wealth of Heaven.

Christian Service

A man's salvation depends entirely upon his efforts to save his fellow man. No man can live unto himself; neither can he die unto himself; nor can he enter into the Kingdom of Heaven alone. Heaven is not a one man's land. Its inhabitants travel in groups, groups bound together by personal interest in each other.

WE ARE INDEED "OUR BROTHER'S KEEPER" in the strictest sense of the word. If we see he is about to stumble into a man trap, it is our duty to put out a strong arm and snatch him out of danger. If he is drowning it is our moral duty to save him, even if we must stun him to do so. If he is perishing in a burning building, we must rescue him, even at the cost of burns and suffocations and sufferings to ourselves. If he is being beaten and half killed by a burly brute, we must wade in and slug our hardest and beat down his enemy. If he is being victimized by the Devil and is surely losing his grip upon eternal verities, because of a weakening of moral and spiritual strength, we must spring to his relief, rescue him by force, if necessary, and fairly PUSH HIM OUT OF DANGER AND INTO THE KINGDOM OF GOD. We must ignore the crazy and meaningless criticisms of those who say if a man wants to go to the Devil it's his own business. THAT IS THE BIGGEST LIE THAT WAS EVER TOLD. No child of God can be allowed to become the prisoner of Hell, if you and I are able to prevent it.

May what we have set forth in this article help all of us in OUR BEHAVIOUR IN LENT. It gives us certain lines of action along which to exercise that behaviour and we do honestly feel that with the help of God and the interest it will arouse in us we shall gain new strength, new spirit pictures and new ambitions to carry us along as we travel life's pathway towards HOME.

IT'S HISTORY NOW

Sunday, February 3rd, was a busy day at St. John's

You will recall that the occasion was the celebration of the 81st Anniversary of the Parish.

Except for the snow banks and the squishy walking, it was an ideal day. The sky was clear of clouds and there was a nippiness in the air that made the blood tingle. The service of Holy Communion was surprisingly well attended. The Communicants packed the Church. We wondered what the founders of old St. John's would have thought had they been present to see this wonderful congregation which was the direct result of THEIR efforts 81 years ago. Had the walking been better the congregation would have been at least one-third as large again. Had there not been so much sickness due to the severity of the weather, there would have been many more present, too. Quite a few of our regulars were absent for this reason. Yet, with those impediments, the congregation was exceptionally large, even for an anniversary occasion.

When the Rector viewed that congregation and realized he was alone, and had before him the task of ministering the Sacraments to so great a crowd of worshippers, he then and there determined he would not preach an Anniversary Sermon full of statistics, history and boasting, but would use his time and energy to the better purpose of celebrating the Holy Communion with fitting deliberation and dignity. So, the big congregation escaped a dry as dust discourse.

ONE OF THE INTERESTING FEATURES OF THE SERVICE WAS THE READING OF A LETTER OF CONGRATULATION FROM OUR BISHOP WHILE THE CONGREGATION STOOD.

As is so frequently the case on such special occasions, we concluded the Morning Service with a christening.

The Parish Dinner

Promptly at 12.30 o'clock the members of the congregation filed into the Sunday School room where were laid two hundred places at the four long tables. In less than two minutes every place was occupied and the Parish sat down to such a dinner as only Mrs. Pine and her aides can conjure from her pots and pans.

It was a pleasure to see our family enjoy that dinner, especially to see the kids set to and "eat their heads off." The dinner was most appetizing. After the first set of "eaters" had been gorged their places were quickly taken by a hungry horde who could scarcely be held in leash.

The Interval

After all had satisfied their hunger some sat around and indulged in a quiet conversation and a little gossip. The kids cleared out and turned the Parish House into Bedlam and very nearly had the "cops" from the 25th District raid the place, when a gang of St. Johnites and a gang of Sacred Hearters staged a snowball battle. However, we soon had the boisterous bunch under control, and by the time we were ready for the next service, everything was serene.

The Young People's Meeting

At 2.30 o'clock we got together in the Church and had a delightful service for the young people of the Parish. After a most interesting devotional service; in which the prayers and Bible Readings were read by members from the floor of the Church, instead from the Chancel and the Lecturn, we listened to an address on "Habit" delivered by the Rev. George Anderson, of St. Giles, Upper Darby, who was the guest speaker of the afternoon. And did he get his congregation's attention! He even got two of the kiddies from the Kindergarden to stand up before the big audience and sing a hymn from memory.

Our speaker, by the way, expressed his surprise and pleasure at the size of our School. There were present about 300 officers, teachers and scholars.

Our Parish Visiting

We never forget our "Shut-in Congregation" on these special occasions. The Rector had asked our parishioners to bring one flower each on Anniversary Sunday. The idea was to make them up into bouquets and deliver them to our aged, sick and shut-ins. The visitors were volunteers from among the young people. Thus were our absent members made conscious of their part in our Anniversary.

Our Parish Supper

This important feature was scheduled for 5.30 o'clock. The Rector was called out to make a visit upon a family in trouble. On his return, which was about 4.30 o'clock, he was astonished to find all the chairs at the tables occupied by boys and girls—ONE HOUR AHEAD OF TIME. After he remonstrated with them and persuaded them to leave the table, they very reluctantly retired—leaving their coats and hats on the chairs marking the spot as "reserved." For some unknown reason we had more guests at supper than we had at dinner. And talk about devastation by locusts! They were just tiny insects with anaemic appetites compared to St. John's supper guests. Jack Spratt (not our Jack Spratt) and his wife could never have done such a job with their famous platter as did our boys and girls with theirs that night.

The Gathering of the Clans

In the evening we had a sort of review of the year's work by organizations. First, the Rector told us of his official acts during that period. Then reports were submitted by the heads of the Girl Scout Troop, the Choir, the Woman's Auxiliary, the Cresson Men's Club, etc.

The Reports were concluded by a short address exhorting the communicants to continue their aid and cooperation in developing the Kingdom of God in Southwark. Much fine spiritual work has been done, but there remains much more to be done. It is his hope that we will continue to live up to the good opinion and hopes of our beloved Bishop.

One final word of just praise for the part our Choir played in the success of our 81st Anniversary, then we are done. As usual, they put over the musical part of our several services with their usual efficiency and beauty.

If anybody, who could have been there, and did not come THEY certainly are to be pitied.

WHAT CAN CHRISTIAN CIVILIZATION THINK OF US?

We do not mean what does Europe or Asia think of U. S. As a matter of fact we do not care what THEY think. But, what is the estimate of the best Christian people everywhere. What do they think of America's un-American way of doing certain things, particularly concerning our criminal court procedure and the "liberty" of our press.

The Trial of a Prisoner

One would almost think from listening to criminal court procedure that, under our system of trial by jury, the two persons most concerned in the verdict eventually to be rendered are first, the Prosecuting Attorney and second, the Attorney for the Defense. The accused apparently is only a pawn in the game they are playing. The Prosecuting Attorney is a politician who depends upon his vote-getting-ability to hold his job. His vote-getting-ability depends largely upon his "way" in office.

The Attorney for the Defense often is a man struggling for a spot in the sun and hopes that some day he may be a Prosecuting Attorney, too. Sometimes his ambition inspires him to take a case without guarantee of fee—if the case is sufficiently notorious to arrest public attention. The case may be hopeless from the start, but it affords good advertising. To have one's name spread over the front pages of the daily papers in big, black letters, is effective advertising which in no way conflicts with the dignity of the profession.

Therefore, when a prisoner is brought to trial he sometimes finds he is the victim of a brutal drama in which the Prosecuting Attorney and the Attorney for the Defense are the star actors; the Courtroom, the theatre; and the people crowding it, the "dead head" audience who come to be entertained, thrilled, horrified, amused, by the antics of the actors and the show they put on called evidence. Every eye in that crowded theatre, every ear of the avid audience is open wide to catch the quibs, the biting sarcasm, the verbal thrusts, the lightning mental attack and defense and the sly and covert leading of prisoner or witness into an ambush to blast their testimony and wreck the hopes of the opposing side. He who is most skillful is most applauded by the audience and such applause is music to his ears. He is a step nearer to fame.

The day of days is when our sensation crazed audience crowd the Temple of Justice to witness the baiting of the accused by the Prosecuting Attorney and the counter attacks of the Defense. The "audience" nudges its neighbor in appreciation of the verbal upper cuts and the oratorical knockouts being delivered. Sometimes the excitement exceeds all bounds and the judge must swing a wicked gavel to restore the "dead head" audience to order.

Then, too, the audience gets a great kick out of the squirming and mental agony of the tortured prisoner. They thrill to the centre of their little souls as they watch the "caught" writhe under the pitiless and savage attack of the P. A. They grin with appreciation as they see the desperate gleam of hope in his face when the Attorney of the Defense, with practiced skill, extricates him from the bog in which the P. A. left him flounder for the twelve good men and true to see and judge.

We do not believe in bull fights—at least we did not a few years ago—because we pity the poor dumb brute whose only recourse is to fight back. It is a brutal sight. Yet, to watch a human being as his character is being ripped to shreds; to see his private life held up to ridicule and public scorn; to mark how he cringes as he stands stripped naked of all claim to pity by a thundering, roaring official accuser who at last has reached the dramatic climax of the case—Ah-h-h-h that IS an exhibition worth coming to see!

Then the closing act of tragedy—the thrilling moment we have been so patiently waiting to see through all these days—when the twelve good men and true file back to the stage, when the question of guilty or not guilty is asked them, when through deepest silence yet obtained in the drama, the voice of the Chairman of the Jury booms out the dread word—Guilty; when the prisoner at the bar is commanded to stand up—for he MUST take the coming blow standing, you know; when his doom is pronounced; when he sways, turns pale, and sweats from fear—that is our supreme moment of savage relish and to gloat! We have lived through all these tedious hours to see this climax. The show is over, the curtains drops, the villian is punished—so to home and to bed.

It has been a great show.

WHY?

WHY must justice be so public and indecent?

WHY must there be trials by jury? A jury too often composed by persons ignorant of even the fundamentals of law and easily be-fuddled by shrewd attorneys.

WHY not try every case before a court of three judges instead—a miniature U. S. Supreme Court as it were—who should listen to the testimony and agree upon the verdict and the sentence?

WHY not keep the court clear of a "dead head" audience, witnesses, experts and news hounds; and permit only the three trial judges, the P. A., the Attorney for the Defense, the court stenographer and the accused to be present?

WHY not permit only one witness or expert in the court at the time of their examination, to be questioned and cross-examined by the Attorneys, the trial judges and even by the accused—who, after all, is the most concerned in the outcome of the trials. Such a method of acquiring evidence would surely protect the interests of both the State and the prisoner. It certainly would be deliberative, dignified and more likely to make a calm sifting of the case material possible?

WHY not clear the court premises of every person who is not connected with the case—whether relative, bondsman, friend or curiosity seeker. It would reduce excitement to a minimum and kill that morbid curiosity which drives morons to hover about the place of trouble.

What Good Will It Do?

Well, first of all, it would insure the accused of a FAIR trial. The attorneys in the case would realize that they had no jury of laymen to befuddle, but were trying their case before three judges who were learned in the law, as well as they; who would not be blinded by oratorical pyrotechnics, but would judge the case on its merits.

Again, it certainly would be a lot more economical than the present system of trial by jury.

In the third place, the horrible riot and savage turmoil of morons would cease.

Also, American Criminal Law and Justice would be purged of sensationalism and mis-carriage, and American fair play would live again.

Better still, there would be no corrupting of the jurors for there would be no jurors to corrupt. The criminal minded would think more than twice before walking the path of iniquity.

It is Not a New Idea

The proposition to try cases before judges without juries is not an original idea by any manner of means. We do not claim sponsorship for the child. We just want everybody to know that we are proud of the kid and hope he will grow up and be quite a fellow some day.

THE EASTER THANK OFFERING BOXES

Last Year's Venture Encourages Us to Continue This Year

Last year it was suggested that perhaps the adults of the Parish might be willing to help build up the SUNDAY SCHOOL LENTEN OFFERING by taking a MITE CHEST and placing it upon the dinner table so that EVERY MEMBER OF THE FAMILY might drop a small coin in it at every meal, which would be their THANK OFFERING for their DAILY BREAD.

The idea succeeded far beyond our expectation. On Easter Day SIXTY-THREE boxes, containing $107.32, were returned.

We made an inflexible rule that nobody would be asked to take a THANK OFFERING CHEST—because it was to be a TRUE Thank Offering and a personal matter between God and the person taking the box. IN OTHER WORDS IT MUST BE A TRUE VOLUNTARY ACT.

This year we are giving this same opportunity to our adult members.

YOU WILL NOT BE ASKED TO TAKE A BOX; YOU MUST ASK FOR A BOX. THAT IS THE ONLY WAY YOU CAN POSSIBLY GET IT.

Nevertheless, we would like to see our Volunteer Easter Thank Offering contributors grow to 200 members this year.

If you are interested see Miss Nuttall or the Rector at once and enter your name and address for a box. You will receive it THE SUNDAY BEFORE ASH WEDNESDAY or as near to that date as possible.

And remember, you MUST ASK for the box;

we WILL NOT ask you to take one.

THIS FUND IS RAISED BY ONLY THOSE WHO ARE TRULY THANKFUL, WHETHER IT BE $5.00 or $500.00.

Last Year's Membership

The Easter Thank Offering Group was composed of: Anna, William and Edward Brown, Annie Beisser, Mamie Beisser, Mrs. Casper, Cresson Men's Club, Emily Carnes, Anna Daly, Mrs M. Fisher, Florence Friend, Mrs. Mary Friend, Mrs. Harry Gresh, Elizabeth Griggs, Mary Hain, Mrs. I. TRULY AN IMPRESSIVE GROUP!

HAVE YOU NOTICED SOMEPIN' ?

Do you get a funny feelin' when you enter St John's now-a-days? Do you look 'round en' wonder wassamatter? Do you go out again and look over the old building to see if you, by chance, wandered into the wrong place?

Don't get scared. You aren't mentally wrong You're not verging onto anything serious. It's just the absence of dirt all over everything that makes the difference. We old members never DID quite know what the interior of the Church really looked like before. Such cleanness makes us feel sort of bare, if you know what we mean. It used to be that the ladies almost threatened to bring cushions and newspapers with them to Church to keep their dresses from getting dusty. NOW, the pews are so nice and clean that one hates to sit on 'em for fear of markin' 'em up.

And the Chancel!
And the Sacrist y!!
And the Sunday School Room!!!
And the Kindergarten!!!!
And the Kitchen!!!!!
And the Halls!!!!!!
And the Pavement!!!!!!!
And the Window Sills!!!!!!!!
And the Parish House!!!!!!!!!
And the Cellar!!!!!!!!!!
And the Church Gallery!!!!!!!!!!

Walter, you are the Sexton we've been praying for.

THANK YOU!

We would like to thank all those who donated prizes, cakes and services for the Radio Party, on February second for the Sunday School Lenten Offering of the Intermediate Classes. We appreciate all those who attended the party and helped make it such a success.

We never remember any undertaking where so much cheerful cooperation was given.

Our total receipts amounted to $68.35. This was made possible by your help. Once again, thank you for your part in our party.

THE GESIMAS

Transition Period, between Christmas, Epiphany and Lenten Season

Meaning of SEPTUAGESIMA: Seventy days before Easter.

Meaning of SEXAGESIMA: Sixty days before Easter.

Meaning of QUINQUAGESIMA: Fifty days before Easter.

QUINQUAGESIMA is the only one of three rightly named. It is actually the 50th day before Easter, as Pentecost is the 50th day after Easter. The others are approximately 70 and 60 days, respectively.

The general spirit of the collects for these Sundays is that of deep humility; a spirit especially required in the Christian, as he is preparing his mind to observe with appropriate seriousness the approach of Lent.

Septuagesima

THE COLLECT (from old Sarsum Missal) at once anticipates two chief ideas of Lent—the acknowledgement of our sin and its just punishment, and the prayer for forgiveness by God's mercy in and through Jesus Christ.

THE EPISTLE, I Corinthians 9:24, introduces the other Lenten idea of self-discipline. Addressing the Corinthians, spectators of the Isthmian games, St. Paul holds out, as models for spiritual life, the excitement of the race and the rules of temperance in everything while in training for wrestling and boxing. The same rules hold good in the spiritual game. Temperance, fixity of purpose, grim conflict to the finish—lest we become ruled out as unfit in the end.

THE GOSPEL, St. Matthew 20:1. The Gospel seems to have no connection with the idea expressed in the Epistle. The Parable "shows that God is debtor to no man." Like other parables, it cannot convey a full spiritual reality. Each laborer comes when God is pleased to call him; with the first comers there is an agreement as to pay. With the rest—none such agreement is made. At the close of the work all are paid alike. The first to work complain at the apparent want of equity in payment only to be reminded that the Master will do what he chooses with his own. The lesson is—faithful service to God, not length or extent of time of service with which he is pleased. All must look only to God's Grace, not to man's merit, still less should any carp at God's mercy to others.

Sexigesima

THE COLLECT (shortened from the old Sarum form). In it we have an opening of the whole heart to God. In the first part, there is a plain disavowal of "trust in anything that we do." The second is a petition that Divine Power will afford a defense we need "against all adversity." It is truly a prayer of humility and faith.

THE EPISTLE II Cor. 11:19. The adversities of St. Paul, the Apostle to the Gentiles, as set forth by himself in II Cor. 11:19—are illustration of what adversities beset even the servants of God and how necessary it is to be sure of God's protection against them. If the Saints need God's intervention how much more so do we?

THE GOSPEL: St. Luke 8:40. The lesson of the Gospel follows closely the appeal of the Collect and the suggestion of the Epistle. The sower sows his seed—which is good—but it can germinate only in soil that is properly prepared and free from obstacles. Our heart is the soil.

According to the Collect we cannot trust ourselves to prepare it for the seed of the Gospel we need the power of God to rake out and break up the things of adversity that the whole heart may became fallow and bring forth fruit—an hundredfold.

Quinqugesima

THE COLLECT: This Collect was substituted in 1549 for an old collect which evidently referred to confession and penance at the opening of Lent. It is beautiful in both its construction and appeal. No doubt it refers to that wonderful 13th Chapter of I Corinthians which tells of this "bond of peace and of all virtue"—how men need it, how they are but sounding brass and clanging cymbols without it. Therefore, realizing our need for this most excellent gift of love we pray that God will send His Holy Spirit to fill our hearts with this virtue that we may be prepared to serve our fellow man, as well as God.

THE EPISTLE: I Cor. 13:1 is too familiar to all to need any exposition save to analyze its contents. In it St. Paul (a) exalts true love above all virtues. (b) He contrasts the INNER REALITY of love with its OUTWARD SIGNS towards God and man, the devotion of martyrdom and applying our means to relieve the distressed. (c) From these he moves on to the real characteristics of love—patient, kind, self-effacing, humble, generous, forgiving. Believes, hopes, endures without limit. (d) Love is permanent. (e) Faith, hope and love are all Divine Attributes, but the greatest, even of these, is love.

THE GOSPEL: St. Luke 18:31. The Gospel is well chosen for the day. The thought of QUINQUAGESIMA is the SACRIFICE OF LOVE. Jesus tells of the approaching of the Supreme act of love the Father is about to perform for the eternal salvation of His Children. The incident of causing the blind man to see is dramatically inserted by God at this point; no doubt to show all men that love shall open the eyes of all to the wonders of its supremacy in our lives—upon darkness of ignorance and despair, we are brought by the loving and sacrificial act of Jesus Christ into the brilliant and beautiful sunlight of a world of righteousness.

ST. JOHN BOYS' CLUB

The first meeting of the boy's club of St. John's was held on Friday evening, February 8th, 1935 at 7 o'clock. Fifteen boys eager and enthusiastic, proceeded to get the meeting started by electing officers. Those elected were:

Thomas Dean, President.

Wm. Clendenning, Vice President.

Wm. Nugent, Secretary-Treasurer.

The by-laws were read by Ray Cressee, director, who impressed upon the boys the necessity of obeying these laws. A program of activities such as drilling, calisthenics, games, and clubs is expected to be carried out, as the club progresses. After adjournment, the rest of the evening was given over to games. And what a time they had!

The hour of 9.45 arrived and the time for departure. This gives every one of the boys ample opportunity to be in his home not later than 10 o'clock.

Don't forget fellows, members and non-members, that our next meeting is on FRIDAY EVENING IN THE PARISH HOUSE AT 7 O'CLOCK SHARP!

Gabriel and Satan contracted to build a long and thick cement wall between their respective domains. They agreed to take turns in paying for repairing it. In course of time the wall needed repairing. It was done and Gabriel paid the bill. Many years later it again needed repairing, but Satan refused to keep his part of the contract.

"If you don't pay the bill," said Gabriel, "I'll sue you."

"Go ahead and sue," said Satan, "but where are you going to find a lawyer?"

HUMAN AND SUPERHUMAN

William H. Jefferys, D.D.

Let us begin by reminding ourselves that we have excluded certain once-called miracles on the ground that they, as in the case of Jonah, are imaginative creations of the author. They were never intended to be understood as historic fact; they were not historic fact; they have their spiritual significance just as has the character of Hamlet its meaning.

Next, we should realize that we have come practically to know that the Mind in which we live, and move, and have our being is a law-making Mind; that God is above law, but acts through law; that Jesus, in all His exhibition of marvelous power never once breaks a law of God. That is my own feeling in the matter. It used to be supposed that it was an exhibition of Divine power to do something contr ary to natural law. We do not now believe that that is the case. We easily recognize that one natural law can be superimposed and overcome another. We see this constantly happen all about us; but it is all within law, and reasonable. Even the most skeptical, moreover, are ready to acknowledge that what we know about natural law is infinitesimal, compared with what we do not know.

Let us take a very simple example: It used to be thought to be a setting aside of a law of nature in that Jesus was able to say to Nathaniel: "When thou wast under the fig tree I saw thee." We now recognize that as a very clear and positive case of telepathy, or direct apprehension by the subjective mind of that which is beyond the reach of the senses. Even the dumbest of us have faint suggestions of this power as manifested in such expression as "I felt that you were there." Jesus' use of the subjective mind is so complete that it does not produce "faint suggestions;" it produces knowledge, or better—awareness. Those of us who have more sensitiveness than the average have experiences which approach this intuitive knowledge of Jesus quite closely. There is no infraction of the law in this. It is the superseding of a limited law by a very much less limited one. It does not break the law of touch that sight reaches further. It is like the reach of the eye to the Milky Way, whereas the hand can only reach a yard from one's nose. The power of apprehension by the subjective mind is, probably, under certain circumstances, unlimited. We call this God's omniscience, or omnipresence. In fact, may it not be that the subjective mind, once freed from its association with the mortal body, may take on, in a measure, the character of the Divine Mind?

In an earlier paper in this same series, we have referred to the fact that the reasonableness of the universe, the fact that we can even reason at all, or that no fact of the universe has ever been shown to be unreasonable, is the presumptive proof that the universe is the product of the mind. In other words that which we call the material universe, or even expanding the term to include the whole cosmos, is the creation of mind. It is subject for its very existence to Supermind. There are ever so many reasons, and their number is multiplying from day to day, for the assumption that that which we used to call matter, but of the solidity of which we become less and less assured from day to day, while it really is, yet in a very true sense is not the ultimate reality but the expression of that reality to which we may give the term mind; though mind is, perhaps, rather the life of something than the thing itself. In an attempt to get back of the word mind, we have the word spirit. In telepathy we have the interplay between two subjective minds, but the minds do not do the playing themselves. They are acting towards central personalities, or in behalf of them, to which the words self-consciousness will, perhaps, come as near as anything definitive can come. There are then acts which call into play forces with which we are unfamiliar. These acts may be acts of the subjective mind, acts of interplay between subjective minds, or acts of subjective mind affecting what we call matter.

I rather think that most of the miracles which are historic facts can tentatively be grouped in one or the other of these three groups, that however little we may understand about the process we have a tremendous amount of experiential evidence. We have seen the sick made well by some process of mental healing, conscious or subconscious. We know that matter is subject to objective mind and there becomes more and more reason for believing that it is even more subject to subjective mind. What was once superhuman is in constant process of becoming classed as human, as the race rises to apprehend it. Mind, itself, did not use to be an attribute of our race; now it is so. Once, any process of reasoning was miraculous; today it is a common human happening. I have watched my dog try to drink from a watering-can, but inasmuch as he was approaching the thing from the front, instead of the back, he could not reach the water because of the spout and handle. He gave it up and walked away. I called him back and directed his attention to the other side of the can, and by that act performed a miracle. It was a super-dog performance. That act was just as much of a mystery to the dog as the cure of the Gladarene maniac was to the Gadarenes.

The reader will, perhaps, say at this point: "Oh, yes, there may be something in it; but how about the feeding of the five thousand?" And my answer is, "Wait until we get there." It is possible, and quite likely, that a number of miraculous events as recorded even in the New Testament and certainly in the Old events which actually happened, have been given a miraculous turn in the process of their recording and transmission through the centuries. I think this is evident in some limited number of cases. Instead, however, of advising that we take for granted that everything we do not understand probably never happened, I would, as the result of mature experience combined with a large measure of well tested intuition, advise that we stand ready rather to believe than to dis-believe but I think we might safely trust the presumptions that we have already reached: that law is the thought of God and therefore not to be broken, and that miracle is not an infraction thereof, but the manifestation of law which has, as yet, eluded us. We may also feel quite free to use our God-given minds in a very careful examination as to the historicity of the account, leaning on the side of faith rather than on that of doubt, if we want to be on the right side.

Daniel, a major prophet of Israel, in this, one of the world's oldest sleuth stories, sets the precedent for more worldly detectives.

THE SEALED DOOR

Quoted from the Apocrypha* by the Golden Book Magazine.

And Daniel conversed with Cyrus, king of Persia, and was honored above all his friends. Now the Babylonians had an idol, called Bel, and there were spent upon him every day 12 great measures of fine flour, and 40 sheep, and six vessels of wine.

PATRONIZE OUR ADVERTISERS

And the king worshipped it: but Daniel worshipped his own God.

And the king said unto him: "Why dost not thou worship Bel?" Who answered: "Because I may not worship idols made with hands, but the living God." Then said the king unto him: "Thinkest thou not that Bel is a living god? seest thou not how much he eateth and drinketh every day?" Then Daniel smiled, and said: "O king, be not deceived. This it but clay within and brass without, and did never eat or drink any thing." So the king was wroth and called for his priests, and said unto them: "If ye tell me not who this is that devoureth these expenses, ye shall die. But if ye can certify me that Bel devoureth them, then Daniel shall die."

Now the priests of Bel were threescore and ten, beside their wives and children. And the king went with Daniel into the temple of Bel.

So Bel's priests said: "Lo, we go out; but thou, O king, set on the meat and the wine, and shut the door fast, and seal it with thine own signet. Tomorrow when thou comest in, if thou findest not that Bel hath eaten up all, we will suffer death; or else Daniel, that speaketh falsely against us." And they little regarded it; for under the table they had made a privy entrance, whereby they entered in continually, and consumed those things. So when they were gone forth, the king set meats before Bel. Now Daniel had commanded his servants to bring ashes, and those they strewed throughout all the temple in the presence of the king alone; then they went out, and sealed the door with the king's signet.

In the night came the priests with their wives and children, as they were wont to do, and did eat and drink up all. In the morning the king found the seals whole. And as soon as he opened the door, the king looked upon the table, and cried with a loud voice: "Great art thou, O Bel, and with thee is no deceit at all." Then laughed Daniel and the king held that he should not go in ,and said: "Behold now the pavement." And the king said: "I see the footsteps of men, women and children." And the king took the priests with their wives and children, who shewed him the privy doors, where they came in.. Therefore the king slew them, and delivered Bel into Daniel's power, who destroyed him and his temple.

Thank God for the dear ones safe today,
Safe at home on the happy shore,
Where the smile of the Father beams for aye,
And the shadow of pain shall fall no more.
Thank God for the hearts that have done with sin,
For the eye that shall never be blind with tears;
Thank God for the beautiful, entered in
To the perfect rest of the deathless years.
Thank God today for the pilgrim feet
Which have trodden the last of the toilsome way;
For the strong, for the frail, for the babes so sweet,
Who have left forever this crumbling clay,
Who have changed earth's trial and loss and moan
For the victor's palm and the voice of praise,
Who dwell in the light of the great white throne,
And join in the songs which the ransomed raise.
Thank God today for the hope sublime
Which fills our souls in the darkest hours;
Thank God that the transient cares of time
Are wreathed in the glory of fadeless flowers.
Thank God for the rift in the desolate grave;
'Tis the soldier's couch, not the captive's prison;
He hallowed its portal, who died to save,
And we write o'er its arch "The Lord is risen."

THE SEPULCHER IN THE GARDEN

What though the Flowers in Joseph's Garden grew
Of rarest perfume and of fairest hue,
That morn when Magdalene hastened through
Its fragrant, silent paths?
She caught no scent of budding almond tree;
Her eyes, tear-blinded still from Calvary,
Saw neither lily nor anemone--
Naught save the Sepulcher.
But when the Master whispered "Mary," lo!
The Tomb was hid; the Garden all a-blow;
And burst in bloom the Rose of Jericho-
From that day "Mary's Flower."

—John Finley

Is the great festival of the RESURRECTION of our Saviour Christ. The word EASTER is derived from the Saxon "oster", signifying "to rise."

This sacred festival has had existence from the earliest ages of the Church, and there can be little doubt of its apostolic authority. As all christians, on the preceding Friday, stood as it were, mournful by the cross of their Saviour, and the next day were overwhelmed with grief for His departure; the Church on this day, upon the first notice of His Resurrection from the grave, calls upon us, with a becoming and holy transport, to turn our heaviness into joy, to put off our sackcloth, and gird ourselves with gladness.

Among the primitive christians, this Queen of Christian feasts, as they called it, was so highly esteemed, that it was solemnized fifty days successively; but as devotion abated, this feast was shortened; the whole week, however, was for a long time observed as holy days, for the expression of their joy for our Lord's Resurrection. And our own church, though she appoints only particular services for the Monday and Tuesday following, which contain full EVIDENCE of our Saviour's Resurrection, yet makes provision for the solemn observation of the whole week, by appointing, in the Office of Communion, a preface suitable to the season for eight days together.

MY EASTER OFFERING

WHY, AND HOW MUCH, OUGHT I GIVE?

It would seem that one can scarcely read the EASTER STORY and not get the answer to that double barrelled question. In it we read of the supreme sacrifice of God. He so loved the world that He gave His only Son that we might have life eternal.

Certainly such a sacrifice of God answers most emphatically the first part of our question. There is not the least doubt as to WHY we ought to make an EASTER OFFERING. If God gave His most precious possession to obtain our Redemption, surely we must reciprocate as best we can by OFFERING in return all we can possibly give to show Him that though our lives may not always be in conformity with His will, nevertheless, we are truely grateful for His sacrifice of Love that we might live.

Offering Is An Act Of Worship

This is the real thought back of Offerings. The devotee presents that which he values most as a mark of his appreciation for the Act of God which has forever placed him beyond the menace of his soul enemies. It shows that out of his appreciation springs a love for God because He loved so as to be actuated to make a supreme sacrifice for us. Our Easter Offering, though but a hazy shadow of God's sacrifice, is our real answer to God's love. That is WHY we ought to give.

The Size Of Our Easter Offering

Suppose you were crossing a street when suddenly an auto dashed towards you at full speed. You saw it coming but was too paralyzed with fright to move. Just at the very moment death was upon you somebody dashed you aside out of harms way but was himself killed in trying to save you - would you ever forget him? Would anything you could do, any sacrifice you could make in behalf of his loved ones be too demanding? Would you not try to think of ways and means to prove your gratitude to the memory of your Saviour? The question of How Much or How Little you could give would not enter into the matter. You would be goaded by your finer feelings TO STRAIN YOUR RESOURCES TO

THE UTMOST BEFORE YOU WOULD BE SATISFIED THAT YOU HAD shown how deep your emotion of thanks was rooted in your heart.

Well, that illustrates our answer as to how much we ought to give as our OFFERING TO GOD ON EASTER DAY. If you see and appreciate the true significance of Easter to you personally - how Jesus Christ saved your life at the cost of His own, then the commonest impulse of gratitude for this Divine Act will prompt you - - TO STRAIN YOUR RESOURCES TO THE UTMOST to prove to God you do understand the true significance of our Blessed Lord's Sacrifice. Our EASTER OFFERING is the outward and visible sign of our gratitude to God and to His Son, Jesus Christ, for saving us from spiritual death in such a Divinely Heroic way.

THE MISSIONARY IMPULSE OF EASTER

St. Luke 24:34

The missionary impulse of Easter is to spread the Good News throughout the world that "The Lord is Risen Indeed". He has broken the power of sin and death and all who truly desire it are saved through His sacrifice. Ever since the great news of the RESURRECTION of JESUS CHRIST was broadcasted to a despairing world, there have been those who joyously snatch up the torch of the Gospel and carry the light in the still, dark corners of the world.

History is filled with the thrilling tales of these crusading heroes of the Cross. A few, out of the thousands, we tell here to illustrate the dramatic powers of the Gospel of Jesus Christ in lands where God is not truly known. And remember, as you read these True Tales the contents of your MITE CHESTS, the contents of your EASTER THANK OFFERING BOXES, the money you spend in buying things we have for sale for our EASTER LENTEN OFFERING, go to the support of our Missionaries, who, sacrificing ambition, family, friends, fortunes, have gone forth to carry high the torch of the Gospel to lead men out of darkness into the light of God's love.

May these few illustrations strengthen your determination to support to your utmost these Modern Crusaders of Christ.

A LIVING WITNESS

From the Missionary Review of the World.

When Bishop Weeks of Africa was traveling in England, a gentleman who was in the same railroad carriage with him began to attack him as a friend of Missions.

"What," said he, "are the missionaries doing abroad? We do not hear much about their movements. We pay them pretty well but we hear nothing from them. I suppose they are sitting down quietly and making themselves comfortable."

Beside the Bishop sat another traveler, as black as any of the natives of the Dark Continent, and himself an unmistakable negro. He quietly waited until the stranger had exhausted his tirade against Missions, then making a sign of silence to the Bishop, begged to be permitted to reply to the critic.

"Sir," he said, "allow me to present myself to you as a result of the labor of the missionaries whose work you have been depreciating."

Pointing to the Bishop, he continued, "I am an African, and this man is the means of my having become a christian, and of my own coming to this country in the capacity of a Christian minister."

The man who had assaulted the Christian Missions looked upon the black man beside him with a look of mingled embarrassment and amazement. He could not be mistaken; that there was a genuine, typical, African, flat nosed, thick lipped, with retreating forehead, and short, curly hair: yet that negro addressed him in elegant language of an educated and accomplished Englishman. He had all the refining power of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, and there were in the very tones of his voice and his whole manner, the unmistakable signs of a Christian gentleman.

The accuser of missions sank into a reverie. He had no more to say as an objector. The one man was both a compensation for and a vindication of Christian Missions. And soon he resumed the conversation but in a different tone; he began to talk upon missionary topics as an interested and an engrossed listener.

The black man was none other than Samuel Adjai Crowther, afterwards consecrated the first native Bishop of the Niger.

EVERY PENNY IN YOUR MITE CHEST GOES TOWARDS CONVERTING OTHERS TO THE CROSS.

THE LAND of CHERRY BLOSSOM

Have you ever looked at the dainty china, the decorated screens and fans, the beautiful paintings, cards and prints in a shop where Japanese goods are sold? On all these things Japanese artists have pictured Chrysanthemums, Cherry Blossoms, queer twisted trees, and snowy topped mountains shaped like great ice cream cones.

The Japs love all these things of out-of-doors so much that they put them in their pictures. Their land is the most beautiful country of the Orient. It is a chain of hundreds of islands, which, if all put together would be as large as California. Over fifty millions of people live in these islands.

The boys and girls who live in this beautiful land are polite and good natured. Their skin is yellow. Their eyes do not open as widely as ours, which makes them appear to be slanting.

Little Miss Yuki San wears her jet black hair long. Her older sister and her mother comb theirs in rolls on top of their heads. They are very careful not to muss their beautiful rolls and puffs at night. Yuki San wears a long kimono made of pretty figured cotton. It is folded over in front and held in place by a wide sash called an obi. Her very best kimono, which she wears in Cherry Blossom time, is of gaily colored silk.

She never wears a hat.

She wears a paper umbrella instead.

She wears funny little sandals. In rainy weather they are set upon two little strips of wood to keep them out of the mud.

Togo, Yuki San's brother, wears a kimono, too, but it is narrower than sister's. All the children in Japan dress up like grown folk.

If you stay for dinner you are impressed with the dignified, polite and stately way everybody behaves. The children make a low bow to their parents as they seat themselves at table. The housemaid kneels down and bows low as she brings in the food.

If you were to stay all night the maid would spread some pads and comforters on the floor for your bed and give you a small, wooden block for your pillow. You don't lay your head on this wooden pillow, you put the back of your neck in the little curve made for that purpose.

The Japanese are very clean about their person and their homes are immaculate.

They have very fine schools in Japan. And, what do you think! The Japanese boys and girls like to go to school! Did you ever hear of such funny children?

ON THE THIRD OF MARCH, which is the FEAST OF DOLLS, little Yuki San brings out all her big family of dolls. Then for two or three days she and her little friends have fun dressing and undressing the old and new dolls, giving tea parties and playing house.

IN MAY the boys have their MAY FESTIVAL. Then the boys get presents of flags and toys. They fly kites and play games. They fight sham battles with wooden swords and pretend they are defending their Emperor, who, by the way, is a very sacred person and is looked upon as almost a God.

Yes, Japan is a beautiful land. The Japanese are delightful socially, but they are not bothered over much with scruples and a sense of fair play. The GOLDEN RULE is not a standard measure with them. They do not trust each other even; because they are only too well aware of the lack of Christian ideals of love and righteousness among themselves. When Japan is thoroughly christianized she will be one of the greatest nations in the world.

Every penny in your MITE CHEST is helping to christianize that lovely country. A portion of the Sunday School Lenten Offering helps support the Christian Church Schools and Hospitals in Japan and making new converts to the Cross.

A CHINESE DRUG STORE

If the following Chinese Prescription is not enough to start you pouring pennies into your MITE CHESTS, then you boys and girls have no imagination.

The following Prescription was written by Dr. Cho Ping for a patient who had swallowed an overdose of opium. It took half a day to make it up.

2 couples of salted lizards, 2 male and 2 females
½ oz. Corea ginseng root
6 dired grasshoppers, 3 male and 3 female

½ oz. Lotos leaves	½ oz. devilfish claw
1 oz. Walnuts	½ oz. hartshorn
¼ oz. tail of rattlesnake	¼ oz. bird's claws
2 ozs. Black dates	¼ oz. dried ginger
½ oz. Elm tree bark	½ oz. old coffin nails

The whole is mixed with two quarts of water, and boiled down to one half the quantity. Then let the patient drink the mixture as quickly as possible.

Every boy and girl who does not have at least one whole dollar in the MITE CHEST ought to be given a great big tablespoonful of this awful prescription three times a day until CURED of his or her stinginess.

DON'T YOU THINK SO?

Funny Mistakes of Missionaries Speaking a Strange Language

FROM

Fifty Missionary Stories

A young missionary to China sent his servant out into the street to buy something. Late in the evening he came back with his wheelbarrow, looking tired and discouraged. When asked where he had been, he replied: "Mr. L. sent me out to get him six wives and I could not find one."

Shortly after her arrival in India, a young lady missionary was allowed to order breakfast for the household, in order to test her progress in the language. She intended to ask for fresh eggs, but used the wrong words, saying to the astonished cook, "You may bring us, this morning an old blind man, nicely boiled."

A lady missionary in Brazil requested her servant to bring her some little article that she needed at once. The servant steadfastly refused to obey her orders. With great indignation she went to her husband to lay complaint, only to learn to her dismay, that she had asked the man to kiss her.

Another missionary in China gave a pretty, little dinner party to her friends. At the proper time she ordered the servant to bring in some fruit. He objected; she insisted; he refused; she grew angry. Finally, he left the room, and soon returned with an air of supreme contempt, bringing his master's every-day trousers carefully arranged on a large platter.

ST. JOHN'S SERVICE CLUB

A New Parish Organization in Process of Formation

One would imagine that the Parish is over-organizd now.

Just why a new Society?

Well, in the first place, one old organization has been eliminated from our roster because we felt that its usefulness had waned almost to the vanishing point and its members, most of whom are among the most active in the Parish, were not organized in a way to do the work they are capable of doing. Hence it was easier and wiser to dissolve the society than to try and change it.

The ST. JOHN'S SERVICE CLUB starts with a clean slate. It has no background nor traditions. It is just new. It's object is different in every way from other parish clubs or organizations. It's intention is to simply interpret in acts the name it has assumed. It is to be the SERVICE CLUB OF ST. JOHN'S PARISH. It is not the desire of the Rector or its members to be just another social organization (which, by the way, is no disparagement of our social organizations) but it's object is to render CHRISTIAN SOCIAL SERVICE to the needy, the sick, and the unchurched of the parish.

The time is fast approaching when every church and parish will need just such a social group. The present method of serving the dependent, sick and aged of the community is fast breaking down. Local social service societies are realizing this fact and are making swift shifts to prevent the total dissolution of their set-ups. They are shifting to the ground of "Reconstruction" of the family; meaning that, instead of giving actual relief, their agents will act in an advisory sense and teach the family how to budget its income, if any; how to live in a sanitary state, how to acquire education, how to adopt certain social customs; leaving the Relief Work for the Federal, State and City Governments to do by means of taxation of the public.

A PARISH SOCIAL SERVICE CLUB will have its work cut out for it when that time comes. We are not at all sure of the permanency of the social service groups, because their proposed program seems to overlap what the parish is already doing in the way of "Reconstruction" on the one hand and, undoubtedly, the Government, on the other hand, is preparing to take over permanently the relief part of the work in the new set-ups of unemployment insurance, old age pensions, Mother's Relief Pensions, etc., etc.

The position of the Church in the Parish is going to be strategic in the near future. Already the Government agents are asking the Rector very pertinent questions concerning communicants who have applied for Widow's Pension, Blind Pension, Old Age Pension. Your Rector already has successfully recommended two applicants for the Widow's Pension,

As a matter of fact, THE DAY IS HERE FOR THE RECTOR OF THE PARISH TO REALIZE THAT HE HAS ARRIVED TO THE GRAVELY IMPORTANT POSITION OF ADVISOR AND COOPERATOR OF THE GOVERNMENT IN ITS MOST IMPORTANT WORK OF SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC ADJUSTMENT.

In the evolution of things this was inevitable, of course; the Church being the center of the community. The Rector being the close and intimate arbiter in things material and spiritual of each individual, practically from the cradle to the grave, would be the logical person for the State to select for necessary data on social problems in his Parish.

It is here where our SERVICE CLUB comes into action; composed of members of the Parish who, by association and experience, have an intimate knowledge of the economic, social and private lives of each other member, can act most effectually as an advisory group to the Rector and as an emergency relief corps to the unfortunate.

Our program is by no means set. We mean to go cautiously in everything, EVEN AS TO WHOM WE EXTEND THE INVITATION TO BE MEMBERS OF ST. JOHN'S SERVICE CLUB. We want people of comon sense, tact, sympathy and a broad tolerance. Our SERVICE CLUB is going to be a slow growing club numerically. We have a dozen now and that number will be augmented only by those who have a sincere desire to serve the unfortunate the way Jesus Christ served and who will express that desire by making application for membership into ST. JOHN'S SERVICE CLUB. We would rather have just a few real intelligent workers than a church full of drones.

If you are a worker and are interested in the welfare of your brother communicant, apply to the Rector and ask him to nominate you for membership into ST. JOHN'S SERVICE CLUB. If you are sincere he will welcome you joyously as one more laborer ready to serve.

Remember the name - ST. JOHN'S SERVICE CLUB - a Club of busy people doing a big thing.

THE NEWSPAPERS TOO

Liberty or Unrestrained License--Which?

Last month we entered our protest against the wicked and undignified methods of Trial by Jury with its accompanying ballyhoo and indecent publicity.

Now we would make certain disparaging observations as to the part our daily papers take in broadcasting in disgusting details the scandalous criminal conduct of the murderer, the seducer, the thief and the racketeer, as it is brought out in public trials in our criminal courts.

The modern daily paper plays a terrible part in this tragedy of errors in the manner they prepare, print, and purvey it to the gluttonous and depraved appetites of a perverted public.

By them a major criminal case is thoroughly exploited weeks in advance of the trial by Jury. This exploitation of the crime in all its horrid details down to the spot marked by "X" is not confined to the despised tabloid; but it has become the fashion of our own respectable household news journals to dig into the dirt and muck of filthy incidents to be sure they have got the dirtiest and filthiest gobs of all to print for the satisfaction of the evil minded, and for the mental and moral poison of the innocent and the decent reader.

The News Method

A suspect is caught in the net, given the third degree (oh yes, there is a third degree) makes damaging admissions and the hunt is on. Shrewd newshounds are unleashed by the press and charged to get the "dirt" on the suspect, which is published in preliminary articles along with characteristic picture poses of the "caught" and published as a character sketch of the man. His ancestry is bared unto the thirtieth and fortieth generation. If he played truant from school or if he went fishing on Sunday in his kid days, the newshound who smelt out the thing will open his eyes, arch his brows, point an accusing finger, strike a tragic pose and exclaim with wide open mouth, Ah-Ha!!!. And write an eight column article on the signs of total depravity even in the prisoner's youth which, of course, is sufficient evidence to prove that he must be the villian who stole that million on June 9th, 1929 at 2:30 A.M. In fact, everything that can damn the man crawls --yes, crawls--into the "daily". It is published in minutest detail and broadcasted throughout the land. Even the children of the family circle become so familiar with the "crook" before his trial that they call him by his nick name when they speak of him.

Yes, before the person is brought to trial the public mind has been so biased by the Prologue of the Journals that no two persons in the world could possibly be found who could render an un-pre-judged verdict in the case, but would find him guilty because he was made the popular "goat" by a sensational press.

And he may be guilty all the time at that.

That sentence is interpolated to assure you that my sympathies are not with the prisoner--for ten to one I have read newspapers too and am contaminated.

My real objection is in making any man stand trial twice--once in the public press and once in the court of law, publicly and before twelve good men and true, who have not the foggiest idea as to the application of the law to the case or the relevancy of the "proof" offered.

Another Why

Why not try to convince the daily press that it caters not altogether to scandal mongers and filth gulpers. That a high percentage of their patrons are decent, clean minded God loving "white" men who loathe picking up their morning and evening papers and see the terrible scum of sin on all its pages.

Why not ask the journals for cooperation, and in the name of Decency desist from this preliminary exploitation, and to build up their story on the resume prepared by the Court stenographer? It probably would not be so exciting but it would be more palatable to the general decent public.

But, you object, the case would lose all the kick that comes with the quarrels between attorneys, the intimate, sexy dialogue between lawyer and lawbreaker, the disagreements of experts and the sensation caused by the introduction of surprise evidence and surprise witnesses.

Yes, it would mean the omission of all that--all salacious and indecent dialogue between attorneys, witnesses and prisoner,all putrid love letters. It would cut out all bedroom scenes, all hotel rooms, all steamship cabins, all pullman berths, all love nests, and many other evil, exciting things, which corrupt the adult reader and rot the morals of our children.

With a blare of the trumpet we ride to hounds against every book of vulgarity that is exploited. Yet we snuffle, and slobber and squeal with the joy of hogs at the swill trough of scandal wherein is poured the putrid stuff our "dailies" ladel out by columns every time a particularly rotten case is being tried.

And, as we have said already, it is not only the Tabloid that is guilty. It is our own family journal we have taken fifty years that smears its pages with filth for our children to read.

If any journal were to take the salacious Court dialogues they report from fetid trials, dress them up with fictitious names and places, publish them in book form under any old title they might choose and try to sell them to the public, we would bet big odds that a week would not pass ere an aroused and indignant public would rise up to prosecute.

Yet the papers have license to print these dialogues in the raw and feed them to the minds and souls to our offspring.

Because, forsooth, it is part of a legal trial.

But, wouldn't we get ourselves in hot water were we to start a campaign to muzzle the press and make it delete the dialogue from all criminal cases.

We would soon be put in our place and told that it is the American way of doing it.

Well, all we have to say is -- AMERICA NEEDS TO CHANGE ITS WAYS -- back to its ancient decencies.

MOTHER'S REST

Her saintly face, so full of love—
Her smile, a light from Heaven—
Proclaimed that ere the evening fell
Her sould would reach its haven.

My children dear, a fond farewell,
Until we meet o'er there.
May God's protection e're be near—
Was her last loving prayer.

Her dear eyes towards Heaven turned.
Anangel, glistering white, was there.
He, stooping low, said come with me
To the MOTHER'S REST from care.

EASTER DAY AT ST. JOHN'S

We read and heard so much of the monster Easter demonstrations that we felt we ought to put St. John's celebration on the record of the great events of Easter Day.

We have served at the Altar of St. John's almost a quarter of a century, but this Easter marks the peak of the number of Communicants receiving the Sacraments. The day was grey and cloudy, but the faithful came to the services, notwithstanding.

The 6.30 Celebration was so well attended that we did not look for a large congregation at the second service at 11 o'clock. One can well appreciate our astonishment when we faced a congregation equally as big as the first.

The Choir and Altar were beautifully adorned with a profusion of Easter lilies and other white blooms.

The musical portion of the program was beautifully rendered by the Choir.

The one feature of the day which we appreciated above all others was the chance the day afforded to shake hands with scores of members we have not seen for years. If we were like other Rectors and had only the one job of looking after the parishioner's welfare, we would see much more of them. But our job at C. M., which is a very necessary job, naturally demands most of our time.

On Easter Day as we looked over those two record-breaking congregations, we could not help contrasting that large crowd of worshippers to the few members of years ago. How mightily God hath wrought in South Philadelphia. Other churches of different denominations caught our inspiration and now all are working under high spiritual pressure. South Philadelphia is becoming more and more an ideal spot in which to live. People are turning to God and forsaking forbidden paths of sin and pleasure. If our greatly augmented Easter congregations meant anything they meant our folk are becoming more God conscious.

What a great EASTER DAY that will be when the whole community, both old and young, will turn their faces toward the Temples of God to worship Him in spirit and in truth.

After a morning crammed with wonderful experiences we celebrated our Sunday School Easter Service. The church swarmed with children. The singing may have been off tune now and then, but it was rendered with a vigor and an enthusiasm which left no one in doubt as to the spirit behind the hymns.

The first thing we did after singing the Processional was to call the Roll of Classes and receive the Sunday School Lenten Offerings. After we had appointed our accountants and had cleared away the offering, we listened to the Intermediate Class recite one of the most remarkable descriptive poems of the Books of the Bible. We seriously doubt if there is another Intermediate Sunday School Department in the Diocese who could do it as well. All credit goes to Margaret Nelson, who is beyond any question of doubt, an extraordinary efficient teacher.

The Kindergarten followed with a sweet childish hymn which carried our memories back many years, when we too, as kiddies, were singing the same sweet refrain. Then followed the awarding of prizes for faithful attendance at Lenten Services. One hundred persons received prizes.

We gave the boys and girls of the Kindergarten and the Intermediate Department beautiful Easter Cards. And everybody, old and young, received a chocolate egg.

After the singing of many Easter hymns and doing a multitude of other things we called a long roll of sick, aged and shut-ins who could not attend Easter Service because of their infirmities. As each name was called somebody arose and volunteered to take an Easter plant from the Church to their home to show them we had not forgotten them on this joyous occasion.

Eventually the Committee reported the amount of our contributions to Missions was $936.14. This is the first time for years we have fallen under a $1,000.00. However, even at that we are far in advance of more prosperous parishes in our contributions to missions.

The Easter Offering of the Church of parochial purposes was $425.69, which is much larger than that of last year and we closed one of the happiest Easters of our life by singing, "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow."

CONFIRMATION

On the first Sunday after Trinity (June 23rd) Bishop Taitt will visit St. John's Parish to administer the sacred rite of Confirmation.

The Rector has arranged to meet the children of the Parish every Friday afternoon after school (4.00 P. M.) to give them Confirmation instruction, BEGINNING MAY 10TH.

The Sunday Evening Services will be so arranged that adult members of the Parish, desiring to be confirmed, will gain a comprehensive idea of the fundamentals of our faith.

At the same time these Sunday evening services will afford a fine excuse for our parish missionaries to invite non-church friends to Divine Service. Incidentally, the Rector is open to suggestions as to how to make the Sunday evening service more interesting and profitable.

The Choir's Aid

It is undeniably true that there is enthusiasm in numbers. The larger our congregation, the more animated the singing. And people like to sing. We have one group in our Parish who can be an invaluable auxiliary in the Sunday evening Confirmation preparation services. They are the members of the Choir who could step up the services 1000 per cent. if they would agree to put on musical programs each Sunday night. They could render the wonderful anthems they sang on Easter Day. They could add tremendous interest by preparing simple quartettes, duets and solos for the services. To my mind we have soloists in our choir who are equal to any found in any volunteer choir in the Diocese. It would be wonderful if they would be inspired to render God a service of singing. We often wonder if even the choir members realize the true spiritual value of singing. Many a sinner has been sung into a true desire to serve Jesus Christ.

If the Rector should have the co-operation of the Choir, as a Choir, or as individuals, in his Confirmation work, it would lighten his burden tremendously.

The Aid of the Brotherhood

For several years the Brotherhood of St. Andrew has done splendidly in bringing men, especially young men, into the Church of Jesus Christ. This year we hope they will be able to accomplish even more for the Master in this particular. Now that they hold brief meetings Sunday evenings before service, they have a fine opportunity to bring their friends to the Brotherhood meeting and later into the Church Service.

The Aid of the Woman's Auxiliary

This wonderful organization has a power to serve God through the Church which is extraordinarily effective. For more than a generation it has inspired His children to the performance of miracles for the growth of the Kingdom. The influence of the Church in our own parish is largely due to them. They have always been faithful, co-operative and cheerful aids to the Rector, especially along missionary endeavors. Naturally, he is confidently relying upon their aid to make our pre-confirmation efforts effective this year. And he is just as confident that EVERY MEMBER will support him in working earnestly to recruit candidates for our Confirmation Class and will bring them to Sunday evening service for instruction.

The Boys' Service Club

ONLY BOYS WOULD UNDERSTAND BOYS. And only boys know how to make a boy interested and venturesome enough to want to find out what it's all about. Challenge his curiosity and you arouse all sorts of emotions in him. If the basic principle inspires him with a sense of justness and fitnness of things, the average boy will respond with emphatic assent. This is a little piece of psychology the members of our BOYS CLUB can well apply to arouse the interest in and a desire to be confirmed.

We are trying to be honest with every member of every parochial organization as to why they are part of our church life. They are of a social nature for the express purpose of being a means toward attracting souls into the Kingdom of God. And they emphatically ARE NOT NON-RELIGIOUS SOCIAL UNITS OF THE PARISH. This misconception of the social side of church organizations has been the rock which has wrecked many such clubs in many parishes. Our Boys Club is a a club where boy activities are given the widest scope for boy pastimes. Yet it is PRIMARILY a parochial institution to increase the boys' interest in their character building. Consequently, under the fine leadership of Raymond Cressee, we SHOULD FIND the BOYS INTERESTED IN THE CONFIRMATION OF OTHER BOYS.

The world is aroused to the menace of Crime. Millions of men and women ar taking up law enforcement work. Billions of money are being invested in schemes to destroy the crime challenge. EVERY BOYS' ORGANIZATION IN THE COUNTRY IS BEING CONVERTED INTO A BATTALION TO FIGHT THE CALL TO CRIME. Boys and girls are being educated away from their hero worship of crooks to the conception that CRIME DOES NOT PAY. WE WANT OUR BOYS' CLUB to become a breeding place of manliness, courage and moral strength to look at crime squarely and intelligently and emphatically turn "thumbs down" on all crookedness. Also, to do their utmost to get new recruits who will be confirmed and JOIN THEM IN A FIGHT FOR A DECENT COMMUNITY FOR BOYS TO LIVE IN.

The Sunday School

This is the natural section in the Garden of God to go for material for transplanting into the Church. EVERY SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER is in a position to serve God in a beautifully effective way. The boy or girl gets interested in the teacher first. If he or she takes care to keep the class interested thus, it is only a short and a natural step into the kingdom of God. We have no doubt that class after class of thousands of Sunday Schools will be stretching forth welcoming hands as they smilingly welcome their faithful teacher into God's kingdom.

OH, TEACHERS OF OUR SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASSES! I AM SURE THAT GOD HAS A SPECIAL BLESSING FOR YOU. YOUR WORK IS SO BEAUTIFULLY LIKE THE SACRIFICING LABORS OF THE MASTER HIMSELF.

Whatever you do, don't grow weary in following in His steps. May this Confirmation show that you are still actively engaged in serving our Heavenly Father, and that you have succeeded in bringing others in His Holy Church!

"OLD ENOUGH— GOOD ENOUGH"

"Why not let your child be confirmed this year?"

"He is too young, he would not know the meaning of it."

Every year this same old question and answer comes up between the Rector and some parents in the Parish.

Every year the Rector tries to assure them that as a priest of God it is HIS particular duty to decide the question as to when a child is "old enough."

Just how and where parents get the idea that a certain definite period in life a child becomes "old enough" to be confirmed is a profound mystery.

It is very similar to those unconfirmed adults who answer the same question by stating, "they are not good enough."

The vital point is not whether a prospective confirmation candidate is either "old enough" or "good enough." It is rather whether you mean to perform an act of spiritual responsibility to God in assuming your Baptismal vows by "Remembering thy Creator in the days of thy youth." If, for any reason, you have let youth slip by with this duty unfulfilled, it then becomes your imperative obligation to assume your moral and spiritual duties to God and your fellows without delay.

The Question of Age Does Not Enter Into the Matter

The writer knows many a child eight years of age who has a keen sense of the difference between right and wrong. Many of our most conscientious young men and women in St. John's Parish were confirmed under the age of eight.

On the other hand, the writer knows scores of evil old reprobates over the age of sixty who apparently have not the slightest moral or spiritual conceptions.

Age has nothing to do with one's fitness for Confirmation. The only true gauge is found in the Baptismal Office in the Question put to the Godparents, "Wilt thou take heed that this child, so soon as sufficiently instructed, be brought to the Bishop to be confirmed by him?"

In other words—when the Priest of the Parish has examined the child and is satisfied he is "sufficiently instructed," the child ought to be presented for Confirmation without delay. He, the Priest, the spiritual adviser and teacher, is the only one in the Parish upon whom rests the responsibility of this most serious step.

It is very true that the parent, in his intimate family relations with the child, sees more of the child and his reactions to moral subjects than does the priest. Whether he does or does not is quite immaterial. The child may be bad and difficult to manage, but that is no excuse why the godparents should hesitate to present him for Confirmation. "If he has been sufficiently instructed," then he ought to be put in the way of applying that instruction to his daily conduct. Both parents and godparents must make him realize his Christian obligations, whether he is eight years old or twelve years old.

The same argument is applicable to the unconfirmed adult who says "he is not good enough to be confirmed." How good must a man be to be "good enough?" If an adult, some fine day, should say in reply to my question—that he was not bad enough to be confirmed, he would have me stumped. I have often wondered how bad one ought to be to realize how badly he needed conversion and confirmation. That question is legitimate.

Every parent and godparent take serious risk in delaying the Confirmation of the child. I have seen terrible examples of such folly: Right in the Parish of St. John the Evangelist.

Every adult takes equally serious personal risks, in putting off his confirmation to a day when he will be "good enough" to be confirmed. Every year I have stood before the casket of many a man, many a woman, who never got "good enough." Sometimes I have wondered whether they were now "good enough" to enter into the Kingdom of God, after resisting His Holy Spirit all their lives.

I don't know much about the Infinite Love of God or its ramifications. Perhaps even beyond the veil of death there is still hope for those who deliberately denied their birthright to become SONS OF GOD by refusing to confirm their allegiance to Him. And I wonder if they will ever reach the state of spiritual exaltation where they can say with conviction, "I am good enough."

Of one thing I am certain. I personally never have been conscious of being "good enough." I never, even after my confirmation, have lived one whole day without the plea in my heart, "God be merciful to me a sinner." Fortunate is the man who is honestly conscious of his worthiness.

MODERN MAN AND RECREATION

There are 365 days in the year; 8 hours a day, or one-third of the time I sleep; therefore, I must save 122 days for sleep. That leaves me 243 for work. I ought to play 8 hours a day, or a third of the time—another 122 days. Now I have 121 days left for work. Then there are 52 Sundays, on which no man should work. Also, in these times a working man is entitled to a half day off on Saturday, which equals 26 more days in the year. After subtracting these I shall have 43 days left for work. I get an hour for lunch every day. That amounts to 28 days, which leaves me 15 days of the 365 for work. Now every honest, self-respecting, hard-working citizen ought to have two weeks' vacation and surely 14 days isn't any too much for that annual pleasure. That leaves one day out of 365 for work. And as we must observe as a national holiday "Labor Day," we have very little time left to make a living.

Something ought to be done about this.

A CHURCH MEMBER EXPLAINS

Wilbur LaRoe, Jr.

You see, God, it is like this: We could attend church much more faithfully if your day just came at some other time. You have chosen a day that comes at the end of a hard week, when we are all tired out. Not only that, but it is the day following Saturday night. Saturday evening is the one time when we feel that we should enjoy ourselves, so we go to the movies or a party, and often it is after midnight when we reach home. It is almost impossible to get up on Sunday morning. You have chosen the very day on which we want to sleep late. In fact, the children are often late to Sunday School because it is difficult for us to get up early enough. It is usually after ten o'clock before the dishes are done, and then it is time to think about the Sunday dinner, not to mention the Sunday paper. I mean no disrespect and do not claim that my judgment equals yours, but you must realize that you have picked out the very day on which the morning paper takes the longest time to read thoroughly, and also the day on which we have the biggest dinner of the week. Not only that, but you have fixed the hour for the church service at the very time when we must be preparing the dinner.

Then, too, we must think of John. He is cooped up in an office all the week, and Sunday morning is the only time he has to tinker with the car. There is not time in the whole week that is quite so good as Sunday morning for cleaning a car and for doing odd jobs around the house. When John gets into his old clothes and gets his hands all greasy, you can hardly expect him to think about going to church. If you did not want him to tinker with a car, you should not have let him get one. Then there are leaves to be raked into piles and burned, and nearly everybody does that on Sunday morning, usually during the church hour.

I am telling you these things because I want you to see our viewpoint and that it is not our fault that we are not able to get to church on Sunday morning. We should like to go, and we know that we should go, but it must be clear that the real reason we cannot go is because you have chosen the wrong day. If you will select any day other than Sunday, we shall be glad to give the matter further consideration.

A Record of Service

Our long record of service to the people of this community is one of our most precious assets.

To our patrons it is a guarantee of experience and reliability, for these are qualities which time alone can give. We have enjoyed the confidence of two generations of friends and neighbors.

BROTHERS ALL

Under the toiler's grimy shirt,
Under the sweat and the grease and dirt,
Under the rough outside you view
Is a man who thinks and feels as you.
Go talk with him;
Go walk with him;
Sit down with him by a running stream,
Away from the things that are hissing steam,
Away from his bench,
His hammer and wrench,
And the grind of need,
And the sordid deed,
And this you'll find
As he bares his mind;
In the things which count when this life is through
He's as tender and big and good as you.

Edgar A. Guest

CO-OPERATION

COOPERATION means working together for the common good. More can always be accomplished by a group of people working together than can be done through the efforts of one person, no matter how strong that person may be. It is like twisting threads together. A child can easily snap a single thread, but if you twist or plait several threads together a strong man cannot break them. Believe it or not, but the cables which hold the great Delaware River Bridge in its place are just copper wire strands multiplied many times. Also, believe it or not, the highest mountain in the world, and all other mountains for that matter, is composed of invisible mites of matter called electrons, many hundreds of which can be carried about upon the head of a pin. Yet, when these electrons cooperate by unimaginable quintillions, they build a mighty wall of granite which divides the continent.

The Power of Co-operation

COOPERATION ALWAYS MEANS SUCCESS. No plan nor venture can possibly fail when you and I are working in harmony towards a given end or for a given purpose. There never was and never will be anything unsurmountable when cooperation is brought into operation.

Church Co-operation

That Church which has the most cooperative members is the most successful and liveliest body. I would rather have a church with just a small membership, where all the members are cooperative than have a church with a large membership where THE COMMUNICANTS REFUSE TO COOPERATE. The small cooperative body will accomplish a hundredfold more for the community than the big uncooperative body will ever accomplish.

What Does Church Co-operation Mean?

Suppose we itemize certain points of cooperation which mean strength to the Parish. Let us first of all stop thinking that THE CHURCH IS A ONE MAN AFFAIR and the Rector is "IT". Let us think of ourselves in the terms of ELECTRONS, too small to be seen, too weak to be strong; but who, by contacting with all the other spiritual electrons of the Parish, can as a church body be as mighty as the mountain and as solid and lasting as eternity.

Co-operation in Worship

First, there is the matter of cooperation in worship. A few days ago somebody made the remark to me it is not really necessary to go to church to worship. Any person can worship much better out in the open, among the trees and flowers, with the birds for a choir and the sun bathing everything in a golden glory.

All of which is very poetic and most sentimental; but is not true. I still believe Jesus Christ is right in commanding us to get together in His Church WHICH HE FOUNDED FOR THE PURPOSE OF WORSHIP. In so doing He showed He was a much greater psychologist than the non-cooperating sentimentalist who insists he knows more about worship than Jesus Himself. IF JESUS CHRIST DID NOT MEAN FOR CHRISTIANS TO WORSHIP IN CHURCHES, WITH THEIR ATMOSPHERE AND FURNISHINGS PROVOCATIVE TO WORSHIP, HE WOULD NOT HAVE FOUNDED THE CHURCH.

Co-operation in Offerings

Second, there can be no cooperation in worship

if there is not cooperation in offering. Worship and Offering cannot be separated. You cannot contend that you can worship God, either in His Holy Temple, in the corridors of outside nature or in your own home, unless your worship is accompanied with a dedication of something of value on the Altar of your Faith. GOD WILL NOT ACCEPT WORSHIP WITHOUT AN OFFERING. AND YOU CANNOT POSSIBLY COOPERATE WITH YOUR BROTHER IN WORSHIP IF YOU DO NOT JOIN HIM IN HIS ACT OF OFFERING.

The Christian Church is too full of folk who call themselves Christians but who never dream of offering anything they possess to God. THEY ARE WORSE THAN THE MOST BENIGHTED HEATHEN WHO KNOWS NOT GOD. He at least has sense enough to realize, even in his imperfect worship, that an offering is due his God, whoever he might be. True, his may be an offering to placate the God's anger and buy his immunity but, IT HAS THE VIRTUE OF RECOGNIZING THAT THE GOD HE WORSHIPS IS GREATER THAN HE, AND IN THE HOLLOW OF HIS HANDS ARE THE DESTINIES OF HIS WORSHIPPERS. The non-sacrificing "Christian" HAS NO SUCH FINE CONCEPTION OF WORSHIP.

Co-operation in Missionary Effort

One of the finest illustrations of COOPERATION IN MISSIONARY EFFORT and its amazing results is found right here in St. John's Parish. Our beloved Parish Visitor was stricken; it was necessary for her to go to the hospital for an operation. She was unavoidably absent for several weeks. It happened to be in the pre-confirmation period when her services meant everything in the way of a good size class. We were greatly worried over the situation, which just shows how weak is our faith. For, even before our Parish Visitor had been admitted into the hospital, God raised up two deeply consecrated women from among us, who, being inspired with a tender love for God and a pure desire to cooperate with Him for the spread of His Kingdom in Southwark, OFFERED EVERY MINUTE OF THEIR SPARE TIME AND GAVE ALL THEIR ENERGY in helping the Rector build up the class of '35. HAD THEY NOT OFFERED THEIR LIVES AND TIME SO SPLENDIDLY our Confirmation Class and our work for relief of the poor this winter would have been nil. IF THE WHOLE PARISH COOPERATED TO THE SAME EXTENT a mighty revival would have swept from one end of Southwark to the other and shouting multitudes would have been crowding through the Portals of St. John's Church to praise and worship Him who had opened their blind eyes of sin to the glory of a life with Him.

The Only Check to Our Growth

The only check to the growth of St. John's Parish is our lack of cooperating with God and with each other in building up His Kingdom where He has placed us. When we cure ourselves of short-sightedness and the cramp of selfishness, we will walk wide eyed and strong into bigger things. Our Church will be the most popular, the most widely attended, the wealthiest and the most spiritual of them all.

"GOD WILL BE IN THE MIDST OF HER; SHE SHALL NOT BE MOVED." Psalms 46:5.

COLLEGE VERSUS RELIGION

By Wm. H. Jefferys, Jr.

Your dear Rector asked me several months ago to write something for "The Broadcaster." I could find, however, no subject on which I had the right to speak until a chance remark of my Father's produced an idea. He said that some of you, my friends, had been surprised that a boy like myself could go to a University like Harvard and retain his Christian faith. So that my message may carry some strength, I am going to tell you that I did not merely keep my old faith, but that it grew to such strength that I have chosen to enter the Ministry of the Church.

It has been said that a person whose faith cannot stand up under the fire of modern thought has not a faith that was worth keeping anyway. I feel beyond this, that such a person has no very clear understanding of the meaning of modern scientific thought. It has long been supposed that science and religion are opposed, and much has been said about the fight between them. There is no such fight. Naturally superstition, magic, and dogma cannot be reconciled with science, but they are the product of the imagination and not of the mind. Real religion, that is Christianity as Christ taught it, not only does not oppose science, but, and this is tremendously important, without such a religion, the whole structure of science itself has no meaning, is inexplicable.

It would take a whole book to show the facts upon which I have drawn for this statement. I will merely hint at them by asking a few questions. How is the universe so rational, so mathematically perfect, if a Mind did not make it so? Whence comes the driving purpose behind evolution? Where is the cause of life on this earth? Life had to have a beginning way back in prehistoric times. Science has always said that you cannot produce something from nothing. There must be a cause for life, and what more logical cause than an Omnipotent Creating Life; that Life which we call God. To go one step further back, whence did the universe itself with all its energy and matter, its planets and stars, its amazing mathematical perfection come? Science tells us that the universe is running down. That implies that it must once have been wound up, its matter and energy must once have been concentrated in one place. You and I know that in this world mechanical things like clocks do not wind themselves up. Some thinking mind has to come along and wind them up. Is it not the most rational thing to expect that there must have been a Mind to wind up that great machine, the universe?

Perhaps, my friends, you can have some idea from this, why I maintain that if one has a university education dealing in these subjects, and if one attains any sort of grasp of the underlying meaning and implications of the subjects studied, one cannot help seeking an explanation for things. One realizes that there is some great Driving Force behind everything in the universe, and if one is a Christian, one knows that this Force is God.

OUR ANNIVERSARY—OUR CONFIRMATION

Sunday, June the 23, was a glorious day!

It was cloudless, a fine air was stirring and the temperature was just right.

But the weather, ideal as it was, was just the ideal setting for the wonderful experiences of the day. As you know already it was the 23rd Anniversary of our charge of St. John's Parish.

When we arrived in the morning we found six long tables already spread for the Parish Dinner. Going into the kitchen we found a group of women under the able leadership of Mrs. Frank Pine, buzzing around like busy bees making all sorts of things stew and bubble and roast and bake and sizzle like any big kitchen of a big hotel. The sight was most assuring. We could begin our Anniversary without any apprehension as to where the next meal was coming from.

Everybody was on his toes. The spirit of the day was in the air. Even the Choir was more than usually alive. And that is saying a lot. What we mean is—from the first note of the Processional to the last Amen of the Recessional, that Choir was engaged in "putting across" the best service it ever rendered. Everybody was enthusiastic over its splendid work.

Then, too, there was a record-breaking congregation. Folks from far and near, over and beyond, came back to the old home church to join in the Celebration. How some of the "old timers" did gasp when they saw all the changes in the church! Many of them had not been "home" for almost ten years and they were almost "balled over" when they saw the renovations of the Sunday School rooms, the halls and the church. Many were the expressions of wonder and delight over the change in the Chancel. And all stood mute in the Parish House. It was to them as though Aladdin had rubbed his lamp and ordered its "Jin" to build it.

But we are hours ahead of our story. The Anniversary was started with the Celebration of the Holy Communion amid a perfect flower garden of palms and fragrant blooms. The service was well attended and everybody seemed to be immersed in the spirit of the day. After the morning service the Parish Dinner was served in the Sunday School room and there was not one vacant place at any of those six long tables when Grace was said. There's no use saying anything about the dinner itself. It was just the usual delicious and well-cooked meal that only Mrs. Pine knows how to serve.

At 2.30 P. M., we had our usual annual Mass Meeting in the Church. Mr. William L. Dewees was the guest speaker and he gave a very interesting account of his former work among the mountain whites of the South. The Church was filled with hundreds of squirming kids who got a big "kick" out of everything going on.

At 4.00 P. M., we sent folks out on parish visits to the shut-in church members. The flowers brought to the church for distribution were both beautiful and abundant. And, although our shut-ins could not be present with us, they were made to feel that they had not been forgotten.

Then at 5.00 P. M., to the tick of the clock, supper was served, and were we hungry! Everybody was clamoring for "seconds" even to the ice cream and cake. We simply could not get enough. How the kitchen staff ever succeeded in satisfying the ravening appetites of that big crowd is beyond our understanding.

Then Came 8 o'Clock and Bishop Taitt

You know, we are never quite sure of the size of our Confirmation Class until the whistle blows, so to speak. This year was no exception. Even after the "whistle blew" it was five minutes late in "blowing," by the way. By that we mean after the service had actually started, several candidates who had been detained for various reasons came in and took their places in the class. After the check off, following the Confirmation Service, we found that we had presented 60 CANDIDATES. A finer class of men and women, girls and boys never stood before our Bishop in old St. John's.

Was the Bishop pleased? You ask him!

The names of the candidates confirmed are published in this issue of the Broadcaster.

Thus old St. John's Church moves gloriously on to its TWENTY-FOURTH year of service to the good people of old Southwark.

Let us renew our efforts and increase our co-operation that this next year will, with the help and Grace of God, be even a greater success. "IT WAS THE MOST PERFECT ANNIVERSARY DAY OF THE LAST TWO OR THREE YEARS" is the remark just made by a member.

And That Is Just What It Was

Now, Sons and Daughters of old St. John's, let's cooperate and show the Diocese of Pennsylvania what a bunch of 510 "downtowners" can do for the Church when they mean it. Yours is the finest parish in Philadelphia. Let's make it finer. Just take off your coat, roll up your sleeves and dig!

Our Battle Cry For 1935-36 Is—
"If God Be For Us, Who Can Be Against Us?"
God's Blessing With You

ST. JOHN'S 1935 CONFIRMATION CLASS

We take pleasure in presenting to you the newly confirmed members of old St. John's. We want you to be sure to extend to them the right hand of fellowship and sincere Christian brotherhood. And we ask each member of the Class to make an effort to become acquainted with the older members of our Parish. We are a sociable folk and like to meet and welcome new members. If you don't know the persons you meet in church just walk up to him (her) and say, "Hello, what's your name?" And make him (her) shake hands.

The best way to get the greatest pleasure out of your new church relations is to be on the job constantly and MAKE YOUR PRESENCE FELT. Don't hang back and be shy—you are now one of the family. So just walk right in, slam the door, chuck your hat and coat on the piano, pull out a chair, sit down and shout, hello folks! Poke your nose into all the gossip of the family. Find out who's sick; who's hungry; who's out of a job. Then get in on the family worry and do your everlasting best to right the individual wrongs of the family of St. John's. Maybe you will find some member who is discouraged or who has lost a relative. Give him a word of comfort and a pat on the back. Tell him you, his brother (sister) will be standing around if needed. Hunt up one of the Finance Committee and tell him you WANT A PACKAGE OF CHURCH ENVELOPES, so you can make your weekly offering on the Altar and do your bit towards supporting the Church of Jesus Christ. The names of the Finance Committee are: Joseph Leach, chairman; George Silbert, William MacVaugh, John Patterson and Vernon Matthews.

Ask to be given something to do—even if it is just visiting our sick and shut-in members. You are always thrice welcome to the homes of such unfortunates. Take them a glass of jelly now and then; also a few flowers. Send them cards—especially on their birthday, Christmas, Easter or any old time it suits you. Get a doctor for the sick if they have none. Encourage new mothers to get their babies christened. Read the Bible and pray with the sick. Write letters for them. If in a hospital, visit them. Pick out one poor family in the parish and give them your constant care. Get your friends interested in them. Help them in trouble. Get them in church and their children in Sunday School. Get at least three candidates for next year's Confirmation Class. Give the Rector the names and addresses of all the persons you know who are not church members. Tell him of folks you know who are not baptized.

In other words, just remember you are now one of the family of busy workers and we are tickled to death to have your help.

And now Folks of the Parish of Old St. John's, let me introduce our newly confirmed brothers and sisters.

THE RECTOR'S "SURPRISE" PARTY

Then Mrs. P. said, "Oh, that won't make any difference. What cake we have left over from our Sunday Parish supper we can use for the Rector's surp....or...ahem...say, Martha, how's Vernon?"

For a minute the Rector looked dumb, then realizing the pussie leaped out of the bag when somebody wasn't thinking, he laughed and laughed and laughed.

The Brute! ! !

And was Mrs. P's face red?

Really, it's getting to be a tax upon the ability of even so high a class pretender as our Rector to try year after year to be surprised around Anniversary time. Just when he is sure the family is about to "put one over" somebody "spills the beans" and there you are. Oh well, our "Surprise Party" was a big success anyway. We had a room jam full of the folk we love. Lots of our hard workers were away for various causes, but had they come they would have been forced to stand outside and look in the windows. It was fortunate the weather man was good to us and cooled the atmosphere for the evening. With such a crowd present we would have smothered.

One of the big features of the evening was Brother George Cressee "leading the singing." He so fascinated the singers with the wave of his arms, the dance of his feet and the wiggle of his toes, that one had to sing Jazz time to keep up with the multitudinous contortions of his young and supple body. If he can do such stunts now what will he do when he gets his second crop of molars? Yes sir, Brother George made the years slip back to "when you and I were young, Maggie."

It was just a dandy informal family party, with the Rector's wife stealing the show. You should have seen her staggering down the church steps lugging a barrel of blossoms, a five-pound box of mixed candies, a box of kid gloves and several other anniversary gifts too numerous to mention—to say nothing of all the ice cream, lemonade and cakes consumed. Anyway, the family made her make a speech every time she got something.

Oh no, they didn't quite forget the surprisee. He was just beginning to get a little sore, maybe, when the better half's score was running up so surprisingly. But did we get ours finally? I should say we did!

Vernon stood up—no he was standing up already. He said he wasn't going to make a speech, then he proceeded to make one. But we forgive him his little lapse from the truth, for at the end of his harangue he handed us a tiny little envelope with a great big check of $200.00 in it.

After that we felt pretty good and we, too, made a speech. Then we went to the kitchen and everybody ate ice cream and cake and drank lemonade.

You should have been there and seen "Our Cousin from Sweden."

Yes, we've got talent.

Even the Rainbow Girls in mixed colors were there with songs of Auld Lang Syne.

And the Irish Lassies gave us a look into the future of Old St. John's.

Yes, we know we are all mixed up writing this, but who wouldn't be after such a night?

DON'T YOU TAKE THINGS SERIOUSLY?

We have been trying to impress upon you that the finances of St. John's Parish are in a precarious condition. Instead of arousing you to your sense of responsibility in the matter, you appear to be even less interested until now matters have reached such a critical state that you positively must take things seriously and pay what you owe the church that your church may pay what it owes its creditors.

It Is Your Moral Responsibility

To keep your church envelopes paid up in full, not only and chiefly because it represents YOUR OFFERING TO GOD, but also because upon you, as part owner and active member of the Church Corporation, rests the solvency of our church. YOU ARE NOT ASKED TO CONTRIBUTE IMPOSSIBLE SUMS towards its support but you are expected to contribute your just share towards its upkeep.

500 Communicants received their Easter Communion this year. Ninety-five per cent. of that number are delinquent in their Church Envelope Payments. This is a state of affairs that should cover us with shame. We cannot claim that it is entirely due to unemployment because over 60 per cent. of those of the parish who were formerly out of work have jobs now on at least part time. Many others still unemployed are receiving support from other sources. And, although we do not expect them to divide their "dole" with the church, we do mean to state that they are not charges upon their families; consequently, their families have at least enough now to "MAKE THEIR OFFERINGS UNTO THE LORD."

$1500.00

is the debt of delinquent church envelope holders to the church. Your share of this debt is according to the number of unpaid Church Envelopes you are holding back. If you, individually, will play fair and pay your share of this $1500.00 due the church, the church will soon work its way out of its financial embarrassment.

You Will Never Feel Like a Christian

until your Offering Unto The Lord is satisfactorily adjusted with the Lord. This article may "make you mad." I hope it does. You have been altogether too indifferent too long as it is. Perhaps after getting good and "mad" the reaction might be to search around and see if our Rector had any real cause to print such an awful tirade as this. Then it may suddenly dawn upon you that you have acted the thoughtless part and that after all the Church has a just claim against you.

At least we are not apologizing for writing these harsh words to you. And don't try to pretend you are scandalized that your Rector should write such things knowing how many poor there are in the parish who can pay nothing, because the real poor of the Parish know already that the Rector is their friend and sympathizer and that not one word of this is meant for any poor person in the Parish.

Now Be Good and Pay Up

In the near future you will get an official statement of your account with the Church as to how many Church Envelopes you have paid and how many you owe. AND REMEMBER, those overdue envelopes represent YOUR part of the debt of $1500 due the church.

DISTINGUISHED MEMBERS

Perhaps the most difficult feature of parochial work is finances. This is not due at all to inability to support the Church and pay its current expenses; but it is due almost entirely to the carelessness and thoughtlessness of our communicants. How to overcome this peculiar attitude of mind has caused and is causing many a rector and vestry a chronic headache. Each and all are figuratively wringing their hands and wailing for an idea; said idea to act as a parochial T. N. T. and blow up and smash forever this granite indifference towards our financial worries.

We have just thought of a way of arousing your curiosity and interest. It starts with a question. Who really does pay regularly his Church Envelopes? Now the only way we can satisfy our curiosity is to see a list of names of Communicants who really appear upon the Warden's books as paid to date.

We propose, therefore, to start now and publish in the Broadcaster ONCE EVERY QUARTER the names of all communicants who are 100 per cent. paid up. In order to be fair to all we will make an announcement two weeks in advance that we are ready to publish the list and all who want to get their names published as DISTINGUISHED MEMBERS OF ST. JOHN'S PARISH have two weeks more to catch up and pay their overdue envelopes.

This list will be a PERMANENT feature. Every quarter throughout the year it will appear. Names that appear in one quarter will appear regularly, PROVIDED the 100 per cent. average is maintained. If a member becomes careless and fails to keep up his payments, his name will temporarily drop out, but will be restored in the next quarter IF ALL BACK ENVELOPES ARE PAID UP IN THE MEANTIME.

Also, all members of the parish can win membership among the DISTINGUISHED MEMBERS by obtaining a package of Church Envelopes and keeping them paid up.

A member is not forced to pledge more than he can conveniently offer unto the Lord. Neither is a member expected to pay the VERY LEAST POSSIBLE AMOUNT just to get his name on the DISTINGUISHED MEMBERS LIST.

The Finance Committee will use its own discretion as to who is imposing upon the Parish in an attempt to appear among our distinguished company by the ancient means of Annaniah and Saphira, who died because they lied about their OFFERINGS unto the Lord. The first set-up of our DISTINGUISHED MEMBERS is attached to this explanation. Next quarter we hope to see lots of new names added to our MEMBERSHIP OF HONOR.

Remember all you need do to get your name recorded is to have EVERY CHURCH ENVELOPE PAID UP TO DATE.

The Distinguished Members Roll

The names appearing below are of Communicants who have paid in every Church Envelope due to the end of the last quarter of the year.

A corrected list will appear at the end of each quarter. If your name does not appear here, be sure it appears next quarter.

IMPORTANT!

Please remember this list IS ONLY TO MAY 26TH. Church Envelopes received since then will be credited on your next Quarterly Report.

BROADCASTING FROM S. T. J. C.

HAPPY VACATION TO YOU

Be sure all your debts are paid before you begin to spend for fun. And be sure you bring your Church Envelopes up to date. They are God's offerings, therefore must not be hypothecated.

Judging from the testimony of the Alms Basin Christianity to many is "not worth a cent."

The Rector gratefully acknowledges the fine spirit of smiling service rendered by Carrie Strang and Miss Anna Schabacker during the illness of our Parish Visitor Hannah Nuttall. It was beautiful to see how they "stood by" even after her return. The success and size of our '35 Confirmation Class were largely due to their cheerful and untiring efforts.

SMILING SERVICE IS DOUBLE SERVICE

Only three Veterans were with us, Sunday, May 27, to take part in the Annual Memorial service.

What a wonderful time we had on Sunday, June 23. It was the most enjoyable Anniversary we have celebrated for years.

* * * * * *

It seems we never will reach the end of Candidates for Confirmation. In our class for the year were 60 candidates.

* * * * * *

The Confirmation Class was equally divided between children of school age and adults. We never had a finer class of men and women.

* * * * * *

Thanks are due to the choir girls who took time out to serve a hungry parish such a delicious dinner and supper. They can serve as well as sing. And do both equally well.

* * * * *

Did you notice the long list of Christenings published in this issue? And did you notice the names of some prominent St. John young couples who proudly presented their offspring to the Lord?

* * * *

Do you hold out your church envelope on the Sunday you stay away from church to go on a picnic or have a good time? Does not your conscience hurt you in the least for so flagrant an insult to God?

* * * *

The Rector: "Well Bishop, tonight's Confirmation winds up another year's work."

The Bishop: "Well Rector, tonight begins another year's work."

Oh my! What's the use!!

* * * *

If that's the way the Bishop feels about it there is nothing to do but start now and hunt more candidates for next year's class. So, let's go to it.

* * * *

The Rector's Big Anniversary Surprise Party arrived as per schedule—so did the Rector—Somehow the surprise got stalled in transit. But what a ripping good time we had anyway.

* * * * *

We are still wondering if Mrs. Pine used the cake left over from Sunday supper for our Surprise Party. If you want to know why we wonder, ask Mrs. Pine. It's the joke of the summer.

* * * * *

What an astonishing system—Some "Christians" "dock" God's envelopes when they stay away from worship. That's new! Try that on your employer. Everytime you take a day off for baseball or a shore trip charge it up against the boss. Then see what happens.

* * * *

If every church-goer were to ring up his contribution on a cash register mounted on the pulpit church finance would doubtless attain to a healthier condition.

* * * *

Molly came home from her first visit to Sunday school carrying a small bag of chocolates.

"Why, Molly, where did you get the chocolates?" asked her mother.

Molly looked up in surprise.

"I bought them with the nickel you gave me," she said. "The minister met me at the door and got me in for nothing." —Pelican

* * * *

HELEN ASHMAN is entitled to HONOR-

ABLE MENTION for bringing more Candidates for Confirmation than any one individual of the Parish with the exception of our regular Parish Visitors. She was the means of adding nine members to the class.

GO THOU AND DO LIKEWISE.

* * * *

The Rector's "Surprise" Party was a mighty success.

* * * *

The Rector's wife received, among other things, a box of a pair of gloves. Now read that right and don't read it—a pair of boxing gloves.

The Rector was presented a tiny envelope with a big check inside.

* * * *

Ice cream, cake and lemonade were the refreshments of the occasion.

* * * *

Our cousin from Sweden is a scream. Hope she comes again.

PUPIN HAD BELIEF IN A FUTURE LIFE

Said Soul Must Live On

NEW YORK, March 14.—In what was probably the last interview before his death, Professor Michael Pupin, Serbian herdsboy who became one of America's leading scientists, expressed his faith in continuing existence after death.

"Science," he said, "gives us plenty of ground for intelligent hope that our physical life is only a stage in the existence of the soul. The law of continuity and the general scientific view of the universe tend to strengthen our belief that the soul goes on existing and developing after death."

The interview took place in his small study—that of the emeritus professor of electro-mechanics at Columbia University. Professor Pupin, then suffering from the heart ailment which ended his life Tuesday, had been assisted from the couch and was seated at the other side of an old-fashioned desk strewn with books and drawings.

The great solid set of shoulders, the brown of mustache and hair streaked only slightly with gray, suggested power despite his 76 years. He apologized for not rising and for being attired in dressing gown and slippers. His dark eyes smiled:

"A man begins to wear out at my age. But I'm ready to go at any time. Of course, there are some other inventions I'd like to work out, but there will be other men who can do them just as well.

"My time is short, but I have no dread of death. It might be pleasant," he smiled, a bit wistfully, "to leave this beautiful world while the sun is shining."

Dr. Pupin's "intimations of immortality" began when, as a small boy, he guarded his father's sheep in his native Idvor. During the long summer nights he contemplated the stars and in the distance heard the tolling of church bells.

"It seemed to me then," he recalled, "that light and sound were divine methods of speech, and so two questions—What is light? and what is sound?—filled my waking thoughts and penetrated my dreams.

"The more I have thought of these things as a scientific man the more do I realize that my boyhood fancy was correct. When I hear a great musician play Beethoven or Brahms on a violin I feel he is making the vibrating strings speak a language that is a true message from heaven."

He was asked his conception of "heaven."

"It is what scientists call the real world of which this world is only a picture. All scientific research and investigation are directed toward further revelation of the world beyond. All of this world—the present world—that we know anything about is perceived through the senses. We see a sunset, a rainbow, the stars, the new green of spring; We hear the song of the birds; we smell the perfume of the rose; we taste, we feel, but it all leads to glimpses of another world.

"Wherever science has explored the universe it has found it to be a manifestation of a co-ordinating principle, a definite, guiding principle which leads from chaos to cosmos. I choose to believe in this co-ordinating principle as a divine intelligence rather than that the cosmos is the result of haphazard happenings.

"We can place utmost faith in this divine intelligence. There is dependability, continuity everywhere present in the universe.

"All around me, every day, I observe its direction. In the stars, each moving in its own pathway; in the movement of the earth which has not varied a second in hundreds of thousands of years; in the infant who develops into a full-grown, self-directing individual. Doesn't it seem obvious that there is some guiding intelligence behind all this?"

"And where do you think this divine intelligence resides?" he was asked.

"In the soul of man. In that great world within us divinity resides. It seems to me that the soul is the greatest thing in the whole universe—the highest purpose of God's creative energy.

"The stars are only a beginning of this energy. But the human soul, in so far as science can penetrate, is the last chapter of this history as far as it has been written. From time immemorial we have felt that our intelligence is part of something higher and we've not discovered in the material universe anything higher than the human soul which manifests itself in our intelligence."

He was asked if he believed the soul of man is immortal. Without hesitancy, he replied in the affirmative.

"In biology," he pointed out, "man is revealed as a being who is constantly progressing from glory to glory, changing more and more, I believe, toward the spiritual image of his creator. Science finds that everything is a continuously developing and intelligent process. It reveals man as a being with a soul which is progressing more and more toward divinity in a universe of unbroken continuity."

"Then you don't believe science is drawing men away from God?"

"I can truthfully say that, in my own case, science has greatly strengthened my religious faith. My belief is that everything that happens in this great universe is for a purpose and that purpose is the development of the human soul.

"The real purpose of science," he went on, "is not merely to make material things, inventions to increase wealth and comfort. If science doesn't help to give me and others a better faith to live by, a better understanding of the Creator, a closer relationship to God, so that I can better carry out the divine purpose, then I am a failure."

A final question as to what state the soul would occupy when it progressed to what he called the real world, brought this conclusion:

"The soul of man is the highest product of God's creative handiwork. Now, after God has spent untold time in creating man and endowing him with a soul, which is the reflection of His image, is it reasonable to suppose that man live here on earth for a brief span and then is extinguished by death? That the soul perishes with the physical body? That it existed in vain?"—Evening Bulletin, March 14th.

IS THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH LOSING GROUND?

Are Prevailing Statistics Reliable Indications of Present State?

There are two groups of people, just as far apart as they can possibly be on matters spiritual and religious, who are in agreement that the Christian Church, with its influence over the minds and acts of men, is dying.

The one group is the band of unbelievers who always wanted to believe in the weakness of the Church. These are the days they look upon what they see with a smirk of satisfaction and point to statistics as proving they were right all the time. The churches are gradually to be emptied of their worshippers. Sundays have been secularized and have lost their former spiritual appeal. Golf, picnics, week-ends, automobile tours, fishing, card parties, musicales, dancing, open theatres, etc., etc., are now the program for the first day of the week. The city lots are teeming with the baseball players and on-lookers who a few short years ago, attended Sunday School every Sunday afternoon. All of which goes to prove that the Church is losing ground beyond any question of doubt.

The other group who acquiese in this gloomy picture of the failure of the Church belongs to the Church itself. It is composed of folk who love the Church and the ideals she represents. They can recall when every church was full of overflowing with worshippers. Now, it seems, that a life in God is a rare phenomenon, especially in the young.

As they look around the empty church their hearts are sad; their spirits are cast down. They feel discouraged and marvel at how the unbeliever has triumphed.

Thus the believer and the unbeliever appear to agree that the Church is losing ground.

But is it?

Who says so, is not a very close student of history. On its pages are written large the story of the swift and deep plunge into paganism, materalism, and all sorts of crazy cults which, for the time being, threatened to submerge Christianity completely. When they who slew his fellow thought he did God's service. Days when Christians were hunted like mad dogs and killed on sight. Those were the good old days when Churches were stripped of all their valuable furnishings and burned to the ground amid the cheers of the rabble. Then, too, was the period when luxury, self-indulgence in all its evil forms, ran wild; when it was smart to gamble and swear and boast of one's many mistresses and drink every day and all day and patronize all kinds of brutal sports; when Sunday was a day of riot, immorality and sottishness. Even the clergy were materialists, greedy, drunken and immoral. When the honor of women was a joke among women themselves. They were the days when the Bishop was indeed just a chess piece in the game of politics, national and international. The times were so bad and the Church was so corrupt that it took the purifying influence of the big revivalists of the middle ages to shepherd the Church and her children back to God.

It will not be long now before a modern Wesley will rise up and show us the way home. We are indeed far away from the Father's house but we are not hopelessly lost. Soon we will come to our senses and say, "I will arise and go (back) to my Father and will say unto him—Father, I have sinned before heaven and in Thy sight and I am no more worthy to be called Thy son." Then will our Father, with a splendid gesture of forgiveness and impatience, cry out, "My son who was lost is found —who was dead, is alive," and once more there will music and singing and dancing in the Father's house.

The pendulum will have swung again to the right and we are nearer to God.

Now is the day of prayer, confession and consecration for those who would see the King of Heaven come into His own and establish His Throne on earth.

God is still in His Heaven and all is well with the world.

Religion and Science

by

William H. Jefferys, M. D.

When the writer was young, the Church was gradually coming out of a terrible trial of faith, thousands had lost their faith; generally speaking, the scientific mind seemed to be inclined to laugh the Church to scorn, apparently science and religious faith could not both abide. Today one hardly knows where science begins and religion ends; sometimes a scientist is more relegious than a theologian. It is frequently hard to tell whether one is talking science or religion. The bugaboo has vanished. The scientific mind recognizes it is unscientific to deny things about which one knows little or nothing, that denial as such is not an argument against anything. Science itself is one of the greatest assumptions of faith of which the human mind is capable; it is the faith of the truth, the fearless willingness to face the truth, and it is increasingly optimistic as it does so. The special lines on which science has thrown religious light are in showing us that creation is a process of growth, that perhaps growth is the reason of all creation and that the universe is reasonable; that it can be thought out, and so one can hardly think any longer of the universe except in terms of the product of mind, and if the universe is the product of mind is it not a reasonable inference that matter is subject to mind and, still further, that our minds, that all mind, can control matter? Then science has shown us that matter is not the solid, impermeable lump we thought it was. Science itself hesitates now to affirm that matter is substance at all in the sense of our earlier belief. This light thrown by science on the field of religious speculation is increasing daily. We do not see clearly the whole field, but a blind man can sense the direction it is taking.

THE FINER THOUGHT

How fine it is at night to say:
"I have not wronged a soul to-day.
I have not by a word or deed,
In any breast sowed anger's seed,
Or caused a fellow being pain;
Nor is there on my crest a stain
That shame has left. In honor's way,
With head erect, I've lived this day."

When night slips down and day departs
And rest returns to weary hearts,
How fine it is to close the book
Of records for the day, and look
Once more along the traveled mile
And find that all has been worth while;
To say: "In honor I have toiled;
My plume is spotless and unsoiled."

Yet cold and stern a man may be
Retaining his integrity;
And he may pass from day to day
A spirit dead, in living clay,
Observing strictly morals, laws,
Yet serving but a selfish cause;
So it is not enough to say:
"I have not stooped to shame to-day!"

It is a finer, nobler thought
When day is done and night has brought
The contemplative hours and sweet,
And rest to weary hearts and feet,
If man can stand in truth and say:
"I have been useful here to-day.
Back there is one I chanced to see
With hope newborn because of me.

"This day in honor I have toiled;
My shining crest is still unsoiled;
But on the mile I leave behind
Is one who says that I was kind:
And someone hums a cheerful song
Because I chanced to come along."
Sweet rest at night that man shall own
Who has not lived his day alone.

A Letter from our Parish Visitor

Dear Friends:

I want to extend my sincere, grateful and hearty thanks to the Rector and to all; both in the Parish of St. John the Evangelist, and friends everywhere for their prayers, gifts, flowers, cards, letters, when I was in the Lankenau Hospital. I want to say here, that it was the prayers, that there was a miracle performed as was shown by prayer of the faithful and to have that comfort which comes from God to all who believe. I also want to thank the Clergy of the P. E. City Mission for their faithful visits and comfort I received from them. Best wishes.

I am yours sincerely,
HANNAH H. NUTTALL.

SANCTUARY

From the Spirit of Missions

THE PILGRIMS PROGRESS

From Bishop Carson's office in the Missionary District of Haiti and the Dominican Republic comes a little French booklet of devotions, including an examination of conscience from which the following questions are translated:

Do I believe in God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, and in all that God teaches in the Church and the Holy Scriptures?

Do I love God with all my heart, all my mind, all my soul, and all my strength, and do I desire fervently to please him?

Am I alert to recognize the blessings of God, and do I desire His will?

Do I faithfully practice my religion?

Have I failed in keeping any of my promises?

Have I sinned in any matter about which no question is asked me?

Am I really sorry for my sins, and do I truly desire to become better?

Lord, make us know the true way of life and to walk there in fidelity and joyful obedience. Grant that our spirits may ever be alert and fearless. Teach us to abhor evil, and give us faith in the triumph of thy cause in us and in thy world. Bless us in our joyous and confident hope.

O God and Father of all mankind, who alone canst fill and satify the human heart, open our hearts to see that in Thee we find the full glory of human life in hallowed friendship and in joyful devotion to Thy will, through Jesus Christ the Lord of Life. Amen.

As children of the light of truth, flee from division and wrong doctrine, and follow as sheep where the Shepherd is.—St. Ignatius.

Open thou mine eyes that I may see,
Incline my heart that I may desire,
Order my steps that I may follow,
The way of Thy commandments.

—Bishop Andrewes.

WELCOME

Leave wide the door
And set the taper of your live alight
To guide Him through the starlit night.

Spread fair the board,
For Him the chaliced wine of joy, your best,
The snowy loaf for royal Guest.

Then wait with heart athrill
His step upon the sill,
His voice, His presence holy, intimate and still!

MYSELF

I have to live with myself, and so.
I want to be fit for myself to know;
I want to be able, as days go by,
Always to look myself straight in the eye.
I don't want to stand, with the setting sun
And hate myself for the things I've done.
I don't want to keep on a closet shelf
A lot of secrets about myself,
And fool myself as I come and go
Into thinking that nobody else will know
The kind of man I really am;
I don't want to dress myself up in sham.
I want to go out with my head erect,
I want to deserve all men's respect.
But here in the struggle for fame and pelf,
I want to be able like myself.
I don't want to think, as I come and go,
That I'm bluster and bluff and empty show.
I never can hide myself from me;
I see what others may never see,
I know what others may never know,
I never can fool myself - and so
Whatever happens I want to be Self-respecting and conscience-free.

GIVE YOUR BEST

There are loyal hearts, there are spirits brave,
There are souls that are pure and true;
If you give to the world the best you have,
The best will come back to you.
Give love, and love to your heart will flow,
A strength in your utmost need;
Have faith and a score of hearts will show
Their faith in your word and deed.
Give truth and your gift will be paid in kind,
And honor will honor meet;
And a smile that is sweet will surely find
A smile that is just as sweet.
Give pity and sorrow to those who mourn;
You will gather in flowers again
The scattered seed from your thought outborne,
Though the sowing seemed but in vain.
For life is the mirror of king and slave,
'Tis just what you are and do.
Then give to the world the best you have,
And the best will come back to you.

OUR SUNDAY SCHOOL

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 15TH, we will reorganize our Sunday School for the Season. On that date we will hold our Annual Rally. One of the features of the day will be music rendered by our Junior Choir. We hope to start the season with one hundred per cent. of our membership present. We hope to have several special features of Sunday School interest. And we hope to grow steadily in membership and interest all the year through, that the young people of Southwark will find real pleasure in attending our Sunday School Session. We mean to preserve the interesting parts of our past program and we mean to strive earnestly to add new things as we go along.

We have often wished the members of the School would make suggestions as to how we can make our sessions more interesting and instructive. If you have any worth while plan to offer, see the Rector and tell him about it.

SUMMER AT ST. JOHN'S

Vacation time is a busy time in our Parish

Sunday, June 23rd, was the day we "closed" the year's activities in the Parish by celebrating our Anniversary and presenting one of the largest Confirmation Classes of our ministry. We did not realize it at the time, but a remark made by the Bishop that night after the Confirmation Service, was to prove prophetic. We remarked with a sigh of relief, "This is the end of another year's work." The Bishop made instant response, "This is the beginning of another year's work." We were a little startled and mentally vowed that this summer positively was not going to be the beginning of anything.

Summer Bible School

The first thing we did the next Sunday was to organize our Summer Bible School. From that first session we had the busiest Sundays of the year. Perhaps our beloved Bishop indulged in a snicker or two behind his hands. Our program was of such a nature that the very youngest, as well as the adult scholars, found it interesting. Our general plan was an Opening Hymn, the Creed, the Lord's Prayer, the Ten Commandments, a Hymn, the Catechism on the Sacraments, a Hymn, the Study of one of the Saints of the Book of Common Prayer, in which we used the Collect, Epistle and Gospel appointed for the day. Then we studied the character and probable work of the Saint, using the Bible for our reference; also the date appointed by the Church for commemoration of each; the Colors appointed by the Church; the nature of his work, etc. Then we closed with a Hymn, Offering and a Salute to the Flag and the Cross.

To "put over" such a summer program in an interesting manner means extensive and intensive preparation.

It was indeed a busy service but it was well worth while and all of us know more than we did of the history of the Apostles, the geography of the Holy Lands and the heroism of the early missionaries; and how both men and women suffered for Jesus' sake in those days. It made us feel that somehow our loyalty lacked the rich colors of their love and sacrifice.

Our weekly attendance ran up to nearly a hundred.

The Junior Choir

Then, too, we organized our Junior Choir. For many years we have been dreaming of such an organization. This summer we stopped dreaming and did something about it. First, we suggested it to Margaret Nelson; and, as slang puts it, "we found the proposition was right down her alley." Enthusiasm burst out of her like the measles. She got a high fever and did she build up an organization. In less than three weeks she had the singingest bunch of kids you ever heard. And what a difference it made in the spirit of our summer service. Their rendition of the Communion Service would have done credit to many a choir of adult voices. The members of the Parish loved the innovation and enthusiasm was expressed on every side.

Their service was most timely as, naturally, the members of the Senior Choir go on weekend vacations during the season, which leaves us without a choir of sufficient power to "carry on" effectively. This summer the Juniors helped us build up the church service in interest and beauty so that it greatly increased our Church Attendance. Our August Communion was one of the largest we ever had in the summer.

We have determined to make the Junior Choir a permanent organization of the Parish. They will have their own rehearsals, supervised by Margaret Nelson, and also, they will have their own social organization. On Sundays they will be in the procession with the Senior Choir and will occupy the front pews of the church; the girls on the pulpit side, the boys on the lectern side. On all high occasions, Christmas, Easter, Confirmation, they will train with the Senior Choir to render such services more effective. On all Sunday School special occasions, such as Rally Day, Sunday School Christmas and Easter Services, they will render the service. We are even thinking of holding regular Sunday evening services in the church during the fall, winter and spring and using them in the choir.

We have already arranged for a social organization of the Junior Choir. One of their activities will be a RADIO PARTY, set for FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 13TH and, as they are young and ambitious, we want every member of the Parish to co-operate with them to make this first effort of theirs a big success.

Every boy and girl of the Parish may apply for membership to the J. C. Organization and come to the Friday night singing school; but, only those who, after a vocal test, have proved they can sing, will be placed upon the waiting list to fill vacancies should any of the regulars drop out.

Of course, from time to time, members of the Junior Choir will be promoted to the Senior Choir as vacancies occur in that branch.

DISTINGUISHED MEMBERS

Perhaps the most difficult feature of parochial work is finances. This is not due at all to inability to support the Church and pay its current expenses; but it is due almost entirely to the carelessness and thoughtlessness of our communicants. How to overcome this peculiar attitude of mind has caused and is causing many a rector and vestry a chronic headache. Each and all are figuratively wringing their hands and wailing for an idea; said idea to act as a parochial T. N. T. and blow up and smash forever this granite indifference towards our financial worries.

We have just thought of a way of arousing your curiosity and interest. It starts with a question. Who really does pay regularly his Church Envelopes? Now the only way we can satisfy our curiosity is to see a list of names of Communicants who really appear upon the Warden's books as paid to date.

We propose, therefore, to start now and publish in the Broadcaster ONCE EVERY QUARTER the names of all communicants who are 100 per cent. paid up. In order to be fair to all we will make an announcement two weeks in advance that we are ready to publish the list and all who want to get their names published as DISTINGUISHED MEMBERS OF ST. JOHN'S PARISH have two weeks more to catch up and pay their overdue envelopes.

This list will be a PERMANENT feature. Every quarter throughout the year it will appear. Names that appear in one quarter will appear regularly, PROVIDED the 100 per cent. average is maintained. If a member becomes careless and fails to keep up his payments, his name will temporarily drop out, but will be restored in the next quarter IF ALL BACK ENVELOPES ARE PAID UP IN THE MEANTIME.

Also, all members of the parish can win membership among the DISTINGUISHED MEMBERS by obtaining a package of Church Envelopes and keeping them paid up.

A member is not forced to pledge more than he can conveniently offer unto the Lord. Neither is a member expected to pay the VERY LEAST POSSIBLE AMOUNT just to get his name on the DISTINGUISHED MEMBERS LIST.

The Finance Committee will use its own discretion as to who is imposing upon the Parish in an attempt to appear among our distinguished company by the ancient means of Annaniah and Saphira, who died because they lied about their OFFERINGS unto the Lord. The first set-up of our DISTINGUISHED MEMBERS is attached to this explanation. Next quarter we hope to see lots of new names added to our MEMBERSHIP OF HONOR.

Remember all you need do to get your name recorded is to have EVERY CHURCH ENVELOPE PAID UP TO DATE.

The Distinguished Members Roll

The names appearing below are of Communicants who have paid in every Church Envelope due to the end of the last quarter of the year.

A corrected list will appear at the end of each quarter. If your names does not appear here, be sure it appears next quarter.

Important!

Please remember this list IS ONLY TO MAY 26TH. Church Envelopes received since then will be credited on your next Quarterly Report.

Finds World Suffers Sagging of Morals

Our Nation and the nations of the world are suffering from a moral sag that has sapped their strength, impaired their confidence, exhausted their reserves, and reduced them to the low plane of impotence. In the face of this situation there are not a few who have experienced no privation, whose indulgent ways have known no restraint, and whose vulgar and ostentious habits and practices further menace our security and hinder the day of our recovery.

The greatest and the gravest problem that faces us is one that has to do with the recovery of lost Christian ideals. We shall find no panacea for our ills until as a people we rediscover the old and sure paths that in other days have been the highways of our progress, our prosperity and our peace.

All our legislation, all our planning, all our finely conceived resolve will fail us unless we can recover these moral and Christian qualities that are indispensable to the safe conduct of our domestic, social and industrial institutions.

MISS HELEN W. McHENRY

Saturday, August 10th, the Captain of our Girl Scout Troop, Miss Helen W. McHenry, sailed for Panama to serve as a substitute in a Church Home for Children while the regular member of the Staff goes on a three months' furlough.

Miss McHenry will be absent until about the middle of December. Of course, she will be greatly missed, not only by her immediate family, but also by the members of the Scout Troop over which she has been Captain for so many years.

We know she will have an interesting experience as she will be engaged in a branch of missionary work that is congenial to her.

How fortunate we are to have such a capable person as Mrs. John Nelson, Jr., to take charge of the Troop. All the girls know and love her and we know the Troop will prosper under the leadership of Margaret. We are leaving everything in her hands, confident of the results.

Should any member of the Girl Scout Troop, or others, wish to correspond with her, just address your letters to Miss Helen W. McHenry, Box 265, Ancon, Canal Zone, Care of Miss Claire E. Ogden, House Mother.

The Summer Vacation School

Our Summer Vacation School grows in popularity every year. Every day of the week from Monday 'til Friday, the big gymnasium of the Parish House is crowded with boys and girls from three years to thirteen years of age. The day is divided into periods, the Devotional, the Singing, the Bible Verses, the Manual and the Play Periods. And do the kids enjoy it! We wish more folks would come and visit us, just to see how much fun we really do get out of life on a hot summer day.

The Summer School serves a two fold purpose. First, the parental end. Can you possibly imagine what it means to a tired, hot, overworked mother, beset with all sorts of worries, to be free of a lot of hot, fretting, whining children every day for a few hours, knowing they are not only receiving care, but also are learning something worth while and are happy?

What a load off the overburdened shoulders of our mothers when their boys and girls are in our SUMMER VACATION SCHOOL.

Then, too, there are the benefits to the children. Instead of sweltering in a bandbox house up a hot, narrow alley, drinking warm water out of the court hydrant and using outhouses that are being used by four or five families living in the same court; or, driven by congested conditions too terrible to be endured, they make a playground of traffic loaded streets where life is a hazard—the boys and girls have a large, cool, airy gymnasium in which to work and play. The toilet provisions are ample and there is always a supply of cool, drinking water. And never a day goes by but that each child gets a ration of good, wholesome ice cream.

Then, after a long term of VACATION SCHOOL, just before Public School opens, all the children pile in busses and take a trip to Atlantic City. And, believe it or not, that is the first glimpse of the ocean for many a kid.

God bless everybody who helps us make summer in South Philadelphia just a little more endurable for our mothers and children!

The Shack-in-the-Pines

Stand on any street corner in Southwark and whisper the magic words, "Shack-in-the-Pines" and kids come tumbling out front doors, back alleys, around the corners, out of candy stores, up through the cellar windows, all shouting "WHEN!" They begin to talk about Browns Mills on Thanksgiving and keep it up on Christmas, continue the theme on New Year's and spend the cold, dark nights of winter around the fire, planning for "next summer at the Shack."

What glorious two weeks each group of children have in that wonderland of stately pines and shimmering lakes, made glorious day by day by the golden sunset in a sky of sapphire blue and bewitching by night by a silvery moon and twinkling stars, reflected like beautiful jewels upon the bosom of Little Pine Lake. The days spent in canoeing, fishing, hiking, nature study. The nights spent on the lake singing under the stars, or in the house around the wood fire, during the story telling hour. And, at last, too tired and too sleepy to stay awake—off to bed.

And the food! Lots of good, wholesome eats, lots of milk, lots of fruit; in fact, lots of everything. And we leave the table stuffed like a Thanksgiving turkey. And, after two weeks in the forest, we come back to civilization looking like copper colored Indians and so full of sunshine and health, that we're almost "bustin'".

And all the kids of Southwark, who were fortunate enough to be in the crowds of "Two Weekers" this summer, involuntarily and with one accord, jump up and shout, "Hip! Hip! Hoorah! for the big-hearted folks who gave us such a good time!"

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETY

One of our biggest summer jobs was the organization of the YOUNG PEOPLES SOCIETY. On August 2nd a large group of young men and young women met the Rector in the Sunday School room and the YOUNG PEOPLES SOCIETY was launched. This means the Cresson Men's Club and the Cresson Girls' Club are now merged into this organization. The proposal came from the young people themselves and has the unqualified approval of the Rector. Our parish has been overorganized and, for the sake of economy, efficiency and harmony, we are eliminating certain parish organizations and consolidating with other groups.

The Rector elected himself President of the Y. P. S., and appointed Miss Adelia Pearo, Secretary and Mrs. Vernon Matthews, Treasurer. Both are in daily contact with the Rector and make an ideal combination for efficiency. It was decided that no dues would be levied on the members, but that a collection will be taken at each meeting, the idea being that we do not wish to make any worthy member feel embarrassed if he is not financially able to pay regular dues.

Friday night of each week was chosen as the time of meeting.

The Rector appointed the following committees: Athletic, Membership, Pleasure, Dramatic, Special.

The ATHLETIC COMMITTEE is to take care of all those interested in Athletics.

The MEMBERSHIP COMMITTEE is to make drives for new members and keep after the old members. It is understood that the names of candidates for membership must first be approved by the Rector before they are elected.

The PLEASURE COMMITTEE is to plan entertainment for the meetings and see that every member is made to feel at ease and enjoy himself. This Committee has charge of refreshments. As a starter the Rector suggested that the Committee arrange for a Picnic in August; also a Card Party, a Moving Picture Party, a Skating Party at Browns Mills and a birthday party on the last Friday of each month, to celebrate the birthdays of the members having birthdays in that month.

The DRAMATIC COMMITTEE'S duty is to arrange for shows, plays, minstrels, to be held in the Parish House.

The SPECIAL COMMITTEE will be a committee appointed from time to time by the Rector for special service.

It was agreed that in case an orchestra is desirable at any function a special fund will be raised to pay for its service. This fund must not affect the weekly contributions of the Society, nor is it to be taken from any receipts of any show or entertainment. It is to be raised by voluntary contributions from those interested in the function. All orchestral music must be paid for in cash on the occasion. The Parish as a corporation cannot be responsible for debts contracted for music.

It was agreed to hold our first birthday party on the first Friday in September for members born in August and our next party on the last Friday in September for those born in September. Also, the Y. P. S. is arranging to give a RADIO AND CARD PARTY, OCTOBER 11th.

A WONDERFUL CHILD

Studied Old and New Testaments at Age of Two Years

Child prodigies are among the interesting studies of medicine, and one of the most prodigious of prodigies was Christian Heinecker who was born in Lubeck, February 6, 1721.

According to the authorities of the time he had quite a vocabulary at the age of ten months. At one year he knew by heart the principal events told in Pentateuch. His second year he devoted to a study of the New and Old Testaments, and turned at the age of three to a study of universal history and geography, at the same time learning Latin and French.

At the age of four he took up a serious study of religion and the history of the church. At this time the King of Denmark heard of his progress and desired to see him. He was accordingly taken to Copenhagen and proclaimed a wonder, and in the same year he fell ill and died.

The hardest working group this summer was the Brotherhood of St. Andrew. Not only did they give up Sunday evenings to devising plans, but were faithful in carrying out those plans during the week. Incidentally they have saved the Parish over $25.00 in postage, etc., by means of converting themselves into mail carriers. Also, they have proved themselves of no mean ability as missionaries as will be proved by the size of our Special Confirmation Class to be presented at the convenience this Fall.

Incidentally we would suggest that now would be a good time for all parishoners to persuade the unconfirmed of their acquaintances to enter this Fall class.

The Date of the Service will be announced as soon as we receive it from our Bishop.

Billy Sunday stopped a newsboy in a city where he was conducting a revival, and inquired the way to the post office.

"Up one block and turn to the right," said the boy.

"You seem a bright little fellow," said Sunday. "Do you know who I am?"

"Nope."

"I'm Billy Sunday, and if you come to my meeting tonight I'll show you the way to heaven."

"Aw, go on!" answered the youngster; "you didn't even know the way to the post office."

Don't forget the Parish Meeting, September 24th. It's a get together party. Come early, stay late.

The village was undertaking to provide for the unemployed and had secured the services of an organizer. He called at the home of one of the villagers to whom he had been directed.

"Ah, Mr. Jones" he said, "I've come to ask you if you'll sing at a concert we are giving next week for the unemployed. What kind of a voice have you?"

"Well," replied Jones with little enthusiasm, "I've got what you might call an electric voice."

"An electric voice!" echoed the puzzled visitor.

"When you hear it you'll have a shock," was the reply.—Boston Transcript.

"ONE OF THE LEAST OF THESE"

Battered and bruised and broken,
With the grit to carry on.
Not much of the look of a hero,
Or handsome to gaze upon,
But something that all day haunts you—
The tragedy in his eyes,
The look that a deeper pathos
For a job that is lost implies.
The need of a meal in his stomach,
An envelope once a week,
A chance from the fates of business
To move with a winning streak!
It's tough to have pictures painted
Of hoped for things to be—
Work that you sought in the morning
But the night never let you see.
His coat has a shine, looks shabby,
His shoes need a pair of heels,
While no one but those who have suffered
Know just how his courage feels.
'Tis a job that he needs, not pity!
With charity, God! he's annoyed.
He's been drafted into the army of the valiant unemployed.

A man accidentally dropped a nickle on the pavement. He looked down at it a few seconds. Then he reached into his pocket, drew out a dollar note and deliberately dropped that upon the pavement. Then he stooped and picked up both the dollar and the nickle.

"Why in the world did you drop that dollar on the pavement?" inquired an astonished bystander.

"To make it worth while to stoop and pick up the nickle," replied the man.

FOLKS AND ME

It is a funny thing, but true,
That folks you don't like, don't like you.
I don't know why this should be so,
But just the same I always know
If I am "sour," friends are few;
If I am friendly, folks are, too.

Sometimes I get up in the morn
A-wishing I was never born;
I make of cross remarks a few,
And then my family wishes, too,
That I had gone some other place
Instead of showing them my face.

But let me change my little tune,
And sing and smile, then pretty soon
The folks around me sing and smile;
I guess 'twas catching all the while.
Yes, it's a funny thing, but true,
That folks you like, will sure like you!

WORK, FOR THE LIGHT IS COMING

We find it is necessary to form an extra Confirmation Class to be presented this Fall; because so many persons regretted they were not confirmed in the June Class. We are, naturally delighted over this demonstration of a desire for active membership in the Church of Jesus Christ. For a long time we have been conscious of this strong surge towards the Church. Men and women talk differently of spiritual things than they used to do. The subject of eternal life is not treated in the casual way as has been the custom in the last generation. Our young men and young women are beginning to sense the sham of materialism. Their common sense does not approve of nor accept the illogical philosophy that would relegate a creative God to the shades of superstition and then try to impose upon them the senseless theory that this great, wide, beautiful, harmonious world and all the creatures thereof are the emanations of a stupenous unintelligent accident. What men tried to prove by the laws of Evolution and what they actually did prove, are wider apart than the poles. This generation, being hard headed and intelligent, sees through the labyrinth of words and theories to the shining truth of the Everlasting Creative Being, whom we call, for lack of knowledge of His real name, God.

The hour of materialism and infidelity has struck. The dawn of the new day of Righteousness is swiftly dissipating the darkness, the mists, the shadows of ignorance and doubt. Soon the Sun of Righteousness will rise in the East and flood the world with its golden glory. You and I feel it in the air. We are approaching a smashing crisis. Men and women everywhere are turning their faces towards the Kingdom of God. Their steps are in the direction of the Church. There is work ahead to do. Get ready all ye Sons of God and welcome these pilgrims to the Father's House. Ye, who are of the Household of Faith, lead the way. Swell the ranks of those "coming Home" by putting forth your best efforts and adding souls to our Confirmation lists. Let's

THE SUNDAY EVENING SERVICE

The First Evening Service Held in the Church Proper for Several Years

Sunday evening, September 15th, we held the full evening Church Service for the first time in many years; of course with the exception of the services during the Lenten Season. As all the members of the Parish know, we have been using our beautiful Sunday School room Sunday evenings; our idea being that, owing to its size, it was more economical from the point of view of heating and lighting. Also it brought the congregation closer together, which was thought to be an advantage. There were certain vital matters which spoiled the services, however. One big trouble was we had no place for a choir and were forced to depend upon congregational singing entirely. A Church Service with no Choir Music is as bad as one with no congregational singing. But the real trouble against holding evening service in the Sunday School was psychological. Members of the parish did not like it.

PATRONIZE OUR ADVERTISERS

We tried a long time to educate the Parish to the Sunday School room services. We told them how much we were saving in fuel and electricity, but without avail.

So, this fall we determined to try evening services in the church again. We did not think much of the idea and were ready for a "flop". But what a surprise we got! We had a larger congregation of worshippers than we ever had in the Sunday School room. The service was most enthusiastic. The Junior Choir, augmented with several members of the Senior Choir, rendered a wonderful program of music. Members of the Daughters of the King, the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, the Woman's Auxiliary and the Sunday School attended.

If on such a hot night we could get such a fine congregation we feel sure that as the season advances the congregation will increase. It is your Rector's ambition to build up the largest and most beneficial Sunday Evening Congregation in Southwark. We need such a spiritual influence in our locality to neutralize the wretched and evil play boy stuff that is ruining the appreciation of the spiritual things of life. Tinsel, tinkle and trashy amusement on God's Holy Day is choking the finer concepts in the hearts of many of our young. Perhaps we may be able to stage a comeback for them. Young people at heart are not evil. They may be careless, but their sense of decency and fair play generally wins. Night club stuff may appeal now, but with diligence and prayer, we are bound to overcome. So, let's build up a strong Sunday Evening Service and I'm sure the Spirit of God will turn the thought of fun loving and fun seeking youth to things of greater value than Amusement.

The Rector is planning a series of evening addresses on the great fundamentals of our faith.

Spend Your Sunday Evenings With God in His Holy Temple

SERVICE AT THE MASONIC HOME

Sunday, September 8th, Divine Service was held in the Masonic Home, 3333 N. Broad Street, at 4.00 P. M., under the auspices of Apollo Lodge, No. 386, F. & A. M. It was conducted by your Rector, who is the Junior Warden of the Lodge, assisted by the combined choirs of St. John's Church. "My Faith looks up to Thee" was chosen for the opening hymn. This was followed by prayers, after which the Junior Choir sang Roy E. Nolte's anthem, "Jesus Loves Us." After the Reading of the Lesson for the day by Vernon Matthews, our good friend John Nelson, rendered a Baritone Solo by Oley Speaks, entitled, "Day is dying in the West."

The Rector preached a sermon from the text, "Who is my neighbor?" St. Luke 10:29. Some of the points were—as the Parable of the Good Samaritan was the Second Lesson for the day and as it is a favorite with the speaker, and as it teaches such a beautiful lesson on "neighborliness," it seemed appropriate to take it for the subject of our afternoon's meditation. The speaker considered first the keenness of the lawyer's question; then the amazing way in which Jesus answered him; and, what a complete answer it was to the lawyer's question.

1. The cast of the Parable were the victim of the road robbers; a Priest of the Temple of Jerusalem; the Levite, an officer of the Temple; both presumably fellow citizens of the man, robbed and wounded. And a Samaritan—a traditional enemy of the Victim, the Priest, and the Levite.

2. The reaction of each of these characters in the dramatic situation. The Priest and the Levite, contrary to what you would expect of men of their religious standing and the fact the victim was a fellow countryman, rendered not the slightest aid to the injured man. Why? The answer is obvious. The road on which the crime was committed was known by the sinister title of the "Red" or the "Bloody" way. It was infested with road bandits and the scene of many an act of violence and murder. Consequently, when they saw their countryman bleeding to death, they fled.

On the other hand, the Samaritan saw only one thing, a suffering fellow man who would die if he were neglected. He too, knew the reputation of the locality. He realized robbers might be even then lurking near the road to make him the next victim. Yet he ignored the place, the danger, even the fact that the victim was a traditional and bitter enemy. For the time being his conscience and humanity demanded that he MUST be a neighbor to his enemy and save his life.

3. The completion of his ministrations described by Jesus. (a) He gave him first aid. (b) He brought the man to a place of safety. (c) He cared for him personally, all through the night. (d) He paid the innkeeper advance money for his board, lodging and care. (e) He gave his surety to the innkeeper that he would be financially responsible for extra service.

In other words, this despised Samaritan braved all dangers and provided personal care and made himself financially responsible for the recovery of the man who fell among thieves.

Hence, this story demonstrates the truth that he is a neighbor who renders service to his fellow man, no matter who or what that man is.

Incidentally, the parable teaches a very significant difference between the professing religionist, like the Priest and the Levite, and the practical religionist, like the hated Samaritan.

Even the lawyer was impressed with that fact and had courage enough to acknowledge that the Samaritan, and NOT the priest or the Levite was the neighbor.

After the Sermon the Senior Choir rendered the anthem, "Open Now Thy Gates of Beauty," by E. S. Homer.

Following the notices of future services, and a few appropriate remarks from our Worshipful Master, Harry Gerber, the Rector had evening prayers, followed by the Benediction.

The Senior Choir sang "The Day Is Gently Sinking to a Close," by R. W. Martin, and the service was brought to an end by the Choirs and Congregation uniting in singing that grand old evening hymn, "Abide With Me."

It was a service of deep spiritual experience. One felt the presence of the Holy Spirit. Many were the expressions of pleasure after the service.

THE JUNIOR CHOIR

The outstanding work of the summer was the organization and training of the Junior Choir. It seems incredible that these youngsters could possibly develop into such a splendid group of singers in so short a time.

Sunday, July 28th, was the date of the first service rendered by them. Every Sunday since they have combined with the Senior Choir with satisfactory results. On the occasion of the Sunday School Rally they added beauty and spirit to the service. That same evening they assisted in the first evening service held in the Church Auditorium for several years.

The above is a group photograph of our first Junior Choir.

Members of the parish have been most enthusiastic in their expressions of pleasure to the Rector.

And the credit is due entirely to Mrs. John Nelson, Jr., who is a natural born teacher.

BROADCASTING FROM STATION S. J. C.

Let's put away our vacation togs and climb into our overalls again.

Let's pay up all our summer church envelopes. They tell us the Treasury is all shot to pieces.

Let's make new resolutions to be both loyal and regular this year.

Let's help make the Harvest Home a red letter occasion. Most all of us can give something.

Let's begin to work for our Annual Bazaar.

Let's help build up our Sunday Evening service.

Let's pay our Dollar for Coal.

Let's pay one year's subscription for the Broadcaster.

A well-known Protestant clergyman was recently calling upon his friend, a prominent Catholic official in the city of Chicago. The latter invited the Protestant gentleman to visit his rooms. "What fine quarters you have!" exclaimed the visitor, "finer than mine, I'm sure."

"Well," replied his Catholic friend, "you Protestant clergy may have your better halves, but we have the better quarters."

Willie and Jack were two youngsters pugilistically inclined.

"Aw," said Willie, "you're afraid to fight; that's all it is."

"No, I'm not," protested Jack, "but if I fight, my ma'll find out and lick me."

"How'll she find it out?"

"She'll see the doctor goin' to your house."

Margaret Nelson is to be congratulated for the splendid organization and training of the Junior Choir. It is the talk of the Parish.

Are you satisfied with our Sexton? Then help pay his salary by paying up your over due church envelopes.

Our beloved Parish Visitor, Hannah Nuttall, fell down one step and broke her hip. She is in the Lankenau Hospital. A short visit or a post card or letter will do lots towards cheering her up in these days of enforced idleness.

A NEW FISH STORY

A fisherman got such a reputation of stretching the truth that he bought a pair of scales and insisted on weighing every fish he caught, in the presence of a witness.

One day a doctor borrowed the fisherman's scales to weigh a new-born baby. The baby weighed forty-seven pounds.

Don't you agree with me that Hannah Nuttall has served us too many years to be expected to wait for her small salary as Parish Visitor which is long due? If you "holders out" would pay in your delinquent church envelopes we could pay her up to date.

"Why are you rushing about like this?"
"I'm trying to get something for my husband?"
"Had any offers?"

Several agents are out to solicit subscriptions for the BROADCASTER. Greet them with a smile and an outstretched hand with a dollar in the palm.

Do you know of any candidates for confirmation? We are making up a Fall class and will announce the date as soon as we hear from the Bishop.

Members in southern section are arranging for a series of Radio parties to be given for St. John's Church. Be sure to patronize them when we get the date.

Interviewer: "Do you believe that the younger generation is on the road to perdition?"

Octogenarian: "Yes, sir; I've believed that f'r nigh onto 60 years!"

A considerable professional jealousy existed between the two artists, George Bellows and Joseph Pennell. At one time Bellows, who had never been abroad, was receiving much praise in the world of art for a number of paintings which he had executed dealing with European subjects. Pennell, speaking at a dinner party at which both men were guests, made a rather sarcastic reference to this fact. Whereupon Bellows rose and, with his slow western drawl, remarked, "As far as I know, Leonardo da Vinci didn't have a ticket to the Last Supper, but he made a pretty darn good job of painting it."

There are scores of communicants who have no church envelopes. If YOU are one please ask the Rector for a package.

Suppose you worked for an employer who would not pay your wages, what would you do about it?

Suppose you and I do not pay the people who look after our church i.e. the Sexton, the Parish Visitor—what ought they do about it?

You and I pay them by paying regularly our church envelopes. They are the only parish income we have.

A STRANGE FAMILY

The father has not missed church in 23 years. The mother has a perfect record for 11 years. A son has not missed for 12 years. A daughter has been at the services every Sunday for 8 years.

What's the matter with this family? Don't they ever have company to keep them from church? Don't they ever feel tired on Sunday morning? Don't they ever have headaches, or colds, or parties, or picnics, to keep them from church? Don't they have a radio to get good sermons from other preachers? Don't they ever think they can just as well read their Bible at home? Don't they ever get disgusted with their minister?

What is the matter with this family, anyway, that they go to church so regularly and are so happy and cheerful?—From a reprint in St. Matthew Monthly, Appleton, Wisconsin.

ISN'T IT QUEER?

Isn't it queer, when we say to the toe:
"Wiggle!" why right then it wiggles, you know!
Isn't it queer, when you wish it, your feet
Onward will carry you, right down the street!
Isn't it queer, when you'd open your hand,
Open it flies! Can your palm understand?
Isn't it queer that you scarce have to think
Ere things are obeying you, quick as a wink!
Isn't it queer that by night and by day
Your breath keeps on breathing; your heart beats away?
We read books and papers about submarines,
And wireless and fireless and flying machines,
But when you consider, now, isn't it true,
The marvelous marvel of marvels is you?
—St. Nicholas Book of Verse.

EXTRACT FROM THE PASTORAL LETTER

Atlantic City, Oct. 23, 1934

Find War Alien to Christian Ideals

The Church is determined to combat this propaganda with every agency at its command. War is outlawed, and solemn peace pacts affirm it. We reaffirm the position taken by your Bishops in their Davenport pastoral of 1933. As Christians we can have no part in any program that is designed to violate these principles enunciated by the Prince of Peace. War is murder on a colossal scale. The only armed force, whether on land or sea, which is justifiable, is a constabulary designed to regulate and safeguard these interests that have to do with the prosecution of an orderly social and economic life. The testimony of the Great War shows the wicked folly of such a struggle and its aftermath has shattered the world's hopes and issued in confusions and disorders, the magnitude of which we are as yet incapable of measuring.

The Christian Church cannot and will not deny loyalty and fealty to its Lord by being partner in any scheme, national or international, that contemplates the wholesale destruction of human life. It refuses to respond to that form of cheap patriotism that has as its slogan: "In times of peace prepare for war." It regards as wicked the waste of the Nation's wealth in the building of vast armament and the maintenance of greatly augmented forces on land and sea.

The increased emphasis upon nationalism is a factor to be reckoned with in the promotion of rivalries and misunderstandings that inevitably provoke hatreds, disorders and strife. Loyalty to one's nation or adopted country may be consistently maintained without magnifying national superiority or attempting to control and dominate world trade at the expense of other nations.

PAY THAT COAL BILL

Sunday, Nov. 3rd, Is Coal Sunday

Be sure you come prepared to pay for your dollar's worth of coal.

We have a big program to put over this year and it will be important to have the church buildings properly heated. Nobody likes to sit in a big, cold room. NOT even YOU.

THE SUNDAY EVENING SERVICES will be in the church instead of the Sunday School room. The auditorium is big and will take lots of fuel to heat it.

THE YOUNG PEOPLES SOCIETY means to have social functions during the season and they must give their friends and guests a warm welcome when they meet.

THE GIRL SCOUTS will be using the Parish House every TUESDAY EVENING. And to keep them from catching colds and such things, we must have coal in the old fire box.

THE BOYS CLUB AND THE SENIOR CHOIR want to hold their meetings on Thursday nights. We would be pretty ungrateful if we failed to make them feel warm and cozy. Especially is this so with the Choir, who GIVE their services to the church. If the church is cold when they rehearse, they may sound like the "bull frogs in the pool" on Sundays. And that would serve you and me right. Anyway, it's cheaper to buy a dollar's worth of coal than a dollar's worth of cough cure. You get lots more for your money.

Then, too, the JUNIOR CHOIR will practice Friday nights. And I'm sure you agree with me that they have richly earned a warm place in our affections. The practical way to keep this WARM place WARM, is to see to it we have lots of coal in the old coal bin this winter.

We Need $400.00

If our more than 400 members each give their dollar we will pay our coal bill. And Sunday night, November 3rd, we can say our prayers, jump into bed, and go right to sleep, for OUR CONSCIENCE will be clear.

Very WARMLY yours,
The Rector.

HOW ARE GANGSTERS MADE?

The Following Is the Favorite Recipe of Lots of Crazy Adults

One normally bright child. (Boy or Girl).

Two lazy and indulgent parents.

One bad street gang.

One corner candy store run by a woman of easy morals.

One neighborhood social club patronized by girls of rotten minds and bodies.

A stack of putrid literature extolling crooks, murderers and molls.

DIRECTIONS: Mix together. Set the mixture aside for a SHORT time to ferment. You will be amazed at the effects. Your normal child has grown, it seems over night, from a happy kid into a snarling, killing, thieving crook.

There are certain elements you must be careful to guard against to keep from spoiling the recipe The parents must be exceedingly careful to see that the child has its own way in all moral and spiritual matters. If you FORCE the child to attend Sunday School and Church Service on Sunday instead of afternoon games on the lot, or card gamblings in the house of no repute, or the Sunday evening jazz party, you will throw the mixture out of solution and your ideal crook or killer may become a tame everyday God fearing honest citizen.

The Church and Sunday School beat the devil in their influence over normal kids!

Also, you must be sure to season the child's everyday home life with cursing and swearing and lewd jokes and merciless beatings and exhibitions of immorality and drunkenness. You want to be sure to make a great epic out of the way you cheated a pal or a trolley car conductor; or got more change than was due you in a business deal and how you chuckled over the man's loss which was your gain. You must be sure to extol petty thieving; to smile at getting drunk; to wink at immorality; not to go to church yourself and not to expect the child to go.

Hundreds of thousands of parents have tried this recipe with startling success. They have had the satisfaction of standing outside the iron bars of cell doors talking to their offspring who won through and had, even in early youth, become public enemies with long criminal records. Some parents have had the joy of seeing their sons and daughters shot to death resisting arrest. Some have witnessed the interesting sight of the hanging or the electrocution of the children God gave them to rear. All society is given the privilege of paying one hundred millions of dollars a year to hunt down, convict, jail, support or kill this brew of sin which indulgent or brutal parents foist on society.

Will the parents of this nation never wake up and teach their children the way to righteousness! Hunt up your boys and girls. See that they go to Church and Sunday School. MAKE SURE THEY COME BY BRINGING THEM. Stop sneering at the Church. Begin to sneer at the forces of evil You will like the change that will come into your family life, and your boys and girls will rise up to bless you for making of them Godfearing men and women.

Scout the idea that your child will love you more if you give him his own way. He is just like every little cub of the animal kingdom and must be patiently trained. You had better make him cry for discipline's sake now. If you do not, he will make you cry long and bitterly later on. For his, as well as your own happiness, take the advice of the wise man of the Bible and spoil the rod and spare the child.

We hope to welcome you and your boys and girls next Sunday in Church and Sunday School.

OUR ANNUAL BAZAAR

As Usual, It Will Be on the First Thursday, Friday and Saturday of December

The subject of our Annual Bazaar was brought up for discussion at the September meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary. The night was a miserable, rainy occasion, and the downpour was so heavy that not many members had the courage to come out; consequently, our meeting was small as to numbers.

But, as to subjects discussed, it was one of the biggest and best meetings we have held for many a day. Foremost in the list was our Bazaar. We could do little in the way of laying plans for the event, but those of us who were at the meeting were sure we must have it.

So long as the Bazaar did not get beyond the discussion point, the Rector is taking it upon himself to form a general plan and appoint the folk to take charge of the different booths.

Our friends and fellow communicant, George Downes, has promised already to help us in the decoration scheme.

We will have about the same layout as in previous years. For instance, there will be the Fancy Work Booth, under the direction of Mrs. Frank Schmidt. The Men's Furnishings under the Brotherhood of St. Andrew. The Groceries and Provisions, under Miss Anna Schabacker and Miss Carrie Strang; that is, in case Hannah Nuttall is unable to attend. The Girl Scouts will have charge of the Candy Table. The Woman's Auxiliary will have charge of the Household Goods Booth. Miss Lydia Maguire, the Fish Pond. Toilet Articles, etc., and the Radio Game will be in charge of the Young Peoples Society. And, of course, the Kitchen will be under the supervision of Mrs. Frank Pine and her chosen lieutenants. The Doll Table will again be in charge of Margaret Nelson.

In spots this program is somewhat vague, but we cannot be more definite until we are assured that those who were formerly in charge of certain booths, will be willing to serve this year.

WHAT WE NEED!

We need donations of all sorts of fancy work for the Fancy Work Table.

We need donations of aprons, towels, wash cloths, iron holders, etc., for the household table.

We need donations of cakes and homemade candies for the Candy Booth.

We need donations of all sorts of groceries, canned goods, meats, butter, eggs, coffee, tea, milk, ice, bread, cakes etc. etc. for the kitchen; also money to buy other materials such as ice cream, pies, fruit, etc.

We need donations of new Christmas Cards, new books, old jewelry, good cast off clothing, chance prizes, things for the Fish Pond and a million other things you have to give away which we can sell. As usual the charge of admission will be 10 cents, 3 tickets for 25 cents. Each ticket of admission will have a coupon attached, good for 10 cent purchases at any booth in the Bazaar. In other words, you get the value of 30 cents in return for your three tickets of admission, which cost you 25 cents. However, it must be borne in mind that these coupons will not be exchanged in money. They must be used in making purchases in the Bazaar. Nor will any change be made in money. The coupon must be used at its full value for purchase.

Certain valuable prizes will be awarded during the Bazaar. A full list will be announced the week before the Bazaar.

Be sure you wait for the Bazaar for your Christmas purchases. You will save money and you will afford to give finer presents than ever before.

Saturday night will be the occasion of THE RECTOR'S BIG $1.00 TURKEY DINNER FOR 50 CENTS WITH ALL THE TRIMMINGS!

A LETTER OF APPRECITION FROM NEW YORK

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL
Protestant Episcopal Church
281 FOURTH AVENUE
NEW YORK, N. Y.

July 12, 1935

The Rev. H. C. McHenry,
Third and Reed Streets,
Phila., Pa.

My Dear Mr. McHenry:

It takes some time to catch up with what has been done in the past year by many parishes and missions in support of the Church's Program. In going over the record and finding what your congregation at St. John the Evangelist has been able and willing to do last year, I feel prompted to send to you and through you to them this note of appreciation for their faithful service and support of this great task.

With every good wish and hearty congratulations,

Faithfully yours,
Philip Cook.
President of National Council.

THE PARISH GOLD MINE

There's a gold mine in St. John's Parish!
It has never been worked.

But we are laying plans and getting the machinery in shape to begin digging for this gold at the earliest possible opportunity.

There are several hundred ore pockets in this mine and they are scattered all over the place.

Every church family who has no church envelopes for parochial support is one of these ore pockets. Year after year we have added new members to the church, but we have foolishly failed to systematically provide these new members with packages of envelopes; consequently, they didn't yield up their share of "gold" for the church. The old, overworked pockets of the original "givers up" have been mainly responsible for meeting our church debts.

Now the time has come to dig gold from these unworked "pockets." We hope you are going to be good sports and yield up your share of precious metal. You are going to meet a prospector some day soon. He is going to "tap" you and see if "thar's gold in them hills." He, or she, will give the name and address to headquarters (The Finance Committee), where "pay dirt" is found and in the "Sweet Bye and Bye," which means pretty soon, the unworked POCKET will get a PACKET. It will contain Church Envelopes!

AS TO BAPTISMAL CERTIFICATES

A Nominal Charge Will Be Made Hereafter for Duplicates

There are so many demands for copies of Baptismal Certificates that have been lost or mislaid that it has created a serious situation for us and something must be done about it. It is not such a simple matter as you would suppose to fill out a duplicate certificate. Many, many times the applicant cannot recall the date of birth, or does not give his name, or was actually christened in another parish of a similar name as ours. We have many such applications from people who were christened in the Church of St. John the Evangelist, Roman Catholic, 13th and Chestnut Streets. Sometimes the christenings are not entered in their proper place on the Register which necessitates going over the books painstakingly before the record is dug up. This is particularly so in the case of adults making application. We have wasted hours in such searches. Also, being human, a former rector may have forgotten to make a record of the christening; in which case, we spend hours in fruitless search.

In a parish, the size of St. John's, this searching of the records and writing duplicate certificates for those who have been too careless to preserve the original, consumes an enormous amount of time, labor and expense. We can no longer afford to give free service and duplicate certificates. Hence, in the future THE CHURCH WILL CHARGE THE NOMINAL SUM OF ONE DOLLAR FOR TRACING CHRISTENINGS AND ISSUING DUPLICATE CERTIFICATES.

May we advise all parents to preserve carefully the original certificate; for you never know when it will be necessary to produce it in legal matters or as proof the child is of working age. Both national government and employers demand the birth certificate to prove the age of an applicant for an old age pension, or a job in a store. Several old age pensions have been held up in our own parish because the applicants had lost their Baptismal Certificates and had no means of proving either when or where they were born.

Also, let us warn the parents never to try and alter the date of birth on their child's original baptismal certificate. Many parents have been guilty of this misdemeanor in order to put their children to work before they have reached the work age. If any such altered certificates are brought to us in the future for correction, it will cost the applicant double the price for a duplicate; so watch your step, if you get caught you may get into serious trouble with the authorities.

Let Us Be Kind

Let us be kind,
The way is long and lonely,
And human hearts are asking for this blessing only,
That we be kind.

We can not know the grief that men may borrow,
We can not see the souls storm-swept by sorrow,
But love can shine upon the way, to-day, to-morrow,
Let us be kind.

Let us be kind,
This is a wealth that has no measure
This is of heaven and earth the highest treasure—
That we be kind.

A tender word, a smile of love in meeting
A song of hope and victory, to those retreating
A glimpse of God, and brotherhood while life is fleeting
Let us be kind.

Let us be kind,
Around the world the tears of time are falling
And for the loved and lost these human hearts are calling
Let us be kind.
To age and youth let gracious words be spoken,
Upon the wheel of pain so many weary lives are broken,
We live in vain who give no tender token,
Let us be kind.

Let us be kind,
The sunset tints will soon be in the west,
Too late the flowers are laid then on the quiet breast,
Let us be kind.

And when the angel's guides have sought and found us,
Their hands shall link the golden ties of earth, that bound us,
And heaven and home shall brighten all around us,
Let us be kind.

anon.

TEN TO GO

Then We Touch the Century Mark

Who says 13 is an unlucky number?

St. Johnites don't believe it.

Take for instance Sunday, October 13th.

That was the day the Bishop appointed for his second visit to St. John's Church this year.

In June we presented 60 candidates for Confirmation. We thought that was a fairly good year's work. Imagine our surprise to learn that several folk of the Parish began almost at once to express regret because they had not been confirmed.

Being of a venturesome disposition, and probably having a taint of the gambler in our blood, we began to toy with the idea of presenting a second class for Confirmation in the fall of the year. The more we thought of it the more we thought of it. Finally we started. With the aid of our Parish Visitor, Miss Hannah Nuttall, we began to accumulate names. Then when Hannah fell and broke her hip, Miss Carrie Strang, Miss Anna Shabacker, Mrs. Harry Fanger and several other communicants of the Parish turned in and helped to put it over. We even raided the bridal party of Charles and Lillian and captured the Bridesmaid and one of the guests. Did you ever hear of such doings?

Next thing was to get the consent of the Bishop to pay us a second visit. We wrote him a letter explaining the situation and asked if he could spare some of his valuable time to confirm a second class.

Did he say yes?

Just read his letter!

September 26, 1935.

Rev. H. Cresson McHenry,
225 South Third Street,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Mr. McHenry:

I am glad that the work has progressed as much as it has at St. John the Evangelist. I think it is one of the most marvelous works in the Diocese. If the notice is not too short, I will be very glad to give you Sunday evening, October thirteenth. Kindly let me know the time of the Service.

Sincerely yours,

Francis M. Taitt

We said we had the spirit of the gambler in us.

Well, now, come to think it over, maybe we are not such dashing venturers after all. When we got the Bishop's reply we got what you might truthfully describe as refrigerated pedal extremities. If you catch our meaning.

We were "in it" like the Bishop's two little mice were in that can of milk. We had to either drown or else we had to paddle around like forty hoping for the best. Well, we did as the wise little mouse did—we paddled about until at last we churned our milk of despair into a little pad of butter of hope and we did not "lose face" after all.

Right up to the minute of the Bishop's arrival we kept pegging away.

While the Bishop was putting on his vestments for Service, we were Christening a man who had been overlooked in his infancy; and, by the time the procession was moving, both the Bishop and the newly christened candidate and your very excited Rector were moving with proper dignity in the wake of the double choir and the class.

The results of our labors were beyond our dreams. When the time arrived we presented 30 candidates. Exactly one half as large as our June Class of 60 candidates. This brought our total for the year to 90 Confirmations.

We have only 10 to go to make 100.

The Bishop said he would come again this year if we wanted him.

How about it?

Shall we go after that other 10 and ring the bell?

We're all set if you say so.

Of course, old man Critique says, "What's the use of working for numbers. Folks are sure to back-slide."

Well, folks must have some place to back-slide from. That being the case, why not be confirmed? Maybe they won't back-slide after all. That being the case, old man Critique won't need to cry his crocodile tears out of his hypocritical eyes over their fall from Grace.

The one and only reason for his dubitancy is he's afraid some, maybe most, of the Confirmation class might stick and serve God and be forever lost to sin.

Our Sunday School Rally

The Attendance was Good and the Spirit was Good.

According to schedule we reorganized our Sunday School September 15th with a Grand Rally held in the church; and, although this was a whole month earlier than usual, we had a big turn out of officers, teachers and scholars. There was very little change in the personnel. Gladys Hopkins was appointed pianist for the Kindergarten and Mabel Robbins was installed teacher of the class formerly taught by Betty Outen.

One of the pleasing features of the occasion was the Junior Choir. Our new and highly successful singing organization of young boys and girls added life to the service. They have won their way right into the hearts of the Sunday School.

The service was modeled upon what the Rector hopes will be the plan for Sunday School sessions during the year. More attention will be given by all the departments to the teaching of the Sacraments. The Kindergarten will be thoroughly organized and made more attractive for the little folk Our object in inviting Gladys to preside at the piano is to give the kiddies a wider and better selected list of real child melodies. We hope to make our Kindergarten singing one of the features of the Sunday School.

As soon as he can do so the Rector will form a simple and easy ritual for the Kindergarten—a sort of form that will keep the children interested.

Another matter taken up by the Rector was the new series of lessons for the Senior Department and Adult Bible Classes. We have devoted two years to the study of the Life of Christ. We now intend to devote our attention to the PARABLES OF JESUS CHRIST. Each parable will be taken in chronological order so far as possible. The occasion of telling it, the place where it was told, the geography of the place, the moral or spiritual lesson Jesus illustrated, and a score of other interesting questions will be considered in the study.

As we personally feel that the whole system of the moral philosophy of Jesus is illustrated in parabolic form, we look forward with enthusiasm to a year of delightful study.

Even though RALLY DAY was intensely warm, we enjoyed the occasion immensely and we hope and believe it augurs a successful season of teaching in old St. John's.

As usual, both geography and history of the Holy Lands will form an important part of the curriculum.

Come out and join us

Our Parish Pilgrimage

Results this year somewhat encouraging.

Sunday, September 29th, just two weeks after our Sunday School RALLY we staged a PARISH PILGRIMAGE to contact the absentee S. S. Scholars. These Missionary Sundays are always great events in the year's work. It gives us an intelligent idea as to why there are certain vacant chairs in our classes. This PILGRIMAGE was very like all the rest, with the exception it was more encouraging, by far.

The number of absentee scholars scheduled to be visited was 100. An analysis of the reasons given for absence is most interesting and worthy of our study.

First of all, we must say that many stated they did not know S. S. had been organized for the season. There is possibly some excuse for this. First of all, we organized a full month in advance of past years. Our reason for doing so was obvious when we learned other schools about us had their Rally Day early in September. Many of our scholars would attend these other rallies and, in some cases, identify themselves with these schools; a case of the early bird catching the worm, as it were. This explains to some degree many absentees.

We herewith give the analysis for your study: Present at Roll Call of absentees, 15; Left permanently, 2; Moved, 6 Attend sports, 2; Sick, 7; Not at home, 12; No excuse, 5; Will come next Sunday 27; Too small, 5; Too old, 2; Out of town, 3; Go on week-ends, 8; No clothing, 8; May return, 1; Rather attend church, 2; Will come if someone brings them, 6; Do not want to come, 4; Live too far away, 4; Truant, 1; Total, 134.

Now we know that some statistical bird is about to ring the bell and say, how come! You visited one hundred absentees and you come back with one hundred and thirty-four excuses. Easy! Some of the absentees had two excuses or at least one excuse and one promise, such as 1, Sick; and 2, will come next Sunday.

The fifteen reported present at Roll Call were fifteen whose names were on the visiting list, but who were present at school when we called the Roll of Names on the list previous to sending forth our Pilgrims; the purpose being to cut down the number of visits, if any on the list were present. Naturally, we expect every year to mark off certain scholars who have left or moved. The really surprising and somewhat gratifying item of interest is that record of so few who attend Sunday sports and games rather than Sunday School. The number reported sick is very much below normal we are happy to note. Those not at home and absent on week-ends are very small in number considering the fact that summer is scarcely over and the glorious Autumn days are enough to tempt the Saints for a spin through the russet and red and orange and brown and green of the wood and field. As to those who are too small to come unless an older scholar stops to take them and bring them home again, WE NEED VOLUNTEERS who will take over this weekly task. The really funny excuse for not attending S. S. is that one of being too old. The ridiculous feature of this peculiar set-up is that neither of the two are over sixteen years, if that old. We were rather surprised to learn that only eight scholars reported having no clothing. Heretofore, about fifty per cent. of our scholars were out of Sunday School for that reason. Nevertheless, we have scholars out of school because they have no clothing. WHAT CAN WE DO ABOUT IT? We can get fair suits for $8 and $10 and shoes for $1.75. What we need is somebody to give us money or buy the clothing for these needy.

DOES THE IDEA APPEAL TO YOU? If so, let the Rector know. Those who live at a distance too far to travel, could do one of two things. First, arrange to attend just so often during the month; or else join a Sunday School in their neighborhood and attend regularly. Now there is that group who do not want to come. We are concerned with them. We would like to know the real reason WHY they do not want to come. If there is anything we ought to correct or if there is anything we are neglecting to do which we should do, we would be most grateful if we were given "the high sign." We want our School to be interesting and attractive and if we are failing to make it so, we are missing the mark of efficiency. The Rector will consider it a special favor if our four DON'T-WANT-TO scholars will take us into their confidence and tell us why?

I wonder if those five who have no excuse for being absent are lacking interest in our School for the same reason. Then there is that one lone truant who was sent to school and never arrived. Our imagination plays all around that one little wanderer. Did she, yes it was a girl, have any thought in her mind, when she left the house, that she was going to play truant? Or did she meet some other person who proved stronger than she and persuaded her to give up the idea of going to Sunday School? And where did she go? Whom did she meet? What did she do? How long did she stay? What did she tell the folks when she went home? Did she suffer harm while away from home and not in Sunday School? Is she likely to repeat this little act of deception? What is going to be the final result of her truancy? She is our anxious problem. What can we do about it?

WHAT DID THE P. P. ACCOMPLISH?

The best answer to that question is to tell you the further story of our check-up on the Sunday School the following Sunday. In order that you may appreciate the significance of what we are about to say, let us remind you that Sunday, October 6th, the Sunday following the P. P., was very cold and very rainy. It was just the kind of Sunday afternoon to tempt one to stay home. However, when we called for a check-up of attendance by classes, we were mightily surprised to find that in spite of the inclemency of the weather, FORTY-SIX OF OUR PREVIOUS ABSENTEES WERE PRESENT. Add these to the fourteen who had reported present at the ABSENTEE ROLL CALL; this means that out of the one hundred non-attendants, sixty had reported present.

And are we pleased

Co-operation

What does it mean?—what does it accomplish?

I've just looked up the definition of "co-operation" in the dictionary and learn that it means to act or operate jointly and harmoniously with others. Now to my mind it is very important to know that fact. It seems to me that we are forever using many syllabled words without fully appreciating their inner meaning. CO-OPERATION in spiritual matters means working harmoniously together and with God. That is to say we are working with each other, as well as with God. We are not competing with each other. We are not jealous of what others do. We do not try to make light of the efforts of others. It means we come right out openly and, with a smile, declare ourselves IN on any movement to the Glory of God and the Spread of His Kingdom.

We do not pledge allegiance to any clique, or gang, or crowd which separates itself from the main body. Everything we do we will do in harmony with ALL the Children of God. If we can not work peaceably with each other, how can we possibly do the work of love and peace which God enjoins? Certainly we can not be IN DISCORD with each other and IN HARMONY with God at the same time.

What you and I must do is to go down to the river and drown our egos. They are certainly nothing but nuisances anyhow and are continually getting us into trouble. To our way of thinking the man without an exaggerated ego is almost the perfect man. Anyway, he is a mighty pleasant fellow to meet and work with. And he WILL go more than half way to co-operate. "Playing a lone hand" may seem to be heroic to some anti-social folk; but IT IS NOT GOD'S FAMILY IDEA. Neither you nor I are in competition in spiritual things. We are the Sons and Daughters of INFINITE LOVE and all Love is INFINITE HARMONY. If you will not work with your brother in harmony you are outside the cycle of Love and are in competition with everybody and everything whose motive and inspiration is love And, being out of harmony, you can accomplish no lasting good for your brother or for God. SATAN HATH ENTERED YOUR HEART.

If, on the other hand, you are in co-operation with your brother and with God, your power to perform and accomplish is limitless. There is no such thing as failure when you and I and God co-operate. There never has been and never will be any combination of circumstances or forces that can thwart you when you and I and God work together. Why not try out this combination of power and learn through experience the truth of "United we stand; divided we fall."

With true CO-OPERATION St. John's Church can convert the most besotted sinner and criminal in Southwark.

From Panama

A Letter from Miss McHenry

Ancon, Canal Zone, Sept. 9. Just a few days ago a letter came to the Rectory from Miss Helen McHenry, whom we have "loaned" to the Mission Field in Panama—she is assistant to Miss Ogden, who is in charge of the Children's Home in Ancon, Canal Zone. She writes on September 9:

"I had to look twice at the calendar before I wrote the date on this letter. It is hard to realize that it will be a month tomorrow since I sailed from New York. I have had so many new experiences that time has passed very quickly. I shall never forget how I felt when I first saw and heard these children. I wondered whether I should ever be able to tell them apart—most of them are so dark—and I was quite sure I should never be able to understand them. But now I can't imagine why I ever thought they looked alike! They are as different and as individual as any United States American children. As for understanding them, I have picked up some of the more common Spanish words (I know verbs only in the imperative mood!) and I have become accustomed to their attempts at speaking English. So we get along fairly well.

"I play the organ for the daily chapel services and expect to use some time during the Sunday School period to teach the children some new hymns. 'Golden Harps are Sounding' is their favorite! I have the older group of children, ranging in age from ten to fifteen. But that does not mean a great deal because only four of them are further advanced than the third grade in school! It was so hard to find something they would all understand. We have decided, though, to make a model of the Cathedral; they love to work with their hands and do that kind of work well. Miss Ogden wants me to teach them the Creed and the Lord's Prayer and the Smybols of the Church in connection with their work. The children want some stories, too. I wish you could see them as they listen to a story. Most of them do not understand a word I say, but one of the older children, who knows English, acts as interpreter. When I have said all that I think she can remember, I stop; then she begins 'Dice que'—and then she's off—and sometimes I wonder if I ever said all she says I did.

"The Children's Home was started by Bishop Carson while he was a minister here at St. Luke's. He realized that some such plan was needed for the children up in the interior, and also on the streets here in Panama. Most of the families are desperately poor. They live, whole families, in one room and the houses are very dark and anything but sanitary. Bishop Morris carried on the work and built the Home where we are now. I think their efforts have been rewarded. I have met several of the graduates and they are fine young people. Some of the girls are married and are rearing their children according to the modern methods of child care. Others have good positions in the stores and business houses because they can speak both Spanish and English. Another is just about to enter San Tomas' Hospital to become a nurse. One of the boys is an orderly there at the Hospital, another is a fireman, another works for the Panama Railroad during the day and studies singing at night. He has a very good bass voice and expects to sing in the opera this winter in Panama!

A Group: 3 Philipinos, a Russian and a Panamanian

"The Home has no definite connection with the Cathedral although Dean Wragg is the President of the Board. It is not supported by the National Council or by any other organization, but merely by voluntary contributions. The people in the Canal Zone are donating food because the Governor's wife is very much interested and has asked them to do so. She has tried to reach the people who expect to be in Panama for a few years, so that Miss Ogden can count on them for monthly donations. The food is left at the Cathedral and Miss Ogden gets it in her car. She is the only one who can bring it into Panama because she has special permission from the Government of Panama to do so.

"Most of the children have one parent living, but there are eight who are whole orphans. If the parents can do so, they are asked to help clothe the children. Three of the girls—two ten years old and one four—are provided for entirely by the Home. There are only two boys—German and Cristobal. German is fifteen; Cristobal, whom we call Chichi, is twelve, but rather small for his age. I have charge of the clothes for both of them, and it worries me so because they have next to nothing. Chichi especially needs just about everything a boy could need. It is a problem to keep him decently clothed for school. Around the house he wears overalls that are patches all over. He is a happy little fellow, though, and has a good time playing with the parrot and the goat—and teasing the girls."

Broadcasting From S. J. C.

The burning question before us is our COAL BILL!!!

How old must a boy or girl be to be too old to go to Sunday School?

That Sunday SCHOOL RALLY was a humdinger. And didn't the Junior Choir pep up the occasion?

On the corner of a block is a restaurant with the flaming sign: "Never Closed." On the other corner a drug store displays its motto: "Open All Night."

Between the two Lee Wong has his modest laundry. Not to be outdone he has an electric sign that can be read for a block or more away. It reads: "Me Wakee Too."

It took a long time for the BROADCASTER list to grow; but it is much longer now. Getit?

The yearly cost of crime in the United States is $15,000,000,000, or $120 a year for every citizen. There are 12,000 murders, 100,000 assaults, 50,000 robberies and 40,000 burglaries every year, according to No. 2 G man of the Nation, Clyde Tolson. . . . William Mulqueeney and Irwin Davis, aviators who were forced to kill Len Koenecke, ball player, in an airplane over Toronto, were freed of all charges in connection with the slaying.

We would call the attention of our children's parents to analysis of our SUNDAY SCHOOL MISSIONARY JOURNEY. It is interesting to them from many angles.

"What did you put in this prescription?"

"That I can tell only to the doctor," said the druggist.

"The doctor wants to know. Seems I gave you a Chinese laundry ticket and you filled that."

We have heard favorable comments on our new series of S. S. lessons.

The success of our SUNDAY EVENING SERVICES in the church exceeds our expectations. We hope they will continue to attract.

ARE YOU SATISFIED IN YOUR HEART THAT YOU HAVE GIVEN AS MUCH TO YOUR CHURCH AS YOU HAVE GOT FROM IT? How about your wife, where did you first meet her? How about your husband, where did you first meet him? How about those bright children who were born of that union—are they no asset at all? How about your job? How about that help in time of need? So much for material things. Now, how about the INSPIRATION which stimulated you to reach for the stars of achievement? How about the SPIRITUAL IMPULSE which made you conscious of God? ARE YOU SATISFIED YOU HAVE GIVEN AS MUCH TO THE CHURCH AS THE CHURCH HAS GIVEN TO YOU?

No man, woman or child is justified in staying away from church service BECAUSE THEY ARE BEHIND IN THEIR CHURCH ENVELOPES AND CAN NOT AFFORD TO PAY THEM. Such false consciousness is the Devil's best method of keeping you out of reach of the means of Grace. EVEN IF YOU HAVE NO MONEY TO GIVE YOU CAN AT LEAST GIVE YOUR HEART TO GOD. Who was it who said: "My son, give me thine heart"? Find that sentence in the Bible.

A young woman complained sometime ago that she did not go to church because the young people were not sociable. I am wondering why she attends any church. Did she wish to be entertained, or did she wish to worship? Certainly GOD would have welcomed her warmly even if others did fail to entertain her.

"Before I came to this place I lost my shirt in a foreign enterprise.' '

"How'd it happen?"

"I sent it to a Chinese laundry!"

Teacher: "Who lived in the garden of Eden?"

Little Girl: "The Adams."

MR. SAMUEL SNELL takes first prize in Harvest Home Contributions. His gift of onions, turnips, potatoes, cabbage, apples, etc., were given by the bag and by the basket. Many a poor family will bless him for his magnificent donation. SAMUEL, YOU ARE THE PRINCE OF GIVERS.

What did you think of the results of our PARISH PILGRIMAGE? Personally we think a return of 60 scholars out of a possible hundred absentees is doing pretty good. Especially when you consider it was raining cats and dogs the Sunday they came back.

"Lend me five dollars, old man. I promise you, on the word of a gentleman, to pay it back tomorrow."

"Bring the gentleman around and let me see him."

SIXTY-ONE FAMILIES RECEIVED BIG CARRY-ALL BAGS OF FOOD DONATED AT OUR HARVEST HOME.

The joy of Giving

When love is the motive of our giving the joy of sacrifice becomes a great reality. There is the story of an old Jewish woman, the death of whose only son threw her upon her own resources for support. Their relations had been singularly close even for mother and son. At his death the mother sought ease for her sorrow by erecting the most costly memorial she could afford. At first she considered a great stone monument. Then she said, "No, a dead thing does not satisfy me as a symbol of a living love. I must show my love by a living memorial."

She was a lace-maker. Possessing great skill she was able to repair old heirloom laces so perfectly as to command a considerable income. But she moved out of her comfortable home and took up her abode in a tenement. Every cent she could spare she saved for her son's memorial.

A salesgirl, who sold the old woman thread, developed symptoms of tuberculosis. One day the girl received a letter from a local banker. "My dear Miss—," it ran, "I am very glad to inform you that a sufficient sum of money has been placed in my hands to enable you to go to a Sanatorium where you can recover your health." She went and she was healed.

Almost unbelievable benefactions flowed from the caloused fingers of this one woman out of love for a son. After each one she would look at his picture and say, "Another living memorial for you." Sorrow left her heart and joy entered in and dwelt there.

At the centre of Christ's Gospel is the demand for stewardship. Output and not intake; giving not receiving; losing one's life and not saving it—this Is Christ's way of making life great. The Christian does not simply give because he owes; he gives because he loves.

In a certain convention hall a great sign was displayed bearing the question, "What would you be worth if you lost all your money?" When we come down to the quiet moments, that is a very searching question. It is not "What is my estate worth," but "What am I worth," that counts. And the answer is, "The extent of my love."

This is as true of a Parish as it is of an individual. What is our Parish worth? It is worth what it gives and not a nickel more. It is worth the Faith and Hope and Love it gives, the part it plays in advancing the Mission of the Church, the lives it equips and sends forth for Stalwart service in making "Thy Kingdom come."

We shall respect our Parish, and ourselves as members of the Parish, in proportion as its value is evidenced in what it gives rather than in what it has.—ANONYMOUS.

The Aftermath of Our Harvest Home

Sunday, October 6th, was the occasion of St. John's Harvest Home. Members of the Parish brought donations of vegetables, fruit, groceries, and canned goods to distribute to the poor.

What happened to the stack of food we received?

Well, next evening, certain members of our Parish organizations met Carrie Strang and Miss Schabacker at the church. They had a long list of poor families who needed aid. These good people spent all evening filling carry-all bags with food and other donations. When they were through their task they were surrounded by 61 bags filled with food. These bags were immediately delivered by truck to the needy families. If you average as low as four individuals to a family, it means we have temporarily fed 244 persons. And we know enough of these folk to know they deserved what we gave them and more, too.

Who were they? That's none of your business, we don't publish the names of our needy

It is pitiful to witness the suffering there is in South Philadelphia. One feels so helpless to relieve their misery for nobody seems to be responsible. If you try to locate the trouble all you see is one group pointing the finger and "passing the buck" to another group. Each states in turn they can do nothing because in some mysterious way the family does not come up to the requirements or standards or rules or something of each "relief" group in turn.

Unless these various groups stop their specializing tactics and get busy relieving the distress in South Philadelphia, this winter will be purgatory for the poor.

In the meantime, there is nothing else to do than to appoint a PARISH WELFARE COMMITTEE whose duty will be to search out and report the poor families to the Rector and the Parish Visitor with recommendations as to the needs of each. The Rector in turn will broadcast to the Parish and appeal for aid.

The Rector will ask the members of the DAUGHTERS OF THE KING and the BROTHERHOOD OF ST. ANDREW to act as a joint Committee on Family Welfare.

The Rector will have more to say anon!

Meet the Bility Family

It is quite an interesting group. Allow us to introduce its various members and commend them to your friendship.

A. Bility, Relia Bility, Adapta Bility, Dependa Bility, Amia Bility, Capa Bility, Sta Bility, EquaBility, Plausi Bility and No Bility.

Now that you've met them, shake them by the hand and make them your daily companions.

Our Distinguished Members

ONLY THE NAMES OF THOSE WHO HAVE PAID IN EVERY CHURCH ENVELOPE FROM 12-2-34 to 8-25-35 APPEAR ON THE FOLLOWING LIST.

In keeping with our promise to the Parish we hereby publish the names of the Communicants who owe nothing to the Church. This is a DISTINGUISHED LIST which will be maintained throughout the year and will be published once every quarter.

Not a pat on the back

This making public the names of regular supporters of ST. JOHN'S CHURCH is not just a gesture nor a pat on the back to "jolly" you and others to pay your debts to the church. It is more than that. It is to publish to the parish at large the names of those who CAN and DO afford to support the Church of Jesus Christ by adding their OFFERINGS to their WORSHIP. It is only just and proper that those who are ready to sacrifice for God should be DISTINGUISHED from those who would TAKE ALL and GIVE NOTHING.

We are not ignoring others who would give if they could

We are perfectly aware of the fact that there are many communicants who cannot afford to make a regular offering unto the Lord. This list is no reflection upon their sincerity and spiritual mindedness. As a matter of fact, the really poor of our parish have a special niche in the heart of the Rector. HE WORRIES MORE OVER THEIR STATE THAN HE DOES OVER ANY OTHER PROBLEM OF THE PARISH. How signally he has proved his anxious care of our poor is demonstrated in the material aid he has supplied in the past, and also the number of jobs he has gotten for the unemployed.

All such communicants are well known to us and to the others also. Of course, we cannot look for their names among those who are fortunate to have jobs and are sincere enough Christians to offer God a material expression of their gratitude for His Loving Providence.

Nor do we want them to feel they are not just as welcome as he whose offerings are big. The time WILL NEVER COME when St. John's Church will cease to be the poor man's friend—especially if he is one who is trying to serve his God and his fellow man with whole souled service.

How some of the very poor Worship God

I want every reader of this article to scan the names of the DISTINGUISHED MEMBERS carefully. I want you to check off the names of those you know are aged, sick, shut-in unemployed or dependent. I want you to do this and see for yourself how many of God's suffering children love Him enough to give offerings with their worship. Even the, it is but the widow's mite.

YOU CAN CATCH MORE FLIES WITH MOLASSES, BUT—

Many people think you need sugar to catch some people and get them in a mental and spiritual state to combine OFFERINGS with WORSHIP. Maybe that is true, but I cannot imagine how you can persuade any person WHO TAKES ALL AND GIVES NOTHING to have softening of the heart and give what they know is their just due to God. You will always find they shine as critics of everything in the Church and in the Community. They are always the ones whose very sensitive natures are continually getting lacerated. They are those who accuse the rector of always begging for Money. They are those whose names are never found on any list of givers, either in church nor out of church. WE RESPECT AN HONEST CRITIC, but WE LOATH A HYPROCRITE who hides his guilt by pointing the accusing finger at another.

Our Earnest Prayer

Our earnest prayer is that God will soften the hearts of the MISERLY and SELF-INDULGENT church members of our Parish and teach them how to open their purses and give an Offering to God. We want all our selfish brothers to learn how much more blessed it is to give than to receive.

The Real Offender

The worst offenders in the matter of Church support are those who, out of PURE CARELESSNESS, allow their church envelopes to lapse until they have such a pile that are unpaid they feel they can't afford to catch up.

If they would only be systemmatic and pay each envelope when due, the Church would not be so financially "hard up."

One More Word

We have met certain church members on the street who told us they were not coming back to church until they could pay up all their back envelopes.

Why?

There is no disgrace in being honestly poor. GOD DOES NOT CHARGE ADMISSION TO HIS SERVICES. It is more or less of a reflection against the Church of Jesus Christ to imply that Religion is only for those who can afford such a luxury. I know these sensitive souls do not mean for us to take that view of their act of absenteeism. If you cannot afford to give in your weekly envelopes now; you can at least afford to GIVE YOUR PRESENCE to the service. Your presence in church will increase the number of worshippers and THAT will be to the GLORY OF GOD.

The Coin Card

A new suggestion for raising funds has been made

The Rector distributed several $2.00 Coin Cards before HARVEST HOME DAY to raise money for coal and rent for our poor. Out of this grew the suggestion that if these same coin cards were distributed among the parishioners, no doubt enough money might be raised in a year to meet all bills for repairs and supplies for the Church. Also, it might prove a practical way of raising money for coal and other things.

The suggestion is most appealing and the Rector has decided to give it a try.

Here is the scheme he has in mind. He has ordered 200 Coin Cards. These will be distributed among 200 church members who will be expected to get them filled and return to the Rector.

One girl, Thelma Ewell—took a coin card to get filled for the HARVEST HOME, Sunday, October 6th. She returned the card filled with dimes. The way she did it was to put a dime in the card every time she ate a meal.

THE COIN CARDS ARE READY FOR DISTRIBUTION. In order to place a time limit on returning the cards, we will make a quarterly collection of the cards and also make quarterly distributions of new cards. The first quarterly collection will be the FIRST SUNDAY IN JANUARY, JANUARY 5TH, which will be the EVE OF THE EPIPHANY. Every coin card ought to be returned on that date. If you fill the card BEFORE January 5th, please turn it in and get a new card.

Dear Sir. and Brother:

At a stated meeting of Apollo Lodge, No. 386, F. & A. M., held September 18th, 1935, a resolution of thanks from the Lodge was passed to you, the Rector, and the Senior & Junior Choirs and all others who rendered service at the Masonic Home services on September 8th, 1935. Please communicate this to all concerned on the splendid service.

Yours fraternally,
WILLIAM McCOMBS,
Secretary.

Our Growing Subscription List

This is the first list of subscribers to the PARISH BROADCASTER ever published. For nine years we have published our magazine with no expense to the parish. The advertisements have paid for its printing. Now, however, the cost of publishing it has advanced and we were driven to raise funds from other sources to pay our bills. The only means of doing so was to make a drive for paid subscriptions. The Rector put the matter in the hands of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew and two women of the Parish. The result of their canvass for subscriptions thus far has resulted in the following list of members.

At the end of December the BROADCASTER will be entering its TENTH YEAR OF existence. It is our hope that by that time our subscription list will reach one thousand names.

PLEASE DO NOT TURN DOWN OUR SOLICITORS. By giving your dollar you will be aiding us print the paper.

SEEING GOD

In these days when hearts are weary, men need to see God.—The Author.

Some say God cannot be seen,
  But oftentimes I sit and dream
Out in the great domain, somewhere—
  And I see God!

Among the trees when all is still,
Except the birds' triumphant thrill,
I pause and gaze, most anywhere,
  And I see God!

I see Him in the flowers, there:
The sweetest fragrance fills the air;
Each bush and tree is ecstasy!
I look beyond, and what I see
  Is God! Is God!

—C. Forest Nichols.

EXAMINATION

Now it is night.
  How much of waste was this fine day?
How many hours have I thrown,
  With indiscretion, to the winds away?

What was my score?
Did I employ for gainful use
Each minute mine to build upon,
  Or dissipatingly abuse?

Am I tonight
A better man than when the dawn
Proclaimed that chance was newly born?
  Or have I left my day in pawn?

Now it is night.
What conquest mine: what battles won?
I can't fool me! Come, truthfully,
  What have I gained? What have I done?

—Jos. R. Cushing.

'TIS BETTER

'Tis better to say or give one thing
  Or to do one tiny deed,
Than to plan to do great ones some day
  For those who are now in need.

'Tis better to do a thing today
  Than to wait for future years;
Tomorrow may be a day too late,
  And bring but regret and tears.

DEAR SANTA CLAUS

Dear Santa Claus, please bring to us,
And folks of every land,
The rarest gift you've ever brought . . .
I think you understand.
It is not wealth, not power, nor fame,
Nor ships on seven seas;
It is not stately buildings . . . no,
We have enough of these.
It is not guns nor bayonets,
Nor mighty submarines;
It is not airships for the air,
Nor powerful gas machines.
The thing we want is simple, quite,
But means our soul's release . . .
We're asking that you bring to us
The priceless gift of Peace.
So, put on extra reindeer, please,
Place sideboards on your sleigh,
Let cloudless skies be overhead
To make your day a day;
Then hurry from your Northland home
To homes of every ken;
Leave Peace in all the stockings, please,
And in the hearts of men.

VAN FOK

(A Thousand Joys)

A Christmas Story Founded on Fact

By Wm. H. Jefferys, M. D.

The professors in Saint John's University, Shanghai, work very hard up to about half-past four or five, when, as is the custom there, they have a cup of tea and then take their daily exercise. For most of them it is tennis or a few holes of golf. Others join the Chinese college boys in their sports and help in their training in baseball, football and track athletics, but it is the common habit with the president of the college—who is known to his friends as "the Doctor", but always called "lau-hoo" (tiger) by the Chinese college boys—to walk off in the country with one or more companions, where there is complete change of scene and surroundings.

William H. J. Jefferys, M. D.
The Friend of All Little Van Foks

One chilly evening in the late autumn, the Doctor was returning from such a walk with a friend. They were a mile or so from home and it was growing dark. As they were hurrying along they crossed a wide creek by means of a narrow stone bridge, and were about to strike out across the fields when they noticed something moving on the muddy bank of the creek. At first they thought it was a dog, but feeling doubtful, they stopped to see, and what they did see was a most miserable little girl who looked about six years of age, sitting on the muddy bank with her head in her hands and sobbing to herself. Her blue cotton clothes were thin and patched and filthy. There were just three things that she had on: a short and ragged coat and trousers, and the bit of red yarn that kept together her plaited hair. She appeared to be lost. She was evidently tired almost to death and looked numb with cold and hunger. Her little body was shaking in the cool night air. If one might judge, it looked to be the most miserable moment in a very wretched little life—a wee child, hungry, ragged, filthy and lost.

Then suddenly someone spoke to her. She did not look up, but she had seen two figures coming towards her as she peeped between her fingers. You can imagine how terrified she was to see standing right in front of her "two foreign devils", and that they were apparently talking to her. Of course her tongue stuck to the roof of her mouth; at any rate she did not answer, though they asked her a number of questions about who she was and where she came from. She looked as if she wanted to run away, but could not move from weakness and from fright. The "two foreign devils", who were the Doctor and his friend, talked together in a foreign language and then began to ask her more questions. What they said was certainly most kindly, but she had probably often been told that these foreigners did terrible things to children, such as taking out the eyes of babies to make into medicine, so, if she thought at all, she probably thought they were trying to fool her and then kidnap her.

The Doctor said that he was quite sure that she must be a runaway slave girl and that it would not be possible to tell which village she came from since there were villages in every direction. And, since she would not say a word in answer to them and as she was so thin and weak and hungry and cold and—well, he just stooped down and picked her up in his arms and carried her home without any more questions about the matter at all. Of course, the little girl—whom we are going to call "Van Fok" and who is a real little girl, though that is only her name for us—well, she thought she was a "goner" then—kidnapped for sure. We said before that she looked about six years old, but she was really about ten. The four years that did not show were probably the result of bad treatment and hunger and misery. She was a frail little bundle and the Doctor carried her easily. She believed they meant to kill her and make medicine out of her, and she was perfectly helpless and in a panic of fright. Naturally she would not answer any question they asked her. One reason was, of course, her fright; another reason was that, wrapped up in the Doctor's strong arms with his warm coat partly folded about her, and rocked by the motion of his swinging walk, she soon fell sound asleep, and there was another reason—

The last thing that she heard—if she heard at all was the friend saying laughingly to the Doctor that she seemed not to even hear what they said, let alone to be able to speak, and the Doctor leaning over her said: "I don't believe you have a tongue at all"—and perhaps she did not.

When she awoke she found herself surrounded by several women. One was a foreigner, but the rest were her own people. They seemed to be taking all her clothes off. Then they put her in a big, hot bath tub. This was the first deep hot bath she had ever had, where she could get all wet at one time. She heard one of them say to take her clothes out and burn them, but as they had prepared a beautiful, clean, new set of clothes for her, it did not matter. Several times the foreign woman said "she must be dumb". Her poor little body was just skin and bones, but it did feel good to be warm, and as she could still see, they evidently had not yet taken her eyes out. She had always heard that foreigners had evil eyes, but all these people seemed to look at her very kindly, and, although they laughed at her a little bit, it did not seem to hurt.

After her bath she was rubbed dry with a really white towel, and then dressed all in fresh clothes, and her body and legs were wrapped in a warm blanket. There was hot milk to drink and some thin rice gruel (hyi-van) and a real bed instead of a place on the floor, and a whole clean "bi-deu" instead of a piece of a ragged and filthy quilt, and then a long, deep sleep. In the morning and through the next day the women asked her many questions, but she did not appear to hear. She sat all the time with her hands between her knees, her shoulders stooped, her eyes half closed, and her face immovable and terribly sad. Her feet bore the marks of overtight bandaging, and several large bruises were on her body—the marks of her slavery. There was no doubt now she was a slave girl who had run away from her mistress, probably after some particularly hard beating. She had perhaps not intended to stay away, but only wished to escape for the time being, but she had wandered on and on and finally lost herself completely.

Towards evening, after a long and very determined effort to make her say something it was evident to all that she was dumb and they thought she might be deaf also—and the college physician was sent for and agreed that she was dumb. What were they to do with a deaf and dumb child? They could not send her home because they had not the faintest idea where she came from. So wretched was her condition that the probabilities were her mistress would not make any move at all to get her back—indeed, would not want her back. They could not send her to school or put her in "the Orphanage" because she could learn nothing there, and would only keep the other pupils back. After consultation with the Chinese Christians it was decided to put her in a refuge for slave girls which has been built by foreigners in Shanghai and where are put such slave girls as are taken away from their mistresses by the court; or, as in the case of Van Fok, lost or deserted. ("Van Fok" means "A Thousand Joys". Chinese girls usually have pretty names with very pretty meanings, but the meanings don't always come true.) So, on the third day little Van Fok and Mrs. Doctor rode together in a rickasha about three miles to the slave refuge. A very attractive place it seemed to her, though very strange. There were about sixty girls from four to sixteen years of age in the charge of a foreign woman named "Huh"—that, at least, is what they called her—and, after a pat on the head, Mrs. Doctor left her, telling Miss Huh, who is really a lovely deaconess from America, all about the finding of Van Fok, about her being deaf and dumb and that the bishop's wife, who is the president of the Slave Refuge had sent Van Fok to live there.

It was, you remember, late in the autumn when the little dumb girl came into our lives, whom, since she could not tell us her name, we named "Van Fok". The weeks went by in the refuge; she could not study with the other children, nor join in their games, and for the most part they left her alone. What was the use of trying to talk to a deaf and dumb person, especially to one who never smiled? And she got into the habit of sitting by the hour with her hands between her knees and her eyes on the ground, and with an almost helpless look on her tired little face—but she did begin to get a little color in her cheeks, and she did get a little fatter day by day.

Then Christmas came and, as in all mission schools and hospitals, it is the custom of the Slave refuge also to keep the children's Feast Day. After breakfast, fresh clothes for everybody and service in the chapel, with Christmas flowers and greens and lots of pretty carols, and then a fine feast for everybody, and finally a special present for each child. These presents which are usually dolls for the younger girls and pretty clothes for the older, and books, etc., are especially chosen by the ladies of the refuge. Early in November a list is made of all the children with their names and ages, and with this list to go by, special presents are prepared, and the name of a special child pinned to each present. It takes some time to do this nicely and so it is begun early.

* * * * *

Now all the children are gathered in a big circle in the common room, and, after a little speech, the presents are given out one by one, handed to each child. All the presents have at last been given and the room is ringing with laughter and merry with sunshine and happiness. But gradually a quiet, and a sort of sadness begins to fall. One and then another and then another has realized that all the children in the room have received presents except Van Fok and that she is sitting, as ever, silent, with her hands between her knees, and with her dull eyes hardly raised off the ground. It is easy to see how this happened. The list was made early and before Van Fok came, and somehow the child was so different from all the others, so much a thing apart, no one ever quite got to the point of realizing that she had belonged on the list. She was tenderly cared for and much thought of, but somehow she seemed a thing apart. So, gradually the room became quiet and more and more all eyes turned towards Van Fok. There was finally almost a silence in the big room—an awkward pause—no one knew quite what to do. No one could even tell a deaf and dumb girl that she would bring her a doll tomorrow or some other time. It would not have helped matters.

At last, way across the room, Menli (Beautiful-Beautiful), a child of twelve years old, who has been in the refuge for three years, takes a long and earnest look at Van Fok—

Then she looks down at her doll—

Then she looks again—

Then she looks at her doll once more—

Then she swallows a big lump in her throat—

Then she takes her doll in both hands and walks straight across the room and stands in front of Van Fok—and as she walks a smile breaks out on her face and grows more and more sunny all the way over.

Then she holds out her doll to Van Fok and keeps holding it there.

For a moment Van Fok doesn't make a move, but her eyes become gradually fixed on the doll. For a moment only they are raised to Menli's face and quickly lowered again and there is another pause. Then once more she looks up, this time just a shadow of a smile stealing across her face. Her hands slip out from between her knees and she stretches them both out in Chinese fashion and takesthe doll and folds it gently to her breast. Then she stands up slowly but quite firmly and with her eyes on Menli's face, her lips open, and tremblingly, but perfectly plainly, she says, "Thank you!"

THE BABIES' HOSPITAL OF PHILADELPHIA

Cor. Seventh and Delancey Sts., Philadelphia, Pa.

H. Cresson McHenry, D.D.,
238 West Apsley Street,
Philadelphia, Penna.

My dear Dr. McHenry

A few days ago the nurses in charge of the Weighing Center at St. John's Church handed me a report of the special work of the month. We feel that it is a very good report and I think that you might like to know about it. There were thirty-seven vaccinations, thirty-five diphtheria preventions, and two Schick tests. A very gratifying point is the fact that thirty of the children treated had both the smallpox and diphtheria prevention.

In addition to the medical results which we hope are obtained, we find that health education is growing in popularity among the mothers who attend the Center.

Sincerely yours,
Bella M. Davis
Supervisor: Department of Social and Health Service.

NOTE: St. John's Baby Clinic is one of the oldest as well as the largest in the city. Mothers and babies regardless of creed or color are given scientific advice and treatment.

WHY SOME MEN ARE GREAT

Greatness is not a matter of ponderous intellect, or great physical strength or fortuitous opportunity; but the result of spiritual bigness.

A few days after our fall Confirmation Class one of its members met with a most painful accident which resulted in the amputation of several of his toes. He was confined in the Crozier Hospital, Chester, for several days. The Rector felt Mr. Lewis ought to receive immediate attention, but was utterly unable to render it owing to a pressure of work he could not push aside.

Somebody made the remark that our Bishop was in the habit of visiting Crozier Hospital once a week in a pastoral way. Without any assurance as to the reliability of our information, we wrote Bishop Taitt a letter stating we understood he made these weekly visits and, if such were the case, would he include in his visitations our accident friend whom he had so recently confirmed. He did not say he would or he wouldn't, but in a few days we received the following letter from George Lewis.

Crozier Hospital,
Chester, Pa., 11/3/35.

Dear Pastor:

I received your welcome letter last week and was very glad to hear from you. I am sorry I cannot be with you today, but expect to be with you soon.

I had a visitor yesterday, one you asked to see me; the Bishop called on me and he told me you asked him to visit me if he could and he said he liked the work. We had a very pleasant chat. He spoke of the fine class you had for confirmation and hoped you would keep up the good work.

I am improving slowly, but hope to be home soon.

Wishing you success in your work, I am
Your humble servant,
George Lewis.

It gives us a great deal of pleasure to publish the letter because it indicates the real greatness of the Bishop of Pennsylvania; and explains why he is so popular, especially among the lowly.

ST. JOHN'S BOYS CLUB

Reorganization of the Boys' Club for the coming year was held on Thursday evening, October 3, 1935. The officers for the coming year are:

President—Wm. Clendenning

Vice-President—John Dean

Secretary and Treasurer—Wm. Nugent

Our evening begins with a short business meeting; followed by a drill in calisthenics, succeeded by games for everyone. The club is divided into two groups. One consisting of the older boys and the other, the younger boys.

The organization of a basketball team to represent the club has been a means by which St. John's is getting to be known in various boys' clubs throughout the city. Incidentally, our team beat the strong Perry Boys' Club by the score of 25-19, in a very fast and well-played game.

Ping-pong was introduced into the club and has met with great enthusiasm. From the "big" to the "little" fellows, the game is giving much satisfaction.

Amateur night was held on Hallowe'en. The boys in their costumes gave impersonations of various screen and radio stars. Major Bowes' hour had nothing on St. John's Boys' Club. It would have done the Major good to have been with us. And believe me, the usual gong had no place in that troupe of performers. They were great!

Remember, boys, Thursday evenings from 7.00 to 9.45 o'clock. An invitation is extended to any boy desirous of becoming a member, if he will remember to be present at the above evening and stated time. Remember our motto:

"A sound mind in a sound body."

A NEW EXERCISE FOR OUR INTERMEDIATE

Mrs. John Nelson, Jr., one of the popular teachers of our Intermediate Department, tried out a stunt with the kids which is getting surprising results in the matter of thinking through to moral and spiritual things. It is the fascinating game of acrostics applied to religion.

We submit some samples to show you how well the children can express themselves in fundamental morality.

Helen Patterson's Acrostic (Age 8)

Fill your heart with love.
Obey God.
Read about God in the Bible.
God will forgive us if we are sorry.
In God we trust.
Very few children do not tell the truth.
Every child should go to Sunday School

Elizabeth Easterday's Acrostic

Fathers and mothers should go to church.
Open the Bible and read about Jesus.
Read and learn the Ten Commandments
Give in money for Jesus.
I love to learn about God.
Visit the House of God.
Every day we should learn about God.

Ruth Rudder ow's Acrostic

For little ladies it is best for them to go to Sunday School.
Other people can go, too.
Rules to learn about God.
God will help you if you ask Him.
I go to Sunday School every Sunday.
Visit God's house every day you can.
Even if it is only Sunday, you are welcome.

Can any one reading these thought-out sentences of these little girls doubt the practical nature of their spiritual training.

CORPORATE COMMUNION OF THE MEN AND BOYS OF THE PARISH

At the weekly meeting of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew held Sunday, November 10, it was resolved that the Rector of the Parish be asked to appoint the Sunday morning nearest St. Andrew's Day (November 30th) for A CORPORATE CELEBRATION OF THE HOLY COMMUNION FOR THE MEN AND BOYS OF THE PARISH. Acting upon the request of the Society, the Rector announces that the service will be celebrated SUNDAY, DECEMBER 1ST, at 9.00 A. M., which is the day following St. Andrew's Day.

The Corporate Communion for Men and Boys of the Parish of St. John the Evangelist has become a regular annual gathering and is always well attended. This year we are making special efforts to see how near 100 per cent. of our male communicants will come out and receive.

Now do not get us wrong! We are not working for a big display of men. What we are striving to do is to get every man and boy to show his loyalty to Jesus Christ and His Cause by courageously stepping forward and kneeling before His Altar of sacrifice and receive from Him the Sacraments of His Love.

Being the first Sunday in the month, therefore being the Sunday on which we naturally celebrate the Holy Communion at the 10.45 o'clock service, we feel that most of our men and boys would count on making their Communion as usual. We chose that day, therefore, and the hour of 9 A. M. as a most acceptable time for ALL THE MEN AND BOYS OF THE PARISH to receive. Those male members of the parish who cannot attend the 9 o'clock celebration will, of course, be welcome to receive at the regular 10.45 o'clock service.

We Want Every St. Johnite Out

Remember the Date and the Hour,

Sunday, Dec. 1st, 9:00 A. M.

SHALL WE PRAY OR SHALL WE PLAY?

Tuesday, November 5th, all Philadelphia went to the polls to vote on this momentous question.

The ballot was 5 to 1 in favor of playing.

It was joyously hailed as a big "moral" victory over the Sunday Blue Laws. It was a "strike for freedom".

Oh Yeah!

Now suppose we put up the following resolution for popular decision at our next election:

"RESOLVED, THAT WE, THE CITIZENS OF PHILADELPHIA, CLOSE ALL THE CHURCHES AND SYNAGOGUES AND TAKE THE BIBLE OUT OF THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS."

Were I one of those gamblers who bet only on sure things I'd offer all comers 1,000 to 1 it would pass at a ratio of 95 to 5 or better.

WHY?

Because Philadelphia is just the same as every community in the world. It is overwhelmingly pagan.

BUT THEN IT IS IMPROVING GREATLY.

Why, there was one time in history when there was only one Christian in the world.

AND THEY CRUCIFIED HIM.

BUT TODAY!

Look around you and you will find literally hundreds of thousands of followers of the Nazarene who seriously practice his ideals, and pray.

Religion and morality always have been unpopular. That Sunday movie vote will not affect Sunday evening church attendance by so much as 1. They who voted in favor of it belong to a class who lack the delicate discrimination between the spiritual and the sensual.

IN THEIR IGNORANCE THEY EMPHASIZE THE WRONG THING.

Some will not like that observation and will pour confusion upon me by proving they do go to church Sunday morning and put their penny in the Alms Basin.

Now! Now! You mustn't try to fool old foxy grandpa!

He knows you go SOMETIMES to Church SOME Sunday mornings, if it's raining and you can't go elsewhere. He has seen you there once every so often.

But what he wants to know is why are you hiding what you do the other 167 hours in the week.

You can no more be a genuine Christian by spending one hour a week in church on Sunday morning, engage in all sorts of sports Sunday afternoon and wind up God's day in the movies, than could an ancient mystic take time out from his orisons and read sex stories and remain a mystic.

What we are really concerned about is the matter of commercializing our Philadelphia Sunday by a New York Syndicate whose only interest in the movie game is one of dollars and cents—money which will be taken out of Philadelphia and spent in New York in a desperate attempt to bolster up the movie bonds which are steadily depreciating in value and today are worth little more than the paper on which they are printed. All the big and soft jobs in the syndicate are held by New York people; only the little laboring jobs are doled out to Philadelphians.

It seems to me that we Philadelphians are pretty careless in disposing of our Sunday birthright to gratify the greed of a foreign syndicate and to encourage the big irreligious population of our city to contemptuously sweep the ideals of Jesus Christ into the ash can. But then New York always did laugh at Philadelphia. To them we are just boobs.

Of course, the triumph of sensualists is but temporary. The pendulum of the clock of Eternity swings both ways, and sooner or later the forces of materialism will crash down in utter destruction under the impact of the backswing, and the Spiritual Verities will prevail.

Man still ruins, BUT God still reigns.

What do you think of the FIRESIDE CLUB idea?

He: "What part of the car causes the most accidents?"
She: "The nut that holds the wheel."—Widow.

All our accident cases seem to be progressing nicely.

There's one man in the Parish who thinks Bishop Taitt is a great Bishop. He's the fellow the Bishop visited in Crozier Hospital, Chester, Pa.

"Get my kit ready quick," shouted the doctor. "Some fellow has phoned that he can't live without me."

"Oh, that call is for me," said his daughter as she seized the phone and glued her ear to it.

How much more "prosperous" are you now than before the movies opened on Sunday? Wasn't that an awful bunch of horse feathers they tickled you with?

The manager of a circus was hearing complaints from his employees.

Magnolius: "You says anything to me big boy. an' I'll make you eat yo' words!"

Florian: "Chicken dumplin's, hot biscuits, an' watermelon!"—The Sentinel.

Our Sunday evening services are much better attended since we resumed them in the church auditorium. But what puzzles us is where, oh where, are those members who solemnly promised they would attend evening service when we stopped holding them in the Sunday School room? Three months have come and gone since we opened up the church and they have not yet appeared.

A school inspector began by putting a few questions to the small girls.

"Now," he said, "if all the good people were white and all the bad people were black, what color would you be?"

Some of the children said white and others black, but little Gloria, who had remained silent until the others replied, said, "Please, sir, I'd be streaky."—London Opinion.

Both the Daughters of the King and the Brotherhood of St. Andrew Chapters are accomplishing great results for the parish. Why don't you identify yourself with one or the other?

An itinerant musician was stranded in a village one Sunday morning, and as he was playing his cornet in the street, he was approached by the clergyman of the parish, who said, "Do you know the Fourth Commandment, my good man?"

"No," the man replied, "but if you will just whistle it over I'll do my best."—London Daily Telegraph.

DON'T

buy your Christmas presents on the installment plan. You will be 'till next Christmas paying the bills. By that time you will have a new boy friend —girl friend. And won't that be embarrassing?

A Scotsman on a visit to Canada noticed the mounted head of a bull moose hanging in the hall of the house where he was staying. He asked his host what kind of an animal it was.

"Oh that's a moose," said his host.

"A moose!" exclaimed the Scot. "Eh, mon, what are your rats like over here?"

HOW WOULD YOU LIKE TO JOIN THE FIRESIDE CLUB?

What is its object? Well, that is a sensible question to ask, for who knows whether they want to belong to anything before they know what they are joining?

The idea of the FIRESIDE Club germinated in a certain group of parishioners who were discussing the unsatisfactory return of the Coal Envelopes on Coal Sunday. Out of a possible 980 returns we received the number you see published in this issue of the BROADCASTER. We were speculating as to the cause of this peculiar disinterestedness in so vital a thing as heating the church and parish house. Everybody had their explanation of the phenomenon, yet there was underneath the common feeling that the matter of Coal Collections was wrong. For reasons that are very obvious the appointing of a certain Sunday in the year as COAL SUNDAY is not altogether practicable and does not produce the required results i. e. the needed funds to pay our winter coal bill. One or two of these reasons will illustrate our point. For instance, a parishioner may find it impossible to give A DOLLAR to the Coal Fund on COAL SUNDAY because he could not afford it; especially if he is a married man and unemployed. Again ONE DOLLAR looks as big as one hundred cents and some of our spiritual astigmatic brothers have chills and fever every time you suggest to them to be a good sport and pay their share of our coal bill. Also many, who conscientiously feel they cannot give a dollar on Coal Sunday are ashamed to give less, solve their problem by giving nothing. Others, and lots of others at that, just pay no attention to COAL SUNDAY and leave us to worry how to raise money to pay coal bills. Hence the suggestion of:

THE FIRESIDE CLUB

The idea, suggested by one of the group, is to form a Parish Club under the suggested name and invite everybody of the parish to join. Each member will receive a book in which will be entered once a month the sum of 10 cents or more for adults as their dues to the Fireside Club.

The Junior Firesiders can join and be members in good standing by paying 5 cents or more a month as their dues.

To be a junior one must be under 14 years of age.

The advantage of being a Firesider, either senior or junior, is that on the Sunday set aside as COAL SUNDAY, the paid-up members of the Club WILL NOT BE EXPECTED to turn in a coal envelope. The dues they pay each month will be the only assessment required of them.

Also, the names of all paid-up Firesiders will appear in the BROADCASTER published immediately after COAL SUNDAY. The FIRESIDE MONTHLY DUES will be collected by your District Captain on his monthly rounds to deliver your Broadcaster or your Communion notice.

Every Firesider will be provided with an account book costing about 10 cents in which the District Captain must enter every payment due on the date received. Just like you pay your insurance, except instead of being weekly payments, they will be monthly payments. The advantages of the are apparent at once. No adult and few junior Firesiders will find it a hardship to pay such small monthly dues. On the other hand those same small dues will be ample to pay our annual coal bill every winter.

Beginning JANUARY 1, 1936, we will organize our FIRESIDE CLUB and will give every parishioner a chance to make application for membership.

Remember, by joining the FIRESIDE CLUB and paying your small monthly dues you will not need to pay a dollar on Coal Sunday to be in good standing. Your Fireside Due Book, if fully paid up, is your guarantee of good standing.

And also remember, all boys and girls under 14 years of age can be Junior Firesiders by the paying of 5 cents a month every month.

All who join by the last Sunday in January, 1936, will be registered as Charter Members of the Fireside Club

THE DAUGHTERS OF THE KING

Sunday, November 10, the Daughters of the King Chapter of the Parish presented three candidates for Installation into their Chapter. The service is both beautiful and impressive and we are sure the newly installed members must have been inspired to greater activity in the service to their Heavenly Father. One incident that marred the occasion was the absence of the Directress of the Chapter, Miss M. B. Fisher, who is always present at the D. of K. Meetings unless prevented, as she was on this occasion, by sickness. In her absence, the Secretary of the Chapter, Mrs. Rudolph Woerner, acted in her stead. The hearty responses of the members of the Chapter was a feature of the service which was very intriguing.

Ever since the Daughters of the King have held their weekly meetings on Sunday evenings before church service, they have had surprisingly interesting sessions. The devotional service is followed by an earnest discussion of the condition of the parish financially and spiritually. Its members are most active in visiting the sick of the parish, looking up delinquent church members and Sunday School scholars; reporting to the rector cases of distress and need, arranging with him for christenings, exhorting members who are delinquent in their church dues, soliciting members who have no packages of church envelopes to take and use them.

Then, too, the Daughters of the King are a praying group. Their loyalty to God's service means more than just meeting weekly, talking over parochial conditions, going forth in the interest of the people; but when need arises they can and do read the Bible to and pray with those who are sick, shut-in, aged or unable through poverty, or family cares, to attend church service.

Their ministrations in the Parish are of the highest spiritual order. Their advice and assistance to the Rector is such as only women can give. And we thank God for such consecration. May their membership and influence grow more and more.

A cordial invitation is extended to all the women of the parish to attend the D. of K. Sunday evening meetings at 7.30 o'clock. Whether you are a member or not you will be warmly welcomed, especially if you sincerely desire to do service for the Heavenly Father.

The Rector tries to attend every Sunday evening meeting.

Will you be a DAUGHTER OF THE KING, and, as a gracious Princess, serve your sovereign with loyal devotion in spreading the influence of his realm?

BROTHERHOOD CHAPTER

We congratulate the Parish upon having such an active body of men as the Brotherhood of St. Andrew. It is an organization that has dedicated its services, individually and collectively, to parochial work under the guidance of the Rector. The progress it has made this year is amazing. For instance, their practical missionary work among men and boys of the parish was an important and solid factor in our presenting 90 candidates this year for Confirmation. Through their active service and personal delivery of the Broadcaster to our members our bills for postage have been greatly reduced.

The monthly delivery of notices of the Holy Communion have enormously increased the attendance at that service. The line of men and boys at the last Celebration was most imposing. Again the postage for circulating letters and envelopes for Coal Sunday was cut to a minimum by means of their aid in delivering them personally.

Their constant and regular visiting among the members of the church is building up contacts between the families and the church which are most cordial and helpful to all concerned. They are in a position to correct any misconception in the minds of the people and to interpret the wishes of the rector as to his ambitions for the future of the parish.

This parochial work is not done in an haphazard or systemless way. The Parish is divided into districts. Each district is under the Captaincy of one Brotherhood man. He is entitled to draft as many assistants as he needs from among the Brotherhood. He has in his custody a permanent register of the families living in his district. If a family or person moves out of his district into another, he transfers the register card to the Captain of the district in which the party has moved.

Through their activities the Rector has a better comprehension of the male portion of his Parish than he ever had in the past. He gratefully acknowledges the lifting of this responsibility from his shoulders.

The wonderful feature of the work is the true spirit of co-operation and harmony that exists in the Brotherhood. We have our different opinions, naturally. But the consideration and courtesy each shows for the views of the other is a demonstration of Christian acceptance of the views and feelings of others. Opposition is never shown in an aggressive manner. Co-operation is anxiously sought on all questions and ventures.

The weekly service of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew is brief but earnest. Everybody is expected to know how to pray and to exercise himself in public prayer when asked by the Director to do so. Naturally the spirit of service and consecration is deep and real among the members.

No, we are not a group of supermen, nor are we saints of light. We are just men, conscious of all our shortcomings and anxious to do something for God and our brother to prove we are aware of our responsibilities as Christians for the progress of the Kingdom.

If other men of the Parish are looking for a means to do practical service for Jesus Christ, we welcome them to our Brotherhood. However, do not seek admission if you are not ready to serve. We cannot have our work impaired through lack of interest and inclination.

This Brotherhood business is a business. We want all consecrated, loyal and true men and boys to join our ranks. We need every man who will work for the glory of God and the spread of His Kingdom.

Are You the Man We Need?

THE CHURCH

(The lins of the old poet, George Herbert, have in them much good counsel for modern churchgoers. In reproducing them we have used the old-style spelling.)

When once thy foot enters the church behave,
God is more there than thou; for thou are there
Onely by his permission. Then beware,
And make thyself all reverence and fear.
Kneeling ne'er spoiled silk stocking. Quit thy state.
All are equally within the church's gate.

Resort to sermons, but to prayers most;
Praying's the end of preaching. O be drest,
Stay not for th' other pin. Why, thou hast lost
A joy for it worth worlds. Thus hell doth jest
Away thy blessings, and extreamly flout thee:
Thy clothes being fast, but thy soul loose about thee.

In time of service seal up both thine eies,
And send them to thine heart; that, spying sinne,
They may weep out the stains by them did rise.
Those doors being shut, all by the are comes in
Who marks in church-time others symmetrie,
Makes all their beauty his deformitie.

Let vain or busie thoughts have there no part;
Bring not thy plough, thy plots, thy pleasures thither.
Christ purged his temple; so must thou thy heart;
All worldly thoughts are but theeves, met together
To cousin thee . . .

Judge not the preacher, for he is thy judge.
If thou mislike him, thou conceiv'st him not.
God calleth preaching folly. Do not grudge
To pick out treasures from an earthen pot.
The worst speak something good; if all want sense,
God takes text and preacheth patience.

Jest not at preacher's language or expression.
How know'st thou but thy sinnes made his miscarry?
Thn turn thy faults and his into confession.
God sent him, whatsoe're he be. O tarry
And love him for his Master. His condition,
Though it be ill, makes him no ill physician.

"NOT GROWING OLD"

They say that I am growing old.
I've heard them tell it times untold,
In language plain and bold—
But I'm not growing old.
This frail old shell in which I dwell
Is growing old, I know full well—
But I am not the shell.
What if my hair is turning gray?
Gray hairs are honorable, they say.
What if my eyesight's growing dim?
I still can see to follow Him
Who sacrificed His life for me
Upon the Cross of Calvary.
What should I Care if Time's old plow
Has left its furrows on my brow?
Another house, not made with hand,
Awaits me in the Glory Land.
What tho I falter in my walk?
What tho my tongue refuse to talk?
I still can tread the Narrow Way;
I still can watch, and praise, and pray.
My hearing may not be as keen
As in the past it may have been,
Still I can hear my Saviour say
In Whispers soft, "This is the way."
The outward man, do what I can
To lengthen out his life's short span.
Shall perish, and return to dust,
As everything in nature must.
The inward man, the Scriptures say,
Is growing stronger every day,
Then how can I be growing old
When safe within my Saviour's fold?
E're long my soul shall fly away,
And leave this tenement of clay,
This robe of flesh I'll drop, and rise
To seize the "everlasting prize,"—
I'll meet you on the Streets of Gold,
And prove that I'm not growing old.

For which cause we faint not; but though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day.

II Cor. 4:16-18

THE FIRESIDE CLUB

The Idea Is Catching the Imagination

Again we wish to bring to the attention of the Parishioners the new and very important organization, the FIRESIDE CLUB. We have been gratified to see how the idea has caught the imagination of the members of our Parish. The Club is actually launched and is gaining new members every day.

The object of the Club is to raise our Coal Fund by means of easy monthly payments of 10 cents a month for adult members and five cents a month for boys and girls fourteen years of age and under.

The plan is a very simple one. A person wishing to join pays ten cents for a due book and they have joined. After that the District Superintendent calls at the member's home once a month on or near the fifteenth of the month to collect and enter the receipt in the due book. Folks out of parish bounds bring their due books and their assessments on the Sunday nearest the 15th of the month, pay over their dues and get their receipt.

One book is sufficient for five members of a family as there is only one monthly collection and there are five blank spaces for each month in the due book.

If there are more than five persons in a family two books will suffice.

Some of the Fireside members have paid a year's dues already. That is 10 cents for their due book and $1.20 monthly dues, making in all $1.30. The same can be done by any member of the Parish and they retain their receipted due book as their evidence that they have paid in full.

On Sunday, December 29th, the Rector received a returned due book with $2.00 cash to be credited in the book. This book is the property of one of the oldest and poorest women of the Parish. She wanted to be sure that "the church did not suffer if anything should happen to her."

IF GOD HAD MORE SUCH LOYAL CHILDREN, WHAT A DIFFERENT WORLD THIS WOULD BE!

The only adverse criticism we have heard respecting the plan of the FIRESIDE CLUB is the person did not believe in paying on the installment plan. That is scarcely a sound objection, for, even though one should hold that peculiar view, he is still at liberty to follow the example of the consecrated octogenarian widow and pay the year's dues in advance.

Others have followed this example and are paid in full until January, 1937.

Of course, it is understood that those who join the FIRESIDE CLUB and pay regularly through the year, will not be expected to contribute any assessment on Coal Sunday and will receive no coal envelope except on request, but their names WILL appear in the list of contributors to the COAL FUND that will be published in the BROADCASTER as usual.

Why Was the Fireside Club Organized?

For the good and sufficient reason that the Parish must raise funds to pay its coal bill. The old method of appointing a Sunday in November as COAL SUNDAY; then spending several dollars for 500 mimeographed letters and envelopes; also several dollars more for special coal envelopes; also spending a week steadily directing the letters to the families and individuals of the Parish; also writing the name of each parishioner upon the Coal Envelope to be deposited on the Alms Basin; also spending several more days in crediting the money to each giver; also making up an alphabetical list of names for the Broadcaster, running the risk of missing somebody's name and giving offense; also, after going to this enormous trouble, to receive a return of only about 1-7 of the Coal Envelopes prepared and issued, because the parishioners receiving them are too poor to pay down one dollar all at one time and are too proud to pay less. The Rector does an enormous job and gets a pitifully meager return for the labor of his staff and himself; and, with the menace of a shortage in the Coal Fund hanging over him all winter.

JOIN THE FIRESIDE CLUB

The FIRESIDE CLUB method wipes out these bills for printing, stationery and stamps for mailing outside the Parish. It lifts this load of labor from your Rector's shoulders. It makes it possible for the poorest in the parish to contribute and it provides an adequate revenue to meet our coal bill however severe the winter may be.

ANY PARISHIONER WHO HAS THE INTEREST OF HIS PARISH AT HEART MUST SEE THAT IT IS THE ONLY POSSIBLE AND PRACTICAL MEANS OF MEETING THE SITUATION.

So be loyal and true and join the easy payment plan of buying our Church Coal and lighten the burden of responsibility of your Rector.

OUR DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENTS

An Experiment That Has Produced Extraordinary Results

Several months ago the BROTHERHOOD CHAPTER of the Parish took over the job of dividing the Parish into Districts and appointing a resident Brotherhood man to the position of SUPERINTENDENT over the District.

The duties of a DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENT are various. He personally distributes the Church Periodical, the BROADCASTER, to the church families in his district. Also, the monthly notices of the HOLY COMMUNION. Also Easter, Coal, Christmas Envelopes. A service that is saving the Parish two hundred dollars a year in postage. Besides this very practical work they report the sick, the unemployed and keep the rector in touch with all emergency cases that arise. Their specialty is to contact the men and boys of their Districts, especially those who have no church or Sunday School connections. The number of men and boys confirmed in 1935 is eloquent testimony of the great work they did in that special line.

The DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENTS will have charge of the monthly dues of the FIRESIDE CLUB which we hope to inaugurate January 1, 1936. This Club, you will recall, is to raise Coal Funds for the church. The monthly dues to adults from 15 years and over will be 10 cents a month. Children of 14 years and under 5 cents a month. Your District Superintendent will credit your paid dues in your FIRESIDE CLUB BOOK and will turn over his collections to the Rector of the Parish, who will receipt his book and deposit the money to the credit of the Coal Fund.

If there is any need to get in quick touch with the Rector, report to your District Superintendent who knows how to locate him with the least possible loss of time. You may need him in case of serious illness, accident, sudden death, emergency baptism, weddings, etc. In order to be prepared for such an emergency be sure you know the name and address of your DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENT.

Following is a list of our DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENTS and the section of the Parish under their supervision. Please make a note of the name and address of the Superintendent. He is always ready to serve you in any capacity.

CHRISTMAS AT ST. JOHN'S

The day before Christmas, early in the morning it snowed. It was not a heavy traffic-blocking snow; just a nice, light, snow mantle that spread itself over all the dark and ugly places and made everything white and beautiful, just like it ought to be on the blessed Christmas Day. The day itself was perfect. The air was crisp and snappy, just enough snow clouds to make the picture truly beautiful, and the sun shining in all its glory in a sky of winter blue. All nature seemed to say—

A Merry Christmas to You

The early Celebration was well attended by the faithful. The one feature of beauty at both services was the carol singing of the Junior Choir just preceding the service. About ten minutes before, the members of the Junior Choir, vested in cardinal red cassocks, wearing Buster Brown collars and red ties (the girl wearing berets), proceeded two abreast from the Sacristy to the front of the Choir, spread out on each side with the boys standing in the Choir Aisle and sang that beautiful old Christmas Carol, "O Holy Night." After the singing of the carol, which by the way was beautifully rendered, they faced inward and proceeded two abreast down the nave of the church, the boys bringing up the rear, wheeled to the left, crossed the church to the north exit, passed out, marched through the hall to the center entrance and led the Senior Choir in procession back to the Choir.

The Christmas decorations were very simple but rich. There were pendant on the Chancel wall, each side of the Altar, big beautiful Christmas wreaths held in place with broad, red, silk ribbon. On the Altar was a solid bank of potted Poinsettias of flaming red from end to end. In the corners of the Chancel stood two beautifully proportioned Christmas trees. Entwined in the iron grill of the Choir was a thick streamer of laurel. That was all; but the effect was good.

We were fortunate to have the Rev. Dallas E. Buzby of St. Lawrence University, Canton, New York, as our guest priest. Mr. Buzby assisted at the early service and was the Celebrant at the later service. He is very popular with St. John's Parishioners who were delighted to have him visit us and take part in our Christmas celebration. We hope he derived as much pleasure out of his visit as he gave us.

As usual, the Communicants crowded the church at both services. We noticed in the congregations scores of people who have been absent for a long time. We were made happy to have them with us again and hope we will see more of them in the future.

The anthems rendered by the Senior Choir were old favorites we never tire of hearing. Specially well rendered was the Gloria in Excelsis from Mozart's Twelfth Mass. The Choir sang it with a finished beauty that thrilled. Then the triumphant close of the service with the Sevenfold Amen was the finishing touch to two perfect services.

Then the Recessional, the Closing Prayer, the happy greetings and homeward bound.

Yes, it was a perfect Christmas Day.

CHRISTMAS LIST NUMBER ONE

Every year several members of the Parish find it impossible to give their Christmas donation to the Church on Christmas Day. Many of them bring the envelopes on the Sunday after Christmas; or even as late as the Second Sunday after Christmas. The delay is due to various good reasons; such, for instance, as one's inability to attend services on Christmas Day, due to illness or some other unavoidable circumstance.

Recognizing this fact we publish what we term LIST NUMBER ONE in this issue of the Broadcaster. Next month will appear LIST NUMBER TWO in which will be credited those who bring their Christmas Offering too late for this issue of our Parish periodical.

You will notice we have done this with the names of the late contributors to our COAL FUND.

THE POOR OF OUR PARISH

They Do Not Want Charity—They Want Work

We have a score of men and women in our Parish who need employment. They will gladly work for any reasonable wage to support their families. They do not like charity and accept it only as a last resort to keep from freezing and starving. So much "passing the buck" by the welfare organizations is being practiced that the self-respecting poor want nothing to do with them. There is a growing discontent among our poor and unemployed that is dangerous. Somebody had better wake up and take notice of conditions and stop playing with human misery. They want jobs and are willing to give a day's work for a day's pay. They represent all branches of mechanical and unskilled labor. If you know of any vacancies send your information to your Rector and do it quickly.

THE ANNUAL BAZAAR

It Was an Unusual Financial Success

Our Annual Bazaar has come and gone. From a financial point it was a greater success than we had any reason to expect, considering the conditions of the times and the persistent high percentage of unemployment. No doubt our friends of the Parish are beginning to appreciate the high class of our Bazaar, and are awakening to the realization that it is not an ordinary church rummage sale, but that it is a legitimate sale of new goods, fresh from the factory and the jobber, bought specially for the Bazaar at regular wholesale prices and sold in a regular way at a minimum retail profit,—much lower than the stores can afford. When this realization finally seeps through, no doubt our friends will do the obvious and economical thing and will economize by doing their Christmas shopping with us.

The Fancy Goods Table was laden with many beautiful and valuable pieces, samples of the rare needle art of our women. They sold at ridiculously low prices. In a department store or an art needle shop they could not have been bought for less than $10.00 to $100.00. There were pieces for every conceivable use and decoration, for the table, the bed, the favorite chair, the taboret, the piano top, the radio, the sofa, etc., etc., etc., etc.

The bargains on the Men's Furnishings counter were so intriguing that the table was swept clean early Friday night. Many persons who bought from us, tested the truth of our claim and went to two department stores to compare the quality and price of their purchase and learned to their pleasure and satisfaction that we were underselling the big stores 15 cents to $1.50 on ties, mufflers, socks and handkerchiefs and the stores were selling the identical goods from the identical factory we patronized. We are still receiving repeat orders for socks and ties. That is the best possible proof of the quality of our merchandise. We will be glad to fill more repeat orders.

The Grocery Table was laden with fresh packed goods from Montgomery Company, instead of a heterogeneous collection of stuff. We had displayed fresh canned goods of vegetables and fruit, sugar, coffee, flour, cereals, Salt, soap, honey, cleansers, oranges apples potatoes, cabbage, onions, glasses of jelly, cocoa, spaghetti, etc., etc. All of which was bought and sold over the counter as store goods. In this connection, however, we must acknowledge the fine donation of SAMUEL SNELL, SR., who GAVE the fruit and vegetables to the Bazaar and he must have picked the cream of his stock, for there were scarcely any unsound pieces among all his big donation. Folks who buy such things in large quantities know exactly what I mean in thus describing the excellency of Sam's gift. The kitchen was supplied with meats, etc., from the George Wells Company and delivered fresh every night. The ice cream, milk, butter, eggs, etc., from Abbotts. Tryon Company supplied lots of dolls, toys, cameras, fountain pens, games, etc.

We bought our candy of a well-known downtown manufacturer. Several members of the parish helped out by donating homemade candy, fudge, etc. The girls of the Y. P. S. had charge of the toilet goods table and purchased their stock from leading perfume and toilet articles manufacturers.

It is rather curious to note that the household goods table was not as well stocked as it should have been. This was due to the fact that many of our friends who promised to make aprons, pot holders, towels, etc., failed to make good; consequently, not having much for sale it was soon sold.

We did have a few second hand articles on sale but we made no serious attempt to sell them.

There is a long list of firms, manufacturers, and stores who made valuable contributions to the Bazaar, and we take this occasion to thank each firm and advise the members of our Parish that we will be personally proud to learn that they are reciprocating by buying the products of these firms.

Your happiness this year is entirely up to you.

What do you think of our Junior Choir now?

* * * * *

Several Christmas Envelopes are overdue.

ARE YOU A MEMBER OF THE FIRESIDE CLUB?

* * * * *

A young daughter of a radio announcer, who was called upon to say grace at a family dinner, bowed her head and said in loud, clear tones: "This food comes to us through the courtesy of Almighty God."

* * * * *

We are glad to publish the long list of members who brought in their Coal Envelopes after Coal Sunday. We appreciate the truth of the old saw—It is better late than never.

HAVE YOU GOT YOUR CHURCH ENVELOPES FOR 1936?

* * * * *

The Sunday Movies have made little or no impression upon our Sunday School attendance. It is quite evident that the better class of parents have a higher regard for the morals of their children than they have of paying interest on worthless bonds of the movie syndicates.

* * * * *

Hubby—"The bank has returned that check."

Wifie—"Isn't that splendid! What can we buy with it this time?"

* * * * *

Through the kindness of interested friends the rector was able this year to distribute a stack of grocery orders and Christmas baskets among our poor.

* * * * *

Through the same source he was able to provide shoes and clothing and pay rent for several families in the parish. Distribution of relief and sick diet is in such a chaotic state that this assistance was most welcome.

* * * * *

How would you like to sit in your house before a stove without a fire, a snow storm raging outside for twenty-four hours and the thermometer registering twelve degrees? Well, that is just what happened to several families, including children, in our parish during Christmas and New Year holidays.

What a ghastly thing it is to theorize "scientifically" about "relief" while whole families are starving and freezing.

Which is most important, a big fat salary to a social theorist or a crust of bread to a starving kid?

* * * * *

He (on the telephone)—"Hello, darling, would you like to have dinner with me tonight?"

She—"I'd love to, dear."

He—"Well, tell your mother I'll be over at seven o'clock."

* * * * *

On the first Sunday AFTER Christmas and FOLLOWING the Sunday School Christmas Festival, we had the largest attendance at Sunday School than we had for several weeks. And several more scholars than were present on the Sunday before Christmas. Do you get what we mean?

* * * * *

Miss Helen W. McHenry returned from the Canal Zone, December 23rd and was given a reception by the Girl Scout Troop of St. John's Parish on St. John the Evangelist night after the Sunday School Festival.

* * * * *

We would like to repeat some nice things that were said by the Rector about Margaret Nelson on that occasion. Among other remarks he said, "Margaret was the only woman of the required personal magnetism, education and training, who could carry on the Girl Scout Work successfully during Helen's absence. She did not substitute for Helen; she took up and carried on for Helen, and did it magnificently. Every Girl Scout knows it and is grateful to Margaret.

* * * * *

The three greatest masterpieces in literature, it is said, are the Lord's Prayer, the Twenty-Third

Psalm, and Lincoln't Gettysburg Address. Incidentally, recall their wording:

"Our Father which art in Heaven, hallowed be thy name."

"The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want."

"Fourscore and seven years ago."

Not a three-syllable word in them; hardly any two-syllable words. All the greatest things in human life are one syllable things—love, joy, hope, home, child, wife, trust, faith, God. All great things are simple.

* * * * *

The boys of St. John's Choir join the Rector in thanking the members of the INDEPENDENCE SQUARE LIONS CLUB for that splendid Christmas lunch and those overladen bags of gifts they received Monday, December 23rd, at the noonday party of the LIONS. Personally, we are proud to be a member of the Club.

* * * * *

Dr. William Magee (familiarly known far and wide as Billy Magee) and the other members of the Rotary Club of Philadelphia, who are a bunch of the biggest hearted fellows in the city, and their ladies, gave one hundred and twenty-five southwark kids the time of their young lives Saturday afternoon, December 21, at the old Friends School, 15th and Cherry Streets. How those Rotarians mixed it up with the kids and what a wild party they had!

* * * * *

Rufus—"Did you hear that joke about a guide in Egypt who showed a tourist two skulls of Cleopatra—one when she was a girl and one when she was a woman."

Goofus—"No; let's hear it."

* * * * *

Let me but do my work from day to day,
In field or forest, at the desk or loom,
In the roaring market place or tranquil room;
Let me but find it in my heart to say,
When vagrant wishes beckon me astray:
"This is my work; my blessing, not my doom,
Of all who live, I am the one by whom
This work can best be done in the right way."

—Van Dyke.

MR. CHARLES WOOD

Chairman of the National Federation of Episcopal Young People WILL BE THE SPEAKER AT THE AFTERNOON SESSION ON ANNIVERSARY SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 2ND, at 2.30 o'clock.

THE TOLERANCE CODE

From the pen of P. H. Callahan, distinguished Catholic layman of Louisville, Kentucky, comes this fine gem of writing. Colonel Callahan calls it The Tolerance Code.

Tolerance does not mean that I believe that your religion is as good as mine, that it does not matter what a person believes; tolerance does not mean that I or you must surrender a single tenet what we hold as true, that we must whittle down our respective beliefs and convictions, reduce them to a common denominator, make them a colorless, tasteless, unacceptable general concoction.

Tolerance means, in the first place, that I go on the assumption that you are sincere in your belief that your religion is the right one; it means that we will accord to each other the right to believe whatever we wish so long as our beliefs will not interfere with the commonly recognized decencies and generally accepted proprieties; it means that we, who are of different faiths, are more anxious to understand one another, than to refute one another; we are more desirous of appreciating one another's views and difficulties than we are of criticizing or condemning one another; it means that when we judge one another we shall judge with the greatest consideration and charity; it means that under given circumstances we will agree to disagree in the matter of religious beliefs, but that we are resolved not to make life miserable for one another, we are resolved not to put up barriers between us, we are not going to deprive one another of civic or social rights or privileges, just because we happen to entertain different ideas in regard to the supreme maker of us all.

Tolerance means more than all that: It means that we are going to have a high regard for one another's intentions, that we will not question one another's sincerity of purpose, that we will respect one another for being true to our convictions, that we will be anxious to cooperate with one another in all efforts that will make for civic, economic or social betterment.

TEN COMMANDMENTS FOR CHURCH ATTENDANTS

I.

Thou shalt not come to service late,
Nor for the Amen refuse to wait.

II.

Thy noisy tongue thou shalt restrain
When speaks the organ its refrain.

III.

But when the hymns are sounded out,
Thou shalt lift up thy voice and shout.

IV.

The endmost seat thou shalt leave free,
For more must share the pew with thee.

V.

The offering-plate thou shalt not fear,
But give thine uttermost with cheer.

VI.

Thou shalt the bulletin peruse,
And look there for the Church's news.

VII.

Thou shalt the minister give heed,
Nor blame him when thou'rt disagreed.

VIII.

Unto thy neighbor thou shalt bend,
And if a stranger, make a friend.

IX.

Thou shalt in every way be kind,
Compassionate, of tender mind.

X.

And, so by all thy spirit's grace,
Thou shalt show God within this place.

—Duplex-Richmond, Va.

THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

The Every Church Woman's Organization

Every church woman, whether rich or poor, high or low, educated or uneducated, white or black or red or yellow, are members of this grand, Christian body. You have the right to attend all the W. A. meetings of the Parish. You have the right to take part in all its proceedings and vote upon every question that arises. If you wish, you may make any suggestions you think worthy of consideration and expect that all such suggestions be treated with proper respect.

The Purpose of the Woman's Auxiliary

In each Parish it is the inspiration of the Priest. One cannot conceive a parish minus a WOMAN'S AUXILIARY. Personally, I would not serve as Rector in a Parish that did not assume that the WOMAN'S AUXILIARY was a most important institution of parochial life. It is the Society towards which all earnest women are drawn who desire to cooperate with those who are sincerely doing the will of their Heavenly Father. The reason for this is the WOMAN'S AUXILIARY has a very definite and a very intimate function within church bounds. A lively chapter of this admirable association performs miracles of service among the sick, the shut-in, the aged, the destitute and the sinful of the Parish. And their quiet and sympathetic COOPERATION with their Rector is profoundly appreciated by him. It is such a relief for him to know he has back of him such a corps of willing and cheerful workers, who do not criticise but use their energies to serve.

It is an honor to be actively identified with the Order. The greatest, most charming and influential women of the Church are proud "to belong." The most humble are welcomed in its meetings. And poor and rich alike join voice in prayer and praise to our Father in Heaven.

As "you are known by the company you keep" why don't YOU join this group of earnest women and help work out God's Plan?

But do not be too parochial in your conception of the WOMAN'S AUXILIARY. It is by all odds the greatest missionary organization in the world. What these wonderful women do at home in the matter of good works is as a drop in the bucket compared to that world-wide missionary work they so effectively put over. I wonder what would happen to the scores of mission stations, hospitals and schools at home and in foreign lands should the WOMAN'S AUXILIARY suddenly collapse? Such a thing is unthinkable, of course. But the answer to that speculative question is illuminating as to the Auxiliary's power and influence. Could such a thing happen the whole missionary program of the church would be definitely stopped.

That Little Blue Box

Have you ever considered THAT LITTLE BLUE BOX of the WOMAN'S AUXILIARY? It is a wonderful little box. Most folk think it is only a receptacle for coins dropped in as an expression of gratitude to God for some special blessing He has vouchsafed them. The mind does not go very far beyond the gesture of thanksgiving.

But may I assure you it is much more than a collection box with a purpose. As a matter of fact, as soon as you obey the impulse to thank God for your blessings by depositing your alms in it, wonderful things begin to happen inside that box.

No, you cannot see them with the naked eye. You cannot see them at all until you first make certain mystic preparations to clear your vision. For instance, you must read with deepest concentration such passages of Holy Writ as St. Matthew 25:31-46. Then you must kneel before the Throne of Grace and ask "Him" to open the eyes of your spirit that you may see. And if you ask in faith, believing I have no doubt but that when you look, that little blue box will take on the appearance of a tiny Altar, before which will appear a censer from which is ascending the fumes of the sweetest, oldest and rarest of all aromas—the incense of Divine Love. As you look you will see the plume of smoke slowly weave into figures and things, a miniature moving picture of places, peoples and events you little dreamed of. You will see beautiful lands, wild jungles, overcrowded cities filled with strange people of a strange civilization, glacial heights of wonderful mountains, sweeping plains and prairies, strange customs and stranger civilizations.

As the incense continues to arise, other pictures are formed, pictures of crude, little mountain shacks in Alaskan settings; and broad, western plains where the American Indian, once the proudest of the human race, is given medical treatment, taught the beautiful lesson of God's love and where His children are instructed in the rudiments of a better civilization.

Pictures of hospitals, crowded with suffering humanity in foreign lands of heathen nations.

Pictures of mission schools attended by children of strange races in curious customs and habits.

Pictures of the igloo chapels of the Eskimo country amid the ice wastes of the North.

Pictures of missions in the dark jungles of Africa beside the broad sweep of its beautiful rivers.

Pictures of the progress of christianity in the cultural nations of China and Japan.

Pictures of the rough life of the mountain whites and southern negro.

Pictures of the forests, plains and mountains of far away Liberia.

Pictures of the Church's schools and chapels in the beautiful tropical surroundings of South America and the Islands of the Sea.

And, as you gaze in growing awe and reverence at the mighty mission of that little blue box, there seems to arise to one's ears a hymn of praise and thanksgiving sung in every tongue and only understood by the ear of the Spirit. Like a world wide hook-up of a mighty radio, the little blue box sends out to our apprehension the sweet, soul-stirring strain of the hymn of Redemption through Grace.

Yes, from that little blue box comes the most powerful cinema ever produced by man. And the last scene we behold is almost too overpowering in its beauty and its suggestiveness.

Again the smoke of incense mounts and weaves the final picture. We see, as it were, the heavens open. "He" is sitting upon His Throne, surrounded by His legions of Angels. Before Him pass in endless procession the redeemed out of every nation, race and people; singing hymns of adoration to Him upon the Throne and to the LAMB who offered himself a sacrifice for all nations of men under the sun.

In their wake come those whose consecrated service the LITTLE BLUE BOX sustained; who, through suffering, by sacrificing father and mother, and brother and sister, and home and friends, to a life of solitude amid strange people, made possible this great company of the Redeemed before God and His Throne, which we now behold with spiritual vision.

Yes, all these one sees in that LITTLE BLUE BOX. YOU must get one and keep it near you. When you feel a little out of sorts and things don't seem to go just right just take time off and look at the cinema of love in the little blue box and life will be sweet again. What THEY have suffered shames our little worries and bows our hearts in love for all our blessings.

82 YEARS OLD

St. John's Church Justifies Its Long Career

Sunday, February 2nd, we celebrated our Eighty-Second Birthday in the characteristic St. John's way of doing things. The program was put through according to schedule. In the morning we had the Celebration of the Holy Communion. At 12.30 Parish Dinner was served. The Sunday School and its friends spent an interesting time in the church from 2.30 to 4.00 P. M. Mr. Charles Wood was our special speaker and naturally made a hit with our young people. We are looking forward to a return engagement with him. From 4 to 5 P. M., between twenty to twenty-five cottage prayer services were held in the homes of the sick and shut-ins of the parish by groups of communicants under appointed leaders. Supper was served at 5 P. M., and at 8 o'clock we had a gathering of the Parish organizations and the Anniversary Sermon.

The Morning Service

There were several outstanding features worthy of special mention. For instance, at the Morning Service the Rector was surprised by a big delegation from APOLLO LODGE NO. 386, F. and A. M., accompanied by their wives. They had come to join in the celebration and were welcomed with sincere cordiality. One instance in particular pleased the Rector. Nearly every brother made his communion on this occasion. The Rector will ever cherish that fine gesture of fraternalism from his brother lodge members.

Another feature of the morning was the elaborate musical program rendered by the combined choirs. Again the Junior Choir filed out of the Sacristy just previous to the Processional and sang a selection entitled, "Dear Lord, Remember me." It was done very effectively and with a beautiful spirit of devotion.

The other feature to be mentioned is the long line of communicants who received the Sacraments. We are safe in saying that upon no other Anniversary did so many make their Communion. We wondered at that time if the founders of the Parish could look in upon that scene what their feelings would be. We are sure they would be deeply thankful for being inspired to lay the foundation of such a great work.

Mrs. Pine and Her Aides

Nothing need be said of the serving of the Parish Dinner and Supper. Mrs. Pine and her splendid corps of aides prepared and served it and that's all that need be said—except we have a sneaking suspicion that several hundred boys and girls went on a hunger strike two or three days before. You should have seen the appetites they brought with them. About the only thing they didn't gobble down were the dishes and the tablecloth.

The Afternoon Events

There were also a few incidents of the afternoon which are worth remembering. The first was the size of the Sunday School, especially the Intermediate Department. We did not know the Department had grown so large. It was nearly as big as the Senior Department and, as usual, displayed the fine discipline of the teachers.

Mr. Charles Wood, as we said before, was most interesting. He is not so old as to have forgotten the dreams and ambitions of youth and he has the happy faculty of being able to talk in the language of youth. We want him to come again and talk some more.

Our Cottage Prayer Services

Probably the greatest event of the day was the going forth of the parishioners at 4 o'clock into the homes of the sick, the aged, and the shut-ins of the parish—not only to visit them but to have old fashioned prayer services with them. Each group was under a chosen leader. They took with them Bibles, Hymn Books and Prayer Books and in each house they entered they had the Creed, Prayers, Hymn Singing and Scripture Readings. The groups started out a little diffidently, not having done such a thing before but they returned radiant with pleasure from their experience. What stories they told of their reception and how pleased was everybody because they were remembered in such a way. We do not know who benefited most from these services—the visitors or the visited. Of one thing we are sure—those who went visiting were glad they did.

The Evening Service

At the massing of the Parish Organizations, in the evening, the Girl Scouts took occasion to present Mrs. John Nelson with a slight token of their appreciation and affection for her care of them during the absence of Miss Helen McHenry from August to December. Others appreciate what Margaret did for the girls and are just as grateful to her as they are.

The organizations in procession were the combined choirs, the Girl Scouts, the Boys Club, the Daughters of the King, the Woman's Auxiliary, the Young Peoples Society, the Brotherhood of St. Andrew and members of the Sunday School.

It was a bright and interesting and not too long a service to spoil the day so crowded with big events.

By the way our Rector gave us a watchword for this year. It is

To the Friends of St. John's Parish

We must take time and space to express our deep gratitude to you who so generously helped to relieve the terrible suffering of our poor during the bitter cold weather through which we are passing.

What we would have done without that aid is too problematical for us to answer. It is an unprecedented situation for us. We are a very feeble folk at best. More than sixty per cent. of us are unemployed. A big percentage of the remainder are working for inadequate wages and are barely able to make ends meet under ordinary and normal conditions. When we are overtaken by such a desperately cold winter as this we are paralyzed. We do not have the proper shoes and clothing, nor do we have a proper supply of fuel. We are forced to resort to all sorts of methods to face the situation with the least possible suffering.

Just when we were despairingly wondering how we could keep our poor from starving and freezing, help arrived. God put it into the hearts of the more fortunate to divide a portion of their wealth with us. We can never forget the great sense of relief and thanksgiving to God we experienced when we got the first relief.

Yes, dear friends of St. John's, you will never know what a wonderful thing you did. Not only does God approve your generous act of Christian mercy, but the poor you have helped are praying for you that a special blessing may rest on you for coming so promptly to your brother's relief. Yours was a beautiful gesture of love and concern for your brother in distress.

GOD BLESS YOU ALL!

A LETTER FROM AN OLD FRIEND

Jan. 14, 1936

Dear Folks:

I just want to write a little note to tell you or, at least, try to convey to you just how much St. John's and its people mean to me. Really, every time I visit it seems just like "coming back home." Everyone is so nice and genial to me and I feel that you are all so close to me.

On Sunday eve I heard your Junior Choir and oh, boy, what a choir! You know most junior choirs are divided into two classes; those who 'look nice' in the procession and can't warble a note and those who sing and don't look so elegant. But, behold, I found that St. John's junior choir both looks elegant (I love the red cassocks, being a High churchman) and can sing! That is really something for you all to be justly proud of. And I take my hat off to whomever it was who trained those little people; it is just great!

Then too let me say a word in appreciation of your workers. I met with a group of them before the service and are they live wires: they are. I just wish I could get such a bunch together.

And last of all, but not least of all, let me say a word about your Rector. I know you all appreciate and love him. But it is always nice to know that others outside the congregation also feel the same way. (You know he probably will omit this part of the letter but I wrote it, just the same, so he should read it) But in the few years that I have known Mr McHenry he has always gone out of his way to help me in every way he could and it is only because he gave me the first opportunity that I was able to first come among you and enjoy your friendship. So you really have an exceptional priest as your rector.

And now I close by issuing the invitation to any of you who may chance journey Erieward, that you will always find a warm welcome at St. Mark's. "And so, may the Lord bless you and keep you and prosper your efforts on behalf of His Kingdom and the spread of His Gospel.

Sincerely, your friend
Walter W. Ware

CONSECRATING OUR SENSES

A Lenten Suggestion to the Faithful

A few more weeks and we enter upon the most solemn season of the Christian year. Solemn, because of its lesson of Divine Love and Sacrifice.

What a complete sacrifice it was!

We children of God never have grasped the real price Jesus paid for our redemption. The bigness of it is beyond our ken. It may be that if we consecrate all our faculties to him the truth will be revealed and then we shall understand. For instance, in the matter of

Feeling

If we would understand the mystery of our Redemption we must be in rapport with Jesus. We must bring ourselves to FEEL He loved us dearly and willingly offered Himself the Divine Sacrifice for sin. We must FEEL the urge back of those forty days of fasting and prayer. We must FEEL the mightiness of His war with Satan. We must FEEL the great importance of the issues of that struggle—for the prize was our spiritual freedom from bondage. We must FEEL his utter exhaustion at the end of the conflict and realize it WAS a war and not a sham battle. We must FEEL the concern of the angels who "came to minister unto him" for THEY knew the eternal issues that were involved.

If we can stir up this SENSE OF FEELING to the point that the Battle of the Wilderness becomes the reality it was and not a romance of the dim past, we will be well started on our way to spiritual development. The first thing that must happen to us is to FEEL that Jesus is real; Satan is real; sin is real; salvation is real. We must FEEL that we need Jesus and his warlike power every day to strengthen and encourage us.

Seeing

But victory will depend largely upon our ability to SEE the true issues. We need to know the impulse of God which moved Him to sacrifice His son for our redemption. We must know why Jesus was so willing to be that sacrifice. We must know how completely involved individually is each of us in this whole amazing gesture of God. We must learn that in the eyes of God we are of more value than the birds of the air or the flowers of the field.

Lent is the time to develope this sense of SEEING OUR IMPORTANCE TO GOD; for we really are important to Him. On the other hand we must realize GOD'S IMPORTANCE TO US. What we need is an understanding as to what and why we are to Jesus.

If we would clearly see our glorious relationship with God we must eliminate every physical or material obstruction which mars our view. Worldly pleasures, pursuit of wealth and fame blind the eyes of our spirits so that we cannot apprehend the love of God. Our first duty to ourselves therefore, is to consecrate our sense of apprehension to contemplation of God's interest in us. We must apply some of that eye salve St. John recommends in Revelation 3:18, so that we may see clearly our duty and our goal.

Tasting

But we must do more than have our spiritual vision adjusted so that things will be in focus. We must also acquire an hungering and thirsting after Righteousness. We must taste and see that he is good. We must cure ourselves of our perverted taste for the cloying, unwholesome, poisonous sweetness of self-indulgence, and acquire a taste for spiritual bread and spiritual drink.

Lent is a good time to regulate our moral and spiritual diet—to eliminate that which is harmful, to acquire that which is sustaining. At first your change of taste may not seem palatable, yet when once you are determined to feed freely on the food of the spirit, you will know the real benefits of that change. You will enjoy the spiritual food of His Body and the stimulating and bracing effect of His blood. Surely the consecration of our sense of TASTE for spiritual things is a Lenten occupation worth the effort.

Hearing

God has specially equipped us with a perfect spiritual Radio system. By means of it we can talk to Him in prayer and in turn He can talk to us in His "still small voice." That "voice" which persisted and prevailed against the crash of thunder and the roar of torrent and would not be stilled 'til the Prophet answered God. So it is with every son of God. He hears our voice and heeds our desires. In turn He sends forth His voice to our consciousness, warning, rebuking, admonishing, encouraging, approving. We can hear Him every day if we but "listen in." Some try to stifle that "still, small voice" of God because it interferes and disturbs them in their sins. Yet, if we but knew the truth that by hearing and heeding the "voice" we attain to a bigger and more satisfactory life in God.

Lent is the season to overhaul our spiritual Radio. We must try to get rid of the static of sin which so often interferes with clear reception. We must use short waves for greater power. We want it powered with the electricity of the spirit, so that we may make quick and easy contacts with God. It is easy to adjust the ears of the spirit to tune in on God. All we need do is to concentrate on Him; consecrate our hearing to His service and listen in to all the messages He relays to us.

Exercising

With the consecration of our senses must go the exercise of them in the service of God. We must throw off the lassitude and inertia of sin. We must exercise ourselves in Christian Service to others. Personal convenience, time, strength, fortune or what have we, must be sacrificed to the visiting of God's poor and sick, to giving charity where charity is needed; and not to lay too much stress upon the worthiness of the unfortunate; to comforting the bereaved; to praying with God's children; to spending our days and nights in looking about to see that we have left nothing undone that we should have done; that, by the consecration of our senses and the exercising of them in God's service, we may attain the glorious realization of the wonderful beauty of living.

Why not make our object this Lenten season the consecration of all our senses to the service of God. That way lies everlasting satisfaction and peace. The path in which we will be free to walk with God.

THE "F" CLUB

The Fireside Club is growing fast. We now have a membership of over 314 persons. The monthly dues are coming in very satisfactorily. Our next move is to check up the names of those who have joined and to get after the folks who have not joined. It is our purpose to approach everybody and give each a chance to join or turn down the proposition. Those who do not approve the plan will be listed to receive coal envelopes in November. Those who join will be exempt from the November list.

There are some communicants who live a distance from the Church who cannot be reached by the District Superintendents. May we suggest that they make a habit of bringing their books and their dues to church on the first Sunday morning of each month when they make their Communion and pay their dues to Frank Drumm, who is the Secretary-Treasurer of the "F" Club.

If you do not care to be bothered with bringing your book every month leave it with Frank. He will receive your dues, take your name and credit the amount in your book for you.

"WHY I GO TO CHURCH"
Hon. John Wanamaker

You might just as pertinently inquire "Why do I eat?" or "Why do I sleep?"—because I find one is just as necessary to my well-being as the other.

I could eat well and sleep well, and yet be a very miserable man without the spiritual uplift that only comes from an attendance upon the Divine ordinances.

Then again, it is a great privilege to touch shoulders with the earnest Christian men who are also interested in promoting Christ's Kingdom upon earth.

For four years while Postmaster General under the Harrison administration, I traveled nearly 100,000 miles in order to be present each week at my own church.

I have made it the rule of my life to be in my regular place each Lord's day when in health and in the country, believing that Paul was inspired to write that we should not forsake the assembling of ourselves together.

I also believe that the temptations of every man are great, and unless he has more than the ordinary groundwork of honesty and faithfulness, he may be caught by the sudden wind of plausible opportunity and tumble over the precipice and be ruined.

A relief worker was checking up on a "poor" farmer who had applied for help.

"We heard you were seen driving a car. Do you own a car?"

"No, lady," replied the farmer, "I sometimes drive a car but it isn't mine."

"But," persisted the visitor, "They say your daughter drives in a car to high school every day."

"Well," confessed the farmer, "It's like this about the car. It belongs to my brother-in-law's sister and sometimes she lets us drive it. My girl hasn't any other way to get to school."

The reply satisfied the visitor and she left the supplies.

Pull out your watch and see how long it takes you to get that one!

IT HAPPENED IN SOUTH PHILADELPHIA

Wednesday, January 15th, a little four-year-old girl was burned to death. Her nightgown flared up as she tried to help her destitute mother light a fire in the kitchen range. The mother had "borrowed" a supply of coke from a neighbor to start a fire. The little tot, shivering from the chill, was impatient to get warm. Her mother had warned her to stay away from the stove and went into an adjoining room to attend to her two months old baby boy. The little girl stuffed some paper into the stove. Some of the burning paper fell against her clothing which burst into flames.

The mother wrapped her in a rug to smother the flames. Neighbors rushed to her aid. Both of her hands were terribly burnt. They were rushed to the hospital for treatment. The little girl died and the mother's hands were bandaged so that she is helpless to do anything.

A week ago the mother, accompanied by a neighbor, came to the writer's office and asked to have her other children christened for fear something might happen to them. Then it was the Rector learned of the terrible accident.

The mother was a pitiful sight, sitting helpless, with both hands two big bunches of bandages. On inquiry we learned the hospital was holding up their treatment because she did not have twenty-five cents to pay. She had no food in the house. The society who was supposed to be helping the family had stopped all aid because they claimed the man would not work, who in turn claimed he could not, because he was sick.

As matters developed the family was freezing and destitute. Had the family received the aid they needed in all probability the accident would not have occurred and the child would be living today. The family would have had fuel—the little home would have been warm. To top off the load of misery and suffering, the constable had levied on the poor little sticks of furniture.

Sunday the children were christened; and, though the family had never been identified with our church, we felt it our duty after the christening, to have the family visited. The District Superintendent of that District was asked to call and report the condition. The next day he came to our office and said he had never seen such horrible living conditions—that he had seen poverty in his day but nothing compared to this. The thermometer was registering 10 degrees; and, because they had no fuel, they were chopping up their miserable furniture and burning it stick by stick.

In the kitchen there was nothing left but an old table—no chairs—and if you wanted to sit down you could do so on the floor or the steps which wind up to the miserable empty rooms above. There he found the mother with her bandaged hands hanging down, helpless to do anything. The two children were wrapped up in blankets to keep them from freezing to death and nothing to eat in the house. The rector fished up a few dollars and told the D. S. to go out at once and buy a bag of coal and some food for the family, while the society, who should have considered the state of the poor mother and helpless children, made up their minds what they would do because the father had "refused to work."

WHY is it necessary to so cruelly and mercilessly punish the innocent and helpless because the wage earner is "suspected" of being a fraud.

Common humanity would urge the most callous to help a broken hearted woman whose child had been burnt to death and herself rendered helpless in her frantic effort to save the tot's life.

Common decency would demand that the other children should be protected from cold and starvation.

What a wonderful cure for petty officialism and hard heartedness it would be to shut up some of our anti-social folk in a refrigerator on nothing to eat for a week.

Even if the father and husband is lazy—which is very doubtful—why murder the mother and children?

Yet such things happen in Philadelphia—the City of Brotherly Love!

HOW TO GET THE CHURCH INTO DEBT

1. Refuse to pledge an offering.
2. Delay in paying your pledge and pay only if asked.
3. Never pay your pledge—be a defaulter.
4. Pay as little as you can. A cent a week or 52 cents a year would just about put the church in the red.
5. Bluff the church by taking a package of envelopes and throwing it into the waste basket. That's a trick that even the Devil enjoys.

How to Get the Church Out of Debt

1. Make a voluntary pledge to give an offering.
2. Pay promptly every week. And, if for any reason, you were unable to be present the week previous, bring the back envelope too.
3. Your pledge is your WORD OF HONOR to GOD. If you default in payments you cheat God.
4. Give as much as you can afford, because the Lord LOVETH a CHEERFUL giver.

JOIN THE FIRESIDE CLUB

5. Take your Church Envelopes, put them in a conspicuous place so that you will always be reminded of them. The last thing every Saturday night, after your prayers, fill up the envelope for the next day, put it in the pocket of your Sunday clothes and go to bed.

OUR PLAN

ST. PAUL WRITES IN I CORINTHIANS 16:2 AS FOLLOWS:

"UPON THE FIRST DAY OF THE WEEK LET EVERYONE OF YOU LAY BY HIM IN STORE AS GOD HATH PROSPERED HIM."

"First Day of the Week"

That's Sunday. To do what St. Paul tells you to do you must get a packet of envelopes dated for each Sunday in the year. Such co-operation is of great help to the church. Weekly payments mean a steady income and not a haphazard amount now and then.

If you miss a Sunday be sure you bring the back envelope next Sunday and keep up-to-date.

Folks who pay by the week are always paid up. Folks who are long term payers seldom keep their pledge.

"Let Every One"

That means every confirmed man, woman and child of the family is exhorted to make an individual pledge. A separate offering teaches individual responsibility. YOUR OFFERING TO GOD IS A PERSONAL MATTER. You cannot delegate this responsibility to another.

Your financial relations with God is on a credit and debit basis. If you make an offering you receive credit in accordance with the portion of your goods you give and for the spirit in which you give.

"As God Has Prospered"

That means that your offerings be in ratio with your income or wages. If you give on a proportionate scale and will do it honestly—not trying to hide a part of your assets like Ananias did—you will have done your duty towards God and His church. Your credit with God is good and the support of His church is assured.

A Proportionate Scale

Per Capita yearly income	Approximate Percentage	Per Capita weekly contribution
$ 100.	2	$ .05
200.	2¼	.10
300.	2½	.15
400.	2¾	.20
500.	3	.30
600.	3¼	.40
700.	3½	.50
800.	3¾	.60
900.	4	.70
1000.	4¼	.80
1100.	4½	.95
1200.	4¾	1.10
1300.	5	1.25
1400.	5¼	1.40
1500.	5½	1.60
1600.	5¾	1.75
1700.	6	1.95
1800.	6¼	2.15
1900.	6½	2.35
2000.	6¾	2.60

If everyone will honestly pay according to this scale the Church Budget will be raised without any extra appeals or schemes of raising money.

This is the only just method of distributing our financial responsibility. It is our moral obligation to pay as

EASTER DAY

Rev. Robert Long

What is this day? Why do we see*
The joy of man and maid and child?
The widowed mother too has smiled,
A pensive smile although it be.
Is this a civic festal day
When friendship yearly knows no bounds
And all the sporting-field resounds
With acclamations from the fray?
Peace! peace! in reverence bow thy head
And silent hear the carols tell
How Christ today rent death and Hell
And rose in triumph from the dead!
From man a universal wail
Of deepest woe had reached the sky;
From death how fainly would he fly
But all his strength he sees must fail.
To live, and know he lives, in death;
To know the soul can never die;
To know there is a God on high,
A God who gives immortal breath—
This, this his prayer in every age
While dimly, faintly shone the light
Throughout that universal night
Which shrowded heathen priest and sage.
Great Son of God! who did descend
With life from Heaven and light for all
And freed mankind from sin's dark thrall
For Thee eternal praises blend.
This is the Resurrection morn!
Behold the Son of God arise!
A pledge to us that he who dies
In Adam, may in Christ be born;
Be born in an immortal Love
Where sin no more can vex the soul—
Forever while the ages roll
To live with God in Christ above.
Rejoice! loud Alleluias sing!
Ye heavenly choirs take up the sound
In concert, till the deep profound
With loud and long Hosannas ring!

Editor's Note*

Our selection "Easter Day" is from the pen of the Rev. Robert Long and has never before been published. The composer was my own particular friend and college chum. The poem was dedicated to a mutual friend for whom both "Bobby" and I had the highest regard. And although "Bobby" entered into life many years ago she has kept this among her most valued treasures. She loaned me the original, written in that so well-known old-fashioned hand, which as I gazed upon, conjured before my memory that loosely knit figure with its peculiar, awkward gait. He seemed to be swinging along from the past to the present, with that same droll smile and squinting humorous look he had, just as though he was going to repeat his favorite little joke—"Now H. I've reduced it to a nut shell —that is, a coco nut shell."

Oh, friend of mine, willingly I offer your gift to the readers of the Broadcaster, as my tribute to the memory of one of God's special children.

EASTER DAY

St. John 15:13-14

Sometimes one wonders who inspired the beautiful arrangement of the Church Year in seasons setting forth the chief events in the Divine Career of Jesus Christ. Each season teaches its own important lesson which one must know to have an intelligent and consistent idea of the progress of events in God's scheme of Redemption.

ADVENT, the first season of the Christian Year, is the time we commemorate the approach of the fulfillment of God's promise made generations before, i.e., the sending forth His Beloved bearing the Gospel of Peace and reconciliation to erring man.

CHRISTMAS commemorates the next important event, the actual arrival of Jesus, Son of God, Saviour of the world. The fulfillment of the promise forecasted in Advent.

EPIPHANY is the feast of the Gentiles, in which they joyously show forth their gratitude to Almighty God for including them, as well as the Jews, in the plan of Salvation. The manifestation to the Wise Men is their sufficient warrant of God's mercy to them.

LENT, the season of fasting and prayer, the days of meditation upon the earthly career of Jesus, his struggle against temptation, his struggle against an unregenerate world; and the season in which we strive to forget our sin and remember God's love and the sacrifice of Jesus Christ.

REMEMBER YOUR EASTER COMMUNION.

Then Easter

so beautifully and truly called the Queen Feast of the Christian Year. One cannot help but feel that this is the ultimate towards which the previous events of the Christian Year were tending. Step by step we have been led to this revealing of God's plan of Salvation. First the promise; then the promise realized; then the inclusion of the Gentiles; then the lessons from the ministry of the Master and our final spiritual preparation for the stupendous miracle of the ages; the destruction of the arrogance of death and the triumph of life, forever establishing the everlasting truth, that life never ceases; it is self-perpetuating.

As children of the light we have naturally been terrified at the grinning horror of death. The natural reaction of the generations against death has been a strong negation of its power or permanence.

Easter Day is the day of revealing. It is the day that exposes the weakness of death and the unconquered power of life, which is eternal youth and power. Neither time, nor war, nor pestilence nor usurper death, can overcome life and cause it to cease. The grave may hide it for a few days, but the Lord of Life throws off the increments of death and comes forth radiant with vigor, strength and fuller life.

Easter Day is the day of days, it is the day of vindication of God's power and supreme rule over time and space and matter and the destinies of man. It is the day of reassurance for terrified mankind, who, beaten and bruised and scarred and discouraged by temptation and sin, looks up into the face of the smiling Christ and hears that wonderful voice encouraging him not to be afraid. The debt of sin is paid, the chains of condemnation are broken. The imposter and deceiver ceases to rule. Come unto me and be at rest. How very true it is—Easter is the day of the fulfillment of God's promise of the redemption of the world.

Lord, grant me grace to worship Thee in spirit and in truth this Easter Day. For Jesus' sake, who hast conquered death that I might live eternally.

Amen

YOUR GRACE OFFERING

I Chronicles 29:14

Have you ever sat down to breakfast, dinner or supper and, looking over the food before you, asked yourself whence it came?

If you lack imagination you will say it comes from the butcher, the grocer, the milk man and the baker, of course.

Yes, of course! But where did THEY get that meat and those vegetables and that bread and butter and milk, and the tea and coffee and fruit?

Ah! That's another story and quite a fascinating one at that. In fact, at every meal we are brought face to face with romance and travel and tragedy.

For instance, see that succulent platter of beef? That was, only a few days or weeks ago, part of an animal roaming the hills in sunlight and storm of the great, wide, open spaces, completing a picture of nature unsurpassed in grandeur.

That slice of bread you are eating, once upon a time was beautiful golden grains of wheat ripening in the sun and rain and wind in a field of undulating glory.

The spot of butter you just spread upon it and that dash of cream you just put in your coffee, just this morning came tearing through space at desperate haste from the dairy lands of upper New York, or of your own State so as to be in time for your breakfast.

These potatoes, peas and parsnips, are foreign to urban life and were given their being and growth in the soil of the farm lands, perhaps remote.

That banana you have just picked from the fruit dish is more than likely a native of South America brought to you from some unknown fruit raising plantation by ancient cart, by boat, by rail, by truck and landed ker-plunk on your table.

That sugar you are spooning from the bowl came to our refineries from foreign places or from the great beet plantations of the far West.

That tea you are drinking is a brew of aromatic leaves picked by yellow fingers in far away Formosa, or unexplored parts of China. Or is it coffee you are pouring? Well, that too, is the extract of a peculiar bean which probably had its origin in Java, a land so far away that I nor you know little of its people and their quaint customs.

The pepper, cloves, alspice and all, perhaps are natives of India, that mysterious land of casts and wealth and abject poverty.

Even the salt you are using may have traveled all the way from the shores of the great Salt Lake to add savour and health to your food.

In fact, every time we "sit at meat," no matter how humble the fare, we surround ourselves with tragedy, romance, sun, rain, wind and alien things which nature, in many strange countries, has provided for satisfying hunger and for sustaining life.

Even the water we drink from this glass may have had its source in some ideal nook in the heart of some high mountain from which it flowed for hundreds of miles right into our drinking glass.

Yes, everything we eat or drink is nature's contribution to our existence.

And what is Nature?

Well, it is the vehicle through which the All Provident Father pours His superabundance upon His children. He mixes the nitrates, the limes, the phosphorus, etc., in the earth to give its germinating and productive power. He scatters the seed after its kind all over the land. He sends His sun and wind and rain and frost and heat to swell the seed and force production. He brings the fruit to its maturity and ready for food. He multiplies the herds and flocks a thousandfold. He fills the sea and lakes and rivers and streams with spawn until their waters are teeming with fish. He populates the air, the forest, the plains, the mountains with game. And all this He stores in the great storehouse of nature until man has need of them.

The very fire our mothers use to cook our meal comes from God's great reservoirs of coal, of gas, of oil. The very light by which we see to eat is the reflection of His great sun. The dishes from which we eat are baked matrix of His earth. The table on which our food is served and the chairs upon which we are sitting had their origin in the heart of the forest amid the music of gurgling waters, the crash of nature and the blast of storm.

REMEMBER YOUR EASTER OFFERING.

One time it was part of a lord of the forest which sheltered the nestlings while the parent bird caroled them to slumber. The silver and the cutlery with which we eat are from the mines where He secreted His silver and His iron.

Not one thing, either food or object, could we create. All we did was to take what God supplied and adapt it to our need.

Whoever would have thought my common daily meal involved such mighty preparation!

No wonder we should be thankful to God for these series of miracles He performs that we may live.

We OUGHT to show Him our gratitude.

We OUGHT to set right there in the center of our dinner table a GRACE OFFERING BOX.

We OUGHT to drop a coin of Grace in it every time we sit down to enjoy the food He has provided.

We OUGHT to make this GRACE OFFERING a part of our SUNDAY SCHOOL LENTEN OFFERING.

And we WILL do so, if we realize it means the spreading of the Gospel among the nations, races and people who, through the Grace of God contribute so bountifully to our needs and comforts.

Get a Grace Offering Box Now!

Put it on your table, drop your offerings in it generously. Show God you know that all things come from Him, and to Him you are making this gesture of thanksgiving in all sincerity.

OUR SUNDAY SCHOOL LENTEN OFFERING

The Double Purpose of This Offering Makes It Important

We are now bending our energies in a concerted effort to raise our Sunday School Lenten Offering. it is imperative that it reaches the $1000.00 mark at least. The necessity is due to the fact that this is our only means of raising the apportionment of St. John's Parish which must be paid to the Diocese. Also, it is St. John's contribution to the missionary work of the Church. WE MUST NEVER FORGET THE YEARS WHEN OUR PARISH WAS SO WEAK FINANCIALLY THAT WE WERE GRANTED AN ANNUAL GIFT OF $1000 BY THE MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT TO PAY OUR PAROCHIAL EXPENSES. Common gratitude imposes upon us the duty of always supporting the Missionary Funds of the Church.

In order to raise this $1,000.00 the Sunday School Classes are assessed as follows:

Kindergarten	$150.00	Adelia Pearo	35.00
Intermediate	200.00	Viola Young	50.00
Men's Bible Class	300.00	Eleanor Nugent	35.00
Women's No. 1 B. C.	75.00	Florence Armstrong	25.00
Women's No. 2 B. C.	250.00	Martha Lafferty	50.00
Raymond Cressee	50.00	Emma Kaiser	40.00
John Preole	50.00	Total	$1310.00

The Classes are given wide latitude in their efforts to raise their assessments and every member of the parish, especially the parents and relations of the child are urged to help him or her raise the Class Assessment for THE HONOR OF THE CHILD'S CLASS.

The way the friends can do this is to help the child sell candy eggs; sell tickets if the class is giving an entertainment of any kind; encourage the child to fill its Mite Chest with pennies; take a Thank Offering Chest and place it on the table for the family, when they sit down to eat, to drop a small coin in as their thanks for the food they are about to eat; and on Easter Day give it to the child to add to his or her Class Offering.

Please

be careful of the child's Mite Chest and see that it is patronized by the scholar regularly. AND PLEASE SEE THAT THE CHILD BRINGS IT TO HIS CLASS ON EASTER DAY. Help us teach your child to work for the honor of the Class to which he belongs. It is a fine sentiment of loyalty and will serve the child well in after life to respect the claims of social institutions upon his honor.

Watch That Mite Chest!!!

TWO OF THEM WENT THAT DAY TO EMMAUS

Sad were their hearts—all unexplained,
The mystery of their loss
And whereso'er they looked there fell
The shadow of the cross.

Yet, 'neath this burden of fallen hopes
And crushing mystery,
They carried still the precious gift
Of loving charity.

And when the stranger would have gone
Upon his lonely way,
They pressed him to abide with them
While night's dark shadows lay.

Then, as in twilight's hour they sat
About the humble board.
What joy to look with gladdened eyes
Upon their Risen Lord.

NEW DUTIES OF THE DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENTS

A Matter of Importance and Interest to All Communicants

It is our wish that the District Superintendents of our Parish make Block Collections once every quarter of all overdue Church Envelopes in their respective districts.

Our method will be somewhat as follows: The Finance Committee will audit Mr. Weber's books each quarter for the purpose of checking up on delinquent members. A card will be addressed to each member stating how many Church Envelopes he owes to the Church. When the Committee's job is finished the cards will be put in the hands of the District Superintendents for collection. The Superintendents will have back of them the full authority of the Rector and the Vestry.

This new policy is not an arbitrary act of either the Rector or the Vestry. It is a suggestion which has come from several communicants who are delinquent and owe the church several overdue envelopes. Their story is this:

If someone, having the proper authority to do so, would call upon them at least once a quarter and present them with a statement of their account, they would not grow so careless and let their envelopes accumulate until it is next to impossible to liquidate their account.

The suggestion has its merits and we believe will help us meet an embarrassing situation. That is why we are adopting it, hoping for unanimous co-operation.

May we cite a condition which will illustrate the necessity of setting up such a system. The first quarter of the church year closed Saturday, February 29th. When we audited our Treasurer's accounts we found he had a balance of 35 cents with unpaid bills and accounts on hand amounting to over $100.00.

The cause of this unusual state of affairs was three-fold.

FIRST, the winter of 1935-36 was so severe that many communicants were storm bound and were prevented for weeks from attending church service.

SECOND, many were confined to their homes on account of sickness or the lack of proper clothing. And,—

THIRD, we are sorry to say many just didn't feel any responsibility in the matter and paid no attention to the heaping up of overdue envelopes. Yet they are financially able to pay regularly.

We St. Johnites cannot offer for our excuse that we are a poor parish and unable to support our church. It is true the great proportion of our membership are unemployed and desperately poor. We have, by actual count and not by estimate or guess work, 940 members. About 300 of that number have packages of Church Envelopes. The other 640 are unable to make regular church offerings—some of them do give when they can afford to do so. But many can give nothing, but contrariwise, must be assisted.

Nevertheless, with nearly 300 packages of envelopes distributed through the Parish our income ought to be large enough to meet our current expenses if we get a reasonably regular weekly return. Even though our envelope holders cannot afford big offerings.

Our impression is that the block collections by our District Superintendents will stimulate the giving of envelopes and will provide the necessary revenue to pay our bills.

In the Meantime

may I suggest to all who are in arrears that they make it a matter of conscience to have every overdue church envelope paid in BEFORE EASTER. Let's come to our Easter Communion with a clear conscience in the matter of our OFFERINGS to God. You can easily do this by paying in a few every Sunday in Lent.

And Remember

your District Superintendent is authorized to receive Church Envelopes or dues of any other nature, —whether Fireside Club dues, money for tickets, candy, radio parties or Broadcaster subscriptions. Give your Superintendent your money, get from him a receipt, which he will gladly give and see that your slate is clean on Easter Day.

Make use of your D. S. He is a fine and trustworthy fellow and is your cordial friend and adviser.

But be sure you are dealing with your D. S. Any other agent MUST be authorized by the Rector with the knowledge of your Superintendent. If any person attempts to make collections of money or materials of any kind and cannot show authority from the Rector, refuse to do business with him or her and report the matter at once to your Superintendent.

MY LENTEN PLEDGE

As I think of the great sacrifice my loving Saviour made for me:

In His forty days of fasting and prayer,

In His ministry of service and teaching,

By His consent to bear the punishment for my sins upon the Cross that I might be redeemed and restored to the love of God, my Heavenly Father.

I Pledge

My absolute surrender to His Will in all things:

To attend every means of Grace;

To make my Communions with all possible regularity;

To support my parish with generous offerings;

To help, aid and assist my weak and unfortunate brothers as far as my circumstances will allow;

To make a determined effort to overcome my sin;

To make my EASTER OFFERING one worthy of me which will not be a mockery and an insult to my Saviour on the Anniversary of His Resurrection.

This I promise and pledge to accomplish this Lenten Season.

God Helping Me

GOD AND GLORY OR DEATH AND DISASTER—WHICH SHALL I CHOOSE?

Much has been written and sung of the love of God, of His greatness, His power, but how little de we understand Him. How little do we know about Him. How vague we are when we try to describe Him. Only those who have Him close to their hearts, who live their daily lives hand in hand with Him can really know His beauty, His loving kindness, His patience, His wisdom, His justice. Only those who seek Him, those who find joy and peace and happiness in His companionship can have even a faint glimmer of His Glorious Heavenly Presence.

God is Supreme and those who seek Him in love, desiring to know more about Him, yearning to draw closer to Him in wisdom and understanding, they shall see and partake of His glory. And those who are indifferent, not really committed to the paths of sin and unrighteousness, merely not interested, what about them? Even they must sooner or later realize His power, even they will one day seek Him and long to know all they can possibly learn of His wisdom and power. For there is that within each child of God which recognizes His right to obedience, His right to love and service, they must comply with this urge even though they do not desire to do so.

They must recognize the fact that God is Supreme and there is none other like unto Him. They will come to an understanding of this Truth and they too will seek Him, for in Him only can they find fulfillment. In Him only can they find peace. In Him only can they find the reason for their coming into existence.

And what of the scoffers? They who fear not God or man. They whose lives are filled with the results of their own base passions, their own degradation, what of them? "Before the beginning I was," and before the beginning were they. They always were, and they always will be, a part of this God whom they would deride and deny. But God, knowing their weakness, is patient, long suffering, for He knows that He is greater than they. He knows that within them is the Divine Spark, a part of His very Self, which is stronger than anything they may think or say, or do. Back of everything is the beginning, and in the beginning He made them a part of Himself, sooner or later they must return to their source. He is indeed patient, He is also just. All life, all existence is under the laws of God. In all the Universe there is nothing which does not obey these laws. His laws are unchangeable, even as He is. We can disobey His laws, We can decide we will have things our own way. We can deny Him and abuse Him and love Him not, but as we sow, we shall surely reap. For everything we destroy we shall reap destruction, even as for everything we build we shall know the joy of creation. For every sorrow or pain we cause another we shall know a like sorrow or pain or heartache. Since we are God's children, and as such have the gift of CHOICE, we can do many things which are not in accordance with His Plan for us. But when we do them of ourselves let us not hold God responsible. Let us realize that we but reap that which we have sown. Let us realize we must make our own happiness or unhappiness as we keep or break God's Laws. We can never get away from God. We may drift with the tide of life. We may take the line of least resistance, we may let it sweep us out to sea. We may loose ourselves in the ocean of our own wrong-doing, drifters, those without anchorage,but before we choose to go our way, before we choose to drift through life, let us remember that each step must be retraced, each fault must be overcome. Each sin must be paid for, and we, ourselves, are our own judge and jury.

I think I can hear you say, I am not doubting what you are telling me, but what about those who seem to glide through life, trouble seems never to come their way. Sorrow seems to pass them by. Their lives are sweet with unearned luxuries, they seem to be of the chosen ones. They have everything to make them happy and comfortable, and at peace with the world, what of them?

Everything we have in life is a trust. Everything we do is a test. Everything we think and say and do is the evidence of our worthiness, or unworthiness. We are all put upon the earth in order that the God within us may find expression. Our sole purpose in life is to express the God within us that we may find ourselves, and know our AT-ONE-MENT with Him. We are His stewards, He has given us talents, He will expect an accounting of our stewardship. He has given to each of us according to our ability and strength, and He will expect an accounting according to that which He has given to us. We are free to chose our path in life. We understand the law of Right and Wrong. We are co-partners with God and, as such, much is expected of us. However, we will never be required to do that which we cannot do. We will be judged according to the knowledge we possess. We must strive to acquire knowledge. We must strive to live in harmony with God if we are ever to know our AT-ONE-MENT with Him. Since the beginning is this great purpose of God. Expression of the Divine within, and a returning to the Source whence we came, completing the cycle we make our atonement with Him and in making our atonement—we realize that we are once again AT-ONE-WITH-HIM, the Source of your being, AT-ONE-MENT with the Living God who gave you life and from His very self gave you that which would make this AT-ONE-MENT possible.

You never can get away from God. You may realize His wonderful, loving power and seek it, and try to live a life of obedience to His Will. Or you may chose to be indifferent and careless of His love and strive to live life in your own way. You may chose the baser things of life and seek your expression in low living, in passion and lust, but nonetheless must you ultimately chose good and retrace your journey step by step, for that which is Divine within you is stronger than passion, stronger than self-will, stronger than any other influence in your life, stronger than hate, for that which is within you is LOVE, and love is Divine, and DIVINE LOVE is stronger even than life itself. You may think that life here on earth is all there is and when this particular chapter is closed you can write finish, but let me tell you in sincerity and truth, life on the earth plane is only one day's journey compared to the years of Eternity ahead of you and you can make the day's journey pleasant and profitable, so that your Eternity may be joyous and complete and beautiful, or you can fail to grasp your opportunities while on earth and your years of Eternity will prove unsatisfactory and filled with the regret of unfinished tasks, lost opportunities. It is true when we say we make our own heaven, and we make our own hell, but it is also true, we can be what we will be, for God has given to us the Divine Gift of Choice. We can chose His Way and we can chose our way. We can make our sojourn on earth a pleasant experience or we can make it a hell for ourselves and all those we contact. Which will we choose, God and Glory, or death and disaster?

YOUR RECTOR IS ASHAMED

After a Quarter of a Century's Service to the Parish, He is Not Getting the Financial Support That He Deserves.

If anybody had told your Rector a generation ago that he could not hope to get the necessary financial support to carry on the parochial work of St. John's Church he would not have believed it. He always had a high regard for his people and "pointed with pride" to their wonderful achievements.

Things Seem to Be Changed

Now things seem to be changed. He finds he is embarrassed constantly by what seems to be a lack of co-operation—especially in financial support. Years ago when we had a much smaller membership list and only about 100 packages of Church envelopes in circulation, we were self-supporting in the matter of current expenses. Now, that we report to the Diocese that we have BY ACTUAL ACCOUNT AND NOT BY ESTIMATE, a Parish Register of 940 souls, and we have nearly 300 packages of Church Envelopes in circulation, we find ourselves in debt on current expenses.

Why the Change?

What has caused this astonishing change? Is it due to hard times? Were 350 persons ten years ago able to do more for the development of the Christian Church than 940 persons can do today? Some, no doubt, will say that times have changed greatly and every institution, both public and private, has suffered a sharp reduction in finances, and that explains the change.

No, it does not, for in the worst years of the depression St. John's Church was so loyally supported by its membership that we were not only able to pay our running expenses but we were able to do a little to relieve the suffering of the unemployed in our Parish.

YOUR RECTOR WAS PROUD

in those days. He boasted a little about how one of the poorest parishes in the Diocese was not only keeping up its end financially but was actually helping its less fortunate members with necessary relief, of food, fuel, clothing and rent. The morale of the parish in those days was fine. Of course, we were hard pressed, but we did not seem to mind it because we felt we owed it to the church to help our brother parishioners and keep our slate clean of debt.

Now

with a membership of 940 souls (you may count them if you don't believe it) and 300 packages of Church Envelopes in circulation, and times growing better and better every day, we find ourselves without funds to pay our bills, which are less than $2500 a year.

How Do You Explain It?

There is no explanation possible. Apologies are in order instead. First of all the membership as individuals have grown careless as to their church responsibilities. They have lost their fine conception that offerings must always be a part of worship. Pleasure, self indulgence, etc., must have sneaked in upon us and robbed us of our sense of duty towards God.

This state of mind is due to our failure to give God the glory for our well-being, our friends, our homes, our jobs, our means of pleasure and our daily blessings. Lately these things have come to us so easily that, like over-indulged children, we take His gifts as a matter of course and it never enters our stupid heads to show Him the common decency of making a THANK OFFERING for His daily love and care.

You Just Didn't Think

how much you are under obligations to God—did you? Well, I'm positive that if you sit down and do an half-hour's thought on how much you owe God you will feel just as your Rector feels. You will be ashamed of your neglect of God's interests in South Philadelphia and I'm confident YOU WILL TURN IN ALL YOUR OVERDUE CHURCH ENVELOPES AT ONCE and help your Rector meet our obligations.

I'm sure it is not unworthy ingratitude to God but just plain un thoughtfulness on your part that has cause this state of affairs.

Let's Use This Lenten Season

as a good time to repent of our carelessness towards God and His Church and let's make God a promise that we will have ALL our overdue envelopes returned to the Church and our account paid in full.

Then your Rector will no longer

Be Ashamed, But Proud of his big parish who turns out to be 100 per cent. in favor of supporting God in South Philadelphia.

EASTER JOY

The Easter praises may falter,
And die with the Easter day,
The blossoms that brighten the altar,
In sweetness may fade away;
But after the silence and fading
Lingers a blessing unpriced,
Above all changing and shading,
The love of the living Christ.

THE KEEPING OF HOLY WEEK

Sunday
To remember the Christ in His kingship,
And to join in His praise with the throng;
Monday
To drive from our hearts all base traders,
With purpose courageous and strong;
Tuesday
To hearken all day to His teaching,
As with wisdom past human He speaks;
Wednesday
To be silent in deep meditation
While strength from His Father He seeks;
Thursday
To sit with the Twelve at His table,
Where His actions and words bring surprise;
Friday
To walk with our Lord from the garden
To the Cross where for sinners He dies;
Saturday
To wait at His tomb door in sorrow,
While in prayer for some comfort we seek;
Sunday
To see Him come forth in His triumph,
No longer a servant and meek;
Henceforth to follow Him always—
This, this, is to keep Holy Week!

Points and Pointers

A little boy of a certain parish watched his father intently as in the absence of a warden he assisted in taking up the offering. As the father went back to his pew, the child whispered semi-audibly, "Why, papa, a whole lot of them got in for nothing."

* * * * *

Do not forget, your Easter Offering reflects the sum total of your estimate of the value of the sacrifice and resurrection of Jesus Christ—a small offering means this act of Jesus Christ has small meaning to you. You have not yet attained to the true knowledge of its importance.

Let's all try to pay up our overdue church envelopes during Lent. It will be a great adventure in sacrifice for most of us.

Religious Education can be made practically universal, so far as this country is concerned, "at a cost not to exceed 1 per cent. of the present cost of crime. Our Attorney General has recently stated that the present cost of crime is 12 billions of dollars annually. One per cent. of this would be 120 millions. This would be equivalent to $6.00 each for 20 millions of boys and girls, and would be a generous annual allowance for providing thorough religious education to the 20 millions of boys and girls who are now growing up without it. How long shall we be so short-sighted as to spend 100 times as much on crime itself, as it would cost to prevent the great bulk of it?"

THE DAILY DEED

BY JOS. R. CUSHING

This be my boy's and now my creed—
"To do each day a kindly deed."
To do each day some helpful act
Unto a friend and what I lacked
These many years in tolerance
I shall, this very day, commence
To reconcile; henceforth I'll try
And set my prejudices by;
I'll hold my tongue in self-restraint
So that its venom may not paint
Ideals my neighbor held as bright
The indigoes and grays of night;
I'll try to cheer the man who's down
And help to pry him from his frown;
Encouragement to those who strive
Shall be my gift; should I arrive
Upon some scene where insolence
For clear advice is recompense
I'll hold no ill nor maliced thought
But profit by the lesson taught:
Then, in my prayers each night I'll say,
"Lord, thank Thee for the strength today
To help me help the boy whose creed
Is, 'Every day—one kindly deed.'"

EASTER AT ST. JOHN'S

Not Even Cloud Laden Skies Could Dim the Glory of the Day

Yes, it was a cloudy day, a March chill was in the air and it threatened all day to rain—a threat that was made good before our afternoon service was over. We went home in a soaking rain which lasted all the night.

Promptly at 6.30 o'clock we started our sunrise celebration, with the sun sulking behind the clouds. But lots of sunshine in the church itself. First of all, there was our adult choir wearing their new choir vestments for the first time. No more cassock and cotta for them! They now appear in a sober and dignified gown, the women wearing deep Lenora collars of white linen, which adds beauty and refinement to the appearance to a remarkable degree. The men wear the identical gown without the collar, which gives them an academic dignity appropriate to choristers.

Probably we imagined it, but it seemed to us that the new vestments had an extraordinary psychological influence upon the choir members, for they rendered the Easter service with a beauty and fire unsurpassed.

From a purely aesthetic point of view the Procession was a thing of dignity and beauty. The Junior choir in their cardinal red vestments leading, the Senior choir in their new black gowns, and the clergy in their black cassocks, white surplices and white stoles made a picture worthy of the occasion.

The program for both the 6.30 and the 11.00 o'clock celebrations was identical. The special music with full choir was: Prelude, Hallelujah chorus, Handel, Processional hymn, "Welcome Happy Morning," Introit, "Christ Our Passover," Shilling, Kyrie, Gloria Tibi, Gratias Tibi, Stults, creed, "They have taken away my Lord," Stainer, Offertory, "The Resurrection," Stults, Sursum Corda, Sanctus, Agnus Dei, Stults, "Gloria in Excelsis"—Mozart, Sevenfold Amen, Stainer, Recessional, "Jesus Christ Is Risen Today," Postlude, "Vesper Recessional," Schuler.

The choir was magnificent in their rendition and deserved all the nice things that were said to and about them after the services.

The congregations at both services were much larger than any previous Easter congregations in the history of old St. Johns. The number of parishioners receiving their Easter Communion was 500. Over 100 more than Easter a year ago. The Easter offering, in spite of so much unemployment in the parish, showed an improvement over last year. There were 420 Easter Envelopes received containing $462.03 in all. No doubt many more will come in later and the offering may reach $500,—a sum that is very much to be desired for we have been flirting with bankruptcy for several months.

The afternoon service was of the nature of a Parochial Easter celebration. The program, though long, was interesting. We began our service with an Easter Hymn by the whole congregation, including the Sunday School and others. The Creed and Easter Prayers followed; then, during the singing of another hymn the "Grace Offering boxes" were presented. This "Grace Offering box" presentation is a comparatively new thing in the parish. Two years ago we tried it out and so much interest was shown in it that we repeated it last year, at which time such a real growth in interest was manifested that we determined to try it out this year for the third time. We are rejoiced to report that 70 boxes were distributed through the parish this year, the contents of which put our Sunday School Lenton Offering way over the top. For the reader who may not understand what is a Grace Offering box we would state that it is just an ordinary mite chest for Missions which we ask our friends to put in the centre of their dinner table and whenever the members of the family sit down to partake of a meal they drop a small coin in the box as their "Grace Offering" for the food God has supplied. It seems like a small thing to do, but the aggregate results are surprisingly large.

The largest Lenten Offering for Missions ever made by St. John's Parish was $1600.00. Of course we cannot hope to reach that mark this year, but if the Parish will give its whole-souled support to Jake Preole's dance on May 2nd, we are pretty sure to raise at least $1300.00. The Offering now is $1163.20, which is much larger than any we have made for many a year.

The Easter flowers were beautiful. The chancel and choir were adorned with potted Easter lilies and other flowers, nearly all of which were white. It made the front of the church look like a beautiful garden. The one outstanding piece was the ten-foot Easter Cross standing in the southwest angle of the church. It was a beautifully proportioned cross with a background of green studded with big white carnations down its length and across the arms. In the centre was a halo of carnations. Following the Grace Offering we had the presentation of the Class S. S. Lenten Offering. Then the kiddies of the Kindergarten sang their Easter Hymn. And can they sing! This was followed by the presentation of crosses and Prayer Books for regular attendance at the special Lenten Service on Wednesday and Sunday evenings during Lent. When we were through with that job the Intermediate Department rendered an Easter Hymn with their usual tuneful vigor.

The Rector read the Story of Easter from the Gospel according to St. John. During the reading there was deep silence. It was as though all of us down to the youngest child in the Kindergarten realized the wonder and the significance of that first Easter morning.

By that time we were ready to distribute the chocolate eggs to the boys and girls—a ceremony we never fail to observe every Easter. Scarcely had we given out the last egg when the Auditing Committee said they were ready to report and they electrified the congregation with the announcement that the offering was $1141.29. One and all arose to our feet and made the rafters ring with the singing of the old Doxology.

Old St. John's had made good its pledge to the Missions of the Episcopal Church.

There was one last service to perform before going home—the taking of the flowers in the chancel and the choir to the sick, the aged and the shut-ins of the parish. Scores of willing hands reached out for the plants and scores of willing feet trod through the drenching rain to private homes and hospitals in and out of the parish bearing their emblems of Easter and tokens of love to the suffering and lonely so that they would know we had not forgotten them.

There was a typical scene of this service of Christian love quietly and unobtrusively enacted after service. The rain was coming down in torrents on Reed street. A young couple was trudging along under an umbrella, the young man carrying a baby and the young woman holding over them an umbrella with one hand and carrying a big red tulip in the other. They were on their way to visit a sick member of St. John's who lived 20 blocks away to give her the flower that had been resting in the font all day and adding its beauty to the general scheme. The couple seemed happy despite the rain and as we went by they flashed smiles at us that told more eloquently than words how they were really enjoying their voluntary act of mercy to one of our sick.

In the heart of the Rector, as he caught this last little scene of loving service on that wonderful Easter day, was a prayer of thanksgiving to God that he had been chosen to serve such loyal children of the Kingdom. Yes, he, like all others, was tired; but far more happy than he could tell.

Easter had been a perfect day.

OUR CHURCH WINDOWS

A Dream of Nearly a Quarter of a Century, About to Be Realized

Something should have been done about them twenty-five years ago. That far back they were in a deplorable condition. The lead was so old and rotten that it would not hold the glass in place. Pieces were constantly falling out and getting lost or broken. The frames were old and rotting. The sash cords were broken from age. There are great gaps between the windows and the frames through which come old man winter and his pal Jack Frost and sit in the pews of a Sunday morning chilling the worshippers to the bone and making them wish they had stayed at home. Then, too, the glass in the old windows is so dark and gloomy in color that we must turn on the electric light, even on bright sunshiny days, to see to worship. We feel confident that we will save a great deal of money in both lighting and heating by building in these staunch, heavy-leaded light-tint glass windows. The harmony of colors is beautiful. In each panel of the window will be a beautiful medallion, illustrating some feature of our faith or worship.

Each window will cost us $50.00. There are ten windows to be installed. About four windows have already been financed by parties who wish to set them up as memorials. All such memorials must be paid in cash in advance or we cannot order them. The cost would bankrupt us if we tried to do a credit business.

We are perfectly willing to accept orders for memorials with the understanding that the cash is paid in advance.

Each window will be composed of two beautiful panels. Some suggestion was made that if a person could not afford to pay for a whole window they might be glad to pay $25.00 for a memorial panel or half of a window. This would be satisfactory provided some other person or family take the other panel as a memorial and pay for it.

Before you read this article one of the new windows will be installed. Come to church and see for yourself what a marvelous improvement it is to the church.

You can help buy a window if you will. Turn to "Broadcasting from Station S. T. J. C." and see how you can do it.

CONFIRMATION SERVICE

The Twenty-Fourth Anniversary of the Rector

It has been our custom to observe our Anniversary on the same Sunday the Bishop makes his visitation to the Parish for Confirmation because the two events always occur in the same month and almost upon the same day. This year the date is fixed by the Bishop for Sunday, June —?—, at 8 P. M. (The date will be announced later).

The Confirmation Service, the First Consideration

The Confirmation Service is, of course, the important event of the day. We are bending every effort to make it a worthy class, both numerically and in training. We need the help of every man and woman, boy and girl to accomplish our purpose.

You, for instance, can do your "bit" towards making the occasion a success. You are acquainted probably with a family or an individual who are not communicants of any church. You may find it difficult to talk to them upon a subject which seems to you to be so personal and delicate. If you do, you can still do something in a missionary way by sending the names and addresses of those in whom you are interested to the Rector, who in turn will use diplomacy in approaching them and giving them invitations to attend the series of lectures on the history, ritual and mission of the Christian Church which he is delivering every Sunday evening for the purpose of enlightening those who are probably considering becoming active members of the Church of Jesus Christ through Confirmation. It is rather curious we feel so diffident in urging our friends and relatives to make this all-important decision when we stop to think how enthusiastically and aggressively we work upon these same folk to get them to join our club or our lodge. In the latter case we even go to the extreme of organizing competing teams and offering prizes for the group of workers who succeed in getting the largest number of candidates for the lodge.

Such procedure is perfectly legitimate and shows a worthy confidence in and enthusiasm for your lodge. You have two objects in view; first, you want to increase the membership and power of your lodge; second, you want your brothers, or your friends, to become members of your lodge and become fraternally related to each other.

We know from experience the great feeling of satisfaction and pleasure which comes to us when a prospect actually consents to become a candidate and apply for membership. When the night arrives for his initiation we are right there, proud of our sponsorship and pleased that so many of the friends of the candidate are present to witness the occasion and extend their congratulations.

We Need the Spirit

Now that is exactly the same spirit we need in our missionary efforts to add souls to the Kingdom of God. Your lodge, my lodge, is a very important social asset to us, of course; but, after all, it is not nearly so important to either the prospect or us as is the spiritual asset of the Church of Jesus Christ to all of us. If we work so hard and enthusiastically for the strengthening of our lodge and adding our friends and relatives to its membership, certainly we ought to exert twice as much interest, persuasive power and enthusiasm upon them to take the most important step of their career and become initiated, through confirmation, into the Divine Society, the Church of Jesus Christ.

Adult Candidates for Confirmation

Every year we have a large class of men and women candidates. This year your Rector asks you to make a special effort to get together the largest class of men and women we have ever presented. We like to feel that persons of adult age, who can think and judge for themselves, see the importance of swearing their allegiance to Jesus Christ and His Church. So many adults get the impression that confirmation is a service meant for children. It is not so. The first converts to the Christian Church were men and women confirmed by the Apostles. Wherever the Gospel is carried to a land whose people know not God, the converts invariably are men and women who first are christened, then trained in the fundamentals of Christianity and finally presented for Confirmation. If you have been so unfortunate to miss Confirmation in your youth do not delay any longer. Claim your birthright to the Kingdom of God and Eternal Life and be confirmed. Receive the sacraments and stand forth courageously four square for Jesus Christ. Let your light shine.

Children of School Age

How old ought a child be before he is allowed to be confirmed?

Some overly careful parents will say—when he is old enough to know what he is doing.

However, that answer provokes another question—When is a person old enough to know what he is doing?

I've seen many a boy and girl of eight who had a keener conception between right and wrong than many a person of thirty or fifty years.

How wisely the church words the question bearing on this point in the Baptismal office! "Wilt thou take heed that this child, so soon as sufficiently instructed, be brought to the Bishop to be confirmed by him."

You will notice there is no intimation as to what age a child should be to be confirmed. Rather the question is settled by the child's spiritual apprehensions. You cannot measure wisdom by years. The average child of school age knows the difference between good and evil. Naturally he has his animal instincts and personal desires to prod him in the wrong direction. It seems to me that in the moments of temptation and wilful desire he ought to have something more sustaining than the word "Don't" to fortify him against yielding. He needs more reasons for not doing a thing than just a negative attitude of his elders. He needs instruction in what is right. And that instruction should have begun when he was able to talk. Our Roman brethren are very wise in this particular. They are careful to confirm their boys and girls at the earliest possible moment and have them thoroughly grounded in the "Catholic" Doctrine. They know the value of nursery training and their results prove their wisdom.

An Exhortation to the God Parents

Let me exhort you, my Godparents of the Parish of St. John the Evangelist. Your responsibility is great. The eternal welfare of your godchild depends upon how faithfully you have kept your vows in behalf of the child you sponsored in baptism. It is your duty to see to it that your godchild is thoroughly and properly trained in the fundamentals of the Christian faith and is presented by you to the Bishop at the earliest possible day for Confirmation. This is a duty you must not neglect on the peril of breaking your sponsors' vows and proving false in your duty to your godchild.

As to Our 24th Anniversary

As we stated in the beginning, it is our custom to observe our Anniversary on the day the Bishop visits the Parish. We are following this custom this year and on Sunday, June (announce later), we will celebrate the Holy Communion at 10.45 A. M. At noon we will sit down to our Parish dinner to which all friends and visitors as well as members are cordially invited. At 2.30 P. M. we will have an Anniversary Service of the Parish. We hope every member and all our friends will pay us a friendly visit at that time. We hope also that the singers and the speakers of the Parish will form into bands of Cottage prayer service groups and visit all the aged, sick and shut-in of the Parish. We hope that some folk will think of it and bring lots of flowers we can send to those poor, patient children of God. Just put yourself in their place and we are sure you will do what you can to bring a little sunshine into their drab lives.

As soon as the Cottage service groups return to the church we will sit down to the Parish supper. Then we will close a busy day with a visit from our beloved Bishop and the presenting of the Confirmation class of 1936.

IT TAKES SO LITTLE

It takes so little to make us sad,
Just a slighting word or a doubting sneer,
Just a scornful smile on some lips held dear,
And our footsteps lag, though the goal seemed near,
And we lose the courage and hope we had—
It takes so little to make us glad,
Just the cheering clasp of a friendly hand,
Just a word from one who can understand;
And we finish the task we long had planned,
And we lose the doubt and the fear we had—
So little it takes to make us glad.

THE GRACE OFFERING FAMILY

The following are the names of the Grace offering family. It is a family that is growing larger and larger every year. This year it is much larger than last.

At the beginning of every Lenten season the members put a box on their dining room table in which they drop a small coin every time they sit down to a meal. It is their way of saying "Grace" for the food God provides for their nurishment.

This year many others joined this "Grace" family and their thank offerings added $100.00 to our S. S.

LIFE'S RECOMPENSE

Recompense. We need to live long years of experience, and long years of growth before we can reach the place where we can know the blessings which open up to us through the law of RECOMPENSE. We go through the years, sometimes serenely—of'times regretfully, for life is not all joy, life is not all achievement; and even in the years when we feel that life has been very good to us we still can know moments of regret, moments of uncertainty, moments of questioning. Why did this have to happen to me? Why did this sorrow come to me? Why did I lose the joy of a friendship which was dear to me? Why? We cannot always answer these questions to our satisfaction and many times, since we do not know the answers ourselves, we are apt to question the wisdom of God. We blame God for the conditions in which we find ourselves. We blame God for not preventing this happening or that loss. Since God is all powerful, all good, why does He permit these things to be?

All growth is an adjustment, all growth means change, all change is good. But all change is not always welcome to us. We are quite satisfied to go along in our little rut; and, since we are comfortable and well cared for, we do not usually concern ourselves with those who are not so fortunate as we are. We are quite satisfied to let them solve their own problems, but oh, how different we feel when life overtakes us. Then we cry out for sympathy, for help, for consideration, for adjustment of this condition which is so overwhelming to us. It is then, if we are real sincere people, we begin to have a little thought for our brothers in like circumstances. When we can no longer help ourselves, we begin to have the desire to help others. If we have been kind when life was serene for us, many experiences come to us to prove that bread cast upon the waters of life does indeed return to bless us. And many times the blessing comes from a source which we least expect; which we think would be the last place anything could come from. We find many kind hearts under humble roofs and in humble surroundings. We find a wealth of love and cheer and encouragement from those whom we would almost be inclined to think more in need of help and understanding than we are. We find in these quiet ones, these poor ones, if you will have it so, a wealth of goodness, a depth of understanding, a strength of character which makes us ashamed of our own littleness.

Life indeed has its recompense. Wealth, riches, abundance of worldly things do not constitute all there is in life. Money does not fill every need. Money does not necessarily mean wealth. An understanding heart is wealth. A sincere love of God and knowing His power in your life is riches. Things do not bring happiness. A quiet mind, a tranquil heart, a peaceful spirit, the ability to find within oneself the joy of attainment, the serene sureness of a life that is used in service to your fellow man, any one of these is real wealth. Good health, the ability to express the God within you, the joy of making another life more worthwhile, is riches. Yes, life has its recompense. We do go through the years, and we do wonder what it is all about. We do question God and His wisdom, but it is only when we come to the place where we can see the true picture, when we can view our life in retrospect, when we can understand the law of recompense, that we can glimpse a gleam of God's Greatness, God's Wisdom, and Power. Life is not all joy, nor is it all sorrow. It is the melting pot of all that is good and all that is evil within us. But as the gold is refined and made pure, so we are refined and made more like the One who created us in His own image and likeness. Life does many things to us which we cannot understand. Life is very strange and very wonderful. But when we realize that all life is God, when we can understand that all life is GOOD, and it is only when we make our life conform to the Life Principle of GOOD can we ever attain to wisdom and peace and glory, then we can also understand that life's lessons must be learned if we are to become that shining soul we were created to be.

If life is to prove worthwhile; if we are ever to understand our real selves, if we are to know our atonement with God, the Father, then we must realize that all life's experiences are good, and for every sorrow we have joy, for every cloud we have sunshine, for every mistake we have a new day in which to correct it. Life does have its recompense, and if we try to realize we are all God's children, here on earth to express the God within each and every one of us, if we realize we are a part of the Great Universe, a Spark of His Divine Love, then we will know that life can never prove too much for us, for we are a part of God Himself, and there is that within us which is greater than anything life can bring to us, greater than anything life can do to us, for we are our own recompense, we are our own fulfillment. We are a part of Eternity, since we are Eternal.

We will never question the wisdom of God, for we will know that He is all Wisdom, all Truth, all Good, all Glorious Life. Life has its recompense and we do come to the place where we can realize this and rejoice because it is true. Life is what we make it, and life is for us exactly what we expect it to be. Can we then not strive to make it beautiful, satisfying, complete? Life is beautiful, life is satisfying, life is complete, when we are willing to see it just that way. When we know that God is the only power in our life; when we look to Him for our good; when we accept Him and love Him and trust Him, then will we really understand the joy of recompense. He is all the recompense we will ever need in life. He is sufficient to overcome every adverse condition. He only is real. He only is good. He only is Eternal, and we, His children, are all partakers of His Glory.

And

Bishop Taitt in the evening.

When Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes was leaving a certain hotel he was asked to write something as a souvenir, in the hotel register. "With pleasure," said the Doctor, as he wrote: "I was told to come to this hotel for change and rest. The waiter got the change and the landlord got the rest."

The Fireside Club is going strong.

Are you a member of the Fireside?

Revised Easter offering—$162.03.

Revised Sunday School Lenten offering—$1163.20.

Receipts from Fireside Club since Dec., 1935—$131.30.

The Rector is asking every member of the Parish to turn missionaries and get for him the names and addresses of every man, woman and child in the Parish, who has not been confirmed.

A beautiful Bible, limp leather back, silk sewed, India paper, clear type, will be awarded to every person bringing five or more persons for confirmation. This offer is open to young and old; whether members of St. John's Church or some other Christian body. The only condition imposed is—no person, already active in another church or parish will be accepted unless they voluntarily apply for confirmation and assures us that no undue influence was brought to bear upon them to renounce their former allegiance.

We do Not Make Proselytes. We Want to Make Converts.

Gently Told

Excited Young Father: "Quick! Tell me! Is it a boy?"

Nurse: "Well, the one in the middle is."

We are about to build in a new leaded, stain glass window. It is a sample of the beautiful windows we hope to install in this church. The glass is diamond shape. We are going to count how many diamonds there are in a window, then we are going to sell diamonds. All the windows of the church can be rebuilt for $500.000. Any family desiring to have one built as a memorial can do so by paying $50.00. This includes the name of the beloved for whom the memorial is intended.

The Grace offering boxes netted almost $100.000 for our S. S. Lenten offering. That's what gave our figures such a boost.

The Cottage Prayer Services to the shut-ins of the Parish are a blessing to those conducting them as well as to those for whom they are conducted. Let's do more of this kind of Christian service.

The roll of Easter Communions reached the amazing number of 500 parishioners. God has indeed blessed our efforts.

The Easter offering for current expenses will amount to over $450.00, which is pretty good for a parish of poor folk.

Now what do you think of our choir in their new vestments? Personally, we think there is not a better vested choir in the Diocese.

Come Out and See the New Stained Glass Window.

173 diamond glasses in each window.
$50.00 the price of each window.
0.29 cents the price of each diamond.
Woolworth can't sell 'em cheaper.
How many diamonds will you buy?

THAT ASTONISHING "F" CLUB

Its Power is Growing Every Day

When we founded the Fireside Club we were desperate. Our "Coal Sunday" was a flop and we were facing the coldest winter of a generation with less than enough money to pay for three month's supply of coal.

Sometimes misfortune is a blessing in disguise. It was while we were standing, with our backs to the wall, wondering what was going to happen to us that somebody made the suggestion to start a Fireside Club and raise funds for fuel during the year instead of making a drive on Coal Sunday. It was argued that few would feel the assessment of ten cents a month for adults and five cents for children under 14 years, and most every member would join the club. We had no other alternative, so we just developed the idea, and it is running away with us.

The Extravagant Cost of Coal Sunday

Under the old Coal Sunday system we were put to the expenses of buying the coal envelopes, having 375 circular letters printed, writing separate names on 960 coal envelopes, addressing 375 envelopes and seeing to it they were either mailed or delivered to our members through our District Superintendents; all of which involved a cost of over $25.00. The returns were so small that we felt ashamed to publish them. The cause was that few persons felt they could afford to pay $1.00 on Coal Sunday. Consequently they did one of two things: Either they did not pay at all or else they paid such a pitiful amount it was scarcely worth recording. If it had not been for a scanty few who always pay in full, the receipts would have been worst than inadequate.

The Economy of the Fireside Club

Under the Fireside Club system the members of the Parish are quickly forming into a Parochical organization. We hope soon the membership of the club will be one hundred per cent. of the whole communicant list. The plan is simple, efficient and economical.

The way you become a member is to buy a membership book from either your District Superintendent or your Rector for 10 cents. Now you are a member and your name is recorded on the club's membership list.

The next thing is the payment of monthly dues, which are 10 cents for adults and 5 cents for children on or near the 15th day of each month. These monthly dues are deposited in the Fireside Club Treasury and cannot be used for any other purpose than for buying fuel for the church and for paying the gas and electric bills if we have a balance after paying our coal bills.

The real benefit to the active club members is in the fact that he or she is exempted from paying a dollar to the Coal Fund on Coal Sunday and their names will be published as meeting their coal obligations in the issue of the Broadcaster following Coal Sunday.

We shall continue our Coal Sunday system for those who prefer paying their $1.00 down on that day. But we hope such members will grow fewer by joining the Fireside Club and thus help us save the expense of buying the extra coal envelopes, which are very expensive, and running up printing bills for the Coal Sunday letters. Also saving us the three or four days labor of writing the names and addressing the envelopes to their familes. The Fireside Club and the collection of its dues do not cost the Parish one cent of expense. And though we have been only three months in existence, our Treasury shows a pretty healthy state of finances already. This winter we were forced to economize on fuel and lighting all along the line. Next year, if the Fireside Club continues its present activity the church and parish-house will be open continuously and its activities will be going at full blast all winter. And old St. John's will become what it ought to be both winter and summer—the great Community Center of South Philadelphia.

Now all you "holders out" want to face about and become a "Joiner up." Be loyal to the old St. John standard of service to our Parish.

LIFE'S VIOLIN

Responding to the master touch,
The violin poured forth
Its music, sweet and low;
When suddenly its rapture broke,
Its music for a moment ceased . . .
A string had snapped beneath the bow!
The master kept right on, when lo,
Another broke, and still one more,
And one was left alone!
And on it played the master hand
The melody, angelic sweet,
In clear triumphant tone.
When time and circumstances break
One string, and then another,
Of things to which we cling,
Is there a compensating sweetness,
Played full and clear,
Upon the one remaining string?

CONFIRMATION SERVICE

Trinity Sunday, June 7, at 8 P. M.

The date of the visitation of Bishop Taitt for Confirmation is definitely fixed for Trinity Sunday, June 7th, at 8 o'clock.

Now it is up to the whole parish to rally round the Rector and get together a class that will be a credit to us and worthy of our Bishop's faith in our ability to do missionary work. You surely must know some man or woman, boy or girl, who ought to be an active worker in the Christian Church, who at the present time is not identified with any such activity.

Wrong Conceptions

Some folk hesitate to be confirmed because of a wrong conception. For instance, the Rector has been told more than once that "A" or "B" did not feel they were "good enough to be confirmed." That is "wrong conception No. 1." Confirmation does not assume you are good. It means only what the word implies—a CONFIRMATION of one's vows made by himself or by one's sponsors in Baptism. Those vows in Baptism are:

A. 1. To renounce the devil and all his works.
2. To renounce the vain pomp and glory of the world.
3. To renounce all covetous desires.
4. To renounce sinful desires of the flesh.

B. To believe the Articles of the Apostles Creed which are:
1. Belief in God the Father, Creator of the world.
2. Belief in God the Son—Saviour of Mankind.
3. Belief in God the Holy Spirit, the guide and advisor of men.
4. Belief in the missionary message and power of the Christian Church which is both holy and universal in its operations for better conduct and living.
5. Belief in the Communion of Saints (Christians) in the coming together for Christian worship and receiving the Holy Eucharist.
6. Belief in the Forgiveness of Sins—for all those who have broken God's law are truly penitent for the evil act and now, God helping them, not to repeat that act.
7. Belief in the Resurrection of the Body—a belief based upon the historical and indisputable resurrection of Jesus Christ from the grave on Easter Day.
8. Belief in the Life Everlasting—founded upon our natural horror of death as being the end of life. We repudiate the power of death and instinctively assert our faith in the IMMORTALITY of the Soul; because we cannot, as rational beings, conceive any sane purpose in a break in the continuity of life. Everybody knows civilization is slow progress toward an ideal state of being. An ideal must of necessity be PERFECT; consequently, an ideal civilization is perfect living perfectly, without the snap of death to break the thread. Death is just the door that admits you into boundless eternity. You drop the robe of mortality on the threshold and assume your mantle of ageless immortality.

We must believe this; life has no other solution. It satisfies the demands of reason and the call of the soul for truth.

No. 2

Many say—it's now too late to take the step. Had I done so in childhood no doubt I would be actively engaged in Christian work today.

This is wrong conception No. 2.

Your age has nothing to do with your spiritual responsibility, except to make it more imperative. Those vows of Baptism stand and you are derelict in duty if you persist in not fulfilling them. Years cannot cancel them; but, as in financial obligations, interest increases with years. And in time compound interest of responsibility is added to the original obligation and you are liable for the whole, whether you like it or not. Yet you OUGHT to like it for it is your greatest investment in peace and richness of living that you can possibly make.

You cannot afford to default with God.

GET YOUR CANDIDATE FOR CONFIRMATION

No. 3

Parents say: The child is too young. You must wait until he reaches the age of discretion. That is wrong conception No. 3.

First of all, you presented your child, when an helpless infant, in the Temple for membership into the Christian Faith through the initiation of Holy Baptism. You asked certain relatives or friends to be sponsors for their conduct in childhood and train them in the fundamentals of the Faith; the Lord's Prayer, the Ten Commandments and all other things a Christian ought to know and believe for his soul's health.

Why did you make a Christian of your child when he was utterly helpless in every human faculty if you did not mean to let him assume his Christian responsibilities as soon as he is conscious of the difference between right and wrong and his duty toward God? If you are determined to set the age limit of responsibility at 12 years, how do YOU know he will be any more spiritually responsible then? As a matter of fact, age has nothing to do with the moral or spiritual sense of responsibility. I know men and women, 40 to 80 years old, who have not the slightest conception of right or wrong.

If your logic is sound why did YOU get confirmed at all; why didn't YOU wait until you stopped sinning in thought, word and deed. OR HAVE YOU THE STUPENDOUS AUDACITY TO CLAIM THAT WHEN YOU ASSUMED THE CONFIRMATION OF YOUR BAPTISMAL VOWS, YOU WERE SINLESS?

You had better present your boy or girl this year for Confirmation and get this matter off your conscience.

Confirmation is Trinity Sunday, June 7, at 8 P. M.

Sunday, May 24, 8 p. m. Memorial Service of Slook-Montague Post No. 354 VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS of the United States Department of Pennsylvania

AT THE CHURCH OF ST. JOHN THE EVANGELIST

May 6, 1936.

Dear Mr. McHenry:

In regard to your letter telling me of the visit of the Trumpeteers at the Memorial service, I should like to tell you that I and the members of my Post are doing everything in their power to advertise the fact.

There will be between eighty and one hundred members of the Post at the service, including the Ladies' Auxiliary, and the Bugle and Drum Corps boys.

I am thoroughly pleased with everything in regard to the service, and I am sure it will be a success.

I join my wishes with yours that we shall be able to make it an annual visit.

Yours truly,
OSCAR I. HOLTZHEIMER,
Commander.

THINE EAR, BROTHER ! ! !

We Would Speak to Thee Concerning a Matter of Great Importance

Yes, brother, I'm referring to YOU.

YOU, who are a baptized and confirmed member of the Church of Jesus Christ and a communicant of the Church of St. John the Evangelist.

'Tis thine ear I would reach.

I would ask thee, as Christian to Christian, who hath sworn allegiance to the Cross, what art thou doing for the Kingdom of God in the Parish of St. John to strengthen the cause of Jesus Christ.

Little children, wearing the sign of the Cross on their forehead, are running wild throughout the Parish. Their parents seemed to have weaned them, spiritually, and turned them loose among the wild beasts of lust and temptation. Their godparents have forgotten the vows they took for them in Baptism.

By the Way, Are You a Godparent to Any Child in the Parish?

These poor, little waifs of the Church are as lambs without a shepherd. They are getting farther and farther away from the Church and its protection because of parental and godparental neglect. Soon the sign of the Cross will be branded out by the sign of Sin.

Is It Nothing to You If One of These Little Ones Perish?

Other Sheep

Then there are other sheep, young men and young women—friends and pals of yours. Have you noticed how lukewarm they have grown lately? Fine young men and women! But they never would assume the responsibility of their Baptismal Vows and come to the Bishop to be confirmed in them. YOU KNEW ALL THE TIME THAT THEY HAD NEGLECTED THIS HIGHLY IMPORTANT MATTER.

Why haven't you been on the job and proved yourself a real pal when you saw how things were going?

What's That? None of Your Business?

Why, you hard hearted, callous creature Don't you ever say that again!

Don't you know the fellow who said that first was a murderer and a fratricide at that. He said, "Am I my brother's keeper?"

OF COURE YOU ARE!

And, if your brother gets in a jam of any kind and you don't help him out, you are a close relation to Cain.

Then There Are Others

In St. John's Parish are scores of fine, upstanding Christian men and women at loose ends. They have broken contact with their churches; yet, every single, solitary one of them are just the kind of folk we want in St. John's Church.

You have been on friendly social terms with them. You like them; they like you. Why don't you do something about getting them to come and join the St. John's family?

Invite them to Confirmation. Bring them to evening Service for instruction. Tell them that we don't look on them as sinners whom we are trying to "snatch from the burning" and all that sort of rot; but that we think they are pretty fine and we want them to be a close relative.

GET YOUR CANDIDATE FOR CONFIRMATION

Yes, of course, I know they are stray sheep from other folds. All the more reason why you should bring them home with you.

Some churches receive such Christians on profession of faith, others on probation, others on the right hand of fellowship.

We Receive Them by Confirmation

We want them to meet our Bishop. We want our Bishop to meet them, and the only way to bring that about is to bring them to Confirmation and get them to adopt us and let us adopt them so that we can be one, big family, working together in love for the glory of God and His Church.

WHAT'S THAT YOU SAY! You haven't got the nerve to do such a thing?

Go tell that to the ———. No, I mustn't be slangy. But you make me mad enough to forget myself.

If you belong to a lodge or something I bet you are bedeviling such prospects all day long to join up. And you won't take "no" for an answer. Say! tell me this; why are you a professing Christian anyhow? Who do you think you are fooling, playing around all week, sleeping all day Sundays, never coming to church to say your prayers and sing your praises to God, and shrugging your shoulders when duty calls. And treating your pals with neglect in matters spiritual.

You're a fine example of Christian brother to let your godchildren, your pals and your fine Christian friends to drift like that—I don't think. Just why are you a professing Christian anyhow?

Think you're going to get to Heaven just because your name is on St. John's Church Register?

Guess Again, Brother!

Every time I think of you I want to sing.

"La-a-zy Bones"

THE HOMELESS SHEEP

Those of Other Folds Who Have Been Forced by Circumstances to Drop Their Church Connections

In every community there are certain persons and families who, for various reasons, have been unable to keep up their church activities in the church where they are naturally at home, because of their long connections.

A common cause of this severing of connections is moving from the vicinity of their church. Another, and a very frequent reason, is the church which they attended, has passed out of existence and left them homeless. Also, many persons get serious doubts as to the teachings of the branch of the Christian Church to which they have belonged for many years. Whatever the cause may be, the fact exists that there are scores of persons and families in every community who have no church home.

All of these homeless sheep are men and women who have a deep and an abiding faith in the fundamentals of the Christian religion. Many of them were actively engaged in choir work, Sunday School work, work with the young people, Christian social service work, rector's aid, parochial visiting, visiting of the sick and shut-ins, promoters of entertainments, suppers, dances, card parties, radios, bazaars, or any other legitimate scheme for raising money for current expenses and missions. They represented their churches and parishes as delegates to city, state and national and international conventions. They joined missionary campaigns and house to house visitations for Christian survey work. They sewed for missions and for the poor of their parish. They took part in Christmas work in the parish. They helped with summer outing work, and did a thousand other things we fail to mention when they were actively associated with church life.

All this fine material, so really valuable to the church in its work of kingdom building is being wasted because connections have been broken which once bound the church and the individual.

We know of more than a score of such in the Parish of St. John the Evangelist, and we invite all such children of God to make our church your home. We know you will get adjusted soon and we are sure we want to adopt you into our family.

Probably you will say, but we were members of another Communion and were in good standing there. We do not doubt it. We KNOW it is the truth; and, just because it is true, we want you to abide with us.

Your tie-up is easily made. Wherever you went you would be admittted with a certain amount of formality, by the right hand of fellowship, on probation, etc. Our method of reception is by Confirmation by the Bishop of the Diocese. The ordinary parish minister is not important enough to receive the Homeless Sheep. Only the Shepherd of the Diocese is credited with the power and authority to receive you. And, when once he has laid his hands upon you, you are forever of the Household of Faith who serves the Master in our peculiar way.

We are not trying to win you away from the faith you once professed. We are most anxious that such good Christians be adopted as soon as possible by us and that they will add their knowledge and faith to ours in our work of building the Kingdom of God a little stronger in the district of Southwark. Even if you cannot devote much time or energy to the work of the Parish, you will still help us immensely by just quietly taking your place in God's Temple and by supporting it as best you can with your spiritual, as well as your material means.

Perhaps, after awhile, you may see some branch of the parish work that appeals to you and you may be able to do that little job just as it ought to be done. That will be your opportunity.

Our CONFIRMATION CLASS will meet Bishop Taitt Sunday evening, June 7th, at 8 o'clock.

Be sure to be there and meet him. We folk of St. John's Parish think he is the best Bishop in the Church.

FIRESIDE NEWS

FACTS AND FIGURES THAT PROVE THE WISDOM OF ORGANIZING THE CLUB

One never knows what sort of weather we will have. It is always wise, therefore, to prepare for the worst. In doing so, one is not pessimistic but cautious.

In the Autumn of 1935 we exhorted the parishioners to give generously to the COAL FUND on COAL SUNDAY. We did not know then what a terrible winter of cold and storm we were to pass through. We were greatly disappointed when the COAL FUND was counted and total ed to $220.65. We knew that if we had just an ordinary winter we could never supply enough coal to last out the cold season on such a mean, little sum as that. The only thing we could do under the circumstances was to economize by cutting out really necessary church activities so as not to keep the buildings heated. Sundays we had barely enough heat pressure to take the chill out of the air. Many parishioners complained of the uncomfortable chill in the church.

The church members gave us just so much money to spend on coal and we did not dare buy more than they authorized. That is one point so many fail to see.

If the church is cold it is because the furnace is not coaled.

The reason that the furnace is not coaled is because the members were cold to the proposal to give generously to the Coal Fund.

In such a case who is to blame for the chilly atmosphere of the Church—the Sexton, who is directed to all but count the pieces of coal he burns; the Rector, who tells the Sexton he must get two tons of heat out of every one ton of fuel, or the stingy parishioner, who kicked because he was asked to contribute his just share to the Coal Fund and now kicks worse than anybody because the church is not "nice and comfy" Sunday mornings and every night in the week?

Well, our Coal Fund did not pay our coal bill, which amounted to $303.51 in spite of the strictest economy, WHICH WENT $82.85 OVER WHAT YOU CHURCH MEMBERS GAVE US TO SPEND.

Somebody said, why does not the Rector know how much is raised and how much is spent, then we would know what to do about it?

The income and expenses are regularly reported to the Parish Finance Committee who in turn remind you once a quarter how far behind you are in your church obligations. Some of you heed, many of you do not. But get this once and for all—not one cent of the money from the Parish ever gets into the hands of the Rector. For financial information go to the Finance Committee.

Well, how did we get the $82.85 to pay the coal deficit? WE BORROWED IT!

That was not good business for a corporation, many of whose members do not feel financially responsible for debts contracted in their name.

Nevertheless, We Borrowed It

And, of course, had to make ourselves responsible for raising the money.

Then somebody, I think it was "Happy" Gilbert, wanted to know why we didn't make monthly coal collections during the year instead of having COAL SUNDAY? The more that idea churned inside our head the more we liked it. After a big pow-wow in the Brotherhood Wigwam one night, we all got set to put "Happy's" idea up to the folks. That was how the FIRESIDE CLUB was born.

To date we have raised $131.30 and THE CLUB IS ONLY 4 MONTHS OLD. If it keeps up its present speed, at the end of the year we should come through with over $500.00, enough to pay our coal bill in full, have the parish house open every weekday night for recreation and business and have enough to pay our electric light and gas bills.

Here is a picture in figures which illustrates our point:

Coal Bills 1935-1936.....	$303.51
Coal Sunday Offerings 1935-1936	220.65
Deficit which we were forced to borrow..	$ 82.85
Receipts of Fireside Club—4 months	131.30
Possible Receipts for entire year	525.20

A SUM SUFFICIENT TO MEET ALL COAL BILLS AND PAY OUR GAS AND ELECTRIC BILLS BESIDES

Do you wonder why we are so pleased over the success of the FIRESIDE CLUB and why we want YOU to become a contributing member. Think of it, the dues are only 10 CENTS A MONTH FOR ADULTS AND 5 CENTS A MONTH FOR CHILDREN UNDER 14 YEARS OF AGE.

MEMORIAL WINDOWS

Trifling Things Lead to Big Results

This is how it happened.

One night last winter Ted was taking me home from a pleasant little time we spent together at his home in West Philadelphia. You know how it is when you are riding along. The conversation is just small talk about things of common interest. He was talking about certain bids he lost to competitors and wondering how they could do a good job at so cheap a figure. That put us in mind of our Church Rose Window and we asked him if he would look over the job and let us know how much it would cost to paint it. He advised us to let the matter go until spring. We agreed but said we wanted him to give us a figure now, however, so as to know how much money we would need to raise to pay for it.

Then the conversation switched to church windows. We remarked that it was too bad to have the beautiful interior of our church spoiled by the condition of our windows. They are so old that the lead which holds the stained glass is crumbling. As a result all the windows were bulged badly and many pieces of glass have dropped out. The frames are rotten and the sash cords had rotted away long ago. Only a few of the windows can be raised. Then, too, the windows were not really stained glass but just painted and burnt in. The colors are dark; no light can penetrate; and even on the brightest sunny days we must burn electricity in order to see. The frames are warped with age and there are cracks and crevices in all of them. The consequence is we can never heat the church, no matter how much coal we burn.

We told Ted that the extra money we spent in fuel and lighting would pay the price of a new window or two. If we only had the money to pay the price.

Then Ted said: "I know a young fellow who is in the ornamental glass window business. How would it do for me to send him to talk over the matter?"

We said, "It was O. K. by us." When we said it, however, we felt it was merely toying with a fond thought. Well, to make a long story short, the window man called one day with designs and medallions, and glass samples, and window measurements and prices. We looked over his wares.

Then We Got Reckless

We ordered a memorial window then and there for our parents of beloved memory. It was installed in place of the window which was in the worst state. The effect was astonishing. Daylight poured in through the beautiful stained glass. And for the first time since the church was built, about eighty years ago, the interior was lighted WITHOUT THE USE OF ARTIFICIAL ILLUMINATION at the Morning Service.

The next thing that happened was the installation of a Memorial Window in the Chancel in the names of CHARLES and ANNIE BEISSER. This was immediately followed with an order for a window in memory of the father and mother of Elizabeth Rutter (Mrs. Jeremiah K. Rutter, Jr.). Then we got a phone call from the Davis Family for a window in memory of MARGARET J. DAVIS. The Vestry ordered two windows to be placed at the discretion of the Rector. The members of the Senior Chapter of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew are trying to raise money for a window in memory of the late CHARLES LITTLE, formerly Director of the Brotherhood. Sunday, May 3rd, Mrs. Kathleen Clark asked that space be reserved for a memorial for her little girl who had "fallen asleep September 9, 1927." We have just received another request for a window in loving memory of MARY DEAN. The request was made by her husband, Harry Dean.

This makes nine out of eleven windows bought in the incredibly short time of one month.

We are hopeful to have all the windows set before the end of the summer.

If YOU know of any person or family who would be interested in buying a window, tell them we have only two more left and the price is just the same as the others, $50.00 per window.

MEMORIAL SERVICE

of the

Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States

In March we received a letter from Commander Oscar J. Holtzheimer of Slook-Montague Post No. 354, Veterans of Foreign Wars, requesting that we hold a Memorial Service for the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Sunday previous to Memorial Day (May 24th).

Naturally, we were most happy to receive such a notable gathering of patriots and are making special preparation for their accommodation and pleasure.

One feature of the evening will be music by the FRIENDLY TRUMPETERS, a group of young trumpeters who have made an enviable reputation on Radio Programs, filled two summer engagements at Ocean City; three seasons with Dr. Ross Stover at the Metropolitan Opera House; two Sunrise Easter Services, Temple Stadium; Masonic Home for Girls; Grand Chapter of the Eastern Star and scores of other engagements.

Their first number will be "Call to Service" from the steps of the church, after which they will accompany the large pipe organ and the combined choirs of 52 voices in singing the hymns of the occasion. They will also render a Trumpet Voluntary as an Offertory and will sound Taps and Echo at the Roll Call of the dead.

The sermon will be by your Rector; the subject, WARFARE AND PEACE.

Owing to the great number of guests we expect to receive on this occasion, we would recommend that you come early for there will be no places reserved. The Trumpeters will attract a large gathering, as well as the friends of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

LOOKING BACKWARD

A Check-up on Our 24 Years of Service

It is well sometimes to glance over our record and see how we are progressing. As Sunday, June 7th, Trinity Sunday, is the twenty-fourth anniversary of our rectorship, we thought it well to bring up-to-date the facts and figures of that period of service.

Some Things Done

Twenty-four years ago we were looked upon as more or less a dreamer and were subjected to any amount of good natured criticism, and some not so good natured, for reopening old St. John's

GET YOUR CANDIDATE FOR CONFIRMATION

Church for service. One good brother gave us three months to live. That same good brother has been dead fifteen years and old St. John's is still plodding along. In these years we have made a record for doing things. We started by clearing off all bad debts contracted previous to our taking over the work; such, for instance, as the unpaid salaries of the sexton and organist, the defaulted bills for gas and coal. Then followed a whole procession of things accomplished. We paid off the mortgage, bought a new piano for the Sunday School; new chairs for the School; a new electric sign, iron fence around the church; exterior of church painted; Sunday School and Church rooms wired for electricity; new cypress floor for Sunday School room; new floor covering for the church; new heating system; new rose window and tower windows; new church roof; new pipe organ and motor; new cement pavement on both Reed and Third Streets; second new piano for Sunday School; electric sign renewed and enlarged; big new electric cross; renovation of church outside; chairs for intermediate and kindergarten departments; painting of lower rooms; building of Parish House; remodeling of interior of church; remodeling Sunday School room; ceiling Sunday School room with metal; installing copper gutters, drains and runners; installation of phone; improving the toilets; paying $9000.00 of the $10,000.00 mortgage on the Parish House; raised for missions almost $18,000.00; now installing new stained glass windows. Nine are contracted for already. Two more remain to be sold.

The total cost of all these debts, repairs and improvements was over $70,000.00.

Our Church Work

Since reopening, twenty-four years ago, we have never closed. Every Sunday, all week long, we have been engaged in all sorts of parochial and church activities. We have formed all sorts of societies and organizations for adults and children. Many died but many more were born and have been active for years. Among them are the Woman's Auxiliary, the Daughters of the King, the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, the Girl Scouts and the Boys Club. The Choir has among its members some of the members of the original choir. Now, too, we have a big Junior Choir. The combined choirs number fifty-two voices and is the best volunteer choir in Southwark.

The Y. P. S. has been resurrected and is becoming active again.

For many years we have supported a summer camp at Browns Mills, New Jersey, on Little Pine Lake for the boys and girls of the Parish. Also, every summer we support a daily Summer Vacation School at the Parish House for the kiddies who cannot go to the country. Both the camp and the school are under the supervision of young women specially trained in such work. The expenses of these social works are paid by contributions from a few of the Rector's friends.

In addition to this we support a babies clinic which is under the supervision of the Children's Hospital. This clinic has been active for over eighteen years and thousands of mothers and babies have been treated free of cost; also, the mothers have received free instruction in preparing diet for their babies and in sanitary care.

The Broadcaster

From 1926 to 1936 the Parish Monthly, THE BROADCASTER, has carried its message far and wide, in the homes of the communicants, at the bedside of the sick, in the hospitals of the cities, in the homes for poor and indigent, in the homes of wealth, to the Pacific Coast and beyond, as well as north and south in the land. Many friends, not members of the parish, voluntarily send their annual subscription for the magazine and have been good enough to say many complimentary things to us about it.

Other Statistics

Other and more important statistics have to do with the spiritual progress of the parish. In our twenty-four years we have christened 1140 PERSONS, including infants and adults; we have presented 1765 CANDIDATES for Confirmation; we have officiated at 172 WEDDINGS and we have performed 666 BURIAL SERVICES.

With the exception of the weddings we feel that St. John's parish is pretty well up near the head for spiritual accomplishments. Our wedding figure is low and will continue low because it is the Rector's inflexible rule never to marry strangers or couples who cannot come with absolutely unblemished record. There is altogether too much light mindedness on this particular subject. The Rector insists on every couple treating the matter seriously or else apply to some other who is not so "queer" about the matter.

The past is past. We are looking forward again. There are many big and important things to be done in the future, so let us be "forgetting those things which are behind and reaching forth unto those things which are before, let us press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

LIFE'S BLESSING

Life is so lovely, exquisite
With tender laughter, precious tears,
If there is one dear hand to hold,
To help one through the varied years.

If there is one dear voice beside,
To whisper courage for the day,
One heart to beat in sympathy
One dear companion all the way.
Life is so lovely all the while
With one who knows and understands,
We never can give thanks enough
For such a blessing from God's hands.

INVITED GUESTS

A crowd of troubles passed him by, as he with courage waited. He said: "Where do you troubles fly, when you are thus belated?"

"We go," they said, "to those who mope, who look on life dejected, who weakly say good-bye to hope; we go where we're expected."

HUSTLE AND GRIN

Smile and the world smiles with you; knock and you go it alone; for the cheerful grin will let you in where the kicker is never known.

Growl, and the way looks dreary; laugh and the path is bright; for a welcome smile brings sunshine, while a frown shuts out the light.

Sigh, and you "rake in" nothing; work, and the prize is won; for the nervy man with a backbone can by nothing be outdone.

Hustle, and fortune awaits you; shirk, and defeat is sure; for there's no chance of deliverance for the chap who can't endure.

Sing, and the world's harmonious; grumble, and things go wrong, and all the time you are out of rhyme with the busy, bustling throng.

Kick, and there's trouble brewing; whistle, and life is gay, and the world's in tune like a day in June, and the clouds all melt away.

THE SABBATH BELL AT EVE

REV. ROBERT LONG

Hark 'tis the sound of the old Church bell,
Borne on the twilight air,
Calling the Christian soul to tell
Its wants to God in prayer.

What ear can listen to that sound,
As if from heaven above,
And have a heart where is not found
One orison of love.

O sweet and blest celestial strain,
That calms the troubled breast,
And lifts the soul from grief and pain
To regions of the blest.

While here we live in woe and strife,
How sweet thy blessed chime,
Which tells us of a painless life
And of a heavenly clime.

O may I thy sweet accents hear,
Upon my dying bed,
And may they say but with a tear
"His soul at twilight fled."

MEMORIAL DAY SERVICE AT OLD ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

Sunday, May 24th, was a day that will long be remembered by the residents of Southwark. As usual St. John's arranged a special service and program memorializing the deeds of the Veterans of our wars. This year, however, we had a most spectacular and stirring service.

The Parish had the pleasure and honor of being the host to Slook-Montague Post 354, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States for the first time. We hope the Post derived as much pleasure as did the Parish from their visit.

We are very grateful to Commander Oscar J. Holtzheimer in bringing about the happy occasion. The Post was the gainer of one veterans applicant by their visit. Albert Later, the man who works quietly and accomplishes much, is a veteran of the Foreign Wars. He is the applicant for Post membership. We congratulate both for this happy union. We know Al will be a worthy member and an active worker.

The day's celebration began with the Woman's Auxiliary of Post 2, Department of Pennsylvania Grand Army of the Republic giving a supper to the members of Post 2 Sons of Union Veterans, in the Parish House of the Church. Though just a simple affair we had a delightful time. As usual, Marion Chamberlain, the one and only, was as active as a cricket with her hands, her feet as well as her tongue. She sprinkles pep in every gathering she mingles with.

After an old fashioned and tasty supper, things began to happen.

First, the Friendly Trumpeters appeared. Standing on the steps of the Church they rendered the "Call to Worship" to the Community with selections of old hymns such as "The Church is One Foundation", "Victory through Grace", "The Old Rugged Cross", "I love to tell the Story", and "America".

In less time than it takes to tell, the street was crowded with hundreds of men and women, boys and girls, who stood silently drinking in the soft and beautiful tones of the trumpets.

In the middle of the "Call to Worship", as though it had been pre-arranged, drums and bugles were heard in the distance approaching nearer and nearer, as up Moyamensing Avenue marched the Slook-Montague Post, No. 354, Veterans of Foreign Wars, led by their Boy's Drum and Bugle Corp and flanked by their Woman's Auxiliary, all in uniform and with flags and standards flying.

It was a thrilling sight.

Both the Post and the Sons of Veterans assembled in the big Sunday School room where they met the combined Church Choir of fifty voices who led them in long procession into the Church to the music of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" and accompanied by the big Pipe Organ and the Friendly Trumpeters.

It just made nerves tingle and creep.

After a brief Patriotic Church Service, our friend and comrade, Walter C. Mabie, read the Roll of the G. A. R. Veterans who passed beyond the skyline towards the setting sun during the year. This was the occasion we all looked towards with sadness.

NOT ONE VETERAN OF THE GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC WAS PRESENT AT THE SERVICE.

Those who are still alive are too old and feeble to leave their homes. The roar of the drum and fife and bugle of yesterday are mute. Our warrior fathers are bivouaced upon America's thousand hills. As "Taps" were sounded after the Calling of the Roll, throats filled and eyes were moist. We realized they had passed away never more to return.

Following the G. A. R. ceremony the Roll Call of the dead of the Veterans of Foreign Wars was read. One comrade was on the list. After reading his rank and the department in which he served and the date of his death, the whole congregation stood at salute as "Taps" were sounded for the departed comrade.

Mr. Jeremiah King Rutter was the soloist of the occasion. He rendered in a wonderfully sympathetic voice the beautiful anthem, "Face to Face".

The Boys Drum and Bugle Corp gave us all a thrill when they turned loose their bugles and drums and fairly filled the church to bursting with martial music. It was simply grand.

The Friendly Trumpeters gave a beautiful selection as an Offertory. During the whole service this quartette was just as busy as they could be, even joining the Choirs in leading the big congregation in patriotic hymns.

It was the most interesting Memorial Service ever held in old St. John's. The memory of it will linger many a year to come.

The subject of the Rector's sermon was PATRIOTISM — WHAT IT IS AND WHAT IT IS NOT.

OUR 24TH ANNIVERSARY

Trinity Sunday 1912 to Trinity Sunday 1936

Twenty-four years ago the doors of old St. John's Church were closed by a discouraged Bishop. The following Sunday, Trinity Sunday, the doors were reopened with the consent of the Bishop, by a young man who still had faith in God and the good people of Southwark. We were indignant at the thought of the church retreating from the field of endeavor just because the work had become a little more difficult and complicated with the influx of foreign people who brought with them their own civilizations and religions. While others were looking back and lamenting the decline of christianity in South Philadelphia we were looking forward and seeing visions of an aroused Church courageously pushing the Cross and the Flag into the masses of strangers who had invaded our homes. Our 24 years have been a record of constant growth and victory. Our 24th Anniversary was the crowning event of those thrilling years of accomplishment.

The Weather

Sunday, June 7th (Trinity Sunday) was a beautiful, cool and an invigorating day. The sun shone brilliantly and all day a gentle breeze was stirring. The thermometer registered 72 degrees. It seemed as though mother nature herself was rejoicing with us and had put on her best of everything for the occasion.

The Holy Communion

One could not help contrasting that Communion Service celebrated 24 years ago with that of our 24th Anniversary. Then we had only a pitiful handful of the faithful in a bare church. Only seven folk. This year the chancel and altar were adorned with tall palms and four great bunches of white carnations and baby breath. The vestments for the day were white, of course. Sunlight was pouring through the new, stained glass, memorial windows. The interior of St. John's never before looked so beautiful.

The chords of Dr. Geibel's tune to St. John the Evangelist Hymn was the prelude to the service. The combined choirs, the Juniors in their scarlet cassocks, the Seniors in their black academic gowns, moved in slow and stately rhythm in procession up the nave of the church singing the hymn every St. Johnite loves so well.

The Rector did not break the spirit of the occasion by delivering a dry statistical anniversary sermon. What he did was to enter upon the Communion Service immediately after the Processional and, aided by the choir, the big congregation entered into the spirit of the occasion with an holy zeal. As is usual at such a time the loyal members of the Parish came out in full force. The Church was filled with worshippers. At the Reception of the Sacred Elements there was a steady stream of men and women, boys and girls going to and from the Chancel. It was an inspiring sight.

The Parish Dinner

As always, the management of the Parish Dinner and Supper was in the very capable hands of Mrs. Frank Pine and her chosen lieutenants. We were glad to see the usual corps of faithful waitresses augmented by a number of our younger girls.

Incidentally and parenthetically, we want to call your attention to that new crop of young men and budding maidens we are raising down in the old church. They are developing into real, working christians and are taking their place in parochial activities. The Rector has great hopes for their future influence in the Parish.

Anniversary Afternoon

The afternoon of every anniversary is given over to a parochial "get together." Everybody comes and we have a general good time singing hymns, reading the Scriptures, engaging in contests in the Catechism and other suitable pastimes. It is all very informal and on that account very enjoyable. This year we spent most of our time re-constructing the Church Catechism so as to know what we are talking about when we answer the questions. Now we know what sponsors, sureties, articles of faith, hell and a score of other such expressions mean. All through the hour enthusiasm ran high. There was not one dull second all around the clock.

Those Cottage Services

We have developed a beautiful custom in the Parish this past year which promises to be both helpful and healthful for our sick and shut-ins. Whenever we have any sort of a celebration at the Church such, for instance, as Christmas, Easter or Anniversary, we gather in groups in the afternoon and go to the homes of our shut-in folk and have a short service of singing praying, Scripture Reading and conversation with the unfortunate. We do it because we want them to know that we, who are strong and capable to come to church on such happy occasions, want them to know our pleasure is complete only when we know they are sharing the day with us.

Each group takes with it a Bible, a Prayer Book, and as many hymn books as are needed. The groups are made up of folk who have VOLUNTEERED their services, many of whom know from painful experience the dull monotony of confinement in sickness.

The leaders of the groups on Anniversary Day were: Vernon Matthews, John Preole, Leona Keelan, Frances Heisler and Florence Armstrong. The groups visited all the sick and shut-ins of the Parish and got back to church in time for supper.

One little incident occured which is worth recording. The group who called on "Mary", who for the first time was prevented by illness from attending church on an Anniversary, were requested by Mary's neighbors to leave the doors and windows of her home open so they too might hear the singing. It was a fine tribute to our young people and we were glad they were equal to the occasion.

THE DEDICATION OF MEMORIAL WINDOWS

We mentioned in the last issue of the BROADCASTER the circumstances which led up to the installation of the eleven stained glass, memorial windows. On our Anniversary we had the pleasure of seeing the job completed. Every window was in its place and ready for the Bishop to conduct the service of Dedication We divided the evening service into two parts: Part One, the SERVICE OF DEDICATION and Part Two, the CONFIRMATION SERVICE.

We scarcely know how to describe that night. Such bewildering turmoil and excitement were never witnessed, even at old St. John's, which is always a seething caldron of animation on all such occasions. Crowds of people kept pouring into the church. In the big Sunday School room the large Confirmation Class of 90 CANDIDATES was being registered. The double Choir of fifty members were vested and ready. The Bishop was ready and waiting, the Rector was strenuously evolving order out of chaos, and the air was electric with excitement. Passing people stared at the crowd in front of the church in wonder.

St. John's Church was very much alive.

At eight o'clock sharp the Choir led the procession of candidates into the church. There were more candidates than there were reserved seats, due to the tremendous pressure of the big congregation. Had it not been for the quick thinking and acting of our Brotherhood men, the procession would have been badly snarled up. After we finally got untangled Vernon Matthews, Senior Layreader, led the congregation in a short service of Prayer. Then followed the singing of another hymn, which was followed by the reading of a description of each window in turn. After this came the Reading of the Scriptures, Romans VIII:14-39 by our Junior Layreader, John F. Preole. The description of the Memorial Windows follows:

On the South

1. In the Sacristy—window installed by the Masonic Members of the Parish.
2. In the Church—The Holy Innocents Window dedicated to KATHLEEN J. CLARK, daughter of Harry and Kathleen Clark. This window is directly opposite the Font. As Kathleen is the only child to whom a window is dedicated, it was thought appropriate that this location should be reserved for her memorial.
3. The McHenry Window—dedicated in loving memory of DANIEL and MARY M. E. McHENRY. Daniel McHenry, along with your Rector, was one of the founders of St. Mary's Protestant Episcopal Church, Haddon Heights, New Jersey. He was a member of the Original Vestry of that Church when it was incorporated, and served in that capacity until age and infirmity forced him to retire. Needless to say, the mother was the inspiration of her sons. She came from a long line of New York churchmen on the paternal side and Virginia churchmen on the maternal side. Her father's home, the Arrowsmith's, on the Bushkill River in Easton Pennsylvania, was the favorite place of entertainment of the Bishops Potter when visiting that city.
4. The Adams Window is in memory of LOUISE L. and ROBERT J. ADAMS, parents of Mrs. Jeremiah K. Rutter and residents of Philadelphia. Both father and mother were worthy of the deep affection of their children and this window is a fitting monument of their love and respect.
5. The Cooper Window, in memory of ANNA JEAN and JOSEPH E. COOPER, will ever remind us of one of the blessed saints in Christ of this Parish. This Church was literally her home. Day and night, every day in the week, she was either in the church doing things or in the Parish visiting the sick. She was teacher of the Cooper Bible Class, President of the Woman's Auxiliary, Chairman of the 85 Club, and member of every church organization in the Parish. She gave as liberally of her means as she did of her strength. She was a support upon which the Rector leaned heavily. The success of old St. John's Parish in these later years is directly tracable to her consecrated service.
6. The Spratt Memorial Window is the loving tribute of our staunch and loyal supporter, John Spratt, the nephew of JOHN and ANNA SPRATT, who welcomed him to America's shores from Ireland when he was a lad. The only friends and relatives of the boy were these two warmhearted saints in God. The first Sunday after his landing the lad expressed a desire to attend an Episcopal Church which had no foolishness in its service. The Aunt promised the boy a treat, and together, many, many years ago, they entered the portals of old St. John's. John, no doubt, is here tonight, just as regular and just as loyal and just as insistant in simplicity of worship as on that Sunday morning his aunt of sacred memory brought him to church.

On the North

7. Next to the organ on the North Side of the Church is the beautiful memorial dedicated to REBEKAH ANN ENDICOTT BURT. Few, if any in St. John's Parish, knew her. This memorial is here in this place of honor because your Rector urged it. He knew and admired her greatly for her beautiful, christian character. She was a communicant of a neighboring parish, the Church of the Holy Apostles. She was raised in that parish and trained her children in the ways of life there. Under George C. Thomas, one of the greatest Sunday School men ever produced in any branch of the Christian Church, she served as teacher for many years. These were years when Sunday School teaching was an art and a profession. Rebekah Burt was most consistant and regular in her church relations. She was a person of great faith. To her right was always right and wrong was always wrong. There was no shades between. She lived till she died, an humble servant of her blessed Master. It was the Rector's privilege to know her many years and to love and admire her for her wonderful spiritual graces.

8. The window dedicated to MARGARET J. DAVIS will ever remind us, who knew her so well, of one of God's chosen to do His Will. She was one of the oldest members of St. John's Parish. The wife of Joshua Davis, a man of honorable business connections in Southwark these many years. Mrs. Davis was absent from Philadelphia considerable of her time. But wheresoever she was she took with her the memory of the old church. She was an openhanded christian. She was a smiling christian. She was a tolerant christian. She was a sympathetic christian. She was the kind of a christian whom I am sure God loved.

9. The window dedicated to the memory of MARY A. DEAN, reminds us of one made perfect through suffering. Many years she worshipped here. She was one of those beautiful women whose magnetism attracted all. To her, Old St. John's was more than her church —it was her home. She loved it. She showed her love in a thousand ways, both little and big. Her financial obligations to her church were always her first and serious consideration. How strange it seems that one who loved so much should have suffered such terrible pain of body. Death was a blessed release to her. We miss her from her place of worship, yet we are grateful to know she is released from her physical sufferings.

10. The last window on the north side, near the door of entrance is in memory of one of St. John's noblest sons, CHARLES LITTLE. As a boy and man he spent his life here. A Sunday School teacher, an athletic trainer of the boys, now men; secretary of the Men's Club, Director of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, member of the Vestry, Director of the Junior Brotherhood of St. Andrew and one of the most confidential advisers of the Rector. He was never subservient. He was always frank and honest in his criticisms. His was an almost womanly gentleness. A devoted son, a loyal brother, a loving husband and father and an humble son of God.

In The Chancel

11. We now call your attention to the Paschal Lamb in the Chancel. Here is lovingly dedicated a window to the memory of CHARLES and ANNIE BEISSER. After you and I are gone and we are as a fading shadow in the minds of men, the name of ANNIE BEISSER will continue to be a flaming reminder of service to God and love for man. Whoever can supplant her in service? What would have been the history of old St. John's without the spiritual personality of Aunt Annie? It was through just one little act of unconscious hospitality one hot summer afternoon Aunt Annie influenced most profoundly the career of our beloved Parish and her Rector. That incident is known to only a few and it is never talked about. Suffice to say that her beautiful act of christian hospitality turned the balance in favor of the continued life of the old Parish. She earned her right to her place in the Chancel of old St. John's by her countless acts of devotion to her Master and to her fellows.

THE CONFIRMATION CLASS OF 1936

It Was the Largest in the History of the Parish

After the singing of the hymn which concluded the Dedication of the Memorial Windows, we entered into PART TWO of our Anniversary Night Service, which was THE CONFIRMATION OF THE LARGEST CLASS OF CANDIDATES EVER PRESENTED IN ST. JOHN'S CHURCH. We are not really ambitious to present big classes but the fact that we DO present them, is conclusive proof that the people are in that particular locality to be presented; which is a definite refutation that the Church has no field of work South of Spruce Street. With but few exceptions the members of the 1936 Confirmation Class live within walking distance of the Church. About the Church there are hundreds of souls still to be reached. And they COULD be reached IF ST. JOHN'S CHURCH HAD AN ADEQUATE INCOME AND COULD AFFORD A STAFF OF CHRISTIAN SOCIAL WORKERS AND NOT LESS THAN TWO ASSISTANT PRIESTS. If it were not for the members of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew Chapter, the Daughters of the King and splendid assistance of Miss Carrie Strang and Miss Anna Schabacker, we would not have been able to present as many candidates as we did.

And further, if we could have afforded to buy clothing for certain boys and girls, who were destitute and had nothing to wear, the Class would have been half as large again. Sometimes one feels desperate with so much work to do and lacking the facilities to do it.

WE ARE A BIG CHURCH OF POOR PEOPLE and that presents some hard problems to solve.

The Class was made up of 53 women and girls and 35 men and boys. Also the Rev. W. George W. Anthony of St. James Church was present and presented a candidate who had been baptized and confirmed in the Roman Church and wished to be received into the Anglican Church.

Following is a list of names of candidates who were confirmed.

OUR BIRTHDAY PARTY

It Was a Grand Affair

For twenty-three years we called them "Surprise Parties", but the cat kept jumping out of the bag with such monotonous regularity, we finally quit and now we take the parson and his wife for a ride on the giddy merry-go-round of fun once a year around Anniversary time.

Tuesday, June 9th, was Party Night this year. There was no set program. Even the speeches were informal and brief. Vernon distinguished himself by talking fifteen minutes without notes and against a cyclone of protests from babies to the right of him to the left of him and all around him. It was a pretty good speech, too. He made it very interesting at the conclusion by presenting the Rector with a beautiful Hamilton Wrist Watch, an anniversary present from the Parish.

But I'm way ahead of our opening number. As soon as Mr. and Mrs. Rector arrived the Junior Choir climbed on the stage and tunefully told the world how much they loved their dear Rector. A beautiful sentiment and appreciated by all. Then one of the girl members of the Choir dodged behind the scene and came out dragging a bushel basket of flowers which she presented to Mrs. Rector with love and all that from the Parish. The stage curtains didn't work so they just walked off, more or less naturally, and made room for the next group who turned out to be the famous Girl Scout Troop of St. John's Parish. They came on in an informal way, just as if hiking from one wing of the stage to the other in Girl Scout fashion. Then when all the hikers had arrived, they faced the audience and, while Betty Harper played the piano, they sang several selections of popular pieces for the edification of an appreciative audience. After awhile they stopped and began to look to the right of them, intently. We got nervous. We thought they had all been stage struck at the same time. While we were figeting and wondering what ought to be done about it, one Girl Scout came striding on the stage carrying an enormous birthday cake, lighted up with twenty-four candles and balanced upon a narrow glass dish. Back of her came another young lady of about 10 or 12 and made a speech. It was a classic. It was so impressive that we remember every word of it. We quote: "MR. McHENRY, COME AND GET IT." PREACHERS OF EVERY DENOMINATION PLEASE COPY THE STYLE! Your congregations are sure to stay awake to the end of a sermon six words long.

Then Marguerite collected a bunch of men and women at random, got them on the stage, tied big cards on their backs bearing the name of a man or woman or little girl who made and is making the good, old world worth living in. They didn't know what their aliase was. Each had to ask the audience five questions and guess their identity from the answers. "Pop Eye" won first prize.

Then followed a QUARTETTE of THREE voices. Jerry Rutter, Vernon Matthews and John Nelson. Somebody asked what happened to the lost quarter of the quartette. Somebody else volunteered that they shot him, and darkly added, before this night is over, three quarters more of that quartette will be shot. Well anyway, they struggled limpingly along on three voices and made a fairly good job of it until one of them suddenly thought how funny they must look as a three voice quartette and burst out in wild and hysterical peals of laughter, which broke up the harmony and finished the song.

Then came the contest between the babies and Vernon. He won by a nose, though they came howling down the home stretch on all cylinders. But Mr. Rector heard him above the racket when he (Vernon) told him (Mr. Rector) to please take this wrist watch off his hands.

Did you ever eat a dry soda cracker and then whistle? Well, don't. It can't be done. The only thing you succeed in doing is making monkey faces at the audience. They tried it out at the party. Marguerite, with her "come hither" eyes, snarled a lot of folk, mostly men of course, and got them on the stage. Then she showed them a carton on which was printed in large blue letters "U-need-a-biscuit". The men, already hypnotized by those siren optics, just nodded and agreed. Then Marguerite, with a "polly wants a cracker" gesture handed each a square of de-hydrated dough and told them to eat, still under the spell of those piercing mesmeric glances, they each and all obeyed. After they had powdered the crackers with their teeth and had swallowed the moist absorbingness, she commanded them to whistle.

It was pathetic!

They tried to do her bidding but only agonized efforts resulted. One victim, HER OWN BELOVED BROTHER, in hysterical frenzy to do her bidding, put two fingers in his mouth and blew a blast that broke the spell and all rushed off the stage.

Again the Master of Ceremonies approached the footlights carrying two neatly wrapped packages. Mr. Rector thought some more presents were coming his way. You can imagine his mortification and chagrin when he heard the name of MRS. Rector announced and she was presented with a beautifully, tooled, white kid handbag and a lovely pair of white gloves. MR. Rector consoled himself with the thought that after all he would look a little queer walking the streets carrying a white leather bag and wearing white gloves.

But Mr. Rector had no reason to complain of the kindly treatment shown his better half. Only a little while after this last incident, just following the singing of another love song to the Rector, the same Master of Ceremonies came forward and, in a few well chosen words, presented him with a square envelope, in which was a check of One Hundred Dollars to spend on a vacation.

Evidently the Parish wants a rest and is willing to pay for it. Who can blame them!

When Mr. and Mrs. Rector stood up and the annual reception was on. That reception is one feature of our Birthday Party we appreciate the most. It thrills the heart to shake the hand and receive the good wishes of each parishioner.

We feel they mean it.

After the reception Mrs. Pine held reception number two in the kitchen where bricks of real ice cream were passed around.

And that finishes the show.

But memory lingers on; and until next year, when we celebrate our twenty-fifth anniversary, we will dream often of the good time we had and chuckle to ourselves over some of the funny things that happened at our Birthday Party.

THE MOTORIST'S PRAYER

Grant me a steady hand and watchful eye,
That no man shall be hurt when I pass by.

Thou gavest life, and I pray no act of mine
May take away or mar that gift of thine.

Shelter those, dear Lord, who bear me company
From the evils of fire and all calamity.

Teach me to use my car for others' need, Nor miss through love of speed

The beauties of thy world; that thus I may
With joy and courtesy go on my way.

With gratitude to the London Church Times

BROADCASTINGS FROM STATION S. T. J. C.

The Memorial Service, Sunday evening, May 24th, the Sons of Union Veterans and the Slook-

Montague Post 354, Veterans of Foreign Wars, their Auxiliary and Drum and Bugle Corps attending, was one of the biggest events of its kind ever witnessed at old St. John's.

* * * * * * *

Also, it was the first memorial service held without even one veteran of the Civil War present. Time succeeds where enemy attack fails.

* * * * * * *

TRINITY SUNDAY, was an important day for old St. John's Church. FIRST, we celebrated our Rector's 24th Anniversary; SECOND, we presented the largest individual class for Confirmation; and THIRD, Bishop Taitt dedicated the eleven beautiful, new, stained glass, memorial windows built in the church.

* * * * * * *

Special mention should be made of the several beautiful cottage services that were held all over the Parish for the sick and shut-ins on Trinity Sunday. The good our groups of cottage singers did will never be forgotten by those they visited.

* * * * * * *

The Anniversary Communion was well attended and the combined choirs rendered the music of the service with spirit and devotion.

* * * * * * *

Did you notice the number of "old timers" who were present at all the services? Some we had not seen these many years.

* * * * * * *

The Anniversary Communion was the first morning service ever held in St. John's Church without the aid of artificial lighting. The new windows just flooded the old Church with brilliant sunlight. Our electric bills are going down with a flop.

* * * * * * *

Those two unwelcome churchgoers—old man Winter and Jack Frost, are going to gnash their teeth in rage next winter when they discover there are no more cracks and loosened windows for them to crawl through and give them a chance to make the thermometer skid zeroward,—the way they have been doing these many years. The new windows admit nothing but daylight and sunshine.

* * * * * * *

The UNANIMOUS THANKS of the parish is tendered to MRS. PINE AND HER AIDES for those appetizing dinners and suppers.

* * * * * * *

The Sacristy Window presented by the MASONS of the Parish attracted a great deal of attention.

* * * * * * *

We would suggest that our friends and members preserve this copy of the BROADCASTER as it gives the names of those in whose names the memorial windows were built.

* * * * * * *

The Dedication Service was beautiful. It will long be remembered by those who were fortunate enough to be present.

* * * * * * *

90 CONFIRMATIONS is a record for even St. John's Church which has always managed to stand well up on the list of Parishes presenting large classes.

* * * * * * *

If every member of the Parish would cooperate with every other member, we could present a class of 200 instead of 90.

LET'S COOPERATE.

* * * * * * *

We have already started on our way to our 25th Anniversary. Get busy NOW and do your stunt in making it epochal.

* * * * * * *

Everybody who missed the Birthday Party missed a real treat.

* * * * * * *

For genuine wholesome, side-splitting fun, it had everything pushed off the comic page.

* * * * * * *

And Mrs. Rector demonstrated twice that brevity is the soul of wit.

* * * * * * *

Somebody thought they would be smart and present her with a bushel of flowers copiously sprinkled with pink peonies. Mr. Rector had to wear a clothes pin on his nose all night.

* * * * * * *

Vernon is now an accomplished public speaker. Not even the heckling of the Parish babies could make him do anything more than perspire wetly.

* * * * * * *

They shackled the Rector with a Hamilton Wrist Watch. It's a beauty.

* * * * * * *

Fearing he would be peeved with such a gift, they gave him a check for One Hundred Dollars and a big birthday cake.

* * * * * * *

Mrs. Rector received a beautiful, tooled leather handbag and a pair of gloves to wear when she carries it so as not to get is soiled.

* * * * * * *

The Sunday School Picnic is coming. Get ready! Day, Saturday, July 11th. Price 50 cents and 25 cents. Place, Grenloch Park, New Jersey.

* * * * * * *

Will meet you at the Summer Bible School, Sunday, 10.00 A.M.

AUTUMN

Bright autumn flings her colors wide,
Across the woods and countryside,
And paints with quick and subtle stroke
The towering foliage of the oak.
And once where stood the sober elm,
Now blooms a rose from heaven's realm;
No canvas yet from human hand,
Has shown a beauty half so grand.
While in the background, smokey grey,
We see far hills melt away;
To mingle somewhere with the sky;
Their meeting hid from keenest eye.

And over all this solitude,
There broods a peaceful interlude,
While nature seems to pause and rest;
Her treasures reaped from generous breast.
So—autumn, flaunt your banners gay,
One after one while yet you may;
For soon this loveliness will die,
Beneath the cold November sky.
And then in winter's winding sheet,
Close wrapped will Mother Nature sleep;
Until that day, when from on high;
Awake, awake, the wild geese cry.

THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

The only purely church society for women in the Protestant Episcopal Church is the Woman's Auxiliary. There are other very estimable women's organizations connected with us who are doing valuable Christian social work and deserve every encouragement in their endeavors. But the Woman's Auxiliary is unique and stands for what every churchwoman feels and thinks. It is a society which embraces every confirmed woman of the church and has the moral and spiritual support of the whole church. Its policies are accepted; its methods of procedure are respected by every communicant of our Communion, whether Bishop, Priest, Deacon or Layman. The Church has every confidence in what they do, and rejoices over the splendid program they put over—not only in their individual parish or even in the Diocese—but especially in the missionary field where they are most active.

Every churchwoman's heart must swell with pride when she reads and hears of the amazing things the Woman's Auxiliary does for the church at large. Your rector will never be satisfied until every woman in the parish from eighteen years of age and over is an active Woman's Auxiliary woman.

Sometimes when he gets thinking over this matter he thrills with the thought of what he is going to do when ALL WOMEN OF THE PARISH co-operate under the Woman's Auxiliary standard for a bigger and more abundant spiritual life.

Why don't you come on Woman's Auxiliary night to our meetings? You will not find us clannish. WE HATE CLIQUES. We want you to come and join us in our business and in our recreation to the Glory of God and the building up of His work in the parish of St. John's.

Our first meeting will be on the third Tuesday of September, September 15th, at 8 o'clock.

Come and meet the others

THE BROTHERHOOD OF ST. ANDREW

While most of us have been vacationing, the Brotherhood has kept right on functioning. During the hot summer months they have held business meetings and accomplished much for the parish. Every month they have distributed Communion notices to the homes of the congregation. They have called to make collections for the Fireside Club. They have visited the sick in the Parish. They have been on the job at almost every Sunday service. They have arranged for a RADIO PARTY FOR SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 26TH. They have planned a campaign of the Parish to give heart to heart talks to the Communicants on the disgraceful financial state of the church and appeal to them for a more liberal support. They have started out with punch cards to raise funds to pay the salaries of our employees. They are already planning for the Bazaar, for new booths, new decorations, etc. They are now engaged in a "round up" of everybody in the parish WHO HAS NO CHURCH ENVELOPES and are getting them to sign on the dotted line for a package for the next year.

We take this occasion to thank every member of the Brotherhood, both the District Superintendents and Ushers for their fine summer cooperation.

Their moral support during the hot weather has been most acceptable.

THE SHACK - IN - THE - PINES

HELEN WEIR McHENRY

If I were to make a survey of the homes of many of the boys and girls who go to St. John's or who are affiliated with organizations which meet there and ask their parents what is the topic of conversation discussed most, I know what the answer would be! Parents of the Girl Scouts, the Junior Choir members, and the Young People would all answer, "The Shack-in-the-Pines, of course!" From Labor Day until Easter they are busy remembering the good times they had—then along about spring they begin to look forward to returning!

All summer long happy groups of youngsters take their turns staying for a week in the Pine woods learning how to work and play together and discovering things about nature that many a city child never knows, and it is amazing how much one can learn in a week. By the end of the week any one of the children can go into the woods to cut sassafras sticks to roast their "doggies" on—and who ever heard of sassafras before camp started! One group of girls had the joy of watching a family of swallows. For days the mother and father birds were kept busy feeding the babies in their nest in the pine tree over the lake. Then the day arrived when the parents began to teach the small ones to fly. One little swallow was so fearless that the children could go up to the low branch where he perched and stroke his back and talk to him! They will never forget what a swallow looks like—yet before those days they never knew.

A baby bittern made a visit to our summer house one day and we had a chance to study him. From our long distance glimpses we had always thought these birds had stripes of brown and black, and how surprised we were to find that they are really a beautiful iridescent green! Not one of the girls will ever forget the bittern's chicken-like feet, or his neck that stretches in and out like an accordion!

Things like that are exciting adventures—and so is learning to swim! Impossible to learn to swim in one week? Not when we begin young enough! And what a joyous surprise it is to suddenly discover that our feet are not glued to the bottom anymore, but that we can go floating along "with the greatest of ease".

The only thing we really mind about keeping house is washing the big frying pan. Still that is not so bad because we certainly are glad enough to have it filled when we are hungry—and how our appetites grow! Most of the time the counsellors in charge do not have to remind the girls about sweeping and cleaning. They are proud to keep the Shack as neat as a pin!

But what do we talk about most? The special events, of course; and they differ with every group that comes. Someone had a Birthday and that was all the excuse we needed to have a fine party and invite some of our neighboring campers. One week it was cold and we were so glad for it gave us an excuse to have camp fires in the clear space surrounded by the tall pine trees. Singing or just watching the beautiful council fire as it blazed high, roasting "doggies" when the fire burned low, and telling ghost stories, while the embers smouldered, made a perfect evening.

One group of small girls will never forget the night when some of the big Boy Scouts from across the lake arrived with a harmonica and a Jew's harp and we had a hilarious time singing all the old songs all campers love. It was a night of nights! For once the evening did not close at nine o'clock—and what a thrill it is to stay up late once in a while!

So many other events—treasure hunts, picnics, and canoe rides—filled the days that we were always kept busy and happy. No wonder the favorite phrase when a group of us get together is, "Do you remember when—" and our chief wonder is, "How soon are we going back again?"

A BIG PARISH WITH A LITTLE PURSE

Can we afford to ignore its financial needs?

We do not suppose that the tendency to ignore support to the church is peculiar to St. John's Parish. Every church organization has the same trouble to a greater or lesser degree. Yet, we cannot help feel that we have less excuse for ignoring our obligations and more reasons for paying our debts than any other parish or mission in the Diocese.

It is not necessary to repeat here the dramatic story of the fall and rise of St. John's Parish. The smallest child has heard the tale so often that it would be a waste of my time to repeat it and of your time to read it. What must have impressed itself upon your mind, after hearing it is, that we have a solemn obligation toward our parish to see that we make every effort to continue its success in Southwark.

When we were a weak folk and began our struggle upward, every man, woman and child stood by to lend a helping hand. Work, sacrifice, ungrudging service were the only vocabulary we used those days. The results of that struggle we enjoy today. Those were the days of a small congregation and no purse at all. Yet we came through.

We paid all our bad debts.
We paid all overdue salaries.
We paid for repairs and improvements.
We paid more towards the support of Missions than any other mission or parish of our size in the Diocese.
We paid all our Diocesan obligations.
We paid all our bills when they fell due.
We paid for the relief and support of our poor.
We paid on the spot the salaries of our sexton, our parish visitor, our organist and all other other persons employed temporarily.

All this we did when we were a little parish with no purse at all. Now we are one of the biggest parishes in South Philadelphia. Over nine hundred names are registered in our card index, most of whom are earning at least something, and many of whom are fully able to meet their church obligations of which only too large a per cent. are deaf to our appeals.

We think we know the reason for this lack of moral obligation towards parochial support. It dates back to the depression, when nearly everybody in the parish was perishing with hunger, was cold and ragged and sickly. In our misery we were driven to self-preservation, and every cent we clutched was needed to keep body and soul together.

Those were the days when St. John's Church put forth extraordinary efforts to relieve the suffering of our poor. Repair work on the church was created. Several friends of your rector helped him to accumulate a fund to pay for the work. The whole interior of the church and Sunday Schools were painted. Carpenter work, plastering and new plumbing was done and materials paid for. For several weeks the unemployed married men were given occupation which paid them at least enough to keep them from starving and freezing. No one will ever know the terrible strain under which we worked against starvation, disease and exposure. It was like a horrible dream.

But, thank God! We came through with great credit and doubtless saved many a precious baby's or mother's life.

The depression, however, left behind it a poisonous seed. THE SEED OF SELFISHNESS. Our parishioners had been driven by the goad of necessity to grasp and hold every means of support that would help them. The personal requirements were magnified until at last we fell into horrible sins of greed from which many of us have not yet emerged.

And so, the Church which supported you in your need, is now neglected by you in her need.

Your Church Envelopes are not paid up!

Some have cut their original pledges down to as low as a nickle and a dime a week.

Some tear up every church envelope due on Sundays they do not attend church service.

Some, who can well afford it, refuse to take church envelopes.

Some snarl and say we are always begging.

Some pretend to be suspicious and ask what they hope is an embarrassing question as to what becomes of the church funds. It's like asking one to account for what becomes of nothing; for there is no such thing as a church fund for which to account.

In the meantime, this lack of your sense of obligation to your church is producing serious results. You owe for salaries and bills as long overdue as one year. The services of your parish visitor have been temporarily suspended and her small salary stopped just at a time when she needs it sorely, having met with a serious accident which for months threatened to incapacitate her permanently.

How would you like to sit in physical pain and helplessness wondering what would happen to you tomorrow.

We are about to put forth another effort immediately to stimulate your moral and spiritual sense of fairness and justice to your church. We are investing our DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENTS with power to make BLOCK COLLECTIONS beginning this September. A special day in the week will be set aside for them to visit you and receive from you the church envelopes you owe.

MANY OF YOU PAY YOUR CHURCH DUES AS A MATTER OF COURSE AND ARE NEVER BEHIND IN YOUR PAYMENTS. WE ARE SURE THAT ALL SUCH WILL SUPPORT US IN STARTING THIS SYSTEM OF BLOCK COLLECTIONS AND WILL URGE OTHERS TO DO SO.

We need $500.00 in our church treasury

WE HAVE NINE HUNDRED COMMUNICANTS IN OUR PARISH. MANY HANDS MAKE LIGHT WORK.

MANY PAID PARISH DUES MAKE HEAVY PURSES and OUR BIG PARISH WILL NEED A BIGGER PURSE IF YOU AND I DO OUR DUTY AND PAY OUR DUES.

RECREATION MEMOIRS

by

MARGARET NELSON

We cannot allow the summer to come to a close without letting all the members of St. John's know just a little about our Vacation School. Every effort is made to make the school enjoyable, educational and profitable. Each day we have opening exercises consisting of hymns, Creed, Prayers, Salute to the Cross and Bible Verses. We've learned quite a number.(If you don't believe us ask to have them repeated some day.) Next we have competitive games including Dodge Ball, Cake Walk, Ball Throw, Going to Jerusalem, Do This, Do That, Ball Relay, Pass Ball, etc. Later we have a choice of Radio, knitting, weaving, coloring, spool animals, etc. On Monday, Wednesday and Friday we close with ice cream. Our average attendance was about 85.

We are anxious to let you all have a part in our program. We've struggled through this heat and made an afgan. It is quite lovely, too. Now we want you to take a chance on it for 5 cents. The proceeds to go to the Bazaar. Ask any child from the Vacation School about these chances.

We shall give a small Radio Party on Tuesday, September 1st, if we can get some cakes and prizes.

Will you help us?

We are looking forward to our trip to Atlantic City. We always have a grand and glorious time. Many thanks to our benefactors.

"THE KIDS."

THE JUNIOR CHOIR

We are pretty proud of our Junior Choir. During the summer they have been on the job every Sunday, sometimes one hundred per cent. strong; at other times well represented. They are the most cheerful bunch of kids we know, always ready to do their bit without coaxing. AND CAN THEY SING!

Our summer services never were so bright and peppy as they have been this year. Nothing is too difficult for them to undertake in the matter of rendering the musical part of the service. If you have not been present and heard them render the COMMUNION SERVICE you have missed a real treat.

On Sunday afternoon, September 13th, at four o'clock, they will assist the Senior Choir in the musical program, as well as sing a selection of their own, at the Masonic Home, Broad and Ontario Streets.

Then, too, the parish can always depend on them for the SUNDAY EVENING SERVICES during the rest of the year. Sometimes we wonder why the members of the Parish do not show more interest in this group of fine young people and encourage them in what they are offering every Sunday evening by coming out and attending their services.

Back of this group of boys and girls we can see the smiling face of their inspiration—Margaret Nelson.

We wonder if she appreciates the fine work she is doing.

Now be generous and give our Junior Choir encouragement

SUNDAY EVENING SERVICE

Beginning Sunday, September 20th, we will resume our Sunday evening services at the regular hour, 8 o'clock.

The services will be held in the church and not in the Sunday School room. We say this because there seems to be an objection in the minds of some of our parishioners against the informal vesper service we used to hold in the Sunday School room.

Sunday, September 20 - Rally Day

Now that we bow to the will of those who want to worship in the church we hope to greet them every Sunday evening from September 20th to the end of the season.

Many downtown folk have told the rector that they do not know what to do with themselves Sunday evenings. Why don't you come to our evening service and spend an hour in prayer and praise. Come and join our Junior Choir in singing the old hymns father and mother, grandfather and grandmother used to sing in the good old days when everybody went to church on Sunday evening.

That's where they first met, fell in love, got married and started you on your career.

So see what you owe to the Sunday evening service!

But, putting joking aside, whether you realize it or not, you need that quiet hour of communion with God. It refreshes the soul and fills you with new inspiration for the work-a-day week that follows.

WHY BLAME HOLLYWOOD?

Mr. William R. White, in a letter to the Philadelphia Record, makes a strong protest against "Hollywood's parade of indecency" in these words:

"Now comes along this A—— affair, which convinces decent people that even Hollywood must cease to parade its degraded morals before the world."

We agree absolutely with Mr. White's sentiments, but cannot refrain from asking the question, "Why blame Hollywood for 'parading' its degraded morals?"

They supply the "degraded morals" part, but who organizes the "parade?" What agency spreads the filthy mess before the eyes of the world? What is its object in so doing? If our much to be condemned newspapers would clean their dirty sheets and go back to the decent journalism of the Philadelphia Times, The Press and The Ledger, when that journal was the pride of Philadelphia, Hollywood would pass out of the picture entirely. Hollywood scandals command the front page and half page illustrations of every newspaper in America.

Why?

Just because it is the modern newspapers perverted idea that it is the class of news the public wants. It provides the thrill and appeal to the awakening sexual desires of youth. It gives the old reprobate who does not realize he is a has been, something to excite his wanning passions. It furnishes nasty minded matrons subjects for dirty gossip. It fills our courtrooms to the doors with sensation seekers, ninety per cent. of whom are women who think themselves respectable while they go snuffling like a heard of swine in the trough of filthy sex garbage. The first thing that attracts the attention of our boys and girls are the daily photographs of self-acknowledged sexual perverts; followed by extracts from diaries too rotten to handle and have clean hands. These are seasoned with hot intimate word pictures of highly indecent scenes taken from the real life of morons as witnessed by a band of filth snoopers who miscall themselves detectives.

Hollywood may be rotten to its very heart. Probably it is. But even Hollywood could not stand being ignored by a self-respecting and clean journalism. The scandal of Hollywood would die overnight if our editors would stop giving it free, illustrated, front page advertisement and would print legitimate news instead.

The modern newspaper is educating modern civilization to the very intricacies of Roman debaucheries and has the collossal nerve to pretend that decent men and women desire the unformed minds and lives of their sons and daughters corrupted with salacious literature.

The scandals of Hollywood ought to be firmly suppressed. But the scandals of modern newspaperdom should be burned at the stake for "parading Hollywood's degraded morals before the world."

Why should we quarantine small pox victims and allow a putrid journalism to propagate and broadcast the far more contagious and deadly germ of immorality?

Why not isolate every case of social sin in courts of three judges, no juries, one attorney each for plaintiff and defendant, no reporters or sob sisters and only one witness at a time present and giving testimoy. And the ultimate decision of the Court, without lurid illustrations, supplied the newspapers by the Clerk of the Court.

That would cure the great American Plague in jig time.

STATION S. T. J. C.

VACATION IS OVER, GET BUSY!

Your overdue church envelope is the monkey wrench in our financial machinery. WHY DON'T YOU PAY UP?

The Rector has commissioned the District Superintendents to make BLOCK COLLECTIONS once a month in their Districts. If you owe the church money pay it to them.

Hope to see you in Church now that you are back on the job.

BIG RADIO PARTY—SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 26TH. YOU OUGHT TO HEAR WHAT THEY ARE OFFERING AS DOOR PRIZES!

MEN AND PRETZELS

A pretzel has small sense of direction. It cares not where it begins, and even less where it ends. It twines in and out, under and over, going nowhere. Some men are like that. Constantly crossing and recrossing their steps. Ending up where they began.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 20TH

Is the date when we get back to our fall and winter schedule: SUNDAY: Morning service and sermon, 11 A. M.; Sunday School, 2.30 P. M.; Brotherhood of St. Andrew, 7 P. M.; Daughters of the King, 7.30 P. M.

EVERY MEMBER OF THE PARISH IS EXPECTED TO MAKE HIS COMMUNION AT LEAST ONCE A MONTH, ON THE FIRST SUNDAY AT 11 A. M. PLEASE TAKE NOTICE.

Every member of the Parish is about to be approached on the matter of contributing to the current expenses of the Parish by means of the CHURCH ENVELOPE SYSTEM. Please bear in mind when you are asked to take a package of envelopes that YOUR OFFERINGS ARE PART OF YOUR WORSHIP.

The church asks no specific amount of you—as your weekly dues to the church. YOU ARE SUPPOSED TO PLEDGE WHATEVER YOU FEEL IS A JUST OFFERING TO GOD FOR ALL THE BLESSINGS HE GIVES YOU.

COAL SUNDAY

is coming for those who would not join the FIRESIDE CLUB but promised to give their COAL OFFERING in the usual way.

For those conscientious objectors we have appointed Sunday, November First, ALL SAINTS DAY, for our annual coal fund collections.

Of course, it is understood that no member of the FIRESIDE CLUB, who is paid up in full, will be expected or asked to contribute to the ALL SAINTS DAY COAL OFFERING. Their obligation is met and they can forget about it. We hope, however, that those not members of the Club will give generously to the Coal Fund, for we want to keep open both the Parish House and the Church all through the winter.

We Hope You Will Redeem Your Promise on All Saints Day

HARVEST HOME SUNDAY

Sunday, October 25th, all day

Harvest Home Sunday is peculiar to old St. John's Parish. We think we are right in stating it is not observed in any other church in the city; perhaps not in the Diocese. It is the one day when each of us can give what we can afford towards the comfort and care of the sick and poor of our parish.

Many of us have very little we can give and are sometimes ashamed to give what we can on that account. But when a special day is set aside for everybody to bring to the church their offering for the poor and have it added to the offerings of others, it gives us courage and we take the opportunity to do our little part to relieve the suffering in our parish. Our little, added to others' little, soon multiplies and makes much. Then everybody in the parish knows that the needs of the poor and sick of the parish are known to the Rector and his staff, and all the food, materials and money given on HARVEST HOME SUNDAY will be properly distributed.

What ought we bring to Church on Harvest Home Sunday?

Well, it seems to us, that every housekeeper knows what the family needs. Anything, such as a can of tomatoes, corn, peas, beans, spaghetti, fruit or soup will be acceptable. Potatoes, apples, onions, carrots, cabbage, or any other winter vegetable, will help out. Jars of jellies, jams, preserves, milk, etc., are just the thing for the sick. Flour, breakfast food, salt, soap, butter, sugar, tea, coffee, eggs, cocoa, etc., are staples needed in every family. Worn clothing and shoes BUT NOT TOO WORN, not only cover the naked, but keep them warm, protected from cold and storm and shield them from pneumonia and other dangerous winter diseases.

A spare dollar or so will help put coal in the cellar, or pay the rent, or gas bill, or buy medicine for the sick baby or mother. These are only a few suggestions we make for helping our HARVEST HOME. No doubt you can think of many more practical things to do. If you can, why, so much the better. Just go ahead and add YOUR SUGGESTIONS to OUR suggestions and let's make our HARVEST HOME an enjoyable occasion of giving of our little to the aid of those who have nothing.

Harvest Home Day is Sunday, October 25th; Morning, Afternoon and Night
Come and bring your gifts with you

POLITICS AND THE PULPIT

Let your conscience be your guide

We wish to preface this piece of pastoral philosophy with the remark that there is no intention on the part of the writer to criticise any person or persons of the ministry for their peculiar mental attitude upon this same subject. The sole object of these few observations is to assure the members of the parish that the pulpit of St. John's Church never has been and never will be used for political propaganda. Your rector is a firm believer in the rule laid down by no less a leader of men than Jesus Christ, who, when he was approached by the politicians of his times to throw the weight of his popularity and influence against the Roman authority, replied with his famous epigram, "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's." In other words POLITICS has no place in the PULPIT. The propaganda of the Pulpit is or should be very definitely confined to its purpose i. e. the moral and spiritual teachings of the Master and how to interpret that teaching into terms of service to God and our brother man.

For the priest of God to enter the arena of politics as a practical means of applying his theories of Christian social service, is to degrade his high office of spiritual leadership. He has nothing to do with the things that are Caesar's. His is to apply all his time and thought and strength to the things that are God's. He is not ordained to readjust politics or commerce or even religion. His one duty is to teach men and lead them in the paths of righteousness.

But, you say, is there any person better fitted to guide men right in solving political problems than the priest? Again we state, we, the priesthood, are not interested in politics. We have more than we can do to inspire men to a life of service, without attempting to fill their hearts and minds with personal political prejudices.

Of course, the priest has his political prejudices and if he is the right sort of an American he is going to the polls and vote for his particular candidate—the man he feels is fit for office. But who gives the priest the right to impose his political bias on the members of his parish? Surely every male and female adult is capable of reading and hearing and thinking and making their own decisions. Why not let them be governed by the ideals of right and justice and VOTE ACCORDING TO THEIR OWN CONSCIENCE. We resent being "assisted" in marking our ballot. Suppose we, the clergy, allow our parishioners to vote as they conscientiously please and without "assistance."

We are reminded of a little personal experience some years ago. We never advertise our intentions in voting. But on this occasion a little group of men made it their business to assume that we were going to vote for a candidate whom they opposed for certain unworthy reasons. They appointed a committee of two to come to our office and express their displeasure over our contemplated vote and to suggest that, as a religious leader, it was up to us to preach against the candidate. We didn't take the trouble to excuse or apologize or explain. We just naturally reared up, declared our personal right to vote for whom we jolly well pleased, told them to get out of our office and never come back. They never did. We voted our way and our candidate got snowed under. Anyway, we exercised our right of franchise uninfluenced by prejudice.

What we demand for ourselves, we demand for the humblest parishioners. When voting time comes, don't sell your franchise. Don't be swayed by religious or party prejudice. Let your conscience guide you, in which case you will vote the right way whichever candidate you choose.

Ignore the biased ravings of both priest and politicians. Look around you; see whether you want a change or not.

Ask yourself a few questions.

Am I better or worse off than I was before this present administration? Shall I be better or worse off if I vote for a change of policy or party?

These are fundamental questions. After you have answered them to your satisfaction, then go to the polls and vote according to your convictions.

And be sure you do vote
That is your patriotic duty

AS WE MEASURE

True worth is in being, not seeming;
In doing each day that goes by,
Some little good—not in dreaming
Of great things to do bye and bye,
For whatever men say in blindness
And spite of the fancies of youth,
There's nothing so kingly as kindness,
And nothing so royal as truth.

We get back our mete as we measure:
We cannot do wrong and feel right;
Nor can we give pain and gain pleasure,
For justice avenges each slight.
The air for the wing of the sparrow,
The bush for the robin and wren,
But always the path that is narrow
And straight, for the children of men.

—Alice Cary

THE WOMAN POWER OF OUR PARISH

It Can be an Irresistible Force for God and the Church

Recently we made a post card survey of the women of the parish and to our astonishment we learned that we are carrying the names of nearly three hundred women (298 to be exact) on our Parish Register. Naturally we began to speculate what we should be accomplishing with such an enormous WOMAN POWER to draw upon.

SUPPOSE we consider what could be accomplished for God and His Kingdom in South Philadelphia should the women of St. John's awaken to their opportunity. Take, for instance, the matter of CHURCH ATTENDANCE. If 298 women were to attend Divine Worship do you think it would go unnoticed? Even allowing twenty-five per cent deduction for sickness or other unavoidable hindrance we would still have 224 women worshippers in the House of God every Sunday.

SUPPOSE our 298 women would take over the moral and spiritual welfare of our children our Sunday School classes would be spilling over and we would need to form new classes.

SUPPOSE our 298 women should UNITE IN A CAMPAIGN OF PRAYER FOR POWER TO SERVE GOD AND FOR WISDOM AND DESIRE TO USE THAT POWER TO THE UTMOST; can you or any one else imagine the amazing change such a campaign would make in the lives of everybody in the Parish? St. John's would lead the world in completely subjecting and taking captive the whole community of Southwark for Christ and firmly planting His Cross as our everlasting parochial standard.

SUPPOSE our 298 women would exert their influence over the male members of their respective families we would find our congregations increasnig to such an extent that St. John's Church, large as it is, would be forced to build an annex to accommodate the crowds.

SUPPOSE our 298 women were to pledge a minimum of OFFERING of 15 CENTS a week through our CHURCH ENVELOPE SYSTEM, the weekly parochial receipts from them alone would be $44.70 and for the year $2324.40. That sum would put the parish finances out of the red and make it the strongest and most independent parish in the Diocese.

SUPPOSE our 298 women should become contributing members of the Fireside Club. The income from that source alone would be $357.60.

SUPPOSE our 298 women would see the tremendous importance of maintaining Sunday Evening church services for the salvation of the young people who spend the last hours of God's day in social clubs and unspiritual pleasures, such a power of revival would sweep over the parish that would be the talk of the town.

Sunday, October 4 - Harvest Home

SUPPOSE our 298 women made it a rule of their lives to always receive their Communion regularly and encourage the other members of their families to do the same, the result would be the need of an assistant to the Rector. He could not possibly minister to them singlehanded.

SUPPOSE our 298 women should begin NOW to make things for our annual Bazaar; such, for instance, as wash cloths, towels, aprons, embroidered pieces, preserves, jellies and an hundred other things feminine fingers can do, our Bazaar would be well stocked with things the public would be glad to buy.

SUPPOSE our 298 women would take an active interest in the Woman's Auxiliary and would attend regularly its monthly meetings. Our Sunday School room would be full to overflowing. The enthusiasm would be irresistible. The power would be felt to the four corners of the Parish. The fame of the Auxiliary would go through the entire Diocese and the fame of the Auxiliary would spread throughout the national church.

SUPPOSE our 298 women should combine into one solid unit and make a drive for candidates for Confirmation for our 25TH ANNIVERSARY CLASS and work continuously from now until then with this one object in view. Our 25TH ANNIVERSARY would be the most impressive event that has ever taken place in or out of our parish.

SUPPOSE our 298 women should start a campaign in the parish to bring every unbaptized child and adult to the church to receive that Holy Sacrament. The list of names of the newly baptized would fill a column of the BROADCASTER.

Suppose our 298 women should start a WHISPERING CAMPAIGN. Talk about St. John's Church over the backyard fence, when they meet in the corner grocery, to the insurance man, the landlord, the friends and casual acquaintances, and tell folks in a quiet little way what a beautiful church St. John's is inside. Speak of the fine singing of the Senior Choir, the splendid progress of the Junior Choir, the beautiful new memorial windows, the large congregations, the big Sunday School, the interesting things that are always happening, the remarkable work of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, the splendid reputation the parish has in the Diocese, the astonishing financial support the Parish gives to Missions every year, the splendid cooperation, the members give the Rector, the coming 25TH ANNIVERSARY, the ANNUAL BAZAAR, the system of BLOCK COLLECTIONS the Rector has started, the new CRADLE ROLL, how some of the women have started already to make things for the Bazaar. TWO WOMEN HAVE JUST FINISHED 27 APRONS, how the Rector wants every man and boy as well as woman and girl to raise no less than a DOLLAR for the CHRISTMAS OFFERING so that the sum will be $1,000.00; how the Rector is talking of paying off the remainder of the mortgage of the Parish House this year and how everybody is being asked to put a cent a day in the 85 Club pocket of the Church Envelope each week, which if done, will bring in a revenue of $3,650.00 or three times the sum needed to clear the mortgage; how the Sunday School is growing and what the boys and girls are learning while other boys and girls are running the streets and getting into all sorts of mischief; how they are working to make St. John's Church the biggest, brightest and strongest church in South Philadelphia; how you cannot go anywhere in the parish without stumbling over a group of St. Johnites—they seem to be everywhere. Such a WHISPERING CAMPAIGN will bring the curious in droves to the old church to see and to marvel. Yes, all these things our 298 WOMEN can do for old St. John's Parish and for God. It is your glorious opportunity OH YE 298. If you seize it you will become immortal.

MISTAKEN KINDNESS

What Foolish Things We Do Through Ignorance

Some years ago there lived a woman in our parish who was very popular and held the love and respect of all of us. She was taken seriously ill of a disease which attacked and weakened the walls of the stomach. Though her condition was serious it was not unusual, and with proper care, she had every reason to believe that in time she would be restored to health. The doctor prescribed a careful diet for her and warned against any change without first being advised. She had a visitor, who was a near relative. This visitor learned of the doctor's prescribed diet and thought it was a shame to starve the patient in such a way -particularly now that she was so far on the road back to recovery. She decided to take matters in her own hands and teach that doctor his trade. She sallied forth, bought some pastry, returned and fed it to the patient.

Three days after the event we buried the patient.

The tragic result was due, not to hate or with a desire to harm, but to mistaken kindness. We suppose that the woman will mourn her foolish trespass upon the doctor's explicit orders until the day of her death. But sorrow now is of no avail. The victim of ignorance cannot be restored to her family or friends.

We tell you this story hoping you will get the moral of it.

Especially do we hope you will apply it to your son, your daughter, who are growing from childhood to maturity. There are certain rules laid down for the moral and spiritual development of our children which are based on a knowledge of child psychology and are deductions arrived at through that science. Unfortunately, many parents are impatient of abstract rules for governing juvenile wishes and feel quite sure they who are in close, daily contact with their offspring, are by far the best prepared to provide them with a happy childhood.

The parental conception of "happy childhood" however, is nothing more nor less than an haphazard career of self-indulgence unrestrained by any rules of moral or spiritual restraint.

Such things, for instance, as teaching the child to pray or to read the fascinating child stories of the heroes of the Bible; or going to Church School on Sundays to learn lessons of personal restraint and one's duty to the other fellow or to go to church and absorb the atmosphere of worship amid the prayers and praise of the congregation; are, in the minds of the indulgent parent, too rigid a discipline and too devoid of appeal to child desires and inclinations for them to enforce. A child has only one childhood; why spoil it for him? Turn him loose and let him sow his wild oats; he will settle down soon enough and will be a better man for his fling.

Well, we do not suppose it is much use to reason with such parents. All we can say is—YOURS IS A MISTAKEN KINDNESS, and we fear you are in for a rude awakening. There is not much use in pointing out that our prisons and penitentiaries are overcrowded with the youth of the nation.

There is not much use to say anything about the jammed and packed night clubs and the looseness of their habitués.

There is not much use to warn the parents against the social clubs for young boys and girls which open on the hour Sunday School opens, and who are initiating their sons and daughters into vices and immoralities that damn the soul.

Is it nonsense? Well, there's one sure way to prove it. Go get an officer, raid one of these so-called social clubs and see for yourself what your boy or girl is doing.

And then pray that it is not too late to save the soul of your child.

SUNDAY SCHOOL is really a pleasant place of moral and spiritual discipline for your child.

Why not be wise and far-seeing and bring him until he forms the habit and likes to come?

If you do you will not only help him to grow up to honorable, self-respecting and law-abiding manhood; but you will escape the pains of a broken heart and the regrets of mistaken kindness.

And better still, the day will come when your cup of joy will overflow. That will be the day your child will bless you for disciplining his youth.

CERTIFICATES

Are They Important?

On certain important events in our lives the Church issues certain important certificates to us as vouchers or proofs of those events occurring.

When you are BAPTIZED you are given a BAPTISMAL CERTIFICATE, certifying that on a certain Sunday, of certain date, in a certain year, you were baptized in a certain church; that you were born on such a date; that your parents' names are whatever they may be and the names of your sponsors, who are also the witnesses of the event.

When we are CONFIRMED we are given a CONFIRMATION CERTIFICATE setting forth that fact as taking place at such a place on such a date and witnessed by the hand of the Bishop of the Diocese and the Rector of the Parish.

When we are MARRIED we are given a WEDDING CERTIFICATE in which is written our name, the name of the person we marry, the date and place of the wedding and the names of the witnesses present at the ceremony.

When we die there is no certificate issued by the Church but A CAREFUL RECORD of our decease is entered upon the Parish register giving our name, date of death, cause of death, place of burial, name of undertaker and the name of the clergyman officiating.

Thus the Church makes notes of these four big events of our lives.

Yet, for some curious reason, we find that a very low percentage of our members seem to realize the big importance of these various certificates; that they are very much more than a gesture of courtesy and that they possess real value of a legal nature.

For instance, if your son or daughter is in need of a job according to law they must be certified to have reached the legal work age. Hence the importance of the BAPTISMAL CERTIFICATE. Again, in case of proving one's identity the courts are sure to require the certificate of Baptism as proof. In a score of other ways one finds the need of showing one's BAPTISMAL CERTIFICATE.

So is it with the CONFIRMATION CERTIFICATE. Whether you are a Roman Catholic, a Protestant or a Jew, there will probably arise such occasions more frequently than the average layman imagines. Our Confirmation assumes a legal importance that cannot be set aside. It shows also that we are the N or M who lived at such a locality and attended such a church in that locality during a certain specific period of our lives.

Our WEDDING CERTIFICATE is of equal importance as a legal document. If any question should arise as to whether we are legally married, that certificate, properly executed, is sufficient proof. If the maiden name of the woman needs proving in such matters as inheritance of property or for any other purpose of identification, the WEDDING CERTIFICATE becomes vitally important.

In the case of tracing one's ancestry all three certificates play an important part in getting the record straight. Even the parish record of the date, cause, circumstances of death and place of burial, is at times a matter of real importance to living or surviving persons because such data concerning us is the only proof, frequently, of our identity and our probable relations to claimants of property or estate of any kind.

Therefore, your Baptismal, Confirmation, Wedding Certificates and record of your decease are of primary importance and should be preserved most carefully.

But contrary to that, most of us are almost criminally neglectful in such matters and do not know whether or not these papers any longer exist.

It has become the fashion of late, not to bother about locating them, if needed. Just tell the Rector that such and such certificate is needed and ask him to give a duplicate.

That is all very well and seems to be quite a simple matter and to be asking only a small favor of the Rector. But only too often the Rector finds the applicant is all mixed up in his dates or is wrong as to the place of the event, or is not sure of the name under which they were christened, confirmed or married. Scores of times a person is christened as Catherine and then deliberately and illegally change it years after to Cath*a*rine or *K*atherine or *K*ath*a*rine; or perhaps the surname is too Irish for our aristocratic notions and we want a little dash of Scotch; consequently, we change a Mc for a Mac, and find, much to our alarm and astonishment that the name on our baptismal and other certificates do not agree with the alias we have assumed.

Sometimes the whole subject of identification becomes a mess and the original certificates are lost to prove our claims. The rector or his secretary are driven frantic in an effort to locate these records. We have spent days searching the Parish Register for information concerning such data. Probably we find it, probably we do not. At all events the applicant seldom considers the matter of COMPENSATION for the time and trouble caused by the request and generally considers a perfunctory "Thank you for your trouble," a sufficient compensation.

Well, we the victim of such careless neglect to protect valuable papers do not so consider the matter.

There are those, too, who are afflicted with that peculiar mental weakness known as pride of ancestry who, although not remotely connected to the parish—perhaps are not even professing Christians—come to us with the request that we "do them the favor" to search the records back into the dim past to see if we can trace for them the name of a male or female person from whom they are sure they are descended. Never do we remember any of these ancestor hunters making an offer to compensate us for delving into the dusty tomes of our dead and gone predecessors in our effort to aid them in satisfying their peculiar insanity.

If the applicant is an orthodox why does he not satisfy himself that his ancestor was Adam, If he is an evolutionist why is he not satisfied that he is the descendant from an Ape and let the matter rest there?

In the future, therefore, we agree to search the parish records and issue duplicate certificates if and when a sum of not less than one dollar is deposited in the CHILDREN'S FUND OF THE PARISH for the relief and care of sick and poor babies on our CRADLE ROLL.

Therefore, now and forever in the future, every application for certificates of any kind must be accompanied with a FEE TO THAT FUND. And we DO NOT guarantee satisfaction.

YOUR SUBSCRIPTION TO THE BROADCASTER IS DUE. PAY YOUR DISTRICT SUPERNTENDENT OR MAIL ONE DOLLAR.

BE SURE YOU READ THIS

It is Important as Well as Interesting

Your rector has come to the decision that he has been "pampering" his flock too much. His sheep and his lambs have become fat and lazy. He is sorry he petted you so much because he thinks you are getting so used to it that you are fast losing your sense of responsibility and are getting to feel the church is so anxious to have your name on its register that, that is all that matters.

Now, of course, we are glad to number you among our flock, but we do not want you to feel that you are only a name on our books. You, as a confirmed member of the church, have certain very specific responsibilities which must be faced.

Your Interest

First, you must consider your interest in your parish. You are responsible more or less for the growth and power of the Kingdom of God in Southwark. You are supposed to reflect credit upon the church by your moral and spiritual weekday life among your neighbors. You are expected to believe so much in the need of St. John's Church to the community that you press its recognition upon all your neighbors. You must show your interest in it by attending every means of Grace offered on Sundays and Holy Days and you should be so interested in the church that you assume everybody else is, and naturally, you invite your friends and neighbors to go to church with you.

Your Support

Second, you must always back your interest with your support. The parish needs financial and moral support as does the family or your business. It DESERVES much more than either of these, because it gives more to you, to your family, to your neighbors, to the locality in which you live.

You Never Thought of That, Did You?

Which would you rather live near, a noisy taproom or a vigorous church? Would you rather listen to cursing and swearing and obscene talk which emanates from such places of revelry or would you rather live beside a good, strong church full of singing and praying Christians? Well, which is receiving your greatest support? The taproom or the Church, and why?

The Rector's Decision

Your Rector has decided that every confirmed man, woman, boy and girl of St. John's Parish has a solemn duty to perform; and that is, to support the church work of the parish to their utmost. For years he has been lenient and has not pressed your responsibility of supporting the church. Now he is "coming at you" with the proposition that he is not going to favor you any longer while he works like nobody's business to make ends meet. It is YOUR church as well as HIS, and you have no business to loll around doing nothing about it. He is sending out your District Superintendents, he is writing special messages to the sheep grazing beyond the parish boundaries, to carry the message that he has contracted to have printed

450 Packages of Church Envelopes which he expects the parishioners to subscribe for without delay, pledging a weekly offering in proportion to the individual income. You are expected to place well at the top of your budget your weekly offering to God and that offering is to be large enough to show you know and appreciate what great things God has done for you, your friends and your family. The District Superintendents are instructed to give all parishioners who have no church envelopes a pledge card to sign stating they will present their offerings to the church as the material expression of their devotion every Sunday or else hold it for the

Block Collections

which the District Superintendents are instructed to make once a month.

The Parish Support is a Disgrace to you, to me, to the community in general. When a person or a number of people refuse to support themselves when they are fully able to do so, they commit an act against the community that is indefensible. That's what we are doing against our Church and the people whom we employ BUT DO NOT PAY. Neither you nor I have any decent excuse to offer for our brutal selfishness. Even the "widow" has her "mite" she can afford to devote to the support of God's Church.

Let's Be Ashamed of Ourselves and determine now that we will no longer be fat and lazy sheep and lambs in the fold of God but that we will at least give some of our "wool" in return for our "keep." And let's snatch our pen or pencil and sign our pledge card on the dotted line—

Now

Sunday, October 4 - Harvest Home

STATION S. T. J. C.

Definition of modern speed—One foot in the grave, the other on the accelerator.

Now is the time to pay up all your vacation church envelopes.

An evader of the law is a worse criminal than a breaker of the law.

Women, Take Notice!

On Tuesday, October 27th, the women and girls of the Parish will give a big Hallowe'en party.

Remember the Harvest Home, Sunday, October 4th. Be sure to bring something for the poor. If it's only a bag of salt or a bar of soap.

Sunday Evening Service at 8 o'clock every Sunday in the church year. Come in and join the Junior Choir in singing hymns our mothers used to sing.

What's the sense of dreaming dreams if you do not exert the will to realize them?

If the officers and teachers of the Sunday School are prompt as well as regular, the scholars are sure to follow their example.

The Radio Party of the Summer Vacation School was an extraordinary success. Both the kids and Margaret Nelson deserve a great deal of credit.

Incidentally the boys and girls of old St. John's are becoming a real force and influence in the affairs of the church. Such activity augurs a successful future for the Parish.

Incidentally again, we understand the boys of the Junior Choir are practicing for a minstrel show in November. Watch for it.

We have 450 packages of Church Envelopes to distribute among St. Johnites. Be sure you get yours.

COAL SUNDAY for non-members of the Fireside Club is SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 1st. (All Saints day.) Be sure you celebrate the day fittingly.

Obedience is not the mark of a slave—it is an important quality in leadership. The great leaders of this world have not been their own masters; they arose and followed someone higher up, and thereby became the greater. Obedience is a gateway to power. Our physical health depends upon obeying the laws of our physical nature. Strength of character issues from obedience to the decree of conscience. If we are to have a commanding hold on life, we must be subject to a will higher than our own.—Today.

Now is the time to begin to think of our 25TH ANNIVERSARY.

Mark Twain said that when he was a boy of fourteen his father was so ignorant he could hardly stand it to have the Old Man around, but when he got to be twenty-one, it simply astonished him how much the Old Man had learned in seven years.—Lookout.

OUR WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

Tuesday evening, September fifteenth, we held the first meeting of the season of our Woman's Auxiliary. The attendance was gratifying. We were glad to see so many of the young women present.

After our usual opening the Rector spoke of some lines of work he hoped the women of the Parish would share with him this coming season. Among them were preparations for celebrating the 25th Anniversary of the Parish under the rectorship of the present incumbent; preparing for the Harvest Home festival to be celebrated Sunday, October 4th; devising ways and means for increasing the weekly offerings of our nearly 1000 parishioners to meet our current expenses and pay our missionary obligations; soliciting donations of every sort for our Annual Bazaar in December and planning a strong woman's organization to carry on the development of our Church among the people who live in the parish. The hope was expressed that the Auxiliary would make every effort to "get out" the largest Confirmation Class ever presented for the 25th Anniversary.

Important Invitation to Every Woman and Girl

Every "female of the species" living in or out of the bounds of the parish, is invited to our big Hallowe'en Party on Tuesday, October 27th. Collectors are coming around to get ten cents from you to pay for refreshments, prizes, etc. We want you to come. Come in masquerade if you wish and come expecting to have a good time playing games, singing and doing all sorts of things appropriate to such a time of foolery and nonsense.

By the way, the monthly gatherings of the women and girls are not so tiresome. After business we turn our minds to pleasure. At our last meeting, after a lot of business talk, we played Radio and ate ice cream and pretzels.

Criticism is stimulating when it is made with a sincere desire to help. A woman of the parish told us that she could not get interested in the W. A. because it did little for the missions of the church. Other chapters had radio parties and other means of raising funds for this purpose while we do not. There is a grain of truth in that criticism but the criticism is not really fair, for the reason that St. John's Church has been forced to struggle desperately to meet its current expenses and every cent had to be hypothecated for that one purpose. Even then we failed to make the grade and in order not to run into debt we were forced to give our Parish Visitor notice that for a season we must stop paying her salary. Of course, we had no right to expect that she would continue her services free of charge, but that is exactly what she is doing. We would ask the question, therefore, what is our duty in the matter,—to raise funds to pay the salary of this self-sacrificing woman or raise funds and give it to missions of the church when we are already giving from $1,000.00 to $1,200.00 a year to missions.

Personally, the Rector is voting early and often for raising money to restore Miss Nuttall's salary.

All in favor please say "Me too."

Sunday, November 1 - All Saints Day Coal Sunday

THE BOYS WILL GIVE A MINSTREL SHOW

Sometime in November the BOYS OF THE JUNIOR CHOIR are going to put on a show to raise funds for current expenses of the Parish. They will soon be in training, so you know what you may expect.

This is the first time boys of this age have taken such an active part in parochial affairs. However, when we look over that bunch we are not surprised. Taking them all in all they are about the finest and cleanest bunch of kids you will find on the Western hemisphere. They are full of pep and do everything asked of them with a grin. There is not one spoiled egg in the whole dozen. We know they are going to put on a good show and you will do yourself a big favor by buying admission tickets and witnessing the performance of St. John's finest.

Come out and show the boys you are one hundred per cent for them in their work for the church.

WHAT YOU CAN DO FOR THE BAZAAR

Mrs. Gresh and Mrs. Patterson said to the Rector, "You get the materials and we'll make aprons for the Bazaar." The Rector did it. In less time than it takes to tell they had made the aprons, sold 'em, turned in the proceeds and said, "Give us some more." We did and they're at it again.

If every woman, man, girl and boy of the Parish would get such a start in preparing for the Bazaar we would have the best ever when the time arrived. All women and most girls, the smart ones at least, can make aprons, pot holders, wash cloths, towels, dusters and a score of other household necessities.

Then the Rector told how he kept his eye open to all sorts of bargain sales and had made some wonderful buys for the Bazaar, in many instances paying as low as one third the original cost. If YOU watch the bargain sales YOU can often pick up something for 10 cents or a quarter, which will sell for three times that price.

Women can can fruit and make jelly to donate to the Bazaar. And who would not prefer home cooked goodies to the usual commercial stuff? We ought to have a BAKERY SHOPPE in our Bazaar.

Also we are sure that when you lay in your big grocery order on Saturday your grocer or butcher or baker will be glad to put a gift in your basket for the Bazaar if you remind him.

You can get punch cards NOW to chance off some very lovely pieces of embroidery or useful table linen by just asking Mrs. Matthews who has them (the cards) in her possession.

Then, too, you can think up lots of other ways to supply the Bazaar with material to sell. So put on your thinking caps and

Cogitate

THANKS!

Our Radio was a huge success. Everyone that read the BROADCASTER must have heard our plea. I never remember seeing so many delicious homemade cakes. Almost every child or adult that attended brought us something. I wish to thank the gentlemen who called the numbers for us, the ladies in the kitchen, the children and their parents, the prize and cake givers and all those who attended and made the "KID'S RADIO" such a success. I am deeply grateful.

The receipts were over $60.00 all of which goes towards the current expenses of the church.

THE SILENT HOUR

As I come in Faith to the Silence Hour,
To renew my trust, and feel His power,
Seeking to know, and to do His Will,
I hear His voice saying, "Peace, Be Still."

I commune with my Lord, in sweet accord,
As I place my life in His Hands.
I feel so sure, and so secure
Since I know He understands.

He, too, lived on earth long years ago,
He knows just what we can bear,
That is why we come, and find all we seek,
In the Hour of Silence and Prayer.

S. E. Nelson

OUR HARVEST HOME

It Was An Occasion That Will Long Be Remembered

Our annual HARVEST HOME FESTIVAL came off as per schedule Sunday, October 4th. The day was one of those gorgeous, golden autumnal days with a tang in the air that is as stimulating as wine.

Being the first Sunday in the month nearly the whole parish turned out for the Holy Communion and almost everybody brought a donation of food for the poor. The lower hall of the church looked like a busy market house. There were bags of potatoes, bags of onions, bags of cabbage, baskets of apples, baskets of turnips, cans of vegetables, cans of fruit, packages of cereals, boxes of salt, pounds of sugar, packages of coffee, tea, salt, flour and an enormous variety of other things too numerous to list.

Also we received cash donations from a few of the communicants. After consultation with some of the givers we concluded to turn over the money to our parish visitor in lieu of the salary we ought to be paying her but have not been able to do so for a few months. Somehow the whole service seemed to be brighter than usual. It must have been due to our doing something for somebody else who needed our help.

In the afternoon the number of gifts were greatly increased by the Sunday School children. Even in the evening donations continued to come in.

How much this food is needed is known only to the Rector and his co-workers. Though living conditions are very much better now than two or three years ago, we still have the unemployable, the crippled, the sick, the blind, the aged, the widow, with us whom we must help. Our Lord truly said, "The poor ye have with you always."

In a way we are rather glad it is so. Of course, we do not rejoice over the sufferings of the unfortunates. We do not mean that. But it is an undeniable fact that the misfortune of others is our opportunity to exercise our Christian gifts of neighborly love and service. We need that sort of spiritual exercise daily to keep us spiritually fit.

Never neglect the opportunities nor ignore them; they are of the utmost importance as an aid to your proper mental and spiritual health.

If any of you neglected the opportunity to do good to your neighbor on HARVEST HOME SUNDAY, make amends immediately by sending a gift of a dollar for rent, fuel, or medicine, or towards the expenses of your Parish Visitor.

HOW TO GIVE THANKS

Thursday, November 26th, will be the day appointed

December 3 - 4 - 5 -- Parish Bazaar

by proclamation of our President as THANKSGIVING DAY, a day set aside by the nation to give thanks to Almighty God for the abundant material and spiritual blessings vouchsafed our people during the year of 1935-36.

How good and provident God has been is a matter of individual appreciation more than of national appreciation, because it is the individual who has prospered the most. Never in the history of our country have the unemployed, the unemployables, the aged, the widowed, the chronically ill, the orphaned, the blind, the crippled and all of God's unfortunate children have been so comprehensively cared for.

This BROADCASTER is sure to find its way into the homes of scores of such who have received this care.

Many of you were out of a job and are now working for the first time in many years.

Many of you have received old age pensions.

Many of you have enjoyed health as well as prosperity this year.

Many are receiving hospital and dispensary treatment.

Many are getting enought relief to pay your rent, buy clothing, food, fuel and every necessity of life.

Many of you who have never been out of work had your wages raised and are living as human beings have a right to live.

Also, though the nation has had its floods, tornadoes, sand storms and other misfortunes, due to natural causes, the law of compensation and the neighborly regard for our suffering fellow citizens has greatly relieved that suffering.

Taking all these good things into consideration don't you think that we have extra reason to be thankful to God this year?

Now the question arises, how can we show our feeling of gratitude?

Will attending service on Thanksgiving be an adequate gesture?

Will indulgence in football, going to the movies, giving dances, overindulgence in eating and drinking intoxicating liquors be the best way to rejoice over your good fortune.

Or would a gesture of good will and kind neighborliness for the unfortunates, who have little or nothing, be a better way for you to give thanks? That is, would it not be better to do unto others as Almightly God has done unto you?

Why Not A Thanksgiving Offering?

For instance, when you enter into the Temple of God Thanksgiving Day, why not bring an offering with you as your contribution to a fund to help the unfortunates of the Parish? There is our Parish Visitor, for instance, who has been an interested and sympathetic friend of our aged, sick and suffering these many years, and now she has fallen on times of insufficient support because the parish funds are exhausted and we cannot pay her salary. Yet, knowing this, she continues to serve us with cheer and good will. Have you not enough gratitude because of your own improved state to make a liberal offering towards her salary on THANKSGIVING DAY?

Would you, could you work for nothing?

WORTHY OF EMULATION

This Is The Sort of Offering Jesus Admires

A few weeks ago the Treasurer of the Parish handed an envelope to the Rector with the remark that it was addressed to him. When the Rector opened it he found enclosed One Dollar with the following note:

"Dear Rev. McHenry:

I just received a dollar raise in my pay. I am sending the first one to you. I know you can use it."

Sincerely,

A Member.

The signature of course is anonymous and shows the donor does not wish his or her name to be known. Because the giver does not want the "left hand to know what the ringht hand doeth."

The gift is significant of what could and ought to be done under similar circumstances. First, it shows a real sense of appreciation on the part of the person who has received the increase in pay; and, Second, it shows the proper way to express that appreciation in making the FIRST DOLLAR increase an offering unto the Lord. That is the spirit which inspired the children of God in ages past.

Why not follow this example of making a THANKSGIVING OFFERING to God for your improved state of work and finance. Several unemployed men and women of the Parish—folk who have been out of work and on relief for many years have jobs now and are receiving wages for their labor. It must mean much to them to be independent again. And it seems to your Rector that all such ought to make a THANK OFFERING in proportion to the wages they are earning to go towards the relief and support of our large army of unemployables, men and women who, owing to circumstances and physical condition, could not work even if they were offered jobs: such, for instance, as the crippled, blind, aged, chronically sick or otherwise physically or mentally unfit.

How true are the words of Jesus Christ, "The poor

December 3 - 4 - 5 -- Parish Bazaar

are with us always" even when times are good, work is plentiful, wages are fair and living expenses are within reach of most of us. Yes, even then there remains that class of industrially unfit who must be helped to obtain food, money for rent, fuel, clothing, doctors' bills, prescriptions, sick diet and nursing.

You, who have passed through the fire of poverty, must know the mental suffering of God's poor. Why not follow the lead of "A Member" and make a generous Thanksgiving Offering this Thanksgiving Day for the poor of the Parish.

I am sending one Thanksgiving envelope to every family with the request that each family take up a collection among its members to be deposited on the Alms Basin THANKSGIVING DAY or handed to the District Superintendent or mailed to the Rector.

Who knows but that God may bless the offerings and increase your prosperity?

DON'T SAY IT TOO LOUD WITH FLOWERS

"Let Your Moderation Be Known Unto All Men" Phil. 4:5

A short time ago we were asked to officiate at a funeral in the parish. The service was in the home of the deceased. When we entered the funeral house we were overpowered by one of a most amazing floral displays. The very walls of the room were festooned thick with sprays of flowers. Baskets of expensive blooms and tall set pieces worth from Ten to Twenty-five Dollars each were scattered all about the place. The family had hired an extra big open Packard car to transport them from the house to the cemetery. The cost of the car was about ten dollars. There were so many pieces that the car could not hold them and several big pieces were crammed into the funeral car with the casket.

When we reached the cemetery both the chauffeur of our car and we watched while the flowers were being carried to the open grave, and we began to estimate the possible outlay of dollars and cents represented by the display. We were astonished to find that the minimum cost must have been well over $500.00.

After the comittal service we lingered behind the family to see what was done with that heap of blooms. After the family was well away from the grave the cemetery laborers gathered up armfuls of the flowers, threw them aside, picked up their spades and filled the grave.

We learned eventually that all those beautiful expensive pieces were thrown on the cemetery dump the next morning.

Over $500.00 Thrown On The Dump!

And just think what that $500.00 could have done for the living. It could have paid 25 month's rent at $20.00 per month. It could have supported a family all winter with coal, light and food. It could have clothed a large family for two years. It could have paid for a $5.00 memorial bouquet of flowers to be placed on the Altar of the Church every anniversary of the deceased for one hundred years. There are scores of really important things that could have done with such a big sum.

But, you object, the flowers were not bought by the family only. Lots of them were sent by clubs, societies, friends, acquaintances and employers. All of which is very true. But why should that affect the situation?

We attended another funeral later in the month at which it was clearly demonstrated that there was no need of such extravagant waste in expressing one's sentiments for the deceased and his family. When the man died a certain organization, of which the widow was a member, met and after passing a resolution of sympathy, voted a certain amount of money to be drawn from its treasury and sent to the bereaved family in lieu of flowers. The neighbors of this same family collected a sum of money among themselves, bought a modest spray of flowers for the funeral and gave the remainder of the money to the widow and her children to spend as they needed.

It seems to us that the common sense displayed by the friends of this widow is worthy of emulation. What we mean to say is—instead of throwing $5, $10 or $25 on the cemetery dump why not encourage relatives, friends, societies and business organizations to send the bereaved expressions of sympathy with a check enclosed representing the amount of money they would ordinarily spend on flowers to be thrown on the cemetery dump?

There was another funeral of a man who died in a wretched hovel in the extreme southern section of the city. A small insurance had been carried on his life. The widow of the deceased used $100.00 of that insurance to buy flowers for the funeral which were thrown on the cemetery dump the next day. On the same day she came to the City Mission and applied for charity. She needed food and money to pay the rent of her miserable bungalow.

How About The Florist?

Now we do not advocate putting the florist out of business, nor charge that he is an expensive luxury. We have a personal regard for him and rate him as one of the most important and useful men of the community. As a matter of fact our friends will certify that we are constantly patronizing our florist. Every Sunday we have him supply our altar. On special occasions we buy lavishly of him and, after the occasion, we distribute the flowers while they are still fresh among the nearby hospitals. When any of our church members are seriously ill we order flowers sent to their bedside. We encourage the placing of memorial bouquets on our Altar. On every Anniversary in the Parish we have flowers distributed among the sick, aged and shut-ins of our parish.

In short our personal bill for flowers is well over $100 per year. But we do not send them to dead people but to the living and those who get joy out of their fragrance and beauty.

Yes, we love flowers even though we have hay fever and cannot always enjoy them. But we think we should use a lot more sentiment and much less sentimentalism in the way we use them. Above all things, let us get out of the habit of throwing so much money on the cemetery dump and give more money to the widow and orphans. Don't say it too loud with flowers. Quiet practical sympathy is the best.

SAMUEL SNELL, SR.

A True Friend To The Poor of The Parish

We are proud to take this opportunity to thank our friend, SAMUEL SNELL, SR., for his many generous acts of kindness to the Church of St. John the Evangelist, especially for his last splendid gesture to relieve the poor of the Parish by his remarkable and liberal donation of vegetables and fruits to our HARVEST HOME FESTIVAL.

Dozens of poor families, representing scores of persons, among them many widows and babies, will have reason to rejoice when they receive their share of his generosity. We attach a list of his donations herewith because we want the whole parish to join us in thanking him for this practical way of helping our poor.

This is by no means the first time Mr. Snell has done such a big thing for us. Every year, when we have our HARVEST HOME FESTIVAL he gives just as liberally. He has done so for many years.

Not only does he give food for the poor, but every Easter, Christmas, Coal Sunday and special anniversaries, SAMUEL SNELL has always contributed his share of DOLLARS to the parish. Every BAZAAR he not only gives a big donation to the Grocery Booth but he and his dear wife and sons and their families patronize the BAZAAR and spend freely. There are other members of St. John's Parish who could emulate this splendid spirit of practical christianity if they would. And, if they did, St. John's Parish would be the greatest influence for christian social service in South Philadelphia.

The reason we write these words of appreciation now is because we want SAMUEL SNELL and the world to know, while he is still alive and with us that we think of him as a BROTHER TO HIS NEIGHBOR.

GOD ALWAYS REMEMBERS THOSE WHO SHOW PITY TO HIS POOR.

Mr. Snell's donation to the Harvest Home Festival consisted of three big bags of potatoes, three big bags of onions, two bushel baskets of apples, four baskets of turnips and three big bags of cabbages.

THANK YOU MR. SNELL!

JUST AN EXPRESSION OF APPRECIATION

We want to express our appreciation to Mrs. Mary Murphy, Mrs. Mary Beck and Mrs. Elizabeth Mason for volunteering to give our Parish House a thorough housecleaning. They certainly did a splendid job of it.

This is an instance as to how the members of the Parish can serve the church. These ladies saved the church several dollars in volunteering their services. And a dollar saved is as good as a dollar donated.

More and more the men and women of the parish are rendering personal service which is a sure indication of their love for and interest in the dear, old church.

There are silent depths in the great ocean which the storms that lash the surface into fury never reach. . . . People who have learned to control themselves, who do not live on the surface of their being, but who reach down into the depths, into the stillness where the voice of God is heard, where they absorb the great principles of life, are not affected by the thousand and one storms and tempests — domestic, financial, social, political — making for suffering and marring lives. In the depths they find the stabilizing power which carries them poised and serene, even through the huricane of difficulties.

—Marden.

THE BLANKET CLUB

St. John's women are starting a Blanket Club.

You join and pay 25 cents a week.

Every week there is a drawing.

The lucky person gets a blanket or something.

Then he or she drops out and gives the others a chance.

At the end of the drawing period everybody gets a blanket or its equivalent.

What they get has a retail value of the money they have put in. HENCE IT IS NOT A GAMBLE BUT A SURE THING.

The attraction lies in the possibility of winning a blanket or its equivalent early in the drawing.

Winter is coming on and a blanket is a mighty warm friend on a winter night.

Better get one and crawl under.

WANTED: Several persons to be collectors for the Club.

Ask anybody when is the next club meeting.

In support of our contention that the various certificates issued by the church are important and valuable to the person entitled to them we print the folowing letter recentiy received:

Burlington, Vt.

"Dear Sir:

In the fall of 1919-or 1920 the Rev. H. Cresson McHenry baptized William, Murray and Beaven Mills at Moylan-Rose Valley. For passport purposes it is necessary for us to produce some evidence such as birth certificate, baptismal certificate establishing their earlier residence here.

Would you be good enough to look through your records and advise me if you have a record of the baptism of these boys and if so would you send me a duplicate certificate or a letter indicating that the baptism was made.

I would appreciate very much your cooperation.

Sincerely yours,
W. H. A. Mills,
Executive Secretary,
Burlington Chamber of Commerce

You will observe that the christening of these persons occurred 17 years ago. Time enough to forget all about the incident, which we did. The request seems like a simple matter, but it took some time to locate the record. The service may have been performed by the clergyman as rector of St. John's Parish or official of the City Mission, or as the guest priest of the parish in which the act was performed, all of which meant that three different registers had to be searched—that of St. John's Parish, of the City Mission and the Parish Church. The search is not complete at this writing because the christening is all but forgotten. This search is costing time and money, not to the applicant but to us. This could have been avoided had the original certificates been preserved.

Every applicant for old age pension living in parochial limits have been found to get their baptismal certificates from the church. Every boy and girl looking for a job had to present their baptismal certificate.

We hope what we have said in these articles will have the effect of making our parishioners more careful in preserving these important documents.

In the meantime the careless ones must make a donation of not less than ONE DOLLAR TO THE PARISH CRADLE ROLL if they want search of the church register made for certificates. The donation must be sent with the request and we will NOT agree to furnish the data. If we have it, then it will be given; if we do not have it then you must pay for the time and trouble it took to make the search.

TWO MORE THANKSGIVERS

"THANKSGIVERS" are folk who sing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow" and then make a substantial offering to the Lord for His watchful providence over them.

A month ago we told you about an anonymous person placing an envelope upon the Alms Basin addressed to the Rector. When he opened it a dollar bill dropped out with a note which told him that the sender had just got a job and sent the first dollar of their wages to the church as a thank offering to God for answering their prayer. No name was signed to the note.

Saturday, October 24th, the Rector was asked to give the Sacraments to a dear lady of the parish who had been confined to her bed since last May. After she and her daughter-in-law, with whom she lived, had received, she told her daughter-in-law to get her bag out of the bureau. She took out of it a dollar and handed it to your Rector with the remark, My son gave me this note for my birthday last week. I want to give it to the church as my thank offering for my improvement in health. I am still pretty sick but I'm improving."

The daughter-in-law said, "I too am going to give a Thank Offering to the church. My husband has just got a steady job and I want to give this dollar."

Two THANKSGIVERS in one house! What a glorious record.

Now why not start a THANKSGIVERS CLUB in the parish, and everybody who gets a steady job or recovers from sickness or receives any other major blessings from God give an offering to the Church as their expression of appreciation for blessings received.

SNOW WHITE

"Whiter than snow!
The very thought
That we can be made so clean!
That all the sins
Of our mis-spent life,
With all its ills and ugly strife,
Made white—What can it mean?

"Whiter than snow!
How can it be!
Such a silent, noiseless fall,
Can cover the rubbish of days gone by,
Piled up in corners, deep and high,
Will the pure flakes cover them all?

Like the silent fall of the Feathery flakes,
God's spirit enters the heart
And soon makes
The foulness there—Snow White,
Yes—all can read in the Holy Word,
This truth from the lips of Our dear Lord—
"Where I am—There is light."

So—fill your heart
With His Presence of light,
And keep Him there by day and by night,
No snow can be whiter, no life more fair,
What evil can enter?
The Lord is there.

OUR ANNUAL BAZAAR

Our Annual Bazaar serves a two-fold purpose. First it is our principal source of income, outside our Duplicate Envelope System, for current expenses of the church. And second, it is the one big social affair of the Parish that brings together the members of Old St. John's from far and near. This year we have made particular effort to make it one of real profit to our patrons. We have made big purchases of goods which are of A1 quality and of the latest styles and colors. This is specially so of our scarfs, half hose, neckties and women's stockings. We are so proud of our stock that we will give a set of anything free if it can be proved it is a "second" instead of a "first" in quality. As for the prices, we will let you judge for yourself whether the department stores can either compete with or undersell us on the same class of goods.

Before you do your Christmas shopping why not come in and look us over?

Examine the beautiful gifts and fancy pieces on our novelty table.

Look over the many necessities on our Household goods table.

Admire the scarfs, neckties, handkerchiefs and men's socks on the Men's Table.

Sample the home-made pies, big wholesome suppers, ice cream, etc., in our Kitchen.

Spend time off in the Radio Room.

Go fishing with the kids down at the pond of real water.

Lay in your groceries and provisions from our Grocery table.

Buy uour candy, cakes, soft drinks, and toilet accessories at the Girl Scout Table.

Take a chance on getting a doll for the little lady of the house at our Doll Booth.

And always remember, your admission is 10 cents or three for 25 cents and on each ticket there is a coupon which has a sales value of ten cents. In other words, if you buy three tickets for 25 cents you get 3 coupons worth 30 cents in purchase value at any Bazaar table. Of course the coupons are not exchangeable for cash. They must be used as coupons only in making purchases.

Also

We Have Ice Cream and Pies for Sale.

Every Night

Thursday night the Junior Choir will be the guests of the Rector at an ice cream party.

Friday night, the Senior Choir will be his guests at a similar party.

Saturday night The Women's Auxiliary will be his guests at the final ice cream party.

The Christmas Story

AND it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Cæsar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed. (And this taxing was first made when Cyrenius was governor of Syria.) And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city. And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judæa, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem; (because he was of the house and lineage of David:) to be taxed with Mary his espoused wife, being great with child. And so it was, that, while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered. And she brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn. And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night. And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid. And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger. And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

YOU HAVE A DUTY TO PERFORM

We are sure you will agree with us that all of us have much for which to praise God this year. Never before has he shown such provident care of us. Some of us have permanent jobs now and are earning the first wages we have received for many a year. Just an hour ago we were riding downtown in a Second Street trolley on our way to give the Sacraments to a parishioner about to be taken to the hospital. At Pine Street one of our men got on the car and we began talking about how times have changed and how many unemployed were working now. He said, "And don't I know what it is to be out of work and on relief. But now, thank God, I've got a real job. I'm getting a pay envelope every week. My family is eating three meals a day; my wife and children are decently clothed. I'm paying my rent every month. I have coal in my cellar. I owe no man a cent. This time two years ago I had no job; my family were freezing and starving; my house agent was deviling me for the rent money I didn't have. I was driven crazy with worry and was ripe for anything crooked that would get me money. But, thank God, I held out and the turn came at last. Now every night I get down on my knees and praise God for his care of me and mine. I WOULD DO ANYTHING FOR HIM TO SHOW HOW I FEEL FOR ALL HE DID FOR ME."

Was it only talk he was giving me?

No indeed, he is proving by his deeds how deeply he appreciates God's blessings. He is always helping somebody get right. He gives his time and service to the church in helping all he can. He makes his offering every time he comes to church for worship. His offering is always a generous one and is put in his WEEKLY CHURCH ENVELOPE. He gives to the FIRESIDE CLUB. He is making a THANKSGIVING OFFERING this Thanksgiving Day for himself and all his family. He will be among the first to put in his CHRISTMAS ENVELOPE. He will be busy as a bee during the Bazaar and at Easter he will be at the church with his EASTER ENVELOPE. While between times he will be helping every poor unfortunate he meets up with to the best of his ability and resources.

That Man Is Performing His Duty Gloriously!

There are others in the parish like him. One of the others stopped us in the SUNDAY SCHOOL room not so long ago and said, "For over three years I was out of a job. I had no food, no clothing, no fuel, no money for rent and a sick wife. The Church stood by and helped me with "made" work and food. What a dog I would be if I were to forget such acts of mercy now that I have work! Not only I but my whole family will take PACKAGES OF WEEKLY CHURCH ENVELOPES this year and we mean to keep them paid up.

That Man's Sense of Obligation Is Clear

How we could multiply these experiences! But time and space is too short to admit of it. Here are two family men who are so grateful for God's mercy that they are anxiously seeking means to increase their offerings to God that He may understand the depth of their gratitude.

Did You Ever Look Back and See What You Have Come Up From?

That sentence is not at all grammatical and I did not intend it so to be. You might have missed the point had it been elegantly constructed.

What I mean is this. Have you always been as prosperous as you are now? Did you always have your good job? Did you always have your beautiful home? DID YOU EVER KNOW WHAT IT MEANS TO BE WORRIED AND WONDER WHERE THE NEXT MEAL WAS COMING FROM? Were you always as well fixed socially as you are today? And would you have the daring audacity to say now that YOU and not GOD made the change?

We are sure you would not. And we are just as sure that the reason so many of our parishioners are not performing their duty of making offerings in return for their blessings is because they have not yet thought through to the point where they understand and can say sincerely, "all things come of Thee O Lord and of Thine Own have we given Thee."

It Is Our Intention

this year to stimulate our parishioners to their sense of obligation to God. We are putting out 450 packages of WEEKLY CHURCH ENVELOPES in the Parish with the confident expectation that every week we mean to show God how grateful we are for our jobs, our homes, our families, our happiness and our health. That we shall not give reluctantly or meanly but that we will give royally as is befitting the sons and daughters of God who delight in honoring the King. Be sure you get YOUR package of Church Envelopes and give. If you are overlooked let us know. We will see you are supplied at once.

How much ought you to give every week?

Emulate the widow who gave HER NEEDED MITE and bought our Lord's everlasting commendation. IN OTHER WORDS GIVE ALL YOU CAN. Eventually God will give it back in overflowing measure.

December 3 - 4 - 5 -- Parish Bazaar

DO YOUR CHRISTMAS SHOPPING ECONOMICALLY

The big temptation this Christmas is to be so happy because times are so much better and money is so much more plentiful than for many years, we will be tempted to spend freely for gifts for our family and friends. But before we set out on our Christmas spending spree let's sit down and think economically. Now it is no special sign of affection to buy perfectly useless things at ridiculously high prices. A useful or even an ornamental present of sensible value means as much to those who love us as a valuable one which might embarrass them because they could not afford to send such a gift in return.

Then, too, a high priced gift is seldom practical. It costs so much that the person who gets it is afraid to use it and puts it away for only special occasions. Whereas, if a cheaper gift is received, one feels impelled to use it constantly because it reminds him of the giver.

And don't let's fall into the foolish mistake of buying our presents on installments! Just because times are good now, and just because you have a steady job don't get the idea in your head that you are justified in being prodigal. Your job may be safe enough and a raise may even be in sight, but remember other things can happen that might make a few extra dollars necessary. Sickness, accident, even death, might intervene, and you do not want to be tied up too tight with installment payments.

Anyhow Christmas is not the time for extravagance in any form. Of course one should give presents and have fun. It is the merry season. On this day God gave the world His most cherished Christmas present. So let's be happy; let's give happiness to others; let's give presents and gifts—but let us do it economically and sensibly.

THE ROLL CALL OF THE FAITHFUL

This has been a wonderful year for the faithful, especially in regard to the way they have responded to the fuel needs of the church. The FIRESIDE CLUB proved to be the best sort of means of raising the necessary funds to meet our coal bills. We want to thank all its loyal members and ask everybody to join this splendid club and JOIN NOW. Let's throw our old COAL SUNDAY way of raising funds in the old coal scuttle and burn it up forever.

PLEASE see your DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENT about getting a FIRESIDE CLUB due book NOW, so that we can start to raise our COAL FUND for next year. In the year 1935-36 we raised less than two hundred dollars on Coal Sunday and found ourselves with A COAL DEBT of $85.00 at the end of the season. This season thus far, by means of our FIRESIDE CLUB we have raised $318.60, which is within $81.00 of the sum we estimate as necessary to meet our season's coal bills. Never before have we come so near the required amount of $400.00. Emphatically the FIRESIDE CLUB has proven successful.

December 3 - 4 - 5 -- Parish Bazaar

DID YOU GET A PACKAGE

We have distributed 425 packages of weekly Church Envelopes through the parish. The first envelope of the new package is due on the first Sunday in Advent, Sunday, November 29th. This is about twice the number we have distributed heretofore. Times have so greatly improved, work is becoming increasingly plentiful and wages are so much higher that we feel sure the members of the parish will want a means of praising God because "He is good, for his mercy endureth forever." There is no more acceptable way to praise God than by means of offerings.

We heard a man say not so long ago, "The church is always asking for money. I'm tired of it!"

Aren't we fortunate that GOD never gets tired of giving? Why, we are so wretchedly poverty stricken that not one man, woman or child on earth has a cent of our own to give. Every stitch on our back belongs to God. Every mouthful of food we chew is from God's farms. Every piece of coal we burn comes from God's mines. Every dollar the richest of us owns is minted from God's gold and silver and copper. Every drop of water we drink is from God's wells. In short, everything we say we own we don't own but God does. He gives and He can take away. Therefore, whatever offering we make to God for His abundant provision for our needs we take from what is really his anyway.

This being so, then WHY should we NOT give to Him a part of what is his already if by so doing we can show Him we really do recognize our personal poverty and His wealth and generosity.

If You Didn't Get a Package, Get One

SICK NOTICES

We have just been through a distressing experience which we do not care to have repeated. Three or four weeks ago one of our girls told the Rector that a certain Mrs. S— was in the Pennsylvania Hospital and would like to be visited. The same morning after the girl had gone we mentioned to another that we were asked to visit Mrs. S. in the hospital. The party to whom we were talking said, "No, no, there is no such person at the hospital. It is a little girl who has been badly burnt."

That seemed very reasonable to us for we had no such name as Mrs. S. on our church register. We, therefore, went to the hospital and asked to see the child who was burnt. The hospital staff searched their records and said they had no such case there. On several other occasions we had been on wild goose chases of a like nature and frequently learned that the case was an outside clinic case, had received treatment and had gone home. We were a little perturbed but left the hospital and dropped the matter.

Weeks later we learned that the choir girl had reported an aunt of her's who actually was in the hospital and down with an attack of typhoid. While on the other hand a child had been badly burned and sent to another hospital miles away from the Pennsylvania Hospital. Before the real story reached us, however, the typhoid patient was convalescing and the little girl had died. Such a climax is most distressing to any clergyman. It is so easy to avert such misunderstandings. If you have sickness at home or if any member of your family is sent to the hospital you should send notice by mail direct to our office with full details as to the nature of the sickness and at what hospital the patient was sent.

Do not trust to word of mouth. And do not tell the Rector while he is shaking hands with members of the congregation on Sunday. Half the time he misunderstands you or gets the wrong address or name just because he is trying to listen to you and at the same time to listen to the person whom he is greeting.

Spend one cent and send a postal notifying him of ordinary sick cases.

Spend a nickel and make a telephone call in cases of emergency.

But DO NOT tell him by word of mouth.

OUR JUNIOR CHOIR MINSTREL

We simply must take time out to congratulate each boy and girl of our Junior Choir for the fine entertainment they staged in the Parish House, Thursday, November 12th. It was worth more than the price of admission and everybody in the big audience voted it was one of the best minstrel shows given in St. John's Parish Honse.

The chorus was tuneful and catchy throughout.

The solos were so good that each singer received an enchore.

The variety features and endmen repartee were good, clean fun of a rollicking nature. Some women in the audience almost had hysterics during the session, the kids were so funny.

Then a little dancing fairy appeared upon the stage. Her name is Betty Jane Slavey. She is only a teeny, weeny bit of humanity, but can she dance!

Special mention should be made of the trainer of the boys and girls, Mr. Harry Mitchell. He has the one essential faculty of holding the respect of young folk. They do what he wishes done in the day he desires it done. That was really the secret of the success of the Minstrel Show.

Also, we must mention the splendid organizing ability and publicity work of "Happy" Gilbert. He was an indefatigable worker for the success of the occasion. The stage decorations and general arrangements were under the supervision of the Brotherhood, that fine group of men who is doing so much for the parish.

December 3 - 4 - 5 -- Parish Bazaar

The Junior Choir are so pleased with their success that they are teasing everybody to let them repeat their performance. Perhaps we will later in the season. The proceeds of the show was turned over to the church for the current expenses of the parish.

Our young people are starting young to meet their obligations to their church. They are setting a brilliant example of service and offerings to their elders.

BROADCASTING FROM STATION S. T. J. C.

Sit down and think of the blessings you have received this year. And you will be thankful indeed.

What do you think of the way our Sunday School is growing?

Have you joined the Blanket Club?

Have you joined the Stocking Club?

What do you think of our Junior Choir?

Remember the Bazaar.

If you can buy better things cheaper at the Bazaar and thereby help the church financially, why buy poorer things dearer somewhere else and not benefit either the church or yourself?

Corporate Communion for men and boys Sunday, November 29th at 10 A. M.

Christmas Services—First Celebration 6:30 A. M. Second Celebration—10:45 A. M.

Sunday School Christmas Service—St. John the Evangelist day—December 27th, at 2:30 P. M.

Sunday School Christmas Festival—Holy Innocents Day, December 28th, at 7 P. M.

Be sure you get a package of Weekly Church Envelopes. Worship without offering is not acceptable to God. You owe it to your Christian self respect to offer Him something in return for all He gives.

Want to earn a limp leather back New Testament? Bring 4 new scholars to Sunday School and you will get it.

Want to get a good teacher's Reference Bible? Bring 10 new scholars or 5 candidates for confirmation and you will get that too.

WANTED: Girls of 14 years and over for membership in the new Junior Branch of the Daughters of the King. Helen Weir McHenry, leader.

Begin to save up for your Christmas Envelope. You ought to give a big fat fellow this year.

A certain priest, temporarily going informal minded, dropped his clerical garb and dressed himself in an ordinary suit of clothing. An acquaintance, evidently not very well up on ecclesiastical matters, met him on the street. While engaged in conversation with the priest he looked him over with a puzzled frown—sensing a difference in his appearance but unable to detect just what it was. At last his face cleared and he exclaimed: "Oh, I see what makes you look so different, you are not wearing your vestry today.

CHRISTMAS CAROL

As Joseph was a-waukin',
He heard an angel sing
"This night shall be the birthnight
Of Christ our heavenly King.

"His birth-bed shall be neither
In housen nor in hall,
Nor in the place of paradise,
But in the oxen's stall.

"He neither shall be rockèd
In silver nor in gold,
But in the wooden manger
That lieth in the mould.

"He neither shall be washen
With white wine nor with red,
But with the fair spring water
That on you shall be shed.

"He neither shall be clothèd
In purple nor in pall,
But in the fair, white linen
That usen babies all."

As Joseph was a-waukin',
Thus did the angel sing,
And Mary's son at midnight
Was born to be our King.

Then be you glad, good people,
At this time of the year;
And light you up your candles,
For His star it shineth clear.

OUR ANNUAL BAZAAR

Our Bazaar has come and gone. The first thing we wish to comment upon was the simple but effective decorations of the booths. The men and boys of the parish, under the direction of George Downes, did a fine job of it and succeeded in pleasing the whole parish. The predominate color was a canary yellow which blended well with the yellow and blue paint of the Sunday School room.

We have held bazaars for several years but for real enjoyment this year's was the premier of them all. What pleased us most was the favorable comments on the quality and price of what we offered for sale. We kept faith with the parish and did not place on sale anything that was second grade or cheap in quality.

The Men's Table is a good illustration of what we mean. The men's hosiery, handkerchiefs, scarfs, neckties, etc., were first quality goods bought fresh from the factory and the jobber at wholesale rates and sold at prices attractive to our patrons. One of the characteristic remarks made by one who has patronized our Bazaars for many years, and who is a pretty discriminating buyer, said that never before did we have such a line of articles which were both beautiful and useful and she knew she had saved money in doing her Christmas shopping at the Bazaar. Similar comments were made by others whose opinion we value highly. We are always sensitive to the reaction of those who buy in our Bazaar, because it is generally supposed that folks who come to such church affairs expect to be taken advantage of to a greater or lesser extent. In plain words they come to church sales expecting to be cheated either in goods or prices. Why the Christian Church would stoop to swindling the public is a puzzling problem in ethics. However, whatever criticism might be made as to our conduct of business our conscience is clear upon our honest, even generous dealings with our buyers.

Another thing that pleased us was the increased sales over last year from so many of the booths. Conspicuous among these was the Fish Pond. We put it in the hands of Ruth Rutter and Emma Kaiser. First, because both girls are hustlers and when they tackle a job it is not only done but it is well done. Then, too, both girls are popular with the young people of the parish. Such a team worked well and they succeeded in doubling the receipts of last year. But that is not the end of the tale. Last year we were forced to buy things and toys for the Fish Pond. This year the girls begged everything and the fine gifts they offered as bait were better than what we bought in previous years.

Also we must say a word about the remarkable increase in the receipts at the Household Goods Table. Mrs. Springer and Mrs. MacAvoy got in step and went

HAPPY NEW YEAR

Anno Domini 1937

A few short days and 1936 will be history. The events of that year will be duly recorded in the Books of Ages and a new leaf will be turned by Father Time. We repeat the memorable words of the Roman Governor, "What is written is written." Not one sentence, one word, one letter of the past can be erased. For weal or woe everything we did is done. We have given pleasure or pain to others. We have grown better or worse. We are nearer or farther away from our ideal. In short we have moved forward or backward this year. Which has it been?

There is nothing morbid in this probing of the past. Every wise and careful person does it in business, why should not we do it in our relations to God, to our brothers and to ourselves. The business man takes account of stock to learn of his profits and losses; to learn the size and quality of his stock on hand; to check up on waste and extravagances; to learn along what lines the business can be developed with greater profit. He who knows his business moves forward confidently. He who takes his business for granted speculates.

So is it with man and his Business of Living. In his life there is the debit and credit accounts. As he has lived he has acquired. The stock he has on hand is either an asset or a liability. Some things he has is doubtless of great value. Other things perhaps are cheap or worthless. Most of what he has can be classed under the subject of "Habits." They are what we have acquired mostly. It seems to us that it is very worth while to take account of these habits of ours and see just what, if any, value they have. What are their reaction on us first, and on our family and acquaintances second. The question is, will we become richer or poorer by retaining or by eliminating them.

One thing we admire about a business man. When he takes account of stock he places no fictional value on anything and he does not keep a worthless commodity because of foolish sentimentalism. If it is worth something he retains it. If it is worthless he removes it. The same principle must hold with every man our Business of Living. We must be full of honest sentiment and empty of purile sentimentalism. Every habit must be measured by an ideal. Those which grade high must be kept and developed; those which grade low must be eliminated for the good of our souls.

Therefore, our job in A. D. 1937 is to follow the sound principles of the successful business man. Get a line on our values, eliminate our accumulated dead stock, acquire new values and speculate in nothing. If we spend '37 in this kind of Business of Living we will surprise ourselves with our tangible riches at the close of the year.

Let's all start a new system of bookkeeping 1937 A. D.

Let us lay down the GOLDEN RULE of Service for our ideal and let us constantly refer to the GOLDEN RULE for comparison with our acts and habits during the whole year and we will be a credit to our day and generation.

WE WISH YOU A PROSPEROUS AND HAPPY NEW YEAR!

HAPPY NEW YEAR

'way over the top with an increase of almost three times that of last year.

Hannah Nuttal and her extra hands and extra feet, locally known as Anna Schabacker and Carrie Strang, assisted by an extra long pair of legs called "Mickey" (no relation to the famous mouse, however) started on the mad career of selling groceries and provisions from the first t'ck of the clock. And for three sensational nights of activity, sold and sold and sold onions, potatoes, cabbage, oranges, grapefruit, coffee, tea, canned goods, breakfast foods, etc., etc., until nothing was left but the booth and its trimmings. And we believe if they had another night to go they would have sold the trimmings at a profit and the tables for kindling wood. They were the sellingest quartette of sellers we ever met. And did they do over the top!

Not to be outdone by other booths the Candy Girls got into the game early and they just made you want with a hungry yearning to eat the Sweets all night long. Of course, we refer to the candy and not to the girls. Helen McHenry directed the selling campaign in her usual gracious and winning way and so imbued her attractive and irresistable lieutenants with the spirit of selling that over the top they went, too, and increased their sales nearly 50 per cent. over last year.

Considering the big handicap Margaret Nelson and her most efficient sales force had, we feel she and they deserve special congratulations for their efforts to boost their receipts. The "handicap" to which we refer was the short supply of dolls and toys to sell. In previous years we had an abundance of goods. This year we did not have enough. Margaret could have sold at least an hundred dollars more of dolls, etc., if she had it to sell. As it were, she managed her stock so well that she came within a few dollars of last year's receipts.

The Novelty Booth was overflowing with fancy goods of beautiful designs. The embroidered pieces were very attractive. Mrs. Schmidt, who knows and loves beautiful needlework, and her able lieutenants who no doubt are expert enough to duplicate anything they had for sale, naturally knew how folks would react to their beautiful wares. They succeeded in selling more articles for Christmas gifts than in any previous year. We want to use this opportunity to welcome Mrs. William Shives among our active workers. Incidentally she not only adied at the Novelty Booth but she contributed some of its choicest articles.

And what of the Kitchen? There reigns in absolute authority our one and only Mrs. Lillian Pine. Such roasts, such homemade pies, such soup, such sourkrout and pork, such hot dog sandwiches, such fried oysters, such chicken and potato salad, such french fried potatoes and potato chips, such golden tea, such amber coffee, such a lot of good wholesome things to eat, you never saw or tasted. The Parish made a raid on her domain every night, and the siege of Saturday night was so long sustained and so vigorously fought, that long before closing time poor Mrs. Pine and her weary aids were sitting among empty pots and kettles and roasting pans and skewers and ice cream tubs unable to sell another supper because there was no more food left. All she had to show for their three hectic nights was a pocketful of receipts. But that was something.

Soft drinks dispensed with a winning smile by Mrs. Young slaked our thirst. We are somewhat suspicious of her and that happy sexton of ours. We are very suspicious that they entered into some sort of conspiracy to jack up sales. Something like this. "Happy" agreed to stoke the boiler and work up the temperature of the room to 90 degrees in the shade. Then Mrs. Young was to be on hand with that attractive smile on her face and a glass of deliciously cool drink of orangeade or something in her hand extended invitingly to your parched lips and thirsty throat. What could a poor famishing sufferer do in such a case as that?

The Men's Furnishing Booth went out of business with a bang twice. The first was Friday night when the booth was shot to pieces by invading forces who knew good socks, etc., when they saw them. The second was Saturday night when our friends descended like a "wolf upon the fold" and gobbled up everything. The men of the parish are real sports. The way they wiped that booth clean of goods at 11.45 P. M., Saturday night was something we will never forget.

Oh yes, and there was the Radio, too. And did brothers Gilbert, Later, Cook and Company keep things going! At the end of the evening's fun crowds of lucky winners brought their coupons to the Bazaar and bought from every table.

OUR THANKS ARE DUE

to the several firms and individuals who made donations of money and materials to the Bazaar; also to the Chairmen and women and aides of the booths; to Herman Jaeschke and Vernon Matthews who auctioned off everything handed them; to Miss Fisher for sending 200 letters for gifts from firms; to George Downes for his fine artistic, decorative conception; to "Happy" Gilbert for his fine and courteous manner of making things comfortable for all of us every night; to Mrs. Vernon Matthews for so efficiently filling the difficult job of cashier.

Yes, we are glad it is over but we DID have a dandy t'me while it lasted.

WE ARE SORRY!

In the last issue of the Broadcaster we published what we thought was a complete list of names of the FIRESIDE CLUB and contributors to the COAL FUND. Imagine our dismay when our District Super-

We got busy immediately and asked our Superintendents to give us a list of names omitted and we would publish them in this issue. We were panic stricken when we learned how many names we had overlooked. We do not know how or why we committed such a blunder. INSURANCE

Its Variety and Importance

Insurance is the most interesting and important subject to human living.

It is the act of INSURING or ASSURING against loss or damage by a contingent event; a contract whereby, for a stipulated consideration, called a PREMIUM, one party undertakes to guarantee another against loss by a certain SPECIFIED CONTINGENCY or PERIL called a RISK. The contract being set forth in a document called a POLICY. The principal forms of insurance are: Life Insurance, Fire Insurance, Marine Insurance, Accident Insurance, Casualty Insurance, Credit Insurance, Employers' Liability Insurance, Fidelity Insurance, Title Insurance and Burglar Insurance.

The Prevalence of Insurance

There is scarcely any kind of business, or individual that is not carrying insurance of one sort or another. Most of us are provident enough to feel the necessity of several sorts of insurance. We not only insure our lives and the lives of the members of our family, but we seldom travel without investing in an accident insurance for the trip. We insure our homes and contents against fire risks. We insure our cars against theft, fire and accident; that is, if we are good citizens, we do. As a matter of fact it would be difficult to find an individual in this broad land of ours who does not own one or more insurance policies.

Why

Well, just because it is nothing more than horse sense. Life is full of all sorts of risks and a man is foolish who does not insure against such risks. Indeed, a man who refuses to insure is guilty of criminal neglect or else a victim of a species of insanity. Insurance is not a luxury but it is an imperative duty towards yourself, those whom you love, your employees and your neighbors.

The universal verdict in favor of Insurance is revealed in the billions that are invested in it. Life and property must be protected by some means or other and Insurance is the practical answer.

Insurance Is Dealing In Futures

Insurance does not represent a sure thing investment, except in case of life. On the other hand, it is not a gamble. It is an investment against risks or future contingencies which may never happen,—though we live to be a hundred years old. Ever since the writer has been of age he has carried adequate insurance on all his property; yet, with but one exception of a slight fire, has he been required to apply for recovery. His investments have cost hundreds of dollars in premiums. Perhaps we will continue to pay the rest of our lives and have nothing happen. On the other hand, a devastating fire, flood or some other calamity may occur at any time, at which time my premiums will be most valuable assets.

So you see how foolish I would be if I did not insure against possible future trouble.

What Is The Motive Back of This Insurance Talk?

A very simple one indeed. In the first place we point out to you how completely we humans try to protect our life and property and condition. In the next place we show that we consider such protection of primary importance and censure the person who is neglectful of this moral duty to self and society. Again we emphasize this importance by investing staggering billions of dollars in insurance. Again we consider a lapse in insurance criminal indifference if it can possibly be avoided and real misfortune if conditions force it upon us.

Now For The Motive

Our reason or motive in expanding on insurance life, property and condition, and assenting cordially in the wisdom of insurance, is to ask you why so many of you do not use the same amount of wisdom in the matter of INSURANCE YOURSELVES AND YOUR FRIENDS AGAINST CERTAIN VERY REAL RISKS AFTER DEATH. Yes, we are somewhat on the side of the Revivalist who urges men to look to the future. You may shrug your shoulders and carelessly comment, "Let life after death care for its welfare."

Yes, but man, you have provided no insurance against possible risks against what lies beyond! Nobody has ever returned to tell you what to expect. The prophets, Jesus Christ, the Apostles, have very definitely stated what you are to expect and how necessary it is for you to prepare to meet those expectations. One thing you must not forget—all your insurance policies are voided at your death. Their value stops at your grave. You have no paid up policy on the future if you neglect the premiums God demands of you before guaranteeing protection beyond. Some of the flippant type of men may pass it by with a "I should worry." Some may think it of so little importance as to pigeon hole the matter for some "important" things. Some may seriously question the need of insurance or, using the older word for better understanding, ASSURANCE for the future. In every case of neglect, however, you are not using your usual common sense. You may live for years in sound health, yet you must go the way of all flesh finally.

Then what?

You have been wise in material insurance. Why are you so foolish and neglectful in spiritual insurance?

Did you say because one is a possibility and the other is not?

How do you know the other is not?

At all events is it not wise, yes, worldly wise, if you will, to buy insurance on your life after death. The premiums are the cheapest, so that the poorest can pay. You cannot pay in species but you must in service.

If you read St. Matthew 25:31-46 you will catch what we mean. Can you imagine such a small premium paying such immense dividends.

Why not be wise, take our tip and buy insurance.

We state without fear of contradiction that the Sunday School of the Church of St. John the Evangelist ranks among the largest in South Philadelphia.

We kneel—how weak!
We rise—how full of power!
Why therefore should we do ourselves this wrong,
Or others—that we are not always strong?
That we are ever overborne with care,
That we shall ever weak or heartless be,
Anxious or troubled, when with us is prayer
And joy and strength and courage are with thee?

TAXES

from "Magazeb"

A jokester in Germany, ridiculing the many and varied sources of taxes in that country, suggested that there should be a tax on obesity. Lo and behold, some of the officials, it is said, have taken the suggestion as serious and are proposing such a tax. All persons measuring in excess of a certain girth are to be taxed by the inch.

This idea opens up an entirely new idea in tax collection, and should solve the tax problem in America.

Along with taxes on obesity should be a tax on eating too much, and the revenue collected go to feed those who have too little. Another tax could be imposed upon those who drink too much. In fact, all manner of excesses could be checked with a series of taxes, so that those who overstep the bounds of temperance would pay a penalty. This might turn America into a more temperate nation, since Americans dislike to be taxed.

Nor is this all the idea suggests. There could be taxes on blonds; on people with blue eyes, on people who read your newspaper over your shoulder. An especially high tax might be collected from people who give their time to gossip or idle boasting.

It appears that the surface has only been scratched on the ideas of taxation.

DID YOU READ WHAT A FEW OF THE 100 GREAT MEN OF OUR NATION SAY ABOUT THE SUNDAY SCHOOL?

We will publish more opinions later.

* * * *

In a certain women's organization each member was asked to contribute a dollar that she had earned herself by hard work. When the contributions were turned in everyone was requested to tell how she had earned her money. Varied and droll were the stories told: One woman had made doughnuts, another had secured magazine subscriptions, another had shampooed hair, and so on.

Finally the chairman turned to a woman in the front row and said, "Now it's your turn. How did you earn your dollar?"

"I got it from my husband," replied the member addressed.

"Oh," said the chairman. "From your husband? There is no hard work about that."

The woman smiled faintly. "You don't know my husband," said she.

PARISH PARENTS PLEASE PONDER THESE RESOLUTIONS

WHEREAS, one-half of the 34,000,000 boys and girls between the ages of six and eighteen in America are receiving no religious instruction whatever, and this neglect of the Christian training of children and youth has lowered moral standards and has brought upon us a great wave of crime; and

WHEREAS, judges of our courts, social workers, and public school teachers are seeking to combat this crime wave but declare they must have the motive power of religion and are appealing to our churches; and

WHEREAS, the International Council of Religious Education is seeking to enlist all denominations in an aggressive, permanent movement to bring Christian teaching to every child in our land; therefore, be it

RESOLVED, that we face this challenge as a matchless missionary and evangelistic opportunity; that we view it as of vital importance to our Christian religion; and that we put into it all the resources at our command, not merely for this year but for the years to come. Furthermore, be it

RESOLVED, that we endorse the plan of The American Baptist Publication Society to enlist all of our churches in this movement and to furnish definite suggestions for the work.

WHAT GREAT MEN SAY ABOUT THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

JAMES E. WEST

Chief Scout Executive, Boy Scouts of America

"I would place the church and its Sunday School alongside the home as the greatest influence for good in the life of America today. Inspired by this conviction, we added to the Scout obligation the twelfth scout law which reads:

"A scout is reverent. He is reverent toward God. He is faithful in his religious duties, and respects the convictions of others in matters of custom and religion."

GLENN THISTLEWAITE

Director of Physical Education,
University of Richmond

"As I contact with young men on university campuses, I am convinced that there never has been a time when the influence of the Church School was more noticeable than it is today. No longer is the "Sunday School boy" regarded as effeminate. He is an average fellow mingling with his fellows on even terms. He wields a definite influence over his fellows without realizing it. I am glad to see the fine attitude toward the Sunday Schools, and hope that it continues to grow."

Let every boy and girl, who thinks a Sunday School boy is a sissy, read the above. It will change your opinion if you are not too stupid.

A college football coach's opinion of the Sunday School

AMOS ALONZO STAGG

Football Coach, College of the Pacific (Californio)

"My own spiritual awakening came as a result of attendance at Sunday School. That awakening furnished a tremendous stimulus to my life. It fired my ambition to seek a high school and college education. It determined my life purpose; the welfare of boys and young men. My athletic successes at Yale led me to shape that service through athletic channels. THE PROGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES AND THE WORLD DEPENDS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL."

Gee whizz! and that comes from a football coach!!

Words of Wisdom from

MAUD BALLINGTON BOOTH

Founder of the Volunteer Prison League of the Volunteers of America

"The Sunday School is the only hope for children whose home influence is irreligious. A very large percentage of the men and women with whom I deal in prison never had a Sunday School experience and little or no knowledge of the Bible."

Your Rector knew Maud B. Booth when he was chaplain of the Eastern State Penitentiary and he endorses her statement. In his nearly 5 years association with convicts of every class, from petty thiefs to bank robbers and murderers he discovered a strange lack of Sunday School Education among those rated as dangerous criminals.

An Important Estimate
by

CLAUD G. BOWERS

American Ambassador to Spain

"The Sunday School is as essential in the moulding of character as the Public School. It gives a needed emphasis to ethical standards, creates ideals of personal conduct and raises ones ideas of values above the merely material things of life. The Sunday School prevents that exaltation of money over morals which constitutes the more serious menace to our country today. It (the Sunday School) stands for things that are elemental and abide."

Celebration of the Holy Communion, First Sunday in the month and all Holy Days, 10.45 A. M.

Appointments for Christenings, Weddings and Burial Services should be made as far in advance as possible.

Notice of serious illness should be SENT BY MAIL to the Rector.

I GIVE MYSELF TO GOD

I give myself to God;

But do not boast the gift.

What He sees in this clod

Of unclean earth, I miss.

Yet, with the eyes of love

He must some gold perceive

In me, the worthless clay—

He wishes to receive.

So—

I give myself to God

But do not boast the gift.

OUR LENTEN VOLUNTARY THANK OFFERING

A few years ago we were inspired to announce that we would give special Lenten boxes to such members of the parish who felt they would like to make a special offering during Lenten Season to Almighty God for His care and providence over them. The boxes are placed upon the dining room table and at every meal the members of the family drop a coin in the box as their offering for God's care and love.

It is surprising how much this offering has amounted to in dollars and cents. It goes to show that if folk are given a chance they will gladly make an offering worthy of their feelings of thanksgiving.

This year the Rector has purchased 100 beautiful thank offering boxes at his own expense which he shall be glad to distribute among parishioners who wish to join this group of voluntary givers to the missions of the church in this peculiar manner.

It is understood that nobody will be coaxed or urged to take a box. YOU MUST MAKE APPLICATION FOR IT. WE DO NOT WANT ANY PERSON TO TAKE ONE BECAUSE THEY WISH TO ACCOMMODATE OR PLEASE US. We invite you to join us in this gesture of Thanksgiving Offerings.

Last year the offerings from this SPECIAL VOLUNTEER GROUP amounted to nearly $100.00. We are hoping to double our list of VOLUNTEERS this year.

REMEMBER: You will not be personally solicited to take a box, you must personally ASK for a box. You cannot receive one in any other way. THEY ARE NOT FOR GENERAL DISTRIBUTION.

CHRISTMAS SERVICES AT ST. JOHN'S

Just in order to make sure that everybody would be in the proper spirit to celebrate Christmas, we held our Carol Service Sunday evening, December 20th, led by the combined Choirs, the members of the Parish congregated in old St. John's and joined in singing those grand old carols that have been passed down from generation to generation and express so beautifully in melody the hope and triumph of the Nativity.

On Christmas Day the members of the parish filled the church at both services at 6.30 and 10.45. The musical part of the services was very ably rendered by our joint choirs. The church was very simply adorned for the occasion. On each side of the Altar and against the wall were suspended by broad red ribbons, enormous laurel wreaths. On each side of the Chancel stood two beautiful, bushy Christmas trees. On the Altar was

PLEASURE or HAPPINESS

by

H. Cresson McHenry

Sometimes we are really sloven in our thinking. Take, for instance, the two words of our topic. So many think they are synonymous, or at least interchangeable. The idea is very wrong. One is more or less superficial or on the surface, whilst the other is a deep and an abiding experience in spiritual well being.

PLEASURE is a state of gratification of the senses, therefore sensual. It stands for an agreeable emotion. It is the excitement or relish produced by expectation of something delightful about to be fulfilled. It is sensuous gratification for its own sake. It is akin to amusement, sport, diversion, self-indulgence, frivolous or dissipating enjoyment. It is the capacity to enjoy things and people. In a general way, therefore, it is objective; seldom subjective. Quite frequently it is the counterfeit of HAPPINESS. Yet it is not always by any means a state or condition to be shunned or renounced. The wise man indulges in PLEASURE with discretion and thereby adds zest to life. The fool becomes its slave and perishes in his folly.

HAPPINESS is a state of well being characterized by relative permanence by dominantly agreeable emotions, ranging from mere content to positive felicity. It signifies a condition of mental and moral health and freedom from care. It is synonymous with felicity, blessedness, bliss and spiritual exaltation. It is not sensual either in its nature or its seeking. It is like that pure emotion a mother has for her babe or the angels have over one sinner who repenteth. It is the loftiest, purest, keenest of all spiritual emotion. It is really that thing of the soul man has so earnestly sought since God made him in His own image. It differs from Pleasure in that it is safe and harmless. It is invigorating and can be indulged in ad infinitum without unhappy results.

He who chooses HAPPINESS instead of PLEASURE is a very wise man and sooner or later will possess what all seek—God's greatest gift to man.

In SACRIFICE AND SUFFERING, AND NOT IN PLEASURE, WE FIND OUR GREATEST HAPPINESS.

a crimson line of poinsettias. On the floor of the church by the Memorial Window of the Holy Innocents towered a giant Christmas tree which reached to the clerestory of the Church. The sun's ray's streaming through the Rose Window from the other end of the church, bathed the Choir, Chancel and Altar in myriad colored lights which gave the illusion of an enormous Christmas picture of rare beauty.

St. John the Evangelist day, falling on Sunday this year, gave us a rare opportunity to celebrate the day of the parish patronal saint with full congregations. The services in the afternoon was specially beautiful. The Junior Order of the Daughters of the King, under the supervision of Miss Helen Weir McHenry, rendered a pageant of the Nativity in costume. The pageant was given in the Church which was well filled with children who joined in singing the many Christmas hymns included in the arrangement of the story. We must say one word about the characterization of the Virgin Mary. It was one of the most beautiful and appealing scenes I have ever witnessed.

We wish to comment on the Christmas Offering of the parish. It was much larger than it has been in many years. We hope and feel assured that the members of the parish are getting more and more in the habit of making acceptable offering to Almighty God as a part of their worship of Him. The offering amounted to over $300. The offering is a most welcome augmentation to our Church income but we are specially pleased with the spirit in which it was made. As we have said over and over in the past real worship always includes offerings and sacrifices. The day will come, I know, when our offerings will support God's work of our parish. As is our custom we publish in this issue a list of names who made their offerings this Christmas. May God's special blessing rest on each for observing this duty.

THE IMPORTANCE OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

On several occasions we have printed comments of men and women of fame on their views as to the importance of the Sunday School to the children of the Parish. Our object in doing so is to eventually reach the inner consciousness of our children's parents and awake in them the great need of educating the children in the ideals and laws of Christianity. Parents take pride in the mental attainments of their offspring, but curiously enough they ignore the child's need of the knowledge of the ways of life and the attainments of the spirit. It seems to be a matter of little importance as to whether the child is GOD CONSCIOUS so long as he is MONEY CONSCIOUS. The parent's ambition for the child is to get rich, get famous, get learning, get power, get pleasure, get a fine home by straight or devious methods—it seems to make little difference; the point is to GET. The curious part of the GET business is the LET GO time is never seriously considered. Some day we must all LET GO our beautiful homes and take up our abode in the narrow pit of the grave. We must LET GO our mentality and our mind return to dust. We must LET GO our wealth and fine clothing and lie quiet in our grave clothes. We must LET GO all pleasures and become insensate in death. We must LET GO fame and mingle with the forgotten dead.

When the LET GO time arrives what have we left to HOLD ON?

Nothing, if all our education has been materialistic and wordly. But more than we LET GO if we have learned the way to eternal life through Jesus Christ our Saviour. What we parents need to remember is—Life is VERY short. We spend a much longer time the other side of the grave; consequently we need to prepare now to spend that time profitably with God. Therefore, may ge again call your mind to the views of great men who have studied and know the way of life.

So let's read why

DORA V. SMITH, President of the National Council of Teachers of English and Associate Professor of Education of the University of Minnesota, has to say about the IMPORTANCE OF SUNDAY SCHOOL TRAINING:

"It would be difficult to pay too high a tribute to the place of the SUNDAY SCHOOL in the religious life of boys and girls. It develops almost unconsciously, a bulwark of CHRISTIAN STANDARDS OF CHARACTER, of incalculable moment in an age of shifting values like our own. It affords opportunity, through its program of activities for young people, of practicing, as well as preaching, the social message of the Gospel. Through its agency young people learn to plan cooperatively for the welfare of others. Finally, it lays the foundation of Christian culture, giving to boys and girls a knowledge of the Bible itself and a sense of its pre-eminent place in literaturye."

Also let's read what

CLAUD G. BOWERS, American Ambassador to Spain, has to say: "The SUNDAY SCHOOL is as essential in the moulding of character as the public schools. It gives a needed emphasis to ethical standards, creates ideals of personal conduct, and raises one's ideas of values above the merely material things of life. The SUNDAY SCHOOL prevents that exaltation of money over morals, which constitutes the more serious menace to our country today. It stands for things that are elemental and abiding."

. . . . . .

Next month we will publish comments on the value of Sunday School training from other great Americans. We want you to learn for yourself how really important it is for the parent to help the offspring to "remember his creator in the days of his youth."

WHICH DO YOU PREFER—PLEASURE or HAPPINESS?

* * * *

Before you realize it LENTEN SEASON will be with us. Let's get ready now to make it a spiritually profitable season.

* * * *

Every year we distribute special LENTEN THANK OFFERING BOXES among members of the Parish who are conscious of God's Providence. They are not asked to take one; on the contrary, they must ask that one be given them, because this special offering MUST come from a deep sense of gratitude for God's care and kindness. If you want one of these beautiful boxes to place upon your dining room table, make application either to your Rector or your District Superintendent. Last year our Roll of Thank Offering folk numbered nearly one hundred.

Remember you will not be urged to take one; you must make application for it.

* * * *

As soon as our new pieces for the Communion Service are paid for we will consecrate them. If you wish to give something towards the bill we will be happy to receive your donation. But we will not ask you for any gift of money. The purchase of sacred vessels must be made with money given voluntarily and for love of Jesus Christ for his sacrifice of his body and blood for us. He supplies the precious elements; we who love Him supply the vessels that contain them.

TWO HUNDRED BAZAAR TICKETS ARE STILL MISSING!

* * * *

It would do all of us good if we went revivalist during Lent and "got religion."

FINANCIAL SUPPORT WITHOUT MONEY

How You Can Contribute to The Church Without Spending

Certainly this ought to interest all parishioners!

We can hear you say, "Oh yes, well go on and spring the catch!"

That is just where you fail to contact.

This is no neat little trap for unwary pennies. It is a straight from the shoulder proposition.

Answer me this. Do you subscribe for a periodical or monthly magazine?

Did you say "yes"?

Well, this is our proposition. Instead of forwarding your subscription to the publishing company, please subscribe through your church. It costs you exactly the same price and the church, instead of the company, gets the commission.

And, believe me, these commissions amount to some money! They range from 40 cents to $2.50, depending upon the class of magazine you buy.

For instance the Reader's Digest, Woman's Home Companion, etc., pay the low commission. Yachtsman, Stage, House Beautiful, etc., pay a higher commission. Collier's Weekly, Liberty, pay more. The Cosmopolitan, Progressive Teacher, Forum, etc., etc., pay still more. The American Child Life, News Week, Radio News, Red Book, Young American, etc., etc., pay still higher. Vogues, Harpers, etc., pay the highest.

THERE IS NO MAGAZINE PRINTED THAT WE CANNOT FURNISH AT THE SAME SUBSCRIPTION PRICE YOU PAY. AND, INSTEAD OF PAYING THE COMMISSION TO STRANGERS, YO PUT IT IN YOUR OWN CHURCH POCKET.

AN EASTER MESSAGE

God hath sent his angels to the earth again,
Bringing joyful tidings to the sons of men;
They who first, at Christmas, thronged the heavenly way,
Now beside the tomb-door, sit on Easter Day.
Angels sing his triumph, as you sang his birth,
"Christ, the Lord, is risen. Peace, goodwill on earth."

God has still his angels, helping, at his word,
All his faithful children, like their faithful Lord;
Soothing them in sorrow, arming them in strife,
Opening wide the tomb-doors, leading into life.
Angels, sing his triumph, as you sang his birth,
"Christ, the Lord, is risen. Peace, goodwill on earth."

—Phillips Brooks, 1877

THE MIGHTY MITE CHEST

The person who thought of RAISING MONEY FOR MISSIONS with a MITE CHEST was inspired.

THAT MITE CHEST has raised more millions for Missions than any other agent of the Church.

THAT MITE CHEST has been a liberal education to the kiddies on the subject of giving. A difficult lesson for most children to learn.

THAT MITE CHEST has paid the fares of missionaries to every part of the world where the heathen are found.

THAT MITE CHEST has been the brick in building many a MISSION CHAPEL in the southern mountains, the Indian sections of our land, and for heathen boys and girls in foreign lands.

THAT MITE CHEST has helped to build hospitals.

THAT MITE CHEST has erected school houses.

THAT MITE CHEST has bought Bibles and Prayer Books for people who know not God.

THAT MITE CHEST has helped pay the stipends of missionaries, doctors, nurses, school teachers and lay mission workers in every part of the world.

THAT MITE CHEST is helping mightily to convert the world to Jesus Christ.

THAT MITE CHEST is the child's answer to the call of the neglected people of every land.

THAT MITE CHEST is able to accomplish a thousand per cent more for God and His children if every child will do his part and increase its power by FILLING THE MITE CHEST and bringing them to church on Easter heavy with their offerings to God.

DO NOT DESPISE IT.

DO NOT NEGLECT IT.

DO NOT DESTROY IT.

If you do you will hurt the cause of Jesus Christ and MANY PRECIOUS SOULS MAY BE LOST because of your indifference.

God has given you this MIGHTY CHEST to help you do his work. Be sure you avail yourself of its opportunities and faithfully use it to help build the Christian Church in every land.

$2,400.00 x 25 Years = $60,000.00

THE FIGURES ARE STARTLING BUT THE FACTS ARE TRUE

We sometimes hear a member murmur, "He's always asking for money." Of course, all such remarks are exaggerations to a greater or lesser degree; no doubt depending on the condition of one's liver. Yet, considering all things, who do you think has a better right to ask for church support than the one who supports it the most?

Twenty-five years ago our church was closed and out of business. We heard about it, and, like the busybody we are, we started poking our nose into this "going-out-of-business" business. We couldn't see WHY South Philadelphia should be abandoned to the alien and non-christian. We went to the Bishop and inquired WHY Old St. John's was deceased. He told us that the congregation had scattered; only a handful of communicants remained; they were too few and too poor to support a Rector and the Diocese did not have sufficient funds to supply a missionary.

Now theoretically and canonically a missionary receives a stipend of $2100.00 a year, plus $300 for house rent, where there is no rectory. All of which totals up to 2400 a year.

We saw the Bishop's dilemma and we said, "suppose somebody should volunteer to serve the parish WITHOUT COMPENSATION, would he (The Bishop) be willing to appoint such a missionary? At once he replied that he would but he knew of no such clergyman. We then and there volunteered our services, never dreaming at the time we were imposing upon ourselves a life sentence of servitude, requiring us to abandon hope of ever changing. And for 25 years we have served without ceasing in the Parish of St. John's. While the flock are capering and gamboling in the country; at Browns Mills and other such delightful resorts, the shepherd is still in the sheepfold administering to those who for various reasons are confined to the hot city homes. In all sorts of weather, hot, cold, stormy, pleasant, he must be on duty. He can take time out only when his two faithful lay assistants, who by the way receive no compensation either, are free to take over a service or two.

As we say, this state of affairs has existed for 25 years in old St. John's Parish. So you see what we mean to infer by the title of this article. We agreed to save the Parish and Diocese the sum of $2400 a year by serving free of compensation. We have kept faithfully to that agreement for 25 years. Therefore, as $2400 × 25 YEARS = $60,000.00, we feel we are in a position to remind you that YOUR financial assistance might be at least generous enough to meet the current expenses of the Parish.

So we urge once more and very strongly that you pay up all your delinquent church offering envelopes without delay and that you provide to give a BIG, FAT EASTER OFFERING on EASTER DAY.

And "let no man trouble us" as St. Paul remarked, until he too has served grand old St. John's parish a quarter of a century without compensation other than the great privilege of kneeling before its Altar in worship.

THAT LEGACY

St. John's Church Received $4000.00—Almost

Recently the Parish was thrown into great excitement over the news that the church was the beneficiary of a will executed by a late communicant of the church. The story was only partly true, however, and since it first appeared many queer things have happened.

There was a will executed in favor of St. John's Church. It was dated 1925. It was not a very nice will and was written in a spirit of resentment against a relative. Leaving the estate to the church was not altogether due to his love for it, although the Rector knows the deceased held him in high esteem personally, but the object of the will appeared to be to punish a kinsman for some real or imaginary wrong committed some time prior. As soon as the will was read the Rector took strong exception to its tone and its contents. He assured the next of kin that under no circumstances would he permit the church to profit entirely by this strange will of his dead friend. But he would insist that the brother and his family should attend the funeral services contrary to the desire of the deceased notwithstanding; and, furthermore, he would insist that the church should share the estate on a fifty-fifty basis at the settlement. That the church accept the residue of the estate afer all expenses were paid and then give a check for one-half of that amount to the brother as his share. St. John's Church is pretty poor but we cannot afford to compromise its honor by receiving money from the hands of hate.

A few days later our attorney telephoned to tell us that as the will was signed by only one witness he was not sure of its legality but he was afraid it would not stand up in court. After a few more days he called stating that very recently an act was passed making legal all papers signed by only one witness. Of course, if this act was retroactive in its application then the money would belong to the church. But it seems somebody wanted to test that very point and brought suit before a judge of the Orphans Court. The case was tried and the judge ruled that the new act was not retroactive. And that was that. St. John's Church could not claim a cent of the estate and it all reverted to the next of kin in spite of the will. Of course the attorney for the brother knew these facts as well as us.

Then happened something which showed the calibre of the next of kin. It seems he was impressed with our desire to share fifty-fifty with him when we both thought the church was the beneficiary. When he learned that he had more than a fighting chance in contesting the will, he in turn proposed a compromise and the original desire and intention of the Rector is being carried out. After all the debts and attorney's fees are paid the estate will be equally divided. The Church will receive the sum of about $1500. And, we receive that because of the friendly relations between the church and the next of kin.

And, too, we like to think that Peter would have it just that way now that it is settled. At least our conscience is clear. We feel our church did the honorable thing in making the fifty-fifty suggestion. At least it was what Jesus Christ would have advised. And His advice is good enough for us.

TIME TO THINK OF CONFIRMATION

Lent is the hunting season for Confirmation Candidates. Just like autumn is the hunting season for game and all year long is the season for fishing. You know it was Jesus who said, "I will make you fishers of men." Now the Lenten Season is just right for making a big haul for the Kingdom of Heaven. Conditions and atmosphere and the psychology of Lent are powerful bids to turn men's minds and hearts toward God. What we must do is to seize the opportunity and get busy in persuading our unchurched neighbors and their children to accept our Lord Jesus as their Master and Saviour.

In Lent it is natural, or at least not so embarrassing to invite friends and neighbors to go with you to church. Everybody is doing it. All the churches have special services, special music and special speakers who are filled with the missionary spirit. Every man or woman, boy or girl loves good speaking and good singing. Your neighbor or your friend is no exception in such matters and no doubt will think of you very kindly indeed for showing such a personal interest in him.

Your Rector is making this appeal to you because there are so many hundreds of confirmation prospects in the Parish and we want them all. Also he is making this appeal to you because he wants you to get the personal satisfaction of doing something big for Jesus Christ. You will never know the glow and warmth of spiritual satisfaction until you go fishing and land your first candidate for Confirmation. I do not worry about the members who have made their first catch. The sport is absorbing and they are sure to take advantage of the season and the favorable conditions of Lent and go fishing again.

BETTER GET YOUR LINES OUT AND JOIN THE SPORT.

CRUCIFYING CHRIST

Our Personal Guilt in the Divine Tragedy

The reason we do not feel any moral responsibility for the Crucifying of Christ is because it presents itself to our mentality as an historic and physical event which occurred centuries ago. We think it was unjust, unnecessary, and cruel. We condemn the Jews for their murderous hate and the Romans for their cynical cruelty. To our minds both Jew and Gentile exemplified the savagery of their day and generation in the crucifying of Christ. We condem them too for failing to see in him their only escape from intolerable political and physical outrages which is mild and gentle and wise philosophy of life would have affected for them had they followed in his footsteps. Every year we join in memorializing the Tragedy of Calvary. We intimate by certain acts on Ash Wednesday and during the period of Lent that we do have a sort of vague idea that we are somehow involved in that deplorable event. Yet, somehow our sense of personal guilt in the occurrence is very tenuous. We have little if any sense of responsibility in the matter. We have a feeling of anger towards those Scribes and Pharisees, those Roman Soldiers, that traitor Judas, those cowardly followers, that hypocritical high priest, that vile and diseased king, that time serving Roman Magistrate, that howling vasciliating mob who scream their hate today from throats which only twenty-four hours were hoarse from shouts of praise for Jesus the Liberator.

As Lent moves on towards the inevitable Resurrection day our hearts and souls are stirred more and more with pity and sorrow for the sufferings of the Crucified Christ. But somehow our feelings are sentimental. We are sorry for one who was dreadfully misunderstood and evilly wronged by his fellows. In fierce anger we cry they have crucified my Lord. And only a very few are sensible of that personal guilt that tears from the heart the broken cry I have crucified him, too.

Which act do you suppose is the more culpable, that of Calvary or that crucifixion in the citadel of my heart—His physical or His spiritual crucifixion?

But you say, I have no sense of guilt. I never even dreamed of such an act as crucifixion. Yes, and that is the pity of it. The impulse which impelled our act of spiritual crucifixion of Christ in our hearts did not have even the excuse of jealousy or personal hate towards one who bars and rebukes ambition. Its only impulse is self-indulgence. Shall I crucify my desires and grow in grace; or shall I crucify Christ and lay his love in the tomb of selfishness?

How are we guilty of crucifying Christ in this spiritual sense? Well, every time we subject moral and spiritual obligations or responsibilities to the indignity of elimination to make room for our physical desires and worldly ambitions. Every time we neglect the performing a spiritual duty. Every time we indulge in an evil act or thought and revel in that state. Every time we excuse our sin by pointing out a professing Christian who is a greater sinner instead of accusing ourselves by pointing to Christ who hates and loathes that sin and pities us for yielding ourselves willing victims to it. We would rather crucify the spiritual Christ than crucify a physical desire.

This, my brothers, is our special duty this Lent:
CHRIST MUST BE RESURRECTED.
DESIRE MUST BE CRUCIFIED.

THANK YOU

The Woman's Bible Class No. 1 would like to thank all those who donated prizes, cakes and services for the Radio Party on February 20th, given for the Sunday School Lenten Offering. We appreciate the cheerful co-operation of all those who attended the party and helped make it a success.

There is so much need both at home and abroad for our brothers and sisters and, as our city has been saved from the distress of other cities, let us show thankful and grateful hearts to God by making every effort to help make our offerings this Lent our best and send it all parts to give courage and spiritual guidance to do our Father's Will.

Thank you again for your part in our party.

HANNAH H. NUTTALL, Teacher.

RESURRECTION MORNING

Easter has come so glorious and bright,
With its lillies so pure and fragrant and white,
And our hearts are so still, as we bow our head
And give thanks, Easter morning, He is not dead.

He is risen, behold the stone rolled away,
And the napkin which covered His Head as He lay.
All tell the glad story to the children of men.
Christ, who was dead, is risen again.

He is risen to show to your heart and to mine,
Life is eternal, Our Lord is Divine.
The grave has no terrors, all fears set at rest,
God's Will has been done, He knows what is best.

S. E. NELSON.

YOUR EASTER COMMUNION

Your Most Important Act of Fealty to Jesus Christ

Every act of devotion, every personal prayer, every offering, every act of mercy, every confession, every reading of God's Holy Word, every meditation, every hymn, every missionary endeavor, every Communion you make, are of immeasurable importance to your spiritual development and growth. But more important than even these is your EASTER COMMUNION. It is in commemoration of Olivet and Calvary; the night and day Jesus offered life's precious red rubies on the Altar of the Cross for our Redemption. Events which proved his own philosophy, "Greater love hath no man than this, that he lay down his life for his friend." After which he added, so that we would not mistake his reference, "YE are my friends." In just that beautifully simple way he received us to himself as worthy of any sacrifice he must make for our salvation. By his sacrifice the menace of death was driven back never more to frighten us; and we were filled with the sense of deliverance from the bondage of sin.

When the sun rays of the first Easter Day drove back night's darkness, there stood the empty tomb—silent witness of the stupendous victory of Christ over sin and death; silent assurance that death hath no more dominion over us, that the grave is not the eternal abode of those who sleep in him.

This is the event we memorialize every Easter Day. America has its INDEPENDENCE DAY but the world has its EASTER DAY. The joy of the one is our manner of showing how dear life, liberty, the pursuit of happiness is to every patriot; the joy of Easter is the expression of the intelligent spirit of man of his joyous release from the tyrant of men's souls.

How appropriate, therefore, is this special act of EASTER COMMUNION. It is the anniversary of Christ's triumph and man's release. Can any child of God be so lacking in gratitude as to stay away from the Altar of Jesus Christ on such a day as this? Can any man refuse the body of Jesus, the blood of Jesus on Easter Day and be conscious of its mighty meaning? Are YOU one of those who would set at nought the Divine Gesture of love and mercy?

We are sure you are not. We are sure you will come to His Altar on Easter Day. We are sure you will bring your offering with you that by your presence your act of fealty and the gift of your substance you prove yourself loyal to him who loved you even to the death upon the Cross.

YOUR EASTER ENVELOPE

This year many more EASTER ENVELOPES ought to come to church on Easter Day than have been coming during the lean years of the depression. And, too, those EASTER ENVELOPES that have been regular in their annual church attendance ought to be much, MUCH fatter than before.

Now every communicant of the Parish will eventually receive an EASTER ENVELOPE. You will receive it because it is an important part of your EASTER OBLIGATION to the church. You have always been taught that your canonical standing in the church depends entirely upon your Easter and Christmas Communions. Somehow, probably for fear of being misunderstood, your CHRISTMAS and EASTER OFFERINGS have not been so carefully stressed. Nevertheless, YOUR COMMUNIONS ARE NOT COM-PLETE WITHOUT YOUR OFFERINGS. Your standing is effected just the same as though you did not make your Communions. Yes, I know exactly what you are thinking. But your act of worship and Communion is not complete without your offering. God demands an offering as an outward and visible sign of your inward and spiritual grace. If there is no such outward sign there is sure to be but little spiritual grace.

This EASTER OFFERING is expected from all. From those greatly favored in material things MUCH IS EXPECTED of them. From those who have but little even the "widows' mite" is looked upon with favor and the giver receives a special blessing.

BE SURE YOU MAKE YOUR EASTER OFFERING AS BIG AS YOU OUGHT TO DO.

YOUR EASTER DUTIES

Yes, there are certain duties you must observe on Easter Day

FIRST. You must be sure you make your EASTER COMMUNION. It is an obligation, as well as a great Privilege.

SECOND. You must make an EASTER OFFERING worthy of the feeling of Thanksgiving you have for the hope of Salvation Easter gives you.

THIRD. You must THINK OF OTHERS who are not living in the lands of Christian Churches and WHO NEVER HEARD OF JESUS CHRIST. You must think, too, of the missionaries, the doctors, the nurses, the teachers and the deaconesses who have given up father, mother, brother, sister, social position, business ambition, friends and the delights and luxuries of home life to live in shacks, amid poor, insanitary conditions, lonely spots among foreign folk, in wild mountain ranges, among savage and hostile people, there to struggle day after day to bring them into the true light of the Gospel. And your thinking must take a practical turn. YOU MUST GIVE A BIG SUNDAY SCHOOL LENTEN OFFERING to support these heroic Christians and their charges ADEQUATELY.

These three things you MUST do. There are many other christian acts you can find to do by wishing to do all Jesus Christ would have me do that I might by practical means show how real and true is my gratitude to him for His Divine Sacrifice for me.

We want to learn to think and feel that Jesus Christ has done so much for me that if I live a million years and consecrate every second of those years in service to Him, I shall still owe him a debt too big to contemplate or pay.

LYDIA, THE SELLER OF PURPLE

A Pageant Rendered by the Junior Daughters of the King

Tuesday evening, February 2nd, the chapters of the Daughters of the King representing the Local Assembly of the Diocese held their Self-Denial Offering Presentation Service in St. John's Church. Many of the chapters were represented and each brought a large delegation of members with them. Among the delegates were young girls representing Junior Chapters.

A delicious turkey supper was served at six o'clock in the beautiful Church School room. There were places set for about seventy guests. The supper was served by the girls of the Junior chapter of St. John's Parish. We must say something about that service for the girls deserved and received lots of praise from our guests. They were quiet, quick, and very efficient. You would have thought serving was their profession, when as a matter of fact they never waited on tables before.

After supper, Miss Clara Stackhouse, President of the Local Assembly of the Daughters of the King, called on the Rev. Clarence H. Reese, Rector of the Church of St. Matthew, for a short address to the assembled chapters. He was followed by words of welcome from the Rev. H. Cresson McHenry, Rector. Then followed certain items of routine business and adjournment. Immediately the delegates gathered in the Church for a short service of Prayer, Praise, and the Presentation. Part of the service was a pageant entitled "Lydia, the Seller of Purple," presented in costume by the Junior Daughters of the King of St. John's Parish under the direction of Helen Weir McHenry, B.D. It was astonishingly well acted considering the brief time they had in which to prepare the story. It was presented with such a spirit and power of interpretation that one almost felt he was in the home of Lydia in Thyatira with her other friends and guests. The girls looked positively stunning in their ancient dress. Their delivery was clear and their acting was natural and dignified. It did us good to listen to the comments of astonishment and praise impulsively and enthusiastically offered by every member present. Our girls scored a big hit by their poise and unself-consciousness. What a fine group of real dramatists they proved themselves to be! We hope they will apply themselves seriously to developing their undoubted interpretive ability for their own benefit as well as for the pleasure and benefit of the Parish.

The pageant was broken in places with hymns appropriate to the subject and to the occasion. Before the pageant was presented the Rector read the story of Lydia from Acts 16:14 to the end. The pageant followed very closely the text. One of the outstanding features was the thrilling reading of St. Paul's letter by "Lydia." Betty Harper should apply herself to elocution and reading in a professional way. She has ability she should not waste. She has poise and dignity and interpretive expression both in tone and manner, all of which are the marks of historonic genius. Such talent should be carefully developed in a good school of elocution and not left to unwise or ignorant instructors. There were other girls in the cast whose parts were not prominent enough to reveal their powers, yet were sufficient to hint at a promise of ability under proper training.

Every time the Rector witnesses this revelation of stage power talent in his boys and girls his soul hungers and thirsts for a department of dramatic arts in St. John's work. There are young men and women, yes boys and girls too, among us who could out star eighty per cent of the average cinema or radio performer.

Will not somebody with a soul for the beautiful and the interpretative stand up and shout "I will finance such a school!"

Of course we have wandered far away from our subject of the Presentation Service of the Daughters of the King. Yet, we are close to it, too. For the presentation of "Lydia, the Seller of Purple" was the offering of our Juniors and was worth much gold to us.

The musical part of the service was as usual under the direction of our Church Organist, Mrs. Vernon Matthews.

The officers of the Senior Daughters of the King of St. John's Parish are: Directress, Miss M. B. Fisher; Secretary, Mrs. Rudolph Woerner; Treasurer, Mrs. Harry Carbarnes. Miss Helen Weir McHenry, B. D., is the Directress of the Junior branch.

OUR CHURCH ENVELOPES

Now is the Time to Consider Them

The Fiscal year of St. John's Parish runs concurrently with the Church Year.

Our weekly Church Envelope system starts on the First Sunday in Advent. This being the case we have come to the close of our first quarter and NOW is the time to send statements to the parishioners notifying them as to their financial record on the books of the Church. Those who are paid up in full we do not notify because both they and we know they are in the clear. There is no need to take time and expense to tell them what they know already. But it is a different matter in the case of any member who is delinquent. In every case, no doubt, the communicant who sincerely desires to make his weekly offerings to Jesus Christ by means of our Envelope System, but who has been forced to fall behind in his payments, wants to KNOW just how delinquent he is. He, of necessity, feels it is a favor to be notified of his financial obligations before it becomes too big a debt for him to cancel.

For this reason we have adopted a quarterly statement system, notifying all delinquent members of their indebtedness. You will, therefore, receive a first quarterly notice of your account in the near future. If you are behind in your payments there are two ways to "catch up."

1. Pay in full all you owe for last quarter on the Sunday following the receipt of your statement.

2. Arrange to pay the amount due on a gradual scale by adding so much to your regular Sunday Offering.

For instance, if you owe $3.00 from Advent Sunday in December to the last Sunday in February, add 10 cents a week to your regular offering until your debt is liquidated. Your account will be credited with the extra amount and you will soon be out of debt and caught up in your accounts.

Please do not mislay or ignore this quarterly statement. It is most important to the proper management of our parochial affairs. We have a pretty good credit with the business world; let us treasure that good opinion and prove worthy of it.

CLEAR UP YOUR CHURCH OBLIGATIONS AS SOON AS POSSIBLE.

Easter Services. Early Celebration 6.30 A. M. Second Celebration 10.45 A. M. Presentation of Sunday School Lenten Offering, 2.30 P. M.

* * * *

Your Easter Offering ought to show a substantial increase this year. Most of the Parish are better able to contribute now than they were a year ago.

* * * *

Are you using Lenten Season for bringing souls to Jesus Christ? Don't you know the minds of all are turned Godward in this holy season and NOW is the time to do personal missionary work among your friends, relatives and acquaintances? Are you afraid to speak to them of Jesus Christ and his love and sacrifice for them? Do you think they will laugh at you? Wouldn't it be better for you to forget your embarrassment and remember their spiritual need? Will not it look better for you if you bring souls with you to God than for you to come to Him alone? Of course Jesus wants you but he wants you to bring all your friends along. Try, TRY to your utmost to bring your candidate for Confirmation this year. You can do it if you work hard during the Lenten Season. THAT IS OPEN SEASON FOR HUNTING SOULS.

There are two seas in Palestine, both fed by the same river. One is brackish and dead; the other is sweet and living. What makes the difference?

One receives and GIVES; the other receives and KEEPS.

* * * *

That MITE CHEST of yours is pretty important to some little fellow in China or some other place where the name of Jesus Christ is unknown. It will make him realize you want him to know the Master, too.

* * * *

If you DESTROY or THROW away, or ROB that MITE CHEST, you may DESTROY someone's hope of everlasting life; you may THROW AWAY the opportunity to bring some ignorant boy or girl to Jesus Christ; you may ROB some child of his chance to enter into the kingdom of Heaven. Do you want to feel that you have done any one of these three things against Children who need Jesus Christ?

* * * *

If you were to see somebody drowning in a storm-tossed sea and you volunteered to save him, would you tie a THIN THREAD about your waist for a life line and trust your safety and the safety of the drowning man to such a flimsy line to shore, in case the billows should buffet and try to drag you out to sea? Or would you hook to you a stout rope, capable of resisting the tug of the sea and well secured on land and held by friends while you rode the surf to rescue?

Well, then, would you use a very thin, almost invisible and tenuous thread of ALMS FOR MISSIONS to tie to the missionaries, the deaconesses, the physicians, the nurses, and the teachers who venture into wild and savage places, among heathen people, on desert waste, in deserted mountain wastes, among all nations; to sustain them in their dangerous labors of saving souls for the Master?

Do you know that that thin thread of missionary alms has broken any number of times because it is TOO THIN and weak to support our life saving heroes and heroines in the places where God is unknown.

With what results?

With the results that many a mission station is abandoned and out of commission. The people whom it served are sinking back into their old state of ignorance and superstition and black despair. The missionaries are gone; their fine work is sacrificed and lost to the church.

WHY?
JUST BECAUSE THE MITE CHEST FAILED THEM!!!

CAPITAL AND LABOR

Differences between people in the industrial world are largely due to a misconception of the real facts. Commonly, the laborer regards the "boss" as greedy and inhuman, while the employer looks upon the worker as unappreciative and disloyal. Since both are, of necessity, burden bearers, the case is one of misunderstanding.

Below are the two sides, arraigned in their true light. On whichever side you may find yourself, it would be well to make a study of the facts before lending comfort to those who would widen the breach between the two:

I AM CAPITAL

I fill millions of pay envelopes.
I pay interest and dividends.
I furnish money for materials.
I advance money on crops.
I help small business and make possible large enterprises.
I multiply when deposited in a bank or wisely invested.
I am frequently tight—I am sometimes easy.
I am affected by unsettled conditions.
I seek safety and income.
I avoid uncertainty and trouble.
I do good in a thousand different ways.
I need Labor.
I am Labor's best friend.

—I Am Capital.

I AM LABOR

I furnish an outlet for Capital.
I plant fields, erect buildings, furnish homes, mine materials, manufacture products.
I operate railroads and steamships.
I frequently make mistakes because I am human.
I respond to fair treatment.
I need supervision and counsel.
I have appetites and desires to satisfy.
I laugh, I weep, I sweat, I get weary.
I cannot expect to receive what I do not rightfully earn.
I touch and influence every life.
I need Capital.
I am Capital's best friend.

—I Am Labor.

MAKING PRAYER A VITAL REALITY

"Try to realize God's presence before you begin.

"Pray only for what you really want.

"Pray not vaguely, but definitely.

"Use you mind in prayer, make your petitions vivid.

"Move the lips in prayer.

"Cultivate the temperament of prayer.

"Do not hurry your prayers. 'No large growth in holiness was ever gained by one who did not take time to be often and long, alone with God.'

"Cultivate ejaculatory prayer in active duties.

"Let not your prayers be selfish."

WISDOM

Men with science
Use skill and power,
To fly, speed, 'wire,'
To make bridge, tower.
Science increases
Weapons of war.
That is not wise;—
We need love more.
Knowledge of facts,
Nature and man,
Are well worthwhile;—
Make rich life's span.
Knowledge might lead
To vain conceit.
Wisdom knows life,—
Is humble, meek.
What is wisdom?
It's knowledge, lore,
Understanding,
Worship and more—
Loving each other,
Doing our share,
Giving ourselves
To him here, there.
Sages of old
Taught much to store.
Live yet to learn!
Go on! Gain more!
The more we know
The less it seems
We know. Strong lights
Throw longer beams.

B. STIVER

EASTER AT ST. JOHN'S

The day was cold. At sunrise the thermometer registered twenty-eight degrees. However, it was a brilliant, sparkling day, the atmosphere was full of ozone and ablaze with sunshine.

We started the day by oversleeping and got into a panic lest our car arrive ere we had our face washed and shining. Fortune smiled upon us, however, and just in the midst of our haste the telephone bell rang and a very apologetic voice announced that OUR CHAUFFER had overslept and was afraid HE would be fifteen minutes late.

Though grateful for the respite we did not lose our poise but replied the delay would be overlooked provided we reached the church in time for the early service. The voice promised he would not lose a minute —a promise we hoped he would not keep too literally.

However, a bad beginning often makes a good ending and we actually did arrive at the church in good time for the early service.

The Church, especially the Choir and Altar, looked lovely in the morning sun which shone gloriously through the great Rose Window and showered a riot of colors of red and gold and blue and amber and green upon the Easter lillied Chancel. It was the sort of beauty that makes one almost stop breathing through sheer delight.

The Choirs, both Senior and Junior, rendered the musical portion of the service with more than their usual efficiency. We join the scores of St. John's worshippers in congratulating the choir collectively and as individuals for the beauty and power of the singing. It is a wonderful privilege to praise God in melody! We are sure every member of the choir finds a real joy in their service, a service which God himself has made possible by so richly endowing them with tuneful voices and power of expression.

Both celebrations were well attended by the members of the parish. Many folk we had not seen for years were there. Some, who had never missed their Easter Communion were not there, however. It saddens us to know that they never will be there again. We miss them and are conscious of their vacant places. Nevertheless our temporary loss is their eternal gain. They are now certain of the truth of the Resurrection.

Then too, as we entered into the beautiful service of the day we were conscious of our sick and shut-in brothers and sisters. As we listened to the Easter anthems we were wishing they were there to hear them, too. And we were conscious of a warm little spot in our hearts as we thought of all those tall potted Easter lilies and lovely white hyacinths we were going to distribute among them later. As usual, the big congregations crowded the Altar to receive their Easter Communion. As one witnesses this Easter scene in old St. John's, one wonders why so many thought the cause of Jesus Christ was dead in South Philadelphia 25 years ago.

The afternoon Easter Service for the Church School and the parents and friends of the scholars is always a big event in St. John's Parish. Larger and wealthier parishes may present bigger Lenten Offerings but not one of them had to fight and scheme and sacrifice and work harder to put over their program for missions than did the members of our school. To us it was a real effort and tug-o-war. And we were not at all certain that we had attained the goal until the Committee ended their count of the class proceeds.

We have the same experience every year. During the Lenten season we are busy every minute building up our apportionment. When Easter comes we are filled with hope and fear of the results and, so far, our hopes have always been fulfilled and our fears allayed. We are happy to state that our S. S. L. O. amounted to $1081.43. There are yet receipts from three entertainments to be added to that figure. Our hope is that it will reach at least $1200.00. This is a possibility if the mite chests and receipts for candy eggs still missing should be returned.

We thought we had provided an ample number of chocolate eggs for the scholars of the school only to find that three large classes were left out. However, they got theirs a week later. So that was that.

Everybody was satisfied with the prizes for regular attendance at Lenten services. The little travel rolls equipped for sewing were specially popular with the ladies. And the fire fly lamps were also most acceptable because of their usefulness.

Everybody got a beautiful Easter Card to remind him of the meaning and the hope of the day. Also, just before closing we distributed all the potted plants and cut flowers among the members of the school who volunteered to deliver them to the homes of our aged, sick and shut-ins; so that they, too, might realize the glory of the Resurrection and its promise to every Son of God.

No, we did not have an evening service. We had begun the day at 4.30 A. M. and we reached our home at 6 P. M. The intervening hours had been hurried, hot and hectic and when we were through we were absolutely through.

Yet, not one of us would have consciously missed the excitement and joy of it all as we ended our Easter Day singing lustily

"PRAISE GOD FROM WHOM ALL BLESSINGS FLOW"

THE MODERN STORY OF THE WIDOW'S MITE

"She of her want did cast in all that she had, even all her living." S. Mark 12:44.

We have always from our youth up read that story of the poor widow with flushed cheeks and fast beating heart. And we are glad Jesus noticed the widow's contribution. Apparently nobody else did. Maybe the dear widow felt a little ashamed of her modest contribution and tried to hide what she was doing; yet it wasn't so little, as Jesus estimated it, after all; for she gave ALL she had. Nobody else gave ALL they had; so no one, after giving, was as poor as the poor widow; because they still had something left.

Now if you will just come with me down this street you will witness a modern version of the Widow's Mite. No, it is not a very nice street, and if you will open this sagging, old, wooden gate, and follow me up this narrow little side alley, we will come to a little backyard. Now let us knock at the door and see what happens.

"COME IN!!!"

Well, that is a cheerful voice to say the least and so long as we are assured of such a warm welcome we can hardly loiter out here in this cramped little space.

Ah! here we are! and there they are!! The dearest, finest couple in South Philadelphia. Aged, to be sure. Yes, practically shut-in, too. And just as poor as poor can be. Never able to leave this poor, little, dark room which must be frightfully hot in summer. Having no means of support save an insufficient pension, scarcely enough to keep body and soul together.

And these two delightful aged, poor and debilitated people, this man and wife, in love with each other, and loving God, sitting here in woeful poverty, can still smile and give and give and smile.

They are members of St. John's and good, true members, too. They never get to church, 'tis true. They never see its beautiful windows. They never hear the beautiful organ or hear the wonderful singing of the choir. They never see the lovely flowers on the Altar. They never more will kneel before the Altar to receive the blessed Sacraments. No, their life is confined within these four walls with this poor but spotlessly clean furniture. Yet so thankful to God are they that neither dreams of their poor condition. And to show that they REALLY DO love God, they take from their little pension a mite for THIS Easter envelope and a mite for THAT Easter envelope. Then they say to each other—don't you think we ought to provide for the future and see that GOD GETS HIS PORTION should anything happen to us? They quickly agree, this provision must be made at once; so out come those two packages of church envelopes, one package for him and one package for her, and in goes a mite in each until they have put something in every one of them up to August 1, 1937. Then having PROVIDED FOR GOD'S PORTION so far in advance they feel safe in planning how they can best spend the remainder on their needs.

Did we hear you indignantly exclaim that it was cruel to send the dear souls those Easter envelopes and, yes, it was positively criminal to worry them with those two packages of church envelopes, knowing so well how wretchedly poor they are?

Dear me! You are not half so indignant as were they when we pretended we forgot to make out and address those packages of church envelopes and those two Easter Envelopes for them. We just did what they told us we MUST do. That's all!

Oh, so you think they are just two old sentimentalists, do you? Well, that's not what Jesus said about that other poor sentimentalist who gave to God "all her living."

Anyhow you don't know what you are talking about. They are happy in making their sacrifice and we seriously doubt if YOU and YOU and YOU will EVER get as much joy out of what you have left, after giving to God, as they do out of the next to nothing they retain?

HEREAFTER GOD SHALL GET HIS PORTION FIRST FROM US.

THE UNITED CAMPAIGN

We have received a communication from the Campaign Chairman of the UNITED CAMPAIGN asking us to help the cause by referring to it in our periodical. This issue will be a little late to do much good but we do want to give you a general idea of its purpose and scope and how YOU may help the cause.

First. 141 humanitarian agencies against disease, destitution and delinquency, rely upon its receipts for their maintenance.

Second. 115 of these agencies are members of the Community Fund of Philadelphia and vicinity.

Third. All are united in a great social program to relieve the aged, sick, shut-in, needy and delinquent in their struggle against adverse circumstances.

Fourth. 500,000 of our needy were relieved in 1936.

Fifth. Regardless of criticisms of certain mean and miserly citizens as to the inefficiency and extravagance of the system it does do wonders to relieve a serious situation.

Sixth. There is no conflict between the United Campaign and the Government Social Service Program. The one co-operates with the other and augments the efficiency of each.

STATISTICS

In 1936 the placing agencies found foster homes for 3060 abandoned or neglected children. 1644 boys and girls received shelter and care in our local institutions for children. 15,677 delinquent, abnormal and abused boys and girls were steered into paths of usefulness and right living through preventive agencies supported by the United Campaign. 2819 convalescent men, women and children were nursed back to health through its eight convalescent homes. 843 incurables, victims of Cancer, Tuberculosis and Epilepsy, have received care in its four sanitoria for the treatment of such diseases. Thousands of dollars of the Campaign funds were used in visiting nurse work among the poor of Philadelphia. 42,789 patients received medical treatment and advice in the local clinics supported by the campaign funds. By means of the Campaign Fund support three Health Promotion Services are active in teaching the ignorant of the menace of insanitary conditions of alleys, homes, etc. 22,903 children were enrolled in the local neighborhood centers which are partly supported by the Campaign Fund. 11 recreation and educational centers—the communities answer to the "gang" menace—receive support from the Fund. This is reducing the number of young recruits in crime. $80,130 of the United Campaign Funds went towards the support of the local Boy and Girl Scout movements. $171,856 was contributed to the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., of Philadelphia and Germantown; also to the Y. M. and Y. W. H. A. of Philadelphia. Several hundred aged and blind men and women are provided permanent homes partly supported by the U. C. F. 155,000 homeless men were temporarily aided by this Fund.

This is a brief summary of the important social service work that is being accomplished by the United Campaign Fund. If everybody will contribute according to his means, be those means ever so small, this Fund can accomplish miracles of mercy and permanent improvement to our community.

THE LENTEN THANK OFFERING LIST

The Lenten Thank Offering list is different from all our other lists in one important particular. It is composed of the names of members of the Parish who, urged by the sense of their obligations to God for the many unsolicted blessings bestowed upon, took one of these offering boxes, without solicitation or influence of any sort whatsoever and, from time to time, dropped into it a small coin as their expression of Thanksgiving.

We get a lot of satisfaction out of publishing this list. We hope the day will come when all of our names will be in this most Distinguished List.

There are others, whose names ought to be found here, for they asked for and received Thank Offering Boxes but have not returned them. We are sure they will be brought in eventually and the names of the offerers will appear in a later edition of the BROADCASTER.

We are pleased to report that two persons in the Parish have asked for new boxes to be used immediately for their offering next Easter. If there are any more such Christians in our Parish the Rector will be delighted to give them a box without further delay.

The contents of our Thank Offering materially aided our Sunday School Lenten Offering of 1937.

We are proud to present to the Parish our DISTINGUISHED LIST OF VOLUNTARY THANKSGIVERS:

THANK OFFERING BOXES

PUSHED THE WRONG BUTTON

And Thereby Hangs a Tale

One of our District Superintendents was engaged in his usual round of visits to the church families under his charge. He knows his district as he knows the palm of his hand. But then he is like all of us—sometimes he falls a'dreaming on his feet and is thinking of a thousand other things besides the job in hand. In this state of absentmindedness he walked up the steps of the home of Mrs. R., as he supposed; and was just a little flustered when the door opened and a strange face appeared. Thinking that possibly Mrs. R. had company he asked whether Mrs. R. was at home. The stranger replied she did not live at that house, but next door. Our D. S. flushed with confusion and began to apologize to the good woman for disturbing her.

"Oh, but that is all right," said she. "If there is any message you would like to leave for her I shall be glad to deliver it; for Mrs. R. is out just now."

"No," said our genial D. S. "I had a message for her from St. John's Church and I can stop around some other time."

"Did you say you are from St. John's Church?" asked the neighbor.

"Yes," replied our D. S., "this district is in my charge and I am on my rounds to visit my families."

"Please come in," said the neighbor, "I've heard a great deal of St. John's Church. We don't belong to any church ourselves."

Our D. S., as we have stated is a genial and sociable fellow and did not hesitate to accept the invitation. He went into the house and spent a most pleasant half hour getting acquainted with this family he had so absentmindedly met. He told his new friends that he felt everybody ought to be attached to a church of some denomination. They agreed with him.

Well, one thing led to another in the conversation until when the time for his departure arrived he had the names of both Mr. and Mrs. G. F. as candidates for our 25TH ANNIVERSARY CONFIRMATION CLASS.

It is fun to analyze such a situation as this. For instance; Mrs. R. was totally unaware of the proposed visit of her District Superintendent and went out on an errand. Then our D. S. had no idea of the existence of Mr. and Mrs. G. F., before he pushed the wrong button. And Mr. and Mrs. G. F. had never thought to meet our D. S. before the door bell rang. Neither did they dream that when they opened their front door they were to admit somebody they had never seen to whom they were about to give their names for Confirmation. Up to that time they had never given serious thought of their spiritual affairs.

A curious chain of circumstances started by ringing the wrong door bell! Yet, was it so curious after all? May it not have been that the Holy Spirit was the God in the machine of events? Perhaps God meant our D. S. to be absentminded that day and push the wrong button.

WHO KNOWS!

PARISHIONERS WHO CONTRIBUTED TOWARDS THE CURRENT EXPENSES OF THE PARISH THROUGH THE EASTER OFFERING ENVELOPES

We take pleasure in printing this list of parishioners because it represents in the main the bone and sinew of the parish. In other words those upon whom the parish can depend for its support. There are missing from it names of certain parishioners who are dependable, too, but who have been prevented through sickness or some other unfortunate circumstance to give their usual support to the parish at this time. But we are sure to receive their offering later.

When every confirmed member of the parish reaches that point in his spirit consciousness where he or she knows and acknowledges their duty of sacrifice and offering to God this list will grow three hundred per cent.

There is a distressingly large number of our parishioners who have mis-read Acts 20:35 and still think it is more blessed to receive than to give.

If anybody in the parish happens to find a stray Easter Offering Envelope anywhere about the house we hope they will pick it up, fill it up and bring it up to the church next time they come this way.

"IN-AS-MUCH AS YE DID IT"

Here Is a Beautiful Local Illustration of Christian Service

The whole Parish was upset when "Mary" showed signs of failing health. The Rector came down early one Sunday morning so as to pay a personal visit to her before service. He found her in such a physical state that he instantly went to the church, picked up the 'phone, called George Seeds and explained Mary's case to him. He asked George if he could do anything towards getting her in the P. G. H. George thought he could, and did. In the meantime, Mary had nothing to eat for a long time. She was too weak to get up to draw even so much as a drink of water. The rector was seriously thinking of "cutting" morning service and preparing a breakfast for her himself. He could have done it, too. Then someone made the suggestion they were sure Mrs. M., another member of St. John's who lives near Mary, would be glad to cook the breakfast and look after Mary until the ambulance came. We got in touch with Mrs. M., and told her our predicament. She is not a demonstrative woman but she knows when a job is facing her and how she can do that job. Without a word she went over to Mary's home, walked in, put on the coffee pot, started the breakfast, then took Mary in hand, washed and freshened her up; made up her bed, fed her and had her ready to go when the ambulance came.

And that was that.

Then everything went haywire. For some crazy reason we have never yet had explained the P. G. H. authorities, without any notification to us, ordered her discharged and returned home. It was a cruel thing to do. Mary was just as ill when they discharged her as she was when admitted. We received a lot of smooth, soothing platitudes from the social service department of the P. G. H., as to why it was necessary to discharge Mary, the theme song being "we need her bed." Well, maybe they did but THEY DIDN'T NEED IT ONE HALF AS MUCH AS MARY DID.

They agreed that Mary was not physically fit to care for herself but they "were sure she could be boarded in some other family who would look after her." Just another little drop of banana oil to slip Mary out of the hospital into her humble little home where she was helpless and would have died of starvation and neglect had not the wholesome personality of Mrs. M. reappeared.

That happened months ago. Ever since Mary's return from the P. G. H., Mrs. M. has taken her under her big right arm and into her big warm heart. Every day she can be found with Mary. She prepares her meals, washes her clothes, makes her bed, tends her fire, bathes her regularly, combs her hair, runs her errands, sits beside her and cheers her up with her presence. She has not missed so much as one hour of her beautiful service to Mary all these months. She gets no compensation for her services, unless you consider the consciousness of doing to another what she would others would do unto her in like circumstances.

Mrs. M. is a very poor woman. She has had more than her share of heartbreaking suffering. Her battles with life have been sinister enough to harden her heart and turn against her kind. Yet, there she is, suffering need and sorrow herself, ministering as no other could minister to Mary, debilitated with age and broken in health.

Yes, Mary's best friend, next to God, is God's servant, Mrs. M.

God bless you and keep you. Your service to Mary is a lesson to us. We need all such as you, dear Mrs. M., in our parish to teach us the lesson of the

GOLDEN RULE

FLOWERS

A Beautiful Way To Express a Worthy Sentiment

There are times when only flowers seem to have the power to properly express the emotions of the heart. Such occasions are the birthdays of our friends and loved ones; when sickness has overtaken somebody we know; on certain festive occasions, and in the hour of death.

These are when God's beautiful, fragrant messengers divert our minds and fill our hearts with glowing thanksgiving for their whisper of joy, of comfort and of the ever present love of the Heavenly Father.

Nothing can possibly take the place of flowers at such times. They have their own beautiful way of expressing for us just what we feel. Even words cannot speak their language.

For this reason, we have often wished our former custom of placing flowers on the ALTAR OF CHRIST for our beloved had been continued. How much better it would be to always observe the anniversary of the departure of father, mother, children or friend, who have gone to that bourne whence no one returns, by either sending the money for a memorial bouquet or else a bouquet of flowers to be placed on the Altar the Sunday nearest the Anniversary of the departure of our beloved.

We shall be most happy to arrange our calendar to meet your desires and see that your memorial flowers are on the Altar the Sunday you designate.

Our florist will furnish you with a beautiful bouquet as reasonable as $1.50 or for as much more as you wish to pay.

How much better it is to put your memorial flowers where they can be seen and enjoyed to the Glory of God than to place them in a lonely cemetery where no one can see them. After they have proclaimed the joyous Resurrection to the worshippers in the Temple of God, THEN they could be placed later upon the grave of our loved one. Thus they will serve a double purpose of first drawing the attention of the living to those who have fallen asleep and second, in serving as a tribute to their memory as we leave them on that sacred spot in God's acre.

If you will consult us as to your wishes in this matter we can arrange to put the name and anniversary date of your beloved on our card index and each year send you a little request asking you whether it is convenient to observe the anniversary in the usual way; and you can then express your wishes in the matter, which will be carried out to your satisfaction.

WHAT IS YOUR WISH IN THIS IMPORTANT MATTER?

WANTED!
100 MEN AND WOMEN, BOYS AND GIRLS
FOR OUR 25TH CONFIRMATION CLASS

* * * *

"Since we moved to the country," said the hostess, "we raise everything we eat." "We keep our own cow."

"Well," said the son of a guest, "Somebody sure did sting you with a very sour cow."

* * * *

How we can raise the biggest Confirmation Class in the history of old St. John's. Every Sunday School Class, headed by its teacher, make a drive for new scholars. The Senior and Junior Daughters of the King make missionary trips through the parish. The Brotherhood of St. Andrew start their annual drive for boys and men. The Women's Auxiliary plan a visiting campaign to all unchurched women and girls. Everybody turn missionary and talk and talk and talk about old St. John's, our 25th Anniversary, our prospective big Confirmation Class and the big time we are contemplating. And invite everybody to TURN OUT AND JOIN US.

* * * *

BEGINNING SUNDAY EVENING APRIL 18TH WE ARE GOING TO ISSUE PUNCH CARDS (SAME AS DURING LENT) TO EVERY MAN AND WOMAN, BOY AND GIRL, WHO ATTEND SUNDAY EVENING SERVICE AND BRINGS A COMPANION WITH THEM. ONE PUNCH FOR THE PERSON HIMSELF AND ONE PUNCH EXTRA FOR EVERY PERSON HE OR SHE BRINGS WITH THEM. VALUABLE REWARDS WILL BE DISTRIBUTED ON OUR 25TH ANNIVERSARY.

WE WANT TO START OUR SUNDAY EVENING CONFIRMATION LECTURES ON THAT NIGHT.

TWO PROVERBS

Both Seem To Be Wise Sayings; Yet They Seem To Pull In Opposite Directions

Who has not heard that old "saw" PENNY WISE, POUND FOOLISH?

Of course, it referred to pinch penny tendencies of miserly inclined people who, rather than loosen their clutch on the penny in hand, would sacrifice a needed improvement which neglect would mean greater expense to repair in the end; or would let slip an opportunity to make a wise and profitable investment for the same reason.

We naturally approve the sense of the proverb, for only the most stupid fail to realize that a "STITCH IN TIME, SAVES NINE." Also, "NOTHING VENTURED, NOTHING GAINED." The handling of money right means the exercise of both wisdom and prudence. There are times when MONEY MUST BE SPENT. Only the timely outlay of funds will prevent disaster or the necessity of bigger expenditure due to neglect. In short it is not always good policy to be "Penny wise" lest you are "Pound foolish."

On the other hand there is another Proverb, equally profound and stuffed with common sense. It is as follows: "TAKE CARE OF THE PENNIES AND THE DOLLARS WILL TAKE CARE OF THEMSELVES."

Now that DOES seem to contradict our first wise saying at first glance, does it not? Yet it is not so; for whereas the first has to do with MISERLINESS this has to do with EXTRAVAGANCE. Everybody knows that the way to get a dollar is to save 100 cents. And the way to get a thousand dollars is to pile up 100 cents a thousand times. Or better yet, invest your few dollars in some sound, business venture and let your dollars start working for you. Yes, all you need do is to TAKE CARE OF THE PENNIES.

Let us illustrate what we mean.

Several years ago we had a mortgage of $3333.33 on old St. John's Church. We were very poor and did not know how to raise the interest on that mortgage. It had been on the church so long that the parish had already paid the full amount of the principal in interest and still the principal remained unpaid. A certain old lady, who was a caretaker for a certain office building on Walnut Street, and lived in janitor's quarters in the basement, who was an earnest member of St. John's Parish, had a bright idea one day and suggested that each of us pay ONE CENT A DAY towards reducing the PRINCIPAL of the mortgage. When the mortgage was paid in full there would be no further need to raise funds for the interest. The thought struck us as being pretty sound. We started the plan of paying a-cent-a-day into a separate fund for reducing the mortgage. Eventually we paid the mortgage in full. But, even after disposing of that bugbear, some of us just kept on giving a-cent-a-day which sum has and is helping to pay off the mortgage on our Parish House, which was $10,000.00 and now is about $500.00.

THAT SHOWS THE POWER OF THE CENT.

If EVERY communicant of the parish had cooperated and contributed a-cent-a-day from the beginning we would have every debt of the parish paid and have a comfortable little "nest egg" for future contingencies.

What St. John's Parish needs is first to pay off the Parish House Mortgage and then lay the foundation of a trust fund of $50,000.00—the interest of which to be used for current expenses. Then if anything untoward should happen and cause our offerings to sag, we would be assured of a fixed income that could not be disturbed but would be paid in perpetuity towards the support of the church so that it would never be closed.

To do this, YOU; yes YOU, must pay more attention to the "85 CLUB" POCKET OF YOUR WEEKLY CHURCH OFFERING ENVELOPE. The more parishioners put a cent-a-day in that pocket, the faster will our dollars grow. For instance, we have issued 400 packages of weekly church offering envelopes to our parishioners. Now suppose each communicant owning a package should put in one cent each day or seven cents a week, what would it amount to in a year? Here's how it works:

1 cent × 400 parishioners — $4.00 per day.
$4.00 × 365 days — $1,460.00 per year.

And that $1460.00 invested in good, solid securities bearing a safe interest will grow by leaps and bounds.

NOW WILL YOU JOIN THE 85 CLUB AND PUT YOUR CENT IN EVERY DAY?

And remember: If you take care of the pennies, the dollars will take care of themselves and you!

WHERE IS YOUR TREASURE?

There Is Your Heart and Your Ambition

Are you as interested in the affairs of the Church and Parish as you used to be?

Did you say—Yes?

Did you say—No?

Whatever your answer we can give the reason for it.

If you answer "Yes" then you are still doing something for your church. You are discussing it with your friends; you are keeping up the habit of attending regularly the means of Grace it affords you; you are supporting it with your offerings; you see something it needs and you provide that need. It may not be much, but even a little contribution keeps your interest awake and your spirit on the alert.

A few weeks ago a certain nice person was arranging to replace some of the vestment ties for the Junior Choir. The attention of a certain other interested person was attracted to this kindly act. He joined in by providing enough funds for enough ribbon to make new ties for ALL the choir. This same couple saved the church the expense of providing Easter lilies for the Altar for Easter Day too. Such acts of personal interest are bound to knit one's heart to any church or parish. Just as Jesus Christ said, "Where your treasure is there will your heart be also." And the reverse is just as true; where your heart is there is your treasure.

If your answer is "No" then the opposite of what we have observed in the previous paragraph is true. Your interest has waned, not because the church has changed but because YOU have changed. It is not because you have grown wise to the weakness of the church and its claims on you; but rather you have allowed other and worldly matters to wedge in between you and your faith and you are being forced farther and farther apart by things inimical to the growth of faith. You have ceased, or almost ceased, to talk about your Church, except to express an impatient criticism of its people or worship or something else just as vague—not realizing that all the time YOU and not the church are different. You no longer attend its services regularly. You no longer receive with awe and love the blessed Sacrament. You no longer give of yours for its support. You no longer think of speaking to somebody, not of the christian faith, concerning their soul's salvation.

NOW WHAT CAUSED THAT CHANGE?

Well, perhaps it was some external influence or appeal. There came a time when you had to decide between a Christian duty or a personal desire. And you wanted so much to gratify that personal desire that just for once you let your grip slip and yielded. After that it became a habit to neglect your spiritual duties and favor the appeals of the senses. Now you are no longer interested in the church because you have become all but totally absorbed in material things and physical pleasures. The satisfaction of the pleasurable desires of this world is your guiding star—or your firefly beckoning you on to the bogs of unbelief and unhappiness. Again, where your treasure is there will your heart be also.

Now in this last situation, if it is yours, do you get out of your changed way of thinking, acting, living; out of the new friendships you have formed, the same keen, alert, breathless enjoyment as in the days when you were all God's? If you do then why those hard lines, those thin lips, that false light in the eyes? Your face is hard and cruel; your manner is not so gracious as it used to be; the sneer is too near the surface of your smile; YOUR SOPHISTICATION IS TOO APPARENT. You are just a little lacking in personal, inner soulful beauty—every feature of you is still familiar yet so unfamiliar. YOUR PERSONALITY IS DYING. IT ALWAYS DOES WHEN YOU ARE NO LONGER INTERESTED IN GOD. No power can save your soul from disintegration; for your spirit is your spirit and can subsist only upon spiritual things. It will surely die if you try to feed it with the husks of worldliness.

EVERYBODY READS THEM

What Magazines or Periodical Do You Read?

Every one who has a Church Home, should be greatly interested in its financial welfare.

There are usually certain obligations, as well as current expenses, which must be taken care of and most of us gladly do our part in seeing these obligations are paid.

Collections and various amounts turned in by the different organizations within the Church go toward keeping these paid, but after all, this is your PERSONAL contribution to the Church.

Now suppose we could work a plan whereby the Church could earn several hundred dollars yearly, putting no additional financial burden on anyone, wouldn't that be well worth while?

Well, we can do just that, WITH YOUR HELP, and this is how it will work:

Every home has one or more of the popular magazines, and naturally, whoever sells it to you gets a good commission for their trouble.

This Church has arranged to accept subscriptions to most of these magazines, and when you subscribe to, or renew your magazines, if you will send the order to this church, the church will be paid the agency commission, which will make it better for all, as it is less trouble to you, and you are helping the church at the same time. Give your order to your District Superintendent.

IN NO CASE DO YOU PAY MORE THIS WAY THAN YOU DO OTHERWISE, but in many cases you actually get your magazines considerably cheaper than you have been.

WILL YOU HELP MAKE THIS PLAN THE SUCCESS IT SHOULD BE?

Accompanying this letter is a list of the different magazines, together with their prices.

Select any magazine on this list, either as a new subscription or a renewal and send it into the Church, with your name and address and the magazine you have selected, written in the spaces provided on the magazine list.

Thank you.

Cordially your Rector,

H. CRESSON McHENRY.

DUPLICATE CERTIFICATES

It apparently takes constant advertising to put across an idea. A month ago we wrote a long article stating why Duplicate Certificates for Christenings, Confirmations and Weddings were a nuisance. We said it entailed long and laborious search of records; it consumed much of our valuable time; and it cost considerable in stationery, certificates and stamps.

Some folks no doubt feel we are making a mountain out of a mole hill just to have an excuse of charging ONE DOLLAR for service; said dollar deposited to the credit of St. John's Cradle Roll. Yes, and it is surprising how a mole hill can grow into a mountain sometimes. Some weeks we are flooded with requests for DUPLICATE CERTIFICATES for employment, for old age pensions, for identification, for passports, etc., etc., etc.

We really are good natured but our good nature has been imposed upon so much in this matter that we are going to lose our temper some time soon. Please, befor applying to us for a DUPLICATE CERTIFICATE open up that long shut and dusty Bible and see if several years ago you didn't stick it in between the leaves for safe keeping, knowing that nobody would think of disturbing it in such a dusty hide spot. If you don't find it there, then be sure you send a dollar with your request for a duplicate. Our babies on the Cradle Roll are always needing more supplies and they will thank you for your carelessness,—but they are the only ones who will!

Consider the Church As International

Certainly, the Church is international and interracial. Its flag rises above the flag of every nation. It offers the world the one and only hope for universal brotherhood.

The missionary program of the Church is the one convincing demonstration of this world-embracing partnership, and the Church's program demands that we realize it within our own borders. Parochialism defeats it; so does diocesanism. Parochialism means ultimate suicide for the parish; diocesanism dries up the very springs which it seeks to monopolize. We want honest partnership in this Church. At the heart of our whole problem lies the dishonesty of those who call themselves churchmen and will not do their part.

There are thousands and tens of thousands of the faithful who by their prayers, by their gifts, by their vision, by their service are holding the line; for these we thank God; but there is an equal number of nominal communicants who, enjoying the benefits of the partnership, are not sharing its responsibilities. And these are crippling the work of the Church, staying its advance, shackling the body of Christ, denying their discipleship, letting and hindering the coming of the Kingdom.

Over against this we set a discipleship that must be interpreted in terms of a militant service. It must dare to make its firm stand against evils that threaten the very security of State and Church. To dwell in cloistered security is not enough. Neutrality is the resort of cowardice. Our Christian faith does not divorce us from our obligations as citizens of the State or members of society. Our discipleship relates us to the just and Christian solution of economic, social and political problems. (Nothing that is of human interest can be foreign to us.)

WE WENDERS

Oh, give me the man who is rich in cheer,
And give me the heart made bright,
For one is free and one re-born,
And both are a gladsome sight.

The morbid man, nor the man of moods,
Are not of the ilk I crave,
And the one who sees but the faults in men
Sits not on my crested wave.
The man who cries of the stings he's felt,
And the cringer's haunting fear,
I'm loath to hold; while the grumbler's word
Falls dead on a deafened ear.

The "might have been" and the "meant to be,"
And the man whose life's endowed
With a cynic's views, will find no place
Apart from the motley crowd.
Oh, I can't despise, but I fain would hope
That all whom I meet shall see
Where the path we wend is so rough or smooth
As our own equanimity.

So give me the man who is rich in cheer,
And give me the heart made warm,
That the three of us, on the road of life
May go down it arm in arm.

JOS. R. CUSHING.

LET'S GO EVANGELISTIC

Do not be deaf, dumb and blind all your life!

News Item:—Railroads, seashore and country resorts, report an amazing increase in week end business. Trains, trolleys and busses are crowded with pleasure seekers; hotels and boarding houses are overflowing with transients.

News Item:—Delaware River and Tacony toll bridges report week end traffic so great that in spite of their up-to-date methods of managing automobile traveling, Sunday night traffic jams are so tight that it takes hours to move the lines of cars. Many persons prefer to remain at their hotels 'till early Monday morning rather than risk the Sunday night congestion at the bridges.

News Item:—Church and Sunday School attendance is decreasing alarmingly. Reports of confirmations and church membership show an amazing shrinkage in numbers.

News Item:—The "Spot Light" announced on the air a few nights ago that the population of our penal institutions and communities is increasing appallingly. Crime is costing this country the astounding sum of $475.00 per SECOND.

Let's figure out the cost of crime for one day on that basis:

Crime cost to the nation per second	$475.00
Crime cost to the nation per minute	$28,500.00
Crime cost to the nation per hour	$1,710,000.00
Crime cost to the nation per day	$34,200,000.00

Multiply the day's cost of crime by 365 days and you will get the annual crime bill of our nation. We are not used to multiplying in such big numbers.

And the poor dumb tax payer as usual foots the bill. He is always shouting to high heaven in protest against increased taxes, yet he does nothing to correct its cause. Worse than that he joins the week end pleasure seekers who is too worn out to stay at home on God's holy day of rest and spend quiet hours with Him in contemplation and praise as did the saints and prophets, and gets out his car drives miles and miles through Sunday traffic and having reached the distant goal of pleasure to spend an hectic day in perpetual motion 'till time to return. Then back over the miles of road towards home weary and irritable and unfit for Monday's job. Not much rested physically and much less refreshed spiritually.

Yes, you say, but what is the connection between your three news items and the radio message of the "Spot Light?" The connection is this; you cannot go to hotels and resorts on Sunday and spend a day with God in His Temple at the same time. If you do neglect God and by example teach your son and daughter to ignore Him, God and you will soon be strangers. And if strangers to God then easy victims of evil.

One significant fact about crime we have not mentioned—it is this: About 76 per cent. of the boys and girls of the nation who are in reform schools and houses of detention seldom if ever went to Sunday School. And almost the same high per cent. of adult inmates never were active members and only incidental attenders of church service. Since so many churches have given up their evening services, night clubs of the most vicious type have sprung up on every side and hundreds of our former church members can be found in them "enjoying the wild life." Thus we tie up our contempt for God with the crime of the nation.

And the tax payer, poor fool, pays!

VERILY, OUR NATION'S WEEK END IS OUR NATION'S WEAK END.

MARY CORSON

"I want to live until my eighty-eighth birthday then I am ready to go." Thus spoke Mary a month before her death when she as well as we knew that her days were numbered. That month was a never to be forgotten month to us. Day to day we watched Mary and could not believe it possible that she would live through the night. She became utterly helpless. She could scarcely articulate or move. Yet, every morning found Mary still with us. Saturday, May 1st, Mary's birthday came at last. We knew that though her wish had been granted she would certainly die before the morning light. At 3 A. M. her spirit took its flight and Mary had left us.

We can still recall that Sunday night Mary first came to church, twenty one years ago. We were standing in the pulpit, the church was singing that ever heart warming hymn—"Nearer, My God, to thee." A form appeared at the door of the church. The form of a strange woman. As she advanced up the aisle she too was singing. We had reason to remember the coming of Mary that night. It was a great event in her life. It was a great event in the parish of St. John.

Mary did not attend services regularly at first. Other things absorbed her. Gradually her visits became more frequent. Folk of the Parish wondered at her for she was well known and nobody had ever seen her interested in church affairs before. However, her interest grew and grew. Her activity grew apace with her interest. She was received into the church, she joined the Woman's Bible Class, and was an active member of every women's organization of the Parish. Her special love was the Woman's Auxiliary. She never missed any means of Grace. Every Sunday morning, afternoon and evening Mary was in her place. And, generally, until her later years, she was sure to bring a neighbor with her. Especially Sunday evenings, when, she always declared, the rector preached his best sermon. Nevertheless, whatever her reason might have been for bringing her neighbors to church they would eventually get almost as interested as Mary and finally be confirmed. We never thought to keep a register of her candidates, but, we know they were many indeed. Her personality appealed to the young folk of the Parish. They were her friends and she was theirs.

Mary was not a child of luxury. She worked hard for a living. Every day, after business hours Mary went to her job scrubbing office floors for firms on Market and Chestnut Streets. She was a faithful as well as cheerful worker. Somehow that little Irish twinkle in her eye made you feel, here is a soul who is honest, true and wholesome. Her employers admired her. She was not just the scrub woman to them. She was their friend and, in a really helpful way, their quaint advisor. Their respect for her was serious and genuine. Two of them forgot the cares of business and took time out on the day of her burial to attend the service as their last tribute to a truly great woman.

She was generous to a fault towards her church. Her envelopes have always been paid up to the minute. Every Easter and Christmas she gave $5.00 to the offering. Every coal Sunday in the past her donation was never less than $5.00. We have before us now her Fireside Club due book and it is paid up for the year in advance. She never attended any of the women's church organizations but that she paid her dues. She was the prey of everybody selling tickets for entertainments, supper or bazaar, and many a dollar she gave up for things she could not attend herself, but gave the tickets away. She was always giving food and clothing to folks poorer, and in many cases, not so worthy as herself. When the church needed funds to wire the church for electric lighting Mary turned over a whole week's earnings, as scrubber of floors, as her donation to the fund. When the church needed a new roof she did likewise. When the church needed floor covering she did likewise. When we were compelled by the building inspectors to lay a new floor in the Sunday School room she did likewise. When we were notified by the city to re-set the curb and repair all around the church, a job which cost us $1,200.00, she did likewise. Every year her Sunday School Lenten Offering was among the largest. Indeed she seemed to go about looking for opportunities to spend her hard earned wages upon us. On one occasion we drew our fountain pen from our pocket to sign a paper. The pen wouldn't write because it was just worn out. In our impatience we expressed our opinion of it and used a pencil. A week later I received a beautiful fountain pen from one of the leading stationers with a card "from Mary." Of course she should not have done it but how was one to stop her?

When she come to die we looked over her affairs, she had made us her executor, and we found she had made ample provision for the expenses of her burial and payment of the few bills she left behind her. Yet, she had to work desperately hard for every dollar she earned.

As to her popularity in the Parish, it was shown in the tribute of her friends and neighbors on the day of her burial. Though a widow, without family or kin; poor in the world's goods, a scrubber of office floors, there passed before her open casket a long line of friends who truely loved the little old lady for her big heart and sympathetic smile. Though just an humble atom in society she inspired such love in the hearts of children that they left their school and their lessons, to join the few of the adult choir in singing Mary's favorite hymns over her. Jerry Rutter paid his personal tribute to her in singing her favorite solo for her, beside her still form. The unusual congregation joined in singing the grand old theme hymn of Mary's life as her body entered for the last time in the portals of old St. John's—"Nearer my God to thee, nearer to thee."

Yes, Mary has fallen asleep. Someone dear to us has passed out of our life. We feel her absence keenly and miss the sight of her kindly face; yet we are glad for Mary's sake. She needs work no more; she is with the one she loved most dearly. And we know, when she opens her eyes after her restful sleep in Him she will look up with that gentle smile of hers into the beautiful countenance of her Saviour and her voice, so long silent, will hum that theme hymn of Mary—"Nearer my God to thee, Nearer to thee."

THE ITINERANT

How's business, Eben?" The old man was washing at the sink after his day's work.

"Fine, Marthy, fine."

"Does the store look just the same? Land, how I'd like to be there again, with the sun shining in so bright! How does it look, Eben?"

"The store's never been just the same since you left, Marthy."

A faint flush came into Martha's cheeks. Is a wife ever too old to be moved by her husband's praise?

For years Eben and Martha had kept a tiny notion store, but one day Martha fell sick and was taken to the hospital. That was months ago. She was out now, but she would never be strong again—never more be partner in the happy little store.

"I can't help hankering for a sight of the store," thought Martha, one afternoon. "If I take it real careful, I think I can get down there. 'Tisn't so far."

It took a long time for her to drag herself downtown, but at last she stood at the head of the little street where the store was. All of a sudden she stopped. Not far from her on the pavement stood Eben. A tray hung from his neck. On the tray were arranged a few cards of collar buttons, some papers of pins, and several bundles of shoe laces. In a trembling voice he called his wares.

Martha leaned for support against the wall of a building near by. She looked over the way at the little store. Its windows were filled with fruit. Then she understood. The store had gone to pay her hospital expenses. She turned and hurried away as fast as her weak limbs would carry her. "It will hurt him so to have me find it out!" she thought, and the tears trickled down her face. "He's kept it a secret from me, and now I'll keep it a secret from him. He shan't ever know that I know."

That night, when Eben came home, chilled and weary, Martha asked cheerily the old question: "How's business, Eben?"

"Better'n ever, Marthy," was the cheery answer, and Martha prayed that God bless his sunshiny spirit.*

RESPONSIBILITY

What is it and how does it interest?

It is always well to begin the discussion of a subject by defining its title. It stimulates our intelligence and makes the discussion more interesting.

That being the case, let us begin this little article by asking ourselves just what do we mean by this word RESPONSIBILITY? And in order to be sure that we are right in our definition, let us turn the pages of our unabridged and seek for knowledge there. My dictionary informs me that RESPONSIBILITY means ability to respond, or to be accountable for. It is a moral state that makes imperative our right feelings and actions towards others and towards ourselves—revealing to us a line of duty we must follow.

There are several important and interesting illustrations of this Imperative:

There is, for instance, our RESPONSIBILITY TO THE STATE. No matter if we are but one in a community of millions, still we are that one. Our individual attitude and the individual attitude of the other millions of individuals is of utmost importance to the welfare of the State. Any thoughtless or dishonest legislation enacted by the State is due entirely to the failure of the individuals of the State to be actuated by a sense of Responsibility and thus to expose the welfare of the State to the sinister influence of greed and corruption with all they entail following along.

There is also our RESPONSIBILITY TO SOCIETY. Do you suppose for one instant it would be possible for the present unsavory and unclean condition to exist among the corrupt rich as well as the corrupt poor if WE were alive to our personal RESPONSIBILITY for permitting the existence of such unholy institutions as the night clubs, the road inns, the gambling dives, the houses of prostitution and the hundreds of other sinful and sinister institutions. Now don't get that cold contemptous expression on your face and say you fail to see any personal responsibility you have for such institutions of evil. If you do I will suspect that you are secretly in indiscretions yourself once in a while. And whether, you resent my attitude or not, I must state most emphatically that that is my responsibility; for I am my brother's keeper whether he brands me a busybody or not.

There is also your RESPONSIBILITY TO YOUR FAMILY. Every member of the family circle is accountable for the welfare, peace and happiness of every other member. It is your duty to contribute your share to the family exchecquer. It would be just too bad for many humans, members of families, were family life governed by the laws of the hive. There, ever so often, the bees have a house cleaning, when all the drones or loafers are executed for the economical welfare of the hive. Every member of the family has his particular and special duty. It is up to him to attend that duty; because more than simply his ease and inclination depends upon the performance of that duty. The peace and happiness depends upon open handed cooperation of every member of the family. If father ignores the family claim on the pay envelope he is not fit to be called the head of the house. If mother ignores maternal care of the children and they sicken and die of neglect, she is not a mother, she is just a plain irresponsible wretch. If the son or daughter denies the family claim of support and comfort they lack the sense of the high character of family ties, which is unworthy of them and sooner or later will manifest a condition of misfortune and sorrow to themselves and to the family of which they are a part.

And now we come to our RESPONSIBILITY TO THE CHURCH, Ah-ha! we cry, so that is what you have been leading up to all this time! By many and devious ways you bring us face to face to this old worn out, tiresome and altogether weary matter. And we will stop where we start by firmly stating we have absolutely no sense of Responsibility towards the church.

Well, we, on the other hand, are about to start where you want to stop. Of course you have no sense of Responsibility towards the church. If you had you would not act the way you do. What I want to know is why you lack this sense? You are pretty sensible in most other matters.

So!! Why do you say you cannot conceive how or to what purpose the church can in any way effect "me or mine."

There you are! you just said it! you do acknowledge then that you are IGNORANT of the big benefits of the church to you. Now let me tell you something! You are only one of a million who are just as ignorant. And what I want to do for you is to get you to get rid of the cobwebs and dust in your brains so that you can see your RESPONSIBILITY and be in a mental and spiritual condition which inspires all sons of God to rejoice in the higher and more glorious atmosphere of NEARNESS TO THE INFINITE and sense through every preceptive power within us the wonder and satisfaction and supreme happiness in the realization of our Responsibility to God, to our fellow man and to ourselves—for in that knowledge lies the road to perfectness and ultimate fulfullment of our destiny.

BE NOT IGNORANT MY BROTHER; BUT BE THOU UNDERSTANDING, IF THOU WOULDST FOLLOW THE ROUNDS OF ETERNITY WITH GOD.

A DAY OF SENTIMENT

It was a very old notion, alluded to by Shakespeare, that on the fourteenth of February birds begin to couple.

According to the old stories, Valentino, or Valentine, whose name is honored, was a handsome youth, who for religious reasons suffered martyrdom about A. D. 270. While awaiting execution, he made friends with the blind daughter of his jailer and sent her a message of farewell, signed, "from your Valentine."

In memory of Valentine, people began sending each other messages of friendship on the 14th of February, which is supposed to have been the date of his execution.

From the middle of the seventeenth century, England seized the day and made much of it, perhaps more than any other nation.

An old traveler writes: "On the 14th of February, it is customary in Hertfordshire, England, for the children of the town to meet together and go to the home of the principal man of the place, who from his window throws them wreaths and true lovers' knots. Then they choose the youngest boy among them, deck him more gaily than the rest, and march in state through the town, hailing him as 'Valentine.'"

During the courtly days of Chaucer, Raleigh, and Drake, the composition of the message was very formal and chivalrous.

Samuel Pepys noted in his famous diary in 1660: "My wife, hearing Mr. Morris' voice, came to challenge him for her Valentine."

In 1667, he again commented on the day: "This morning came up to my wife's bedside, little Will Mercer, to be her Valentine, and brought her name writ upon blue paper in gold letters, done by himself very pretty; and we were both well pleased by it."

During the Cromwellian revolt, in England, and the Puritan Era in America, the observation almost ceased, but after the storm-tossed days of revolution and colonization, it quickly revived.

The forerunner of the modern valentine is thought to have been cut-out and embossed notes made by the daughter of a stationer in Worchester, England.

Later, paper folded in all sorts of ways, and cut in intricate designs, was made into unusual valentines. They were then adorned with colored ink and verses written upon them. Paper cut-outs in the form of a spider's web, with a string in the center which could be pulled to show the hidden sentiment beneath, were made in the early part of the nineteenth century.

The shopkeepers soon realized that the valentine was to have a place in the lives of most young people, so they supplied sheets of paper with embossed edges. And some of the more enterprising of the shopkeepers issued books of verse from which suitable sentiments could be copied, if one did not happen to be a poet.

The loveliest valentines were probably made between 1840 and 1860. They were miracles of sheer, wispy lace, and the envelopes were often trimmed with gilt, or embossed on the edges. They were really beautiful.

Later came the comic types, which were usually printed on coarse paper. Many of them were thoroughly unattractive. Today's valentine is modern in spirit—often with a dash of humor that brings it up to date.

It is interesting to know that even the blind may benefit by their beauty and sentiment, for some kindly publisher has made valentines, with embossed birds and flowers, and sentiments written in Braille.*

THE PARENT AND THE CHILD

Parental Psychology is an interesting subject

Are you a parent?

We congratulate you. It is a most honorable estate. Regardless of all superficial cynicism, the power to reproduce man in our own image is to prove we are Sons of God.

Yet with parenthood comes responsibility.

God's greatest concern is for his children. We wonder if we would be putting it too strong were we to say that the welfare of his sons and daughters taxes even His infinite intelligence. At least it would seem so to us. For we are always conscious of his care for our every need.

That is really the ideal of every good parent—to be ever vigilant for the welfare of the child. Our child ought to be ever the object of our concern. We ought to be interested in everything that effects him either physically, spiritually or mentally.

Ordinarily we do keep his physical and mental developement before us. His diet, his exercise and his personal habits are always carefully supervised; because we are ambitious for him to grow strong and healthy in body as well as vigorous and alert in mind.

But where so many of us parents "miss fire" in our parental duties is as regards the child's spiritual growth and vigor. Physical health is most necessary in our eyes. We do not want our child to be weak and puny. He must have health to endure the physical tests. And are we proud when we view his sturdy frame, his hard muscles and his general physical alertness! That we are parents of such a fine offspring fills us with a very deep and abiding happiness.

We feel about the same in regards to his mentality. If our child shows ability to absorb knowledge. In other words, to stand well up to the front of his class. If he graduates with honors from his school or college we are too proud for words. We like to think he is mentally fit to cope with the problems of life. If in later life he chooses a profession, or a calling and wins laurels and fame we never tire of talking of his attainments and what a wonderful fellow is our child.

Now, such pride in our boy or girl is both natural and legitimate, especially after we had worked hard and scrapped together the necessary funds to pay his way through.

But, how about his Spiritual developement?

Ah, that's an altogether different matter. He must be strong physically and mentally to cope with life. But, well-er, the spiritual does not seem to be quite so important. If it is a question of taking time out on Sunday for grubbing a hard lesson for school or going to church which do you let the child choose?

If it is a matter of going to Sunday School Sunday afternoon or going on a picnic or to a movie, for "recreation" from a week of hard study, which do you advise?

If your child rebels against church attendance, Bible study, prayer or anything religious, what attitude do you assume towards him—One of discipline or one of indulgence?

And what is the basis of your attitude?

Wise parents know of course the incalcuable value of spiritual exercise. Foolish parents are blind to its importance and assume the off hand air that the child can go or stay away from Sunday School or church, just as he chooses.

What a terrible mistake for a parent to make!

This is the mistake that causes a million boys and girls to stumble into our reformatories and other institutions for criminals every year.

This is the mistake that is responsibile for the hundreds of youth suicides reported annually.

This is the mistake that is breaking young lives on the rocks of drunkenness, immorality and gambling.

This is the mistake that is forcing the nation (you and me) to pay a crime debt of fifteen billion dollars annually.

This is the mistake that is responsible for our child to scoff and say—"There is no God."

THE BOY PAINTER

A boy of seven wanted to become an artist. He did not have money enough to take lessons. In fact, he was so poor that he could not buy canvas or brushes with which to paint. But all of this did not keep him from painting. He had the will, and the way was found.

An Indian taught him how to mix color. He cut off hair from the tail of the family cat and made brushes. And the walls of his home served as canvas. Thus, were all the obstacles in his way overcome, at least to a degree.

His parents were Quakers. They did not want their son to become an artist. Their objections were later overcome, however, and the boy, aided by some friends, was able to get an art education.

He found that in all historical pictures the characters represented were clothed in Greek or Roman draperies, regardless of the period of history being portrayed. He thought this was all wrong. He felt that the people represented in historical pictures should be clothed in the dress peculiar to the period of history being portrayed. He resolved to paint a historical picture in which the characters would not be draped in the customary Greek or Roman manner, but clothed in the manner natural to the period being represented.

After his intention became known, and he had set to work on the picture, his friends became worried lest he lose some of his popularity. They tried to get him not to do such a rash thing. Characters had never been so represented before! It would never do. He and his painting would be ridiculed. Even the king tried to get him to reconsider. But he would not heed any of them, not even the king.

To the king, he replied: "The subject I have to represent is a great battle fought and won, and the same truth which gives law to the historian should rule the painter. If instead of the facts of the action I introduce fiction, how shall I be understood by the generations of the future? The classic dress is certainly picturesque but by using it I shall lose in sentiment what I gain in external grace. I want to mark the time, the place, and the people, and to do this I must abide by truth."

And so the picture was painted as planned. It marked the time, the place, and the people. The boy had had the courage of his convictions.

When the picture was finished, Sir Joshua Reynolds was asked to come to see it. Reynolds studied the picture for a while. Then, seizing the artist, he exclaimed: "You have conquered. The subject is treated as it ought to be treated. I forsee that the picture will not only become one of the most popular, but that it will occasion a revolution in art as well."

Benjamin West had dared to be different, and by so doing brought about a new era in the history of historical painting. For, since he painted this picture, practically all the great historical paintings and statues have represented characters clothed in the manner characteristic of the historical period being portrayed.

Thus did the boy, whose first art teacher was an Indian, whose first paint brushes were made of hair cut from the tail of the family cat, and whose first canvases were the walls of his home, come to exert an influence on art that is still felt in all civilized countries.

Surely, where there is a will and a definite goal, there is a way. Those who want things hard enough usually succeed in finding ways of getting them regardless of all obstacles.*

THAT INTERESTING WOMAN'S AUXILIARY MEETING

We had a most interesting meeting of our branch of the Woman's Auxiliary Monday evening, April 12th. The usual order was followed: First, the devotional service, followed by the reading of the minutes of our last meeting, the reading of a most interesting communication from the Woman's Auxiliary headquarters, the reports of our several committees and then the discussion of ways and means of raising money to be used, as a working fund of the Auxiliary. Mrs. Shives mentioned the embarrassment, members of the Committee felt when they attended the Departmental Conferences of the Auxiliary held at the Church House and calls for contributions towards the support missions or the beginning of a new work were made to the delegates the representatives of St. John's Parish were unable to respond because there are no funds to draw upon. This remark started a general discussion as to how a working fund might be raised to meet our delegates needs. And also to provide money for Christmas and Easter, contributions to the Parish. Among other practical suggestions was to ask Mrs. Gresh and Mrs. Patterson to make up a quantity of those fine percale aprons we sold at the Bazaar and have a BIG APRON SALE. This suggestion was unanimously adopted by the ladies and met with the enthusiastic approval of the Rector.

Another very important thing the ladies did was to settle once and for all the meeting night for the Auxiliary. Of late we have been meeting any old time it happened to occur to us. The result of course was reflected by the attendance. When we had a stated night on which to hold our meetings our attendance was fine, but when we got into the bad habit of jumping promisciously from one square of the calendar to another, like an erratic checker player, everybody got confused and never was certain whether the Auxiliary was or wasn't holding a meeting. On Monday, April 12th we settled the question definitely and hereafter the Woman's Auxiliary will be held on the FIRST MONDAY OF EVERY MONTH.

OUR NEXT MEETING WILL BE MONDAY, MAY 3rd, AT 8 P. M.

We would like to remind the ladies of the Parish that their W. A. Thank Offering Boxes are due that night also. Another subject discussed was the matter of inviting a speaker to make a short address at every other meeting of our W. A. Mrs. Pine was asked to invite a speaker for the May meeting. We are looking forward with pleasurable anticipation to our next meeting for we are going to have many things of interest to take up our time.

The Rector very plaintively, almost tearfully, reminded the ladies of the Parish on the Sunday previous to our W. A. meeting that for TWENTY-FIVE YEARS he has been telling the ladies of the Parish between the ages of 18 to 80 years that they were initiated into the great Church Woman's Auxiliary when they were confirmed by the Bishop. Then they were Junior members later they became Senior members and now what we want is for all our ladies, young, middle aged or elderly to become Active members.

Please try to assure your Rector that he will not have to talk for another twenty-five years before you will "get his drift," as it were.

EVERY CONFIRMED GIRL OR WOMAN OF THE CHURCH IS A PROSPECTIVE OR AN ACTUAL MEMBER OF THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY, AND AS SUCH HAS CERTAIN VERY IMPORTANT PRIVILEGES AND RESPONSIBILITIES SHE MUST PERSONALLY ACKNOWLEDGE.

THAT, DEAR SISTER PARISHONER, IS YOUR OBLIGATION

Since preparing the above the Woman's Auxiliary held its monthly meeting, May 3d and had a most interesting time. Mrs. Gresh brought the aprons we asked Mrs. Patterson and her to make. They were enthusiastically received and a number were sold right there at the meeting. The delegates made their reports and there was such a volumn of business to be disposed of that we were much later than usual in leaving. We had our regular hour of ice cream, cakes and fun and everybody went home feeling that the meeting was a success. The attendance was exceptionally fine.

We wish the women of the Parish would try to realize that the Auxiliary is their special organization and would bend their energies towards making it the big thing it ought to be.

BROADCASTING FROM STATION S. T. J. C.

The Opinion of the Judge

His Honor, Lewis L. Fawcett of the Supreme Court of New York stated: 4,000 boys under 21 yrs. of age were convicted before me (only one judge) of whom but 3 were members of a Sunday School. Also, this same judge stated: "Over 17,000,000 boys and girls are growing into manhood and womanhood without any religious training." Does your son or daughter belong to that mighty army of unattached?

Also, this same judge said: "The present wave of crime is due to the lack of religious training."

Here is the way it works: I come to you and urge you to send your children to Sunday School. You are not interested. Then later your son or daughter gets into trouble and are sent to a place of detention. Then you come to me and urge me to use my influence to get them free. If you take my advice and see that your boy and girl are in Sunday School Sunday afternoons very likely you won't be visiting them in jail later on.

LET US BE YOUR AGENT

What Magazines or Periodical Do You Read?

Every one who has a Church Home, should be greatly interested in its financial welfare.

There are usually certain obligations, as well as current expenses, which must be taken care of and most of us gladly do our part in seeing these obligations are paid.

Collections and various amounts turned in by the different organizations within the Church go toward keeping these paid, but after all, this is your PER-SONAL contribution to the Church.

Now suppose we could work a plan whereby the Church could earn several hundred dollars yearly, putting no additional financial burden on anyone, wouldn't that be well worth while?

Well, we can do just that, WITH YOUR HELP, and this is how it will work:

Every home has one or more of the popular magazines, and naturally, whoever sells it to you gets a good commission for their trouble.

This Church has arranged to accept subscriptions to most of these magazines, and when you subscribe to, or renew your magazines, if you will send the order to this church, the church will be paid the agency commission, which will make it better for all, as it is less trouble to you, and you are helping the church at the same time. Give your order to your District Superintendent.

IN NO CASE DO YOU PAY MORE THIS WAY THAN YOU DO OTHERWISE, but in many cases you actually get your magazines considerably cheaper than you have been.

WILL YOU HELP MAKE THIS PLAN THE SUCCESS IT SHOULD BE?

Accompanying this letter is a list of the different magazines, together with their prices.

ANNIVERSARY HYMN

in honor of the Thirteenth Rector of the Church of St. John the Evangelist

To our Rector well beloved
Honor we his service of love.
Many long years he labored true,
So faithful Pastor, honor be due.
Dear old St. John's his pride and joy,
May no ill fortune thee destroy.

Baptized, confirmed, prepared to commune,
Preaching God's love, the heart to atune,
Many long years he led the way
For the coming of God's great day.
He has been faithful to his charge,
His loving work Christ's Church enlarged.

God the Father, God the Son,
God the Spirit, Three in One
Bless and preserve him on his way
Guide and protect him day by day
And when at last his work is o'er
Safely reach the Heavenly Shore.

Tune: Faith of Our Fathers

THE TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY SERVICE

By
A. M. B.

True to form, Sunday, June 6th, dawned bright and warm, the hottest day of the summer; but the weather did not daunt the spirits of the members of the Church of St. John the Evangelist who came together in worship to observe in Corporate Communion the Twenty-fifth Anniversary of the Rev. H. Cresson McHenry as Rector. We have been a part of these anniversary services for many years,—we think for the whole twenty-five years; but never have we seen the service more uplifting.

As we entered the interior of the Church edifice, the summer sun streamed through the new memorial windows and lightened every corner of the old Church that had been made so attractive by the redecorating and the renovation of the chancel a few years ago. The altar vases were filled with white carnations, the Rector's favorite flower, and palms and peonies added to the beauty of the chancel.

The chalice veil, the burse, the pulpit fall, the lectern book markers, and the stole worn by the Rector, were all newly made for the occasion by Mrs. William J. Shives and Mrs. Vernon Matthews, of white silk, each simply but richly embroidered with a gold cross.

A beautiful linen surplice with embroidered cross was given to Mr. McHenry by Mrs. Bertha Rudderow and her children. This gift was one of the outstanding features of the Anniversary.

The Rector was assisted in the service by the Rev. Walter W. Ware and Mr. Vernon Matthews. Both the Senior and Junior choirs were present in their full strength, the musical parts of the service being most ably presented under the leadership of Mrs. Vernon Matthews, Organist, as follows:

Processional 86—"St. John the Evangelist Hymn"
Holy Communion Service ..... Caley
Anthem—"O Paradise" ..... Hopkins
Anniversary Message ..... MR. MCHENRY
Presentation of Surplice ..... VERNON MATTHEWS
Offertory Anthem—"Thy Temple" ending with Dedicatory Hymn ..... Geibel
Sanctus ..... Caley
Gloria in Excelsis ..... Mozart
Sevenfold Amen ..... Stainer
Recessional 479—"Come Labor On"

Mr. McHenry, in accordance with his custom on Anniversary Sunday, did not preach a sermon, but made a short address, basing his remarks on the text, "And he arose and went," being a portion of Acts 8:27. Philip, the deacon, was called from an active and successful ministry in Samaria to a desert place to preach Christ to one person; but from that contact great results followed. "The Angel of the Lord spake unto Philip, saying Arise and go towards the south unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem into Gaza which is desert. And he arose and went." We never know when we are led to places that seem to be desert what abundance of opportunity is opening up for winning souls, who in turn will win others to Christ, until we have a result as we see it here to-day.

In the service of the Holy Communion which followed, the hundreds of communicants receiving brought home to us, not being a member of the parish but a friend who has watched its development and growth in the past twenty-five years, how strong a spiritual center it had become and the great opportunity before it for service for the Master in the neighborhood in which it is placed.

THE TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY EVENING SERVICE

By

REV. WALTER W. WARE

On Sunday evening, June 6th, a very beautiful and impressive service was held at St. John's when thirty children and eight adults received the Laying on of Hands by the Right Reverend Francis M. Taitt, Bishop of Pennsylvania. There was a double significance to the service, that of Confirmation by the Bishop, and the Bishop's presence at the 25th Anniversary of Mr. McHenry's Rectorship in the parish.

As the stately procession, composed of the combined Junior and Senior Choirs, moved up the aisle, it lent the air of medieval pomp and pageantry to the whole service. It, indeed, was a tribute to both Bishop and Rector to witness the large congregation which turned out.

For his address the Bishop took his text from the Gospel of St. Luke, the fifteenth chapter, a portion of the sixteenth verse: "A certain man made a great supper." The Bishop spoke at length on the parable of the supper, speaking of those men who were bidden and made excuses. He likened the parable to those who constantly made flimsy excuses for non-church attendance. He spoke of the value of regular attendance to the newly confirmed class.

Then the Bishop paid high tribute to the splendid work of the Rector. He stated that he felt it a privilege, as well as a joy, to be present on such an occasion. He told how the church doors were closed 25 years ago and when the present rector arrived there were but seven people at that first service. The Bishop commented upon the faithful labor of love which steadily increased that little handful of people into one of the strongest and livest parishes in the Diocese.

Immediately after the Bishop's address, the Rector presented his class for Confirmation. It was a most impressive sight to see those confirmants kneeling at the Altar Rail as the Bishop moved from one to the other for the Laying on of Hands.

The Bishop in his pontifical vestments, the clergy in their robes, and the little children in their white confirmation attire, made it altogether a colorful affair.

At the conclusion of the service the congregation greeted their beloved Bishop and rector, and the Bishop, in turn, congratulated the Confirmation Class.

OUR ANNIVERSARY RECEPTION

The Biggest and Best Celebration in Twenty-five Years

There was no attempt to surprise the Rector this year. He was kept informed of everything that was taking place—oh yes! Except certain important little incidents which somebody forgot to mention—maybe!

We were told to arrive at 8.30 P. M., D. S. T., and go at once to our office in the Parish House, where we would be met by the Master of Ceremonies (Vernon Matthews) and escorted into the Sunday School room where the Reception was to be held. Everything went off according to schedule, but when we entered the room we noticed the first little matter somebody forgot to mention. Facing us in the Amen corner was a big delegation from Apollo Lodge, No. 386, F. & A. M., of which the Rector is the Worshipful Master. Another slight incident somebody forgot to remember was the personnel of the audience, a mixture of churchmanship from high churchmen in wild socks to Mennonite college pals of the parson, and other and sundry brothers of the cloth. Even the state of Pennsylvania was represented by the Rev. George B. MacNamara from Corry. The brethren of the Lutheran faith were represented by the Rev. Otto Janke, who is also a brother Mason. The law was very adequately represented by Harry Gerber, Esq.

The room was crowded with both communicants and visitors.

As soon as the Master of Ceremonies succeeded in quieting down the Rector, who went on a rampage on seeing that group of Masons and insisted on shaking hands with them and calling each by name, he, the Master of Ceremonies fired the first gun of the evening by announcing we were about to sing a special selection written for the occasion by a friend of the Rector. You can read it for yourself. It is the first article in this issue of the BROADCASTER.

After that the Master of Ceremonies made a speech to the Rector in behalf of his flock. It was a good speech and we only hope he meant all he said. You must know the speaker to sufficinetly appreciate our mental reservations in his behalf. You will find the speech printed elsewhere in this issue.

As the conclusion of the speech, John Nelson, our baritone, sung "I Love Life" by Mana Zucca, which was naturally followed by an encore.

Somewhere before this, however, the Master of Ceremonies presented a beautiful basket of flowers to Mrs. McHenry, who made a very eloquent speech of acceptance. She said, "I thank you." It was perfect for its brevity and its sufficiency. Would that some of the other orators of the occasion had emulated her estimable example! We are still wondering whether or not we ought to bring suit for libel against certain careless speakers and garner in some thousands of dollars for defamation of character or something.

What are we talking about?

Why, we are talking about that person who was invited to pinch hit for Bishop Taitt who was to make the anniversary speech but didn't, other things interfering at the last moment. He was the next on the program. First he would say nice things about our Rector. Then he'd turn around and say nasty things about him, until the listener didn't know whether he was commending or condemning the Rector and laughing all the time with and at him for the comments he was so recklessly hurling into our midst.

We wish the Bishop had been there to hear what Father Ware was saying in his place. Oh well, we were revenged before the evening was over. One of the females of the species was heard to whisper in tones of horror, "Oh, I don't like his socks nor his necktie, do you?"

No, we didn't! And we could mention other things about him we didn't like. But the occasion demanded diplomacy.

After Father Ware got through "pinching" and "hitting" we had a refreshing period of song by the best and only volunteer choir of Southwark. They rendered first, "Come to the Gay Feast of Song" by De Reef and gave us an encore "Keep on Hopin'" by Kathleen Maxwell.

Then the law stood up and spoke words of wisdom in the person of the Honorable Harry Gerber, Past Master and speaker for Apollo Lodge. He treated the Rector like a gentleman except in a couple of spots. When he reached that point of his oration where he reached for his back pocket we were a little panicky because he was talking so eloquently and so seriously that we did not know whether he was reaching for his hankey to dam the tears or whether he was drawing a gun to shoot the parson. Imagine the sigh of relief which swept the room and made the windows rattle and the doors slam when out of that pocket he drew a miniature trowel, the emblem of Masonry, and presented as an Anniversary gift from some of the brothers to us.

Then the Master of Ceremonies did something which set us wondering whose anniversary was this anyhow? He walked over to the piano, picked up an oblong package all wrapped up nice and tied fancy like with a pretty white ribbon, walked back to the middle of the room and asked Mrs. McHenry to please come forward and accept a gift which the members of the parish presented to her with their love. She had just received a big basket of beautiful flowers full of roses and peonies for to poison her hubby, and now here she was being bribed to the act with a second gift which turned out to be a beautiful sterling silver sugar and cream set.

All this time there sat her lonesome other half forced to be content with the crumbs of oratorical and musical classics which fell upon his heavy ears.

John C. Patterson, Jr., famous as being the first layreader under the rector, was the next to speak. He was very good, especially where he told that incident about the deaf man of a practical mind who buried his wife because she was dead! But there was not the least bit of necessity of telling the audience that when we celebrated our twelfth anniversary he presented us with a loving cup and then went into the telling the legend of the loving cup as being a vessel used at Bacchenalian feasts by the wine bibbers. Neither the inference nor the application was a bit nice.

But Eddie Rutter stepped into the breach and blew away all insinuations and hard feelings by tuneful playing on his Saxophone, "Valse Selmer" by Sannella. The way Eddie plays his Saxophone he makes it sound for all the world like an honest to goodness classical musical instrument.

Then Vernon proved he hadn't forgotten the Rector nor had he failed to remember this was his anniversary. After swallowing his Adam's apple once or twice, he turned on the quiver notes and told us how much the parish loves him. He said they loved him so much that they had raised a pretty respectable sum and hoped he'd use it by leaving the parish and getting out of the city so that everybody would get a rest. He even went so far as to say he and Jake would be glad to do his job if he would only "get out." The sum they raised was $400.00. You can see how far they hoped he would go. So now what?

The next feature of the evening was not a feature at all—not even a freak. It was none other than our good old pal of college days, the Rev. Silas M. Grubb, son of that delightful christian gentleman, Bishop Silas Grubb, of the Mennonite Church. It had been years since Si and I came together. We were just irresponsible kids then. We knew well enough where we were heading but we were not worrying how we would get there. And were we glad to see each other! Parted as boys entering manhood, met as men grayhaired and bald but still just "Si and I." The years rolled back like a curtain and there we were again with Bobby Long, once assistant at Holy Apostles and Georgie Hannah, once rector of old St. John's, laughing our way through life, eager to get to work and with courage enough to tackle any job, no matter what. Well, Bobby and Georgie got their job done. Si and I are still pegging away. Some day we will quit, too, but not yet. There's too much to do. Isn't that how it is, old pal?

Another surprise was sprung on us when our genial Master of Ceremonies called to a personage of importance who was in the back of the room to come forward and offer a few comments upon the occasion and who should "come forward" but our very dear and always welcome friend and brother, the Rev. C. Herbert Reese, rector of St. Matthew's Church, 18th and Girard Avenue. He told our folk that they had better hold on to their old rector and not trade him off for such as he because he noticed that although we had passed him in increasing our membership by Confirmation, he had far oustripped us in burying folk. Well, to tell the truth we would much rather have our congregation on top the earth than six feet under.

Then another surprise was sprung upon us. Sitting in the audience was the Rev. Otto Janke, member of Apollo Lodge and a gentleman for whom we have great admiration. He is a clergyman of the Lutheran faith and a sincere, conscientious, hard worker. He is loved by his brothers of the Fraternity. Owing to ill health he has not been quite so active as he hoped to be. He too spoke, taking for his theme the "Priest of God." He was good and gave just the right finishing touch to the evening. His words were like a beautiful benediction to our 25th Anniversary.

We want to acknowledge our thanks to the Family Welfare Department of the City Mission for that delicious basket of fruit and to the Daughters of the King for that beautiful plant; to the congregation for that enormous Birthday Cake, to our fraternity members for the Trowel, which teaches every Mason to spread the cement of brotherly love and affection so that we may become a band of brothers among whom no contention but always contentment shall exist. And then that gift of $400.00! No one knows better than do we, what real sacrifices it represents. The sentiment back of the gift is the thing of real value after all and in our hearts and in our consciousness has entered that sentiment and we feel a deep sense of humility that we have been thought worthy of such a big love as this.

JOHN WEBER

Among other important matters relative to our 25th Anniversary was the rector's recognition of the valuable and loyal service of our one and only treasurer of the church. Mr. Weber was at St. John's Church long before the Rector came. Before the advent of Mr. McHenry he had charge of the finances of the parish when there was any money in the treasury, which was not frequent then. Nevertheless, Mr. Weber was on the job and performed his duties faithfully from that day twenty-five years ago until now. Our Rector stated on the night of the Parish Reception, Tuesday, June 8th, that Mr. Weber is a wizard. He long ago discovered the secret of financing the parish without any finances. Aladdin with his magic lamp could do no better.

In recognition of Mr. Weber's long and faithful service Mr. McHenry presented to him a beautiful and valuable copy of the Holy Bible. We want Mr. Weber to ever have before him a reminder that we, his fellow parishioners, appreciate his perfect example of patient service he has rendered to us and to God.

CAPTAIN KIDD AND THE OTHER KIDS
GIVES THE RECTOR A WARM RECEPTION

It was on the night of June 9th, 1937, when suddenly and without warning the terrible Captain Kidd and his pirate band, to the number of several hundred, swarmed down upon old St. John's and captured the crowd without shedding one drop of blood. It was a terribly successful raid with the victims helpless in the hands of the victors.

The first act of Captain Kidd (Frank McCall) was to mount the stage and call for the priate yell, i. e., three cheers for the parson. Something went wrong with the Captain's larynx and all he could raise was a squawk. Did that make him lose his head? No sir! He just dodged back of the curtains, grabbed a cough drop, bounced back again and called on his bunch of bullies to sing. And this is what they sung to the tune of "Aleoha O."

"A church like ours was meant to live forever,
Mr. McHenry is the man who made it so.
All the joys we have known
We must not sever.
For our memory of you will ever glow
For twenty-five years you have served us well
Your work in St. John's will never have an ending.
Deep in our hearts you will ever dwell,
Your praises we will ever sing."

Then he called for a fan dance by his fair lady captives, who hoping to soften the heart of Captain Kidd, danced before him and his swashbuckling crew and his cringing captives, most flirtatiously; waving their fans in time with music with charming grace. The dancing ladies were: Ruth Hopkins, Helen Lusher, Ruth Rudderow, Emma Rudderow, Ethel Jaeschke, Beatrice Robbins, Anna Tittermary, Lorraine Klein, Dorothy Woerner, Tischa Friehls.

After this most pleasing number and by way of contrast, to send chills and shivers the length of our spinal column, he staged the awful pantomime of "Wild Nell, the pet of the Plains." Watta gal! Watta gal! In the end she murdered herself with frienzied gestures and fell to the floor of the stage with a clatter. The harrowing scene was impersonated by the following: "Lady Vere de Vere," Mary Jane Keough; "Handsome Harry," Marie Millman; "Sitting Bull," Emily Baun; "Bull Durham," Marion Davis; "Hula Hula," the medicine woman, Anna Banks; "Prairie dog Hut," Peggie Parker and Doris Bright; "Cactus Plant," Claire Wilhelm; "Wild Nell," Betty Harper. The reader was Ruth Bright.

After sinking us into this pit of horror the bloody Captain changed his mood and called for his favorite toe dancer, Betty Hudak, to dissipate our jangled nerves. To the seductive strains of something or other she came flashing forth all golden, gold high hat, gold dancing trunks, gold slippers and carrying a golden rod. The rector began to sneeze and cough as soon as she showed that rod.

Then the First, Second and Third Mates—Albert Weise, George Brown and George Weissinger, raised their voices in jolly, rollicking song while the crew pounded out applause with feet and palms.

Here they took time out for breath.

Everyone waited in silent and horrified expectation for what was to come next. Then out stepped Captain Kidd and roared through that patched up larynx, "Commander of the captured ship St. John, come forth and get yours."

Trembling in every knee and all the rest of his joints, the poor gray haired pilot staggered into the dread presence and took what was coming to him with thanks. It was a handsome traveling bag.

Then one of the crew, Tom Marley, strummed a banjo that set us bouncing up and down in our seats in an ecstacy of delight. After this long Bill Brown, the chief plank walker maker, sung a sentimental ditty with sweet abandon and we almost forgot his expert axe work which made so many victims lose their heads. We even clapped our hands in wild enthusiasm when he stopped.

THEN CAME PART II

Upon the stage floats a lovely fairy Queen, Evelyn Tomlin. In a clear voice she tells her audience she has come to carry us back to scenes of long ago; epochs in the career of our rector, picturing him in tableaus from childhood to his service of old St. John's Church.

TABLEAU NUMBER ONE

Seated inside a big silver frame was a mother and her child (May Hopkins and little Gus Jaeschke). The boy was the rector at the age of three. While little Gus stood gazing most raptly into May's face she sang very beautifully "Dear Little Boy O'Mine." At the end of the song the curtain drew together and the tableau ended.

TABLEAU NUMBER TWO

The fairy queen waved her wand. The curtains parted. There, standing in the silver frame, was a school boy with his books over his shoulders. It was John Tittermary who was the rector at school. He stood there silently while an invisible chorus sang the old song "School Days."

TABLEAU NUMBER THREE

With a wave of her wand our fairy queen caused another picture to appear in that silver frame. There, kneeling before the Bishop was a young man being ordained to the deaconate. The Bishop was the Rev. Walter W. Ware, the Deacon was Jake Preole. Both were dressed in the vestments of their office.

TABLEAU NUMBER FOUR

The fourth revelation of our fairy Queen was a group gathered at the Font. An infant was being presented for christening. Standing at the font is the priest in his robes (Jake Preole) and the godparents, Eleanor Munion, Jeanette Last and Joseph Robbins. Eleanor is holding the infant, John Bradley.

TABLEAU NUMBER FIVE

Under the potent power of our fairy queen the curtain parts and standing in the silver frame is a group of little kiddies from the kindergarden singing their favorite hymn, "G-double O-D, Good." In the background stands the priest like a shepherd tending his flock. The little ones were Margaret Munion, Mary Bradley, Eleanor Preole and Anna Tittermary.

TABLEAU NUMBER SIX

Our good fairy Queen waves her wand and lo, there in the silver frame is the Bishop with his hands extended in the act of Confirmation over the heads of a boy and a girl who are kneeling before him, the presenting priest standing beside the Bishop. The Bishop and priest were the same as in the ordination scene and were in their vestments. The children were Lottie Reed and William Weise.

TABLEAU NUMBER SEVEN

Again the fairy waves her wand. The curtain parts. In the silver frame stands the priest, an open book in his hands, a look of expectancy on his face. The beautiful strains of the wedding march is heard. Up the aisle moves the bridal party. The tiny bride, dressed all in white, with a long trailing veil, carrying her bouquet. By her side walks the groom dressed in his wedding suit. They mount the steps to the stage; they step into the silver frame and complete the wedding picture with the priest. From each wing of the stage come four bridesmaids carrying their bouquets and singing a love song.

Somebody said after it was all over that a snapshot ought to have been taken of the wedding scene, it was so beautiful. We think so too.

The priest was represented as before by Jake Preole. The bride was Lorraine Klein, the bridegroom, Jackie Weise. The attendants were Ruth Hopkins, Anna Tittermary, Vivian Reed, Lottie Reed, Ruth Rudderow, Helen Lusher, Marjorie Weise, Edna Keller.

And the goddess in the works was Margaret Nelson. It was she who conceived and developed the children's party program and trained the participants in their respective parts. Margaret has put over many a splendid entertainment before, but in this she surpassed her best. We congratulate her and thank her for giving us such a good time. We also wish to thank Mrs. William Shives for the exquisite bouquets she made for the bridesmaids and those who assisted Margaret in making the costumes for the children.

The whole affair came to a close with ice cream and cake for all. We will long remember the night the kiddies entertained the Rector.

THANKS TO THOSE WHO SERVED

Just a word of appreciation to those who made our 25th Anniversary so wonderful. There were those who assisted the Rector in the Sunday morning celebration, the Rev. Walter Ware, the Senior and Junior Layreaders, Vernon Matthews and John Preole. Of course, the Senior and Junior Choirs, too. In the evening Hannah Nuttal and Miss Beatrice M. Fisher took over the Confirmation Class. Carrie Strang and Miss Schabacker had worked hard and earnestly in rounding up the class. The Bishop was very much one of us in the evening. We sometimes wonder whether Bishop Taitt really knows how popular he is among St. John's folk.

Then there are the members of the choir who took out so much extra time rehearsing anniversary music. We do not need to name them here; everybody knows them.

And there is that fine corps of women who cooked and served our anniversary dinner and supper and the refreshments at the Parish Reception on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. As far as we have been able to go, in digging out the names of this group of women, we would mention:

Mrs. Frank Pine	Mrs. Elizabeth Jaeschke
Mrs. Laura Young	Mrs. Margaret Nelson
Mrs. Mary Murphy	Mrs. Martha McFadden
Mrs. Lillian McLaughlin	Miss Viola Young
Mrs. Florence Weist	Miss Adelia Pearo
Mrs. May Hopkins	Miss Florence Armstrong
Miss Lillian McLaughlin	Miss Emma Kaiser
Mrs. Margaret McLaughlin	Miss Ruth Rutter

We have perhaps missed one or two in our list and if so we will publish their names in the next BROADCASTER if they will tell us who they are.

We owe the biggest chunk of thanks to our Anniversary Committee and in order that the parish may know who they were we publish their names herewith:

OUR ANNIVERSARY BOOK

We wish to congratulate the special committee for the excellent piece of work that was accomplished in the publishing of the Anniversary Book, both to its appearance and its contents. They are Vernon Matthews, John C. Patterson and Martha W. Matthews. The Title Page is a beautiful sample of printer's art. The new photograph of the rector is unanimously voted his best likeness. The picture of our beloved Bishop is perfect; also the illustrations of the church and the Parish House give a clear idea of the buildings as they are today. The photograph of the interior of the church is so very beautiful in its simplicity that we rather regret a photograph of the interior, before the improvements, was not included among the new and the old. The Church Directory, the List of Communicants, the roster of Rectors and the Church Calendar, the list of Memorial Windows and the Rector's Anniversary letter, will prove valuable historical material for the future. Several copies of this really important book should be carefully preserved for future reference.

BACK STAGE

What you see and hear in front of the stage is really the finished and beautiful product of the genius back stage. The script, the plot, the players, the music and the scenery, are not spontaneous emanations. They, each of them, have been painstakingly worked over and adjusted so that finally they present a beautiful whole. Then there is the building up of an interested audience, which necessitates the preparing, addressing and mailing of thousands of cards of invitations. There is the printer to be advised, the music and the choirs to be developed, the programs to be arranged and the general direction of a thousand details we cannot mention. All this back stage work rests always on the responsible shoulders of one person.

In the building up of our splendid Silver Jubilee, we do not need to look long nor far for the lurking individual. We discover her in the energetic and resourceful personality of our Church organist and musical directress,

MRS. VERNON MATTHEWS.

Everybody worked hard to make our Anniversary a success, but she worked harder than anybody. For all she did we pay her this tribute of gratitude and hope she got as much satisfaction as we got pleasure out of her big job.

OUR SILVER ANNIVERSARY CONFIRMATION CLASS

We take pleasure in publishing the names of those who were presented to the Bishop to receive the laying on of the hands on our 25th Anniversary. The 1937 class was not so large as others of past years, but it was an important class because many of its members are already active and interested parochial workers.

ADDRESS BY VERNON MATTHEWS

Master of Ceremonies of the 25th Anniversary Reception To the Rev. H. Cresson McHenry, Missionary-in-charge the Church of St. John the Evangelist.

MR. MCHENRY:—

Because of the feeling of affection which exists between us I am very happy to have the privilege, on behalf of the members of your parish, to congratulate you on the completion of 25 years as Rector of the Church of St. John the Evangelist.

Yours has indeed been a labor of love for you have received no salary.

At Anniversary time one is apt to reminisce and you have so many things to remember—things of both joy and sorrow—but always of things well done. I have no doubt you are thinking tonight of your first service here 25 years ago when seven persons attended. It must have been a real satisfaction last Sunday when hundreds of persons partook of the Holy Communion with you.

If you glance around you will find many whom you have held in your arms as babies in baptism. They are a part of the 1966 persons whom you have baptized.

Including last Sunday's class you have presented 2723 Candidates for Confirmation, many of them adults who, because of their connection with this church, have changed their mode of living and by reason of which, their families have benefited materially.

Those of us who were fortunate enough to be among the 626 whom you have united in Holy Matrimony, will always remember the interest you showed in the preparation and because of your effort and attention to details, that the ceremonies which followed have gone so smoothly.

It has always caused you sorrow when anyone has strayed from the paths which lead to this church and because of their indifference have fallen into evil ways. It has been with sorrow and pity that you have visited the sick and watched many of them pass on.

You have indeed been a true City Missionary for you have answered the call 802 times to read the Burial Service, not only in this parish, but throughout the entire city without regard for creed, race or color.

We are proud of your record as a priest of the church. You have excelled in all its departments. Your words have inspired many of us to do better things. You have not only lead us in spiritual things but you have also directed us in financial matters as well.

The condition of this property when you assumed charge was deplorable. You improved both the interior and exterior and added to the buildings. The improvements are so numerous we have listed them in our Anniversary Booklet.

How applicable to you and your work is that portion of the 25th Chapter of St. Matthew which says, "I was an hungered and ye gave me meat. I was thirsty and ye gave me drink. I was a stranger and ye took me in; naked and ye clothed me. I was sick and ye visited me. I was in prison and ye came unto me."

And after the interrogatory portion which follows we find the words which we have used to dedicate our Anniversary Booklet to you. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Speaking for the members of your parish I should say words which would express their feelings toward you, but when I try to do that I find I have not words of sufficient adequacy.

When we think of you our hearts are full. We have that fullness of heart that makes men grasp hands in silence and women cry. We are a simple folk and therefore I know you and they will understand when again on their behalf I congratulate you and simply say,

"God bless you."

THE BIBLE

As we have it today, in the King James version, it is incomparably the finest piece of literature in our language. No poetry is more sublime than the Song of Solomon or the Psalms of David. No drama is greater than the Book of Job; no narrative finer than the Gospel of St. Luke; no vision in words more exalted than the Revelation.

If every other piece of printed or written matter in our language were to be destroyed, and one copy of the Bible remained, the power and beauty of our common tongue would remain in perfect structure.

Not only is it the source of Christian truth and the rule for Christian life, but the most dependable of all guides for personal and group conduct. In his famous Bunker Hill speech to the descendants of the Pilgrims, Webster said, "It teaches man his own individual responsibility, his own dignity, and his equality with his fellow-men."

"There never has been found, in any age of the world, either religion or law, that did so highly exalt the public good as the Bible," said Lord Bacon.

"I have always said, I always will say, that the studious perusal of the sacried volume will make better citizens, better fathers and better husbands," said Thomas Jefferson. And from Milton this: "There are no songs comparable to the songs of Zion; no orations equal to those of the prophets, and no politics like those which the Scriptures teach."

"A Bible and a newspaper in every house, a good school in every district—all studied and appreciated as they merit—are the principal support of virtue, morality, and civic liberty," said Benjamin Franklin.

What others have said of it may mean much. What you yourself will find in it means more than words can tell.

—Leigh Mitchell Hodges.

OUR NEW COMMUNION PIECES

The Communion Set of St. John's Parish has been in service a very long time indeed. Some of the pieces are so good that they will last to the end of time. The Chalice is of special interest. It is of pure coin silver and was made by a leading firm of silversmiths in France about a century ago. There are very few such Communion pieces in the churches of Philadelphia. Its greatest value lies in its antiquity and the firm of silversmiths who made it. They were artists of rare ability and known internationally. We cannot boast so much of the other pieces of the set. They are of very ordinary plate on white metal and show the ravages of time and wear.

A month ago we appointed Mrs. William Shives to serve as a member of our Altar Guild. She very graciously accepted the appointment and we secured the services of one well trained in Altar Work. In going over the linens and the vessels she noticed the incongruity of the Communion Service. The pieces didn't match and some were unfit. She reported the matter and suggested that at least a wafer box and two crystal cruets be bought to replace the old. We now have a really beautiful, as well as a satisfactory, set for the Altar. The cost is less than $25.00. We are asking voluntary contributions of any amount the communicants care to give towards this fund. We do not want you to give unless you give voluntarily. Sacred vessels for the Church must be purchased only by gifts of money made in the spirit of worship and love to Almighty God and to His Blessed Son Jesus Christ whose blessed body and blood are held in the sacred vessels of our Church.

ONLY GIFTS OF LOVE AND ADORATION WILL BE RECEIVED FROM THOSE WHO TRULY UNDERSTAND THE NATURE OF THE OFFERINGS THEY ARE MAKING.

We want no money from any who just give to help us pay a debt. If you love Jesus Christ and you are quite aware of the holiness of this service you may give your offering feeling thankful God gives you this opportunity to perform an holy service.

Any who wish to make such an offering may give it either to the Rector personally or through the District Superintendent.

A PRAYER?

"O Lord, I come to Thee in prayer once more;
But pardon if I do not kneel before
Thy gracious presence, for my knees are sore
With so much walking. In my chair instead
I'll sit at ease and humbly bow my head.
I've labored in Thy vineyard, Thou dost know;
I've sold ten tickets to the minstrel show;
I've baked a pot of beans for Saturday's spree,
An old-time supper it is going to be;
I've dressed three dolls, too, for our annual fair,
And made a cake which we must raffle there.
Now, with Thy boundless wisdom, so sublime,
Thou knowest that these duties all take time;
I have no time to fight my spirit's foes;
I have no time to mend my husband's clothes;
My children roam the streets from morn till night,
I have no time to teach them to do right.
But Thou, O Lord, considering all my cares,
Wilt count them righteous, also heed my prayers.
Bless the bean supper and the minstrel show,
And put it in the hearts of all to go.
Induce the visitors to patronize
The men who on our program advertise;
Because I've chased these merchants till they hid
Whene'er they saw me coming; yes, they did.
Increase the contributions to our fair,
And bless the people who assemble there;
Bless Thou the grab-bag and the gypsy tent,
The flower table and the cake that's sent;
May our bridge club be to service blest,
The dancing party gayer than the rest;
And when Thou hast bestowed these blessings, then
We pray that Thou wilt bless our souls. Amen."

THE SUMMER BIBLE SCHOOL

Summer Bible School was very well attended throughout the vacation season. Every Sunday morning at 10 o'clock, we met in the Sunday School room and spent three-quarters of an hour together in Bible Study. Our program was not too involved nor scientific. The weather was uncommonly warm and we craved to be interested with easy questions and not teased with hard problems. If attendance is any proof of the success of our program, then we have every right to be gratified, for as sure as Sunday morning arrived, a splendid group of scholars would arrive, too; ages anywhere from six to sixty-five and of both sexes.

A great deal of interest was due to the singing of hymns the children were taught during the week in the daily vacation school during their singing period. As usual our order of service was in adaptation of the CHURCH CATECHISM. The study period always started with a Bible Drill which covered repeating the names of the books of the Bible, classifying them as to their logical groups and a period in quick finding of book, chapter and verse. This latter occupation was in the form of a contest and was, therefore, most interesting. The instructor would state he would like some one present to read such a verse of such a chapter of such a Book. The scholars would then try to "beat the field" in finding the verse. The contest was always exciting and sometimes ten or twelve scholars would bounce to their feet and simultaneously read the passage. The astonishing speed they would show in finding the references was clear proof of their familiarity with the Book. This familiarity is the first requisite of a Bible student.

The study period which followed the Bible Drill was based upon the lives of our Lord's Apostles. We would go through the calendar starting with January and take up the study of the Apostles as they came chronologically. When we had fixed the date appointed by the Church for the celebration, we would turn to the Collect, Epistle and Gospel appointed for the day and give critical study to each in turn. Also, we would have an inquiry period during which we would strive to learn all we could about the life and personality of the Apostle under discussion. For instance, in the study of St. Luke the Evangelist, we learned the Church had appointed October 18th as the date upon which to celebrate the activities of this wonderful man. We learned he was apparently of Gentile birth (Col. 4:11); also he was a physician (Col. 4:14); also he was St. Paul's companion on his second missionary journey (Acts 16:10), and as far as Philippi (Acts 16:12-17); also he was with St. Paul when he reached Jerusalem (Acts 21:17); also he joined St. Paul in Rome while he was in prison (Acts 27:1—28:16). To St. Paul he was a "true yoke-fellow" (Phil. 4:3). As St. Paul was an Apostle to the Gentiles, St. Luke was an Evangelist to the Gentiles.

The emblem of St. Luke, we learned, was the ox or calf. Also we learned he was born at Antioch.

Also, he wrote two Books of the Bible, the Gospel according to St. Luke and the Book of the Acts of the Apostles. By the time we had gone thus far in our study our period was up, and our closing period consisting of the singing of one of the hymns just learned, the receiving of the offering and the salute to the Cross and to the Flag. Immediately after the session we retired to the Church for regular morning service.

I think we can truly say that our Summer Bible School was a season of real physical, mental and spiritual refreshment.

SUMMER VACATION SCHOOL OF 1937

MARGARET NELSON, Directress

Friday, August 27th, marked the closing of another enjoyable and profitable summer school season at St. John's.

The Daily Vacation School opened in July with a turnout of about eighty-five. Our attendance averaged about seventy-five, ranging from two years to sixteen. Neither rain nor extreme heat could keep the youngsters home. Ask the parents. They'll tell you.

Each day the children were allowed to play until ten o'clock. Then we began more serious work. We opened each session with the Creed, the Lord's Prayer, the General Thanksgiving and the Collect for Holy Innocents Day being said by all those present. Next we repeated the various collects or short prayers we had learned. We were able to memorize collects for the seventeenth Sunday after Trinity to the Twenty-third Sunday after Trinity.

After this we sang hymns. Did we use the old familiar hymns? I should say not. We wanted to be different, so each week we learned a beautiful new hymn.

It was a thrilling experience to hear those children render those hymns.

The children were now anxious to have the Life Story of Jesus Christ, by Charles Dickens, continued. Each morning questions were asked and intelligently answered on the story as it progressed. Indeed the last day the story wasn't completed and I still had considerable to read. I realized they had been sitting for a long period so I told them I'd finish the story some other time, but they all shouted, No, No, finish it now. When we get children clamoring for the Story of Jesus Christ I feel we are forging ahead.

To get back to our daily program. Next we sang folk songs, popular tunes and parodies. Any request of a child was granted. Then the circle was broken. The chairs were put away and the children were ready for their competitive games. One day we played Dodge Ball and you should have seen the antics those children went through dodging that ball. We had the tail spin, the stomach jump, the high jump, the side kick and many others. For a good laugh have the children demonstrate. Another day we had Going to Jerusalem. Still another day we had a Cake Walk. Then "Do this, do that." Accuracy Throws, Rope jumping, Pass Ball, and others.

After this strenuous exercise we had more restful work. Some played radio, some cards, some checkers, while others stuffed cats or dogs or colored or wove mats or burned figures in wood. Every child to his own fancy at this particular time.

Twelve o'clock rolled around in short order and many were loathe to go home.

On Mondays and Fridays, noontime meant ice cream. Therefore, a splendid line was formed for a delicious Dixie. Wednesday was Surprise Day. Once we had watermelon and not a seed was dropped on the floor. Was I proud of them? Another day we had peanuts and another lollypops, pretzels and other goodies.

Every Friday was Amateur Day and we were well entertained by all. Two-year-old Billy Munion always received a big hand with "Pennies From Heaven" as did Frances Bennett. We have many fine dancers and singers. You should hear John Tittermary do his imitation animal calls. They are something to hear. May Rudderow told us how to win a mother-in-law. "Thippin' Thider Thru a Thraw." Those present on Tuesday, August 31st, had the opportunity of hearing some home talent unrehearsed.

We had a picnic at Smith's Playground. We had no serious accidents but I must say we looked like a band of Indians coming home with the dabs of Mercurochrome Mrs. Weisse so artfully put on the children.

Friday, August 27th, brought the summer to a glorious end with our EXCURSION TO ATLANTIC CITY. The morning rain didn't dampen our spirits one bit.

We met at the church arrayed in our best finery for a fine day. After waiting an half hour for a trolley on Third Street, we finally had to race out Reed Street, 60 strong, to get the Fifth Street trolley. Then we dashed down Market Street like fire engines to catch our train. We just made the train. We arrived safely, spent a glorious day on Steel Pier, enjoyed ice cream cones, reached the five-and-ten-cent store, when a terrific storm broke. It looked like a cloudburst. The children almost bought the store while we waited one hour for the storm to abate. At five-fifteen we realized we must start if we were to catch the six o'clock train, which held a special car for us. We bundled our coats and sweaters round us, carefully covered our souvenirs and made a dash for it. The first to go down were Ruth and Emma Rudderow. The slippery boardwalk was just too much for them. After a few tears we started again. Next to go down was Gertrude Balzer. She cried for a long time because her good dress was dirtied but soon even she was laughing. As I looked about I saw souvenir beach hats that were to be taken home as gifts, being worn. The red and green from the hats trickled down their faces. By this time we were drenched. As Edna Moore put it, the water ran in one side of her shoe and out the other. We were so wet we just walked in the rain as we would have walked in the sunshine. When we finally reached the station, we all nearly collapsed with laughter. Stringy wet hair, wilted hats, red stripes on white shirts from sweaters that ran. Boys with red pants from lunch cases that ran. I really can't describe how funny we looked. There wasn't a cross word or dissatisfied look on one face. Everybody took things as they came.

Wet clothing was discarded in the train and we proceeded merrily homeward bound.

Coming down Second Street in the trolley I found one youngster carrying a pair of blackened white socks in one hand and a crumpled hair ribbon in the other. She truly represented the end of a perfect day.

I feel every child is just a little bigger and a little better spiritually and physically because he attended our Summer School.

MARGARET R. NELSON,
Directress.

WHICH ARE YOU?

Are you one of those who is going to bring joy and self-respect into the life of a fellow brother or sister by contributing two new garments of the same kind, size and weight to St. John's Branch of the Needlework Guild of America? Or are you going to say that possibly it is a very good thing but you will not bother this year? We hope and pray that there will be very few of the latter group in our Parish.

Do you realize the thrill it is to a child or even to an adult who has possibly worn nothing but old, tattered and patched garments for years to receive two new clean garments for their very own? I have seen the look of joy on the faces of both adults and children when getting a gift of this kind.

If you are still hesitant as to which of these two courses you desire to follow, please read St. Matt. 25:31-46.

We are asking that all contributions, whether garments or money, be sent to Mrs. R. Woerner, 127 Daly Street, before September 15. Kindly mark all contributions with your name and address.

M. Beatrice Fisher.

A CAT-BIRD'S EYE VIEW OF THE SHACK-IN-THE-PINES

A Camp Phantasy by HELEN WEIR MCHENRY, Hostess

"You, who would with wanton art
Counterfeit another's part
And with noisy utterance claim
Right to an ignoble name
Inharmonious! Why must you
To a better self untrue,
Gifted with the charm of song
Do the generous gift so wrong?

Delicate and downy throat
Shaped for pure melodious note
Silvery wings of softest gray
Bright eyes glancing every way,
Graceful outline, motion free
Types of perfect harmony!

Ah, you much mistake your duty,
Mating discord thus with beauty.
'Mid these heavenly sunset gleams
Vexing the smooth air with screams,
Burdening the dainty breeze
With insane discordancies!

I have heard you tell a tale
Tender as the nightingale
Sweeter than the early thrush
Pipes at day—dawn from the hush.
Wake one more the liquid strain
That you poured, like music-rain
When last night, in the sweet weather
You and I were out together

Unto whom two notes are given
One of earth, and one of heaven;
Were it not a shameful tale
That the earth note should prevail?

For the sake of those who love us,
For the sake of God above us,
Each and all should do their best
To make music for the rest.

So I will no more reprove,
Though the chiding be in love,
Uttering harsh rebukes to you
That were inharmonious, too!

THE CAT-BIRD'S COMMENTS ON THE CAMPERS

"There she goes again, one of the Big Ones telling the Little Ones 'there are all three of them in Browns Mills: Cat Birds, Cat Fish, and just plain Cats!' Well, thank goodness, all the "plain cats" are owned by one Human who lives up in the town, and thank goodness some more she feeds them so well that they do not come looking for us! As for the Cat Fish, who would bother about them? All they can do is swim, and they are not very pretty with those long whiskers sticking out past their eyes! Why the Boys who come here want to catch them is more than I can see!

But all the Little Ones, and both those Big Ones know me. I wonder if they know how well I know them! I've had my nest outside that big room they eat in (and the things they eat are so funny, too, not at all like my big fat bugs) for a great many summers, just so that I can look in the window and watch them. Sometimes I call all my relations so that they can see the funny things they do! When they begin to laugh and talk so loud, it is fun to try to talk louder. That makes them stop and look out the window and call us mocking birds! Then one of the Big Ones tells the Little Ones that we try to sing and talk like all the other birds, but what do those Little Humans do? They're always trying to make sounds like the ones that come from that strange box they have in another part of the Nest! We know that's where the sounds come from because Cousin Johnny flew in there one day to find out and he almost didn't get out again! Oh, he was frightened when all the Big and Little Ones came and found him, and it didn't take him long to fly home when they opened the door!

These Humans have the strangest way of living! It is a good thing they don't have to catch early worms and bugs because I've been up several hours before they begin to open their eyes and scream for food! But then I guess they couldn't be awake so early because they stay up after it gets dark, when I think everyone should be at home in bed.

I've listened to them some mornings while they sit in that "Dining Room" talking about the things they do after dark, I wonder what a "Doggie Roast" is, and what they do when they "toast marshmallows?" They do it so many times, and they say they sing and laugh and play games while they do it, so I guess it might be something like hunting bugs after all!

It is fun to watch them in the day time. They can walk and run along the ground as well as I do, but they cannot fly, and I feel so sorry for them! I guess they feel sorry, too, because they are always getting in those funny boats of theirs and trying to see how fast they can push themselves over the water. Sometimes they jump out and swim just like those Cat Fish do!

It is fun to watch them try to get acquainted with us! They think they know me, and whenever they hear me they say, "Oh, that's a Cat Bird!" That is, except when I sing like the Cheewinks that live under the leaves or those Blue Jays that go screaming around among the tree tops! Speaking of Blue Jays, I wonder if they make so much noise just so the humans will notice what pretty feathers they wear!

We told a Scarlet Tanager about these humans and he and his mate came this summer to investigate, and we discovered that the Big and Little Humans are just as curious as we Birds are! They stood around the tree where Scarlet Tanager was sitting talking about his red coat with black sleeves in it all the time he was watching them, so interested and so amazed that he forgot to get frightened and fly away!

And there was the day all the Little Humans flew out of their chairs to watch Mr. Nuthatch walk straight down a tree! I heard a Big One tell the Little Ones that a Nuthatch is the only Bird that can do that! Well, I'm glad there is something he can do because he cannot sing nearly as well as I can—when I really want to.

Those Humans found out that we are pretty brave, too! They all stood staring around the gum tree the afternoon we had the fight with that snake who was trying to get us! It was a furious battle, but that snake was glad at last to jump down and crawl away with his skin still whole. We posted sentries all around his hole under the summer house, but he didn't come out any more that day. He did catch a bull frog down in the water several days after that, and those Humans were right there to watch again. I was glad when one of them gave Old Smarty Snake a sound slap that made him open his mouth so wide that the Frog jumped out!

There is one thing that puzzles me, and that is why the Little Ones were constantly changing, although the two Big Ones stayed almost all summer! It was hard to keep an accurate account of them. And they changed so much while they were there, too! They got so much fatter, and their skins turned from white to brown! I wonder how I would feel if I should go somewhere else and my feathers should change color!

They have all gone away now and there isn't anything more around this Big Nest to watch, but I will be here waiting for them again next year, and perhaps some day, if they continue to watch me, they will learn as much about me as I know about them!"

Conny Cat Bird.

THE PARISH CONFERENCE

It is the most natural thing in the world to sit down and relax after one has worked long and arduously and has attained a semblance of success.

He who toils successfully earns rest.

Yet, we must remember two very important things lest we rest too long. First, if we prolong our period of rest unduly we begin to loaf. Second, too much rest means too much inactivity, and inactivity makes things static; a state which leads to a slipping back and losing ground.

For a quarter of a century we have worked hard and steadily on the job of building up old St. John's Parish. Now that we have reached our Twenty-Fifth Anniversary we can take a look back and congratulate ourselves that with Divine aid we have been successful in our undertaking.

But we must not waste too much time in cheering. Already we have started on another twenty-five year period. Much must be done and we have no time to waste in doing it.

We Need A Parish Conference

We must get together and lay our plans for the future of Old St. John's Parish. We must not let things drift, we must do some propelling and steering in order to make headway. Old Southwark needs the moral strength and guidance of our church and we must be prepared always to throw out the life line, as it were.

You know, as well as I know, that Southwark is a big slice of Philadelphia. It is a place where hundreds of thousands of children of God live; and, no matter what is their color, nationality or previous condition of morality or immorality, we must make sure that each knows God is his father. In other words, our job in Southwark is to get all Southwarkians interested in God.

To bring this about we must have a PARISH CONFERENCE, at which time we must adopt a PARISH PROGRAM. We must:

1. Immediately after LABOR DAY invite ourselves to a parish supper. At that supper we want to sit down with our two layreaders, our Parish Visitor and her two volunteer assistants, all the teachers and officers of the Sunday School, the Woman's Auxiliary, the Daughters of the King, the Choir, the Young Peoples' Society, the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, the six District Superintendents, members of the Girl Scouts, the Boys Club and the Parish Committee.

Getting Organized

After what we hope will be a satisfactory meal, we will get organized. The members of all the parish societies will be made members of this big parish conference. The Rev. Walter W. Ware, who has been such an interested friend of St. John's Church, will be the Directing Chairman. The District Superintendents will co-operate in whatever work is undertaken and will give the committees appointed to their several districts, all the help and information at their disposal. We will arrange for stated meetings of the conference for consultation and laying new plans.

We will visit every house in each district to get the names, numbers in family, nationality, color, creed and general social conditions.

We will list all non-church members as prospects for confirmation.

We will root out former St. Johnites who no longer attend church.

We will make a list of all the aged, sick and shut-ins whether they "belong" or not.

We will make a list of all families who do not own Bibles, Prayer Books or Hymnals.

We will register all unbaptized persons, both adult and infant.

We will register all infants on our Cradle Roll.

We will look up all our old Sunday School scholars and make a drive for new scholars.

We will urge all members to make their Communion regularly.

We will urge our delinquents to pay up all their church envelopes.

We will urge all members to take out packages of church envelopes.

We will urge all Fireside Club members to pay up their dues.

We will urge all parishioners to join the Fireside Club.

We will register all unemployed men and women and try to help them get jobs.

We will arrange a schedule of suppers, entertainments, bazaars and other parties for the season. We will arrange our Lenten Service program.

We will suggest improvements and eliminations in our Sunday School and Church Service.

And we will do anything else that suggests itself to any member of the conference.

The conference will meet monthly. Every other month we will meet to eat.

The FIRST CONFERENCE WILL BE HELD TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1937.

THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

One is known by the company she keeps.

That sentence is not original but it is true and is also most appropriate as a text for our observations on this great church organization for women.

Like all women's societies it is most active and aggressive, so much so that the Protestant Episcopal Church missions and missionaries, both at home and abroad, are supported largely by donations and gifts of its members.

There is not a priest of the church who does not thank God for what the Woman's Auxiliary is doing in his parish. He has no other parish society that can equal it in keeping alive the real missionary ardor among his people.

It is really too bad there is no permanent fund in our parish from which we could pay at least in part the expenses of some of our members to the Woman's Auxiliary Convention. I would like to send a dozen or so of our young women to get an eyeful of that wonderful Auxiliary demonstration—the UNITED THANK OFFERING. I know the group would come home full of enthusiasm and keen to stir up the women of the parish to greater activity in this great church women's effort for Missions.

St. John's parish women ought to be specially interested in the Auxiliary work for it was missionary money which supported St. John's Church through its dark days and preserved its identity until it recovered and could be self-supporting.

The Auxiliary membership is made up of ALL the confirmed women of the parish. Every parish has a local chapter and, theoretically at least, every woman, both young and old, is an active member. You do not need to be "proposed," you pay no "initiation fees." You just walk right in and sit down and there you are. You can either agree with what is being said and done or you can get up and object or suggest and the others must listen and know that you speak as a member in full standing and have as much right to speak in meeting as anybody.

Besides being a great missionary force in the church, every chapter is an individual dynamo of church activity in the parish. Every priest instinctively turns to the women of the parish for service, and in doing so he is pretty sure to think first of his Auxiliary Chapter.

There is nothing like a well organized and well attended Woman's Auxiliary to warm a parson's heart and renew his courage as an active and interested Auxiliary. It has been our prayer these many years that God will move the hearts of the women of our parish to adopt the Auxiliary as their medium through which to work for the glory of God and a greater missionary work in the parish.

Women Awake

and for the sake of Jesus Christ, who was the Great Emancipator of Womanhood, prove your gratitude and loyalty to His cause by joining this splendid women's church institution and "press with vigor on" in the great object of spreading His Gospel through the parish and through the Church.

Our meeting will be the first Monday of the month during the year, but as Labor Day happens on that day we will defer the meeting until Wednesday, September the 8th.

And Remember!!!

EVERY WOMAN BETWEEN THE AGES OF 18 YEARS AND 100 YEARS IS EXPECTED TO BE PRESENT!

There are no regular dues.

And it is nobody's business how much or how little you give if you can afford to give.

So be sure and report present.

DO YOU READ?

Every one who has a church home, should be greatly interested in its financial welfare.

There are usually certain obligations, as well as current expenses, which must be taken care of and most of us gladly do our part in seeing these obligations are paid.

Collections and various amounts turned in by the different organizations within the church go toward keeping these paid, but after all, this is your personal contribution to the church.

Now suppose we could work a plan whereby the church could earn several hundred dollars yearly, putting no additional financial burden on anyone, wouldn't that be well worthwhile?

Well, we can do just that, with your help, and this is how it will work:

Every home has one or more of the popular magazines, and naturally, whoever sells it to you gets a good commission for their trouble.

This church has arranged to accept subscriptions to most of these magazines, and when you subscribe to, or renew your magazines, if you will send the order to this church, the church will be paid the agency commission, which will make it better for all, as it is less trouble to you, and you are helping the church at the same time.

In no case do you pay more this way than you do otherwise, but in many cases you actually get your magazines considerably cheaper than you have been.

Will you help make this plan the success it should be?

Accompanying this letter is a list of the different magazines, together with their prices.

Select any magazine on this list, either as a new subscription or a renewal and send it into the church, with your name and address and the magazine you have selected, written in the spaces provided on the magazine list.

Thank you.

BACK TO THE OLD SCHEDULE SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 19TH. Morning Service, 11:00 o'clock; Sunday School, 2:30; Brotherhood of St. Andrew, 7:15 P. M.; Daughters of the King, 7:15 P. M.; Evening Service, 8:00 P. M.

FIRESIDE CLUB dues are in many cases overdue. If we don't have money to buy coal next winter instead of being well coaled we will be very cold. So you luke warm members better steam up on your payments.

How many times did you make your Communion while on your vacation?

Conscience does not make a good guide if it is put to bed as soon as it begins to hurt!

Have you heard the one about the man who received an income tax blank? He went through it carefully, and then sent it back to Washington with a note which read: "After carefully perusing your prospectus, I have decided not to join your association."

How many capitals has had the United States?

Answer: Nine.

Name them: Philadelphia, York, Lancaster, Germantown, Pa.; Princeton and Trenton, N. J.; Baltimore, New York and Washington.

Life is a place of service, and in that service one may suffer much, but more than often experience a great deal of joy. That joy can be real only if people have a definite object in life aside from themselves and their personal happiness.—Tolstoy.

Banana peels on the sidewalk will do much towards reducing your weight.

On one occasion Bishop Stires was invited to Hobart College to deliver an address. He took for an outline of his address the letters of the word "Hobart," such as H for honesty, O for order, and so on. Growing enthusiastic over his subject, the Bishop gave a prolonged discourse on each letter.

Finally the three hours were over, and as they were leaving the chapel, Ernest Stires, son of the Bishop, who had accompanied him, asked of a student how he liked his father's address.

The student replied, "I'm glad this isn't The Massachusetts Institute of Technology."

Small things may be despised, but greatness is frequently found wrapped up in littleness. A grain of faith will produce an excellent harvest of good deeds. God has put a tree into a mustard seed, an oak into an acorn, and the food of a nation into little handfuls of shining grain. Into a single individual soul he has packed sun and sea, life and death, time and eternity, the universe, and the Kingdom of God.

President Eliot of Harvard University often related the following anecdote:

"A friend of mine, a college professor," Doctor Eliot said, "went to a crowded restaurant in New York City for luncheon one day. The colored man in charge of the corridor took my friend's hat and gave no check for it in return. An hour later, when the professor came out of the dining-room, the colored man glanced at him, turned to the shelves and handed him his hat. The man's ability to remember so faithfully to whom each article of clothing belonged struck the professor as being something wonderful, and he asked:

" 'How did you know this was my heat?'

" 'I didn't know it, suh,' answer the colored man.

" 'Then why did you give it to me?' asked the man, curiously.

" ' 'Cause yo' all gave it to me fust, suh!' "

A DAY'S GIFTS

I know a lovely lady, and her name is Every Day;
Each morn she comes to greet me in her pleasant, gracious way.
She always leaves a package that's securely wrapped up tight—
It's her gift of hours and minutes that she loans me until night.

I open up my gift as soon as sleep can leave my eyes,
And usually each hour of it contains a nice surprise.
Not more than one gift at a time am I allowed to see,
And it's fun to guess and wonder what the next is going to be.

The first hour brings my breakfast and a bird's sweet morning song;
And then I go to school and take my package right along
If I've been good, my next few gifts are lessons all well learned;
At last, when school is over, my playtime gift I've earned.

If there is one gift I don't like, I am never sad,
For nearly all Day's packages hold things that make me glad.
And when I go to bed at night, I don't forget to say,
"Thank you for gifts of happiness you've brought me, Lovely Day."

THE JUNIOR DAUGHTERS OF THE KING

They Are Developing Into An Impressive Group of Girls

The Junior Daughters of the King are organizing for real service this year. The roll of members has been greatly increased and we feel sure, in their present state of mind, they will succeed in their efforts to bring Jesus Christ a little nearer to those who need his quiet and comforting presence most. We refer to the aged, the sick, and the shut-ins of our parish.

On Monday evening, October 4th, the D. of K. reorganized under the leadership of Miss Helen W. McHenry. A big group of girls were present and took an interested part in everything that was done. First, they elected officers to serve for a term of one year. The ballot resulted in the selection of the following officers: President, Miss Emma Kaiser; Vice President, Jeanette Last; Secretary, Eleanor Munion.

Ruth Rutter was chosen Chairman and Marjorie Weise, Assistant of the Cradle Roll Committee. Their special line of duty will be to co-operate with Mrs. Georgia Weise, Supervisor of the Cradle Roll, and we know she will gladly welcome the aid two such highly intelligent girls can give her.

Frances Heisler was chosen to head the group of Daughters who will conduct Cottage Meetings for the aged, sick and shut-ins; also to visit delinquent Sunday School scholars. Under her will be sub-group leaders to expedite the work. These leaders are Emma Kaiser, Leona Keelan, Eleanor Munion and Jeanette Last.

Every Sunday a list of absent scholars, teachers and officers will be given to Frances who, as "Chief Truant Officer" will divide the list with her aides and they will go forth to seek the lost or wandering sheep.

The Juniors have also asked for the privilege of making stocking dolls and other things for the Bazaar. We hope they do! We would also suggest that they make pot holders, wash cloths and pieces for the Fancy Table. The more they make the more money we will make at the Bazaar. We would further suggest that they try their hand at homemade candy, too. Or perhaps some candy covered apples; or some nice tasty little cakes.

Of course, these are just some suggestions as to how our Juniors can do worth while things. We want every member of the Parish to give them a helping hand on every occasion. They will return your good deeds an hundredfold in good works.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 7th

Is An Exceptionally Important Day

FIRST of all, it is the first Sunday in the month and is, therefore the day upon which EVERY COMMUNICANT MUST RECEIVE HIS COMMUNION.

SECONDLY, it is the day when all overdue Church Envelopes must be paid because you will have your next year's package of Church Envelopes and you will have your hands full trying to keep them paid up during the year.

JOIN THE FIRESIDE CLUB

THIRDLY, it is COAL SUNDAY and we MUST give our contribution to the FUEL FUND of the parish to keep icicles out of our hair when JACK FROST COMES TO CHURCH on winter Sundays. He is a dreadfully uncomfortable pew companion. He makes you wrap your scarf about your neck and put on your overcoat and furs and rub your hands and stamp your feet and wish the layreader would stop layreading and the Choir would hurry through the singing and the preacher wouldn't preach and that it was twelve o'clock noon and time to go home.

The only way we can keep JACK FROST from coming to church is to MAKE IT TOO HOT FOR HIM. And the only way we can make it too hot for him is to fill up the heater with good old anthracite and set the boilers sizzling. And the ONLY way we can GET coal to burn is to buy it. And the way to buy it is for us to give our coal money November 7th.

NOVEMBER 7TH is the day we "frame" Jack to keep him out of church all winter.

Let's do it right!

We can if EVERYBODY does his bit to help buy fuel. One blast of hot air and poor old J. F. will run howling with the wintery wind down Third Street.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ABOUT THE BIBLE

1. Is our Bible printed in the same language in which it was written?
   Answer: No, all modern Bibles are translations from other languages.
2. How long did it take to write the Bible?
   Answer: About 1600 years.
3. In what language was the Old Testament written?
   Answer: Hebrew.
4. In what language was the New Testament written?
   Answer: Greek.
5. What was the Septuagint?
   Answer: It is the Greek Old Testament from the original Hebrew, translated by 70 Jewish scholars of Alexandria, Egypt, in 280 B. C.
6. What was the Vulgate?
   Answer: The Bible written in Latin.
7. From what languages was it translated?
   Answer: The New Testament from the Greek; the Old Testament from the Hebrew.
8. What early English King aided in spreading the Scriptures?
   Answer: King Alfred the Great.
9. What great English scholar translated the Bible in 1383?
   Answer: Wycliffe.
10. Did the Irish help spread Bible knowledge?
    Answer: Yes, the whole of Western Europe received help from the strong Irish Church of the period. Missionaries were sent out from S. Columbo Monastry at Iona. Their chief was Aidan.
11. Who was Wycliffe's closest friend?
    Answer: John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster.
12. How did the Church treat Wycliffe for translating the Bible?
    Answer: The Council of Constance ordered his bones dug up and burned and the ashes flung into the River Swift.
13. Upon what translation was Wycliffe based?
    Answer: The Latin Vulgate.
14. How many of Wycliffe's Bibles are now extant?
    Answer: Over 170 copies.
15. Who first printed the Old Testament?
    Answer: John Tyndale in 1525.
16. What did Tyndale say about his work?
    Answer: "I will one day make the boy that drives the plough in England to know more of the Scriptures than the Pope does."
17. Where was Tyndale's New Testament printed?
    Answer: In Cologne.
18. How did Tyndale's New Testament get into England?
    Answer: It was smuggled in.
19. How many Tyndale New Testaments were printed?
    Answer: About 15,000 copies were issued in four years.
20. What happened to Tyndale?
    Answer: He was strangled at the stake and then burned to ashes in Germany as a harmful heretic, on Friday, October 6th, 1536.
21. What was Tyndale's dying prayer?
    Answer: "Lord open the eyes of the English King."
22. Who first translated the whole of the Scriptures into English?
    Answer: Miles Coverdale in 1535.
23. What was the first authorized English Scriptures?
    Answer: The Great Bible. It was authorized by King Henry VIII in 1539.
24. What was the name of the next Bible that was printed?
    Answer: The Genevan Bible. The New Testament was printed in Geneva in 1557 and the Old Testament in 1560, by English exiles. This copy found its way across the seas and into the homes of thousands of families who settled in the new world.
25. What were the next translations after the Genevan Bible?
    Answer: The Bishop's Bible, 1568-72; the Donay Bible (Roman Catholic Standard); the New Testament, 1582; the Old Testament, 1609; the King James Version, at present known as the "Authorized Version," 1611.
26. When was the American Revised Version published?
    Answer: In 1901.

THE DRAMA OF MISSIONS

All Allegory of Stupendous Proportions

There are times when the English language fails adequately to express one's thoughts and feelings. This is such a time. Neither adjectives nor adverbs are descriptive enough to translate the thrill and the wonder of that classic of all Christian Pageantry we witnessed at the Convention Hall in Philadelphia, Sunday, September 26th.

Let us quote passages from the Philadelphia papers. They will show how the occasion impressed those whose real interest is to interpret things they conceive of local importance. To stir enthusiasm in the breasts of hard boiled "newsies" is to accomplish a miracle. Here is an example of how our Inquirer reporter was impressed. Quote "The dramatic story of christian missions was unfolded with persuasive pageantry before nearly 30,000 Episcopalians who jammed Convention Hall for two performances."

"Spectacular, with all the color of foreign lands, warm with the ritual of a church which made their christian penetration possible, the mission drama attracted clergy and laity alike from this and bordering Dioceses."

"The great hall was packed to the doors at 3 P. M., and crowds equally as large, really larger, were waiting for the evening performance when the first was concluded at 7 o'clock."

"The pageant was told in ten dramatic episodes of the work of Episcopal missionaries during the last century. Music from three vast choirs and the compelling pantomine of rythmic groups supplemented the narration from the Prologue to the final brilliant Epilogue."

"Mixed choirs of 600 voices faced each other in the galleries adjacent the stage and an invisible choir sang some of the more religious passages."

"Factual aspects of the missions story were told from a pulpit between the Episodes by the Rev. Nathaniel B. Groton, rector of St. Thomas', Whitemarsh." (Incidentally these readings were most effectively rendered in rich, full tones that penetrated to the utmost stretches of the big Hall).

"The part of the Psalmist was sung by Edmund C. Helveston, of St. Peter's Church."

"The great cast itself, more than 1200 men, women and children, depicted in stirring sequence the work of Episcopal missions in Liberia, Japan, Alaska, Brazil, China, India, as well as that of the domestic missions among the American negroes in the southern mountains and the city slums."

"Six members of the Sioux tribe came to Philadelphia to play roles with which they were eminently familiar in the Episodes concerning the South Dakota Indians. Of these Miss Nancy American Horse and the Rev. Vine Deloria are perhaps the best known."

"The creator of the Drama was Percy Jewett Burrell of Boston, assisted by Alice Kraft, director of pantomime; Lamont A. Warner, Art Director; Harold W. Gilbert, Music Director, and C. Hassler Capron, technical director; Mrs. Roger B. Combs was in charge of costumes."

"The four hour pageant began with the Commission from Christ—the command to go into all the world and preach the Gospel. The consecration was portrayed in pantomime, the challenge in music and the the conflict for Christ was begun in prayer by the Missionary."

"The first Episode depicted the Baptism of a dying African Chief, who sought both forgiveness and the rites of the Church from the priest whose father the chief had slain."

These were followed in quick succession by Episodes of Japan. The place: Church of the Resurrection, Kyoto, Time: October 17th, 1936. Alaska. The place: Hudson Stuck Hospital, Fort Yukon, Time 1933. The American Negro. Time, today. The South Dakota Indians. Place: Cheyenne River Agency, Dakota Territory. Time: Summer, 1883. Also St. Elizabeth's Mission, Wakpala, South Dakota. Time: August 1935, on the occasion of the annual Indian Convocation.

AN INTERMISSION

Here followed an intermission and the PRESENTATION OF THE CHILDREN'S LENTEN OFFERING FOR 1937. One child from each school brought forward the voucher to be placed in the Alms Basin during an Organ Improvisation by Newell Robinson.

ST. JOHN'S SUNDAY SCHOOL VOUCHER WAS FOR $900.00

It represented days and weeks of hard work and great sacrifice by our children. Yet, how abundantly rewarded we felt for all our labor when we witnessed the powerful picture of what our offering meant to others who were strangers to Jesus Christ. Then followed missionary statistics of vital import to the Church and the development of its societies for establishing missions. Chronologically arranged they were as follows:

1821

the Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society was formed. Since then the General Convention ruled that the whole church was the Missionary Society and every baptized member a member of that Society.

1871

the Woman's Auxiliary was created. In due season the church established its missions in Honolulu and Mexico, in Cuba, Haiti, San Domingo, the Virgin Islands, Porto Rico, Panama, Jerusalem, Turkey, Philippines.

1877

the institution of the Sunday School Lenten Offering by J. W. Marston at St. John's Sunday School, Lower Merion, Pa. In the half century following the Sunday School children between a quarter to an half million of dollars toward missionary support.

1889

Lucian Lee Kingsolving and James W. Morris established mission stations in the southland of Brazil.

After the Rhythmic Pantomime of the Conflict between the powers of Darkness: Superstition, Ignorance, Disease, Poverty and the Powers of Light: Faith, Courage, Humility and Soul and the missionary data, the Sixth Episode was given. It was the story of labors in Brazil. The place was Rio Grande do Sul. The time: 1889.

The Seventh Episode illustrated City Missions and, because the subject is so close to home, it held a peculiar interest for the many thousands of witnesses. The

Nov. 28, 9.30--Corporate Communion--Men and Boys

Place: At the imaginary cross roads where stands the Church of City Missions. The Place: Today.

In the year 1845 the Church opened its first mission in Shanghai and in the year 1937, christian work in China had increased to 75 churches, 55 mission stations, 321 Sunday Schools, 2 Universities, 11 hospitals and dispensaries, over 12,000 communicants and almost 25,000 baptized christians. After a musical prelude the 8th Episode was presented of this work in China. The place: A Garden at General Chiang's Home. The time: A late afternoon in the spring of the year.

The 9th Episode had to do with the rural work and to many of us who came up from down on the farm it was most affecting and presented most realistically. The Place: Corbin Hollow, Virginia (about 90 miles from Washington, D. C.) The time: 1936.

The 10th Episode told the story of the Church in India. The place: India. The time: Today. It was about the most dramatic and soul stirring of all. Perhaps one contributory cause was our general ignorance of the problems of India and the way our church is solving them.

Then after the General Offering came the EPILOGUE, a thing of grandeur, dignity, color, beauty and suggestiveness of the final victory of Christ and His Church, that beggars of description. Just dream the most beautiful dream you can possibly dream—somewhat like that court scene in the book of Job with God surrounded by all the glorious majesty of heaven and its brilliant hosts and you get an idea of the court scene of the Queen Church into which came marching with martial tread all the nations of the earth to witness the signing of the Pact between Christ and His Church.

If you did not see it we are sorry for it was too beautiful and significant for our powers of depiction.

OUR ANNUAL BAZAAR

The Big Financial and Social Event of the Year

We believe in being prepared.

That is the reason we are writing about a December event in October. Thursday, Friday and Saturday, December 2 - 3 - 4, are the nights set aside for this big parochial event.

We want you to know it now, so you will get it down on your calendar and will begin to make things and beg things for the Bazaar booths.

We expect to have the same class of goods on sale as in past years. The Brotherhood of St. Andrew will have the haberdashery, or in simple English, scarfs, ties and socks for sale. The Woman's Auxiliary will be selling fancy and embroidered pieces. The Boys' Club will be asked to run the Radio. Miss Nuttall's class will have charge of the groceries. The Girl Scouts, the candy and cake table. Mrs. Young the soft drinks counter. The Junior Choir the Doll Table.

Owing to the resignation of Mrs. Frank Pine, who presided so faithfully and satisfactorily we are forced to re-arrange our supper service and have come to consider the advisability of running a lunch counter instead, selling all varieties of sandwiches, hot dogs, coffee, tea, pies, cakes, ice cream, etc., and do away with cooked suppers. We can sell things much cheaper at a greater profit and get rid of all the hard work and confusion of cooking.

There are lots of things we want you to donate. We need aprons, washcloths, pot holders, kitchen ware, all kinds of groceries, novelties, candy, lots and lots of cakes, candied apples and gifts for the Fish Pond. We have always felt proud of the quality of merchandise we offer for sale and of the reasonable price we charge for it.

Before you do your Christmas shopping come in and look over our stock of gentlemen's wear and ladies' finery. You will get the best you can buy at a much less cost than you pay at the stores.

We sell all kinds of canned goods, groceries, soaps, breakfast foods, vegetables, fruits, etc. You will save money and eat heartier if you do your Saturday marketing at the Bazaar.

Our lunch counter will quiet those pangs of hunger which intrude during an evening of pleasure.

Also, our soft drinks are guaranteed to exhilarate and not inebriate.

Going fishin' with the kids is a memorable event. They love it. So will you.

Ice Cream will be on sale every minute of every Bazaar night.

They say you can gauge a man by his dog. We say you can gauge our doggies by our men, women and children. They love 'em!

The Radio will be going every night. It is a nice place to go and sit down and rest after being on your feet all night.

And don't forget! We have a selection of dolls that is perfectly fascinating. We hear that the Junior Daughters of the King are going to make some for us. Hope they do!

Of course, we must charge a small admission fee so as to keep out the undesirable boys and girls who make trouble for everybody. But then it does not cost you one cent really; for you buy a ticket for 10 cents or 3 tickets for 25 cents and then you use the attached coupons to make purchases at any booth in the Bazaar. Of course, WE CANNOT GIVE CHANGE. The value of the coupon must be spent in full.

The Rector cordially invites as his guests to his Ice Cream Party on Thursday, December 2nd, the members of the Woman's Auxiliary, the Senior Daughters of the King, the Junior Daughters of the King, the Boys' Club, the Girl Scouts and the officers and teachers of the Sunday School. On Friday, December 3rd, the members of the Senior Choir and on Saturday, December 4th, the members of the Junior Choir.

PROMOTIONS FROM THE JUNIOR TO THE SENIOR CHOIR

The Junior Choir Is Beginning To Produce Good Material

We are pleased to announce that
Joseph Robbins
Frank McCall
Albert Weise

JOIN THE FIRESIDE CLUB

Louise Redding
Frances Heisler

have been promoted from the Junior to the Senior Choir. They have reached the age when the transfer is advisable, especially as they have qualified by their efforts, quality of their voices and deportment. We congratulate them and sincerely hope that by regular attendance to Choir Practice and Church Services, they will justify our selection for advancement.

There are others in the Junior Choir who are rapidly developing into singers worthy of our attention. We hope they will continue to put forward their best efforts to be ready for our next selection.

Incidentally, we would be willing to add new names to our Junior Choir list and when a vacancy occurs to advance the top of the list to a permanent position in the Junior Choir. Of course, this entails the assurance by the candidate that he or she will attend Junior Choir practice regularly and will be ready to take the place of a regular member who is absent from practice. It will be our policy in the future to admit to the Junior Choir on Sunday only those who attend practice the preceding Thursday. If absent, a substitute will take his or her place on Sunday. We must do this in order to keep up the quality of our singing. A choir member, by his or her absence, may destroy the program for the day by not rehearsing the singing Thursday evenings.

THAT CHURCH ENVELOPE

Several months ago the question was asked, "Why did not the parish publish its expenses?" The idea back of the question was, if our communicants knew what money was needed and for what purpose, no doubt many who were slow in paying their dues would be a little more prompt and a little more generous.

The idea seemed good to us and we sat down to do some thinking. Our conclusion was we ought to act on the suggestion and see how it works. We did so. And we were agreeably surprised at the results. Finances were pretty low and we had no money to pay our monthly salaries to our Parish Visitor, our Sexton, etc. Also we needed, and did not have, money for our gas and electric light bills. Also we needed money for repairs, which, if neglected, would damage the property badly and would require extraordinary efforts on the part of the parish to raise extra funds. Then, too, there was the insurance money on the property to be paid, which is no small item; as the Church and the Parish House buildings represent a valuation of nearly $90,000.00 and the annual premiums to keep the insurance paid up and in a state of safety, is a considerable item of expense.

Then, too, is the question of repairs to the furniture of the church. Some boys and girls think it is great sport to stand at one end of the Gymnasium and hurl a chair to the other end just for the fun of hearing it crash to bits. Others seem to consider that a piano is not intended to be played upon but played with. If a kid thinks there are too many hammers in the instrument, he solves the problem by ripping out an handful and naturally the piano goes mute. Well, all that sort of juvenile sport is expensive. We are forced to raise $250.00 for a new piano now because just a few weeks ago Margaret Nelson could not rehearse the Junior Choir because some youngster or youngsters, in a perverted and destructive spirit of fun, had ripped out nearly all the delicate hammers of the piano so that it is ruined. It can never be used.

So you see, counting in the necessary money for music, Bibles, Prayer Books, Hymnals and stationery, we do need the prompt return of that Church Envelope. And, in order to keep you up to date as to our Current Expenses, we will mail every member of the parish a monthly postal stating our expenses, requesting the prompt return of all delinquent church envelopes, so that we can pay our bills promptly and make plans for the extension of the work.

BROADCASTING FROM STATION S. T. J. C.

HOW TO GET THE CHURCH INTO DEBT

1. Refuse to pledge an offering.
2. Delay in paying your pledge and pay only if asked.
3. Never pay your pledge—be a defaulter.
4. Pay as little as you can. A cent a week or 52 cents a year would just about put the church in the red.
5. Bluff the church by taking a package of envelopes and throwing it into the waste basket.

That's a trick that even the Devil enjoys.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 7TH, IS COAL SUNDAY.

Jack Frost positively refuses to attend service in a warm church. He's funny that way.

Sometimes we make mistakes. If any Fireside Clubber, WHOSE DUES ARE PAID IN FULL, should receive a coal envelope, do not pay any attention to it. It's just another one of our mistakes.

We need $400.00 for coal this winter. The members of the Fireside Club will pay part of this debt. It is up to you to pay the other part.

Our Annual Bazaar is on the way. The date of arrival is December 2, 3, 4.

DON'T DO YOUR CHRISTMAS SHOPPING TOO EARLY.

Wait for the bargains our Bazaar will offer.

Sunday, December 5th, is Bible Sunday. We are going to give away 100 Bibles to families in South Philadelphia who have none.

Congratulations to the Juniors who are now Seniors.

THE JUNIOR DAUGHTERS OF THE KING have planned a splendid season of service. Their program provides for cottage services for the shut-ins of the parish, visitation of delinquent Sunday School scholars, assisting Mrs. Weise with the Cradle Roll, making stocking dolls and other toys for the Bazaar and everything girls can do for the sake and in the name of Jesus Christ.

BAZAAR---DECEMBER 2nd - 3rd - 4th

The meetings of the BROTHERHOOD OF ST. ANDREW are most interesting. They are working hard to make Bible Sunday a big event. Also they are making a survey of the parish.

The District Superintendents are authorized to be collectors of their respective districts. You can with confidence turn over your overdue church envelopes and Fireside Club dues to them.

The Brotherhood asks for the names and addresses of men and boys living in the parish who do not attend church. They are planning a missionary drive for our next Confirmation Class.

The Senior Daughters of the King hold their meetings every Monday evening at 8 o'clock in the large Sunday School room. The attendance is much better than before. We want more members. How about all the women of the parish over twenty-five years of age making application?

CORPORATE COMMUNION OF ALL THE MEN AND BOYS OF THE PARISH SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 9:30 A. M.

HOW TO GET THE CHURCH OUT OF DEBT

1. Make a voluntary pledge to give an offering.
2. Pay promptly every week. And, if for any reason, you were unable to be present the week previous, bring the back envelope, too.
3. Your pledge is your WORD OF HONOR to GOD. If you default in payments you cheat GOD.
4. Give as much as you can afford, because the Lord LOVETH A CHEERFUL GIVER.

BIBLE SUNDAY

Sunday, December 5th, All Day

THE BIBLE COLLECT

"BLESSED LORD, WHO HAST CAUSED ALL HOLY SCRIPTURES TO BE WRITTEN FOR OUR LEARNING, GRANT THAT WE MAY IN SUCH WISE HEAR THEM, READ, MARK, LEARN AND INWARDLY DIGEST THEM, THAT BY PATIENCE AND COMFORT OF THY HOLY WORD, WE MAY EMBRACE AND EVER HOLD FAST, THE BLESSED HOPE OF EVERLASTING LIFE, WHICH THOU HAST GIVEN US IN OUR SAVIOUR JESUS CHRIST. AMEN."

One afternoon near closing time of the Albion Fair, the Rev. H. D. Findlay, Colporteur of the American Bible Society, was approached by a gentleman who asked him, "Don't you think you are wasting your time bringing Bibles to a County Fair?"

"Why do you think so?" he asked.

"Well," he replied, "if we don't need them in churches or in Sunday Schools any more, why at a fair ground?"

Then he told me that he was superintendent of a Sunday School where nothing but a leaflet was used, and that they had no Bibles in the church pews.

Looking at his watch, he asked the man if he had an half hour to give him before he closed up for the night. He wanted to show him what the people at the Albion Fair ground thought of the Bible. He agreed to stay.

Mounting a box inside the booth he began advising the people to get their Bibles and Testaments, as he would be closing up in an half hour. How the Sunday School superintendent's eyes opened as he saw the people moving forward!

In less than half an hour Dr. Findlay had sold forty-two Bibles and Testaments. The Superintendent helped him pack up, went down to the train with him, and now there are Bibles in his Sunday School and in his church pews also.

Dr. Findlay had shown him how the majority of people not only NEED but WANT the Bible.

We believe this story. Our own experience convinces us that the thoughts of men properly directed will quickly respond to the influence of God's "Holy Word." For instance, in our Collect we learn that God caused the Bible to be written for our study; and as we need the spirit of application to study we ask him for it; so that we may love and cling to the hope of life it extends to us.

The reason the Bible is the most popular book in the world and has such profound hold upon human imagination is because it deals with and solves the problems of life more satisfactorily than any other book known to men.

It is our ambition, therefore, to place a copy of the HOLY BIBLE in the home of every family in the parish where one is desired and are asking every parish organization to assist in a survey of the parish. In the meantime, we hope to raise sufficient funds to buy the Bibles. Then we will arrange an appropriate service and program for Sunday, December 5th, the morning to be given over to a Celebration of the Holy Communion, music by the combined choirs and a short address by the Rector. In the afternoon, we will have a Bible Celebration in the Church, the Junior Choir, vested, will lead the singing of appropriate hymns. There are other features we are considering to make the occasion worthy of the great work we hope to accomplish.

Of course, the BIG EVENT will be the Distribution of the Bible to those who need them.

We want YOU to co-operate and help make this a big event by coming to the celebration and bringing somebody with you. Remember the date is—

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 5TH, ALL DAY!

CAN YOU READ? DO YOU READ? WILL YOU READ?

Our can-do-will interrogation is a desperate attempt on our part to pin your attention down to a notice we have issued time and time again in past issues of the BROADCASTER.

We are referring again to this matter of asking for duplicate baptismal, confirmation, wedding certificates

Nov. 28, 9.30--Corporate Communion--Men and Boys and certificates as to the name, date, cause, etc., of the death of a late communicant.

In regards to the first three mentioned, they are always issued on the occasion of the event with the admonition to be careful and preserve them because they are of legal importance to the owner.

We have, as just stated, admonished the readers of the Broadcaster in previous editions that they must exercise more care and not lose these important papers. We have tried in every way to make our members understand that they must not be so careless as to mislay or lose them. And finally we have reached the conclusion that either folk cannot read, or do not read; or will not read. Because we are bombarded every day, just as heavily, for request for duplicates.

It seems utterly useless to tell how much time and trouble we must spend in searching the church records for the required data; especially when applicants are so provokingly hazy as to the date of the event, or else give you a date that is two or three years either before or after the event. In many instances we have spent days in searching through the church register. When we are thus engaged we are neglecting our job and spending our time just to accommodate one who has refused to realize the value of these important papers.

THEREFORE PLEASE READ, MARK, LEARN and INWARDLY DIGEST this:—From henceforth every duplicate baptismal, confirmation or wedding certificate will be furnished applicants at THE COST OF ONE DOLLAR IN ADVANCE.

We trusted one man this week to pay for a duplicate wedding certificate. Oh yes, he would send the dollar to our CRADLE ROLL fund immediately. Today we got a postal saying he would not pay; SO THE BABIES ON OUR CRADLE ROLL ARE CHEATED OUT OF ANOTHER DOLLAR!

HEREAFTER
Our terms for duplicate certificates of every kind are either

C. O. D. OR IN ADVANCE.

WE WANT A BLOWER

For several months the Vestry has been discussing the need of a blower for our boilers in order that our group of buildings may be more adequately and expeditiously heated than they are at present. We know exactly what we want and we are going to get it just as soon as you are willing we should. You have the decision in your hands and we are waiting for your permission to act. As the blower necessary to solve our heating problem is an expense charged against the Fireside Club and the Fuel account of the Church, we would ask all Fireside Clubbers to pay up their back dues and all communicants not Fireside Club members to KEEP THEIR PROMISE on Coal Sunday, November 7th, and deposit their COAL ENVELOPE on the OFFERING. In order to have sufficient funds for our winter's supply of coal and to buy a blower

EVERYBODY MUST GIVE!!!

WHAT DO YOU EARN?

An Impertinent Way of Asking A Pertinent Question

But really we do not mean to be impertinent. We are trying to aid you in solving a problem of mutual interest. You see, your church offerings ought to be in ratio to your wages or income. Now if you use a Schedule in budgeting your income, and do not try any tricks of Ananias with your pencil and paper, we are sure you can make a fair division of your income and give your share for the support of the church.

How about glancing over the attached schedule? Maybe it will help you decide what you can afford.

A PROPORTIONATE SCALE

SOLUTION

By Jos. R. Cushing

We'd need no guns nor armor plate,
Nor scribbled peace filled pacts;
We'd need not fortify our walls
From any vile attacks;
We'd need not hold the sabre hilt,
Nor grip the trigger hence,
Had we a simple, single faith—
A little confidence.

We'd need no doles nor public alms,
Nor funds to stimulate
The poor and weak, by outward help,
Nor taxes by the state
As sums to aid the banks defunct,
If men would use some sense
And feed their panic stricken minds
A little confidence.

ADVENT

The Beginning of the Christian Year

ADVENT signifies COMING. It is designated to celebrate our Lord's coming in the flesh in humility to dwell among men and SAVE the lost. At the same time ADVENT is the season in which we commemorate the second coming at some distant time to JUDGE the world.

The season seems to have reference in its four Sundays to the fourfold revelations Jesus Christ makes of himself, by His Life, His Word, His Ministry and His Spirit.

The Advent Sundays are days of preparation for the observation of the Great Christmas festival. They wait as heralds or precursors to announce its approach and make men fit to enter into and profit by its joyful solemnities.

The First Sunday in Advent is always the Sunday nearest to the feast of St. Andrew (November 30th) whether it occurs before or after that feast, and is the NEW YEAR'S DAY of the Christian Calendar.

Advent Sunday, which falls three weeks before the fourth Advent Sunday, will fall successively on December 3, 2, 1, November 30, 29, 28, 27 in never ending routine. To those seven days Advent Sunday is tethered.

THANKSGIVING DAY

Thursday, November 25, 1937

Thanksgiving Day has become an American institution so firmly rooted in our national calendar that it can never be removed. Yet we Americans cannot claim originality of the idea. It is one of those holidays that has an ancestry of great antiquity. In almost every civilization, since the beginning of seed time and harvest, the gathering in of the crops and the fruits of the earth has been attended with special festivals of great rejoicing.

The impulse in every age and nation has been more or less religious. Unhappily, however, in most cases they gradually lost their religious aspect and assumed the features of drunken and licentious orgies.

So far the nation has kept ever in mind the Divine Source of all our needs and comforts. Annually the Chief Executive of our country issues a proclamation to all true believers to congregate in their several places of worship on THANKSGIVING DAY to render thanksgiving and praise to our Father in Heaven for His Providence expressed in the material blessings of the earth.

This summons to worship is to all classes of people of all denominations and faith. The rich, the middle class, the poor, the aged, the children, the Jew, the Roman Catholic, the Protestant, the white, the black, the Indian, the foreigner, are all exhorted to "Praise God from whom all blessings flow" on Thanksgiving Day.

You, my brother, yes YOU, are included in that annual invitation issued from the White House in Washington. It is a notable invitation, one that you do honor to yourself to accept. Let us, therefore, join hand in hand and heart to heart this Thanksgiving Day and give God the praise for His love and care.

It seems to me that we sons and daughters of America have special reason to be thankful this year. Not only has PROSPERITY in increasing manifestations come among us but also PEACE has overshadowed us with wings of protection. And we need only to look over the seas to realize what that means to us. Yes, God has given us PROSPERITY and PEACE that we may rest in comfort and security.

Surely for those gifts we must be grateful. Surely Thanksgiving Day will be given over to prayer and praise to our Father for His loving care. Surely we will not neglect this Act of Acknowledgment and loyalty by congregating in our places of worship on THANKSGIVING DAY. Surely we do not mean to turn the entire day into a Baccanelian orgie or a day of games and pleasure!

Oh, yes, by all means engage in pastimes and games and feasting and dancing and every kind of legitimate enjoyment within proper limits; but FIRST join us in our Temples and

WORSHIP THE LORD IN THE BEAUTY OF HOLINESS.

THE THANKSGIVING OFFERING

It has been the custom of the Parish for many years to have an Harvest Home in the late fall, at which time we brought to the church all sorts of provisions, fruits, groceries, partly-worn clothing, etc., for distribution among the poor of the Parish. This year we have omitted doing so because our time is so completely occupied with important matters that we cannot get a chance to organize.

In default of this much-to-be-desired contribution to the needs of our poor we are asking that you present a Thank Offering on Thanksgiving Day, the proceeds to be used entirely for the relief of the poor and the shut-in of the Parish.

If we can raise a Thank Offering of $200.00 it will be possible for us to sell part-price coal to the poor. Instead of paying $9.75 per ton it would cost only $7.00. And instead of paying cash it could be paid in installments.

Why not try to build up such a fuel fund by making a worth while Thankskiving Offering?

WHY A BAZAAR?

Its Place In the Parochial Scheme

The older and more experienced we get the more our ideas and ideals change. There was a time, and not so very long ago at that, when we expressed our opinion in no uncertain terms about this business of entertainments, suppers, bazaars, etc. We revolted at such ways of raising funds to support the work of the Parish. We are not sure but that we are still of the opinion that God's work OUGHT TO BE ENTIRELY SUPPORTED BY GIFTS AND OFFERINGS OF GOD'S PEOPLE. At least that is the ideal way to do it. And certainly we should never lower our standards, but insist on keeping them unfurled.

THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OUGHT TO BE AS ADEQUATELY AND SPONTANEOUSLY SUPPORTED BY OUR OFFERINGS AS WERE THE TEMPLE AND SYNAGOGUES OF THE JEWS.

Well, then, what are we to do about our Bazaar if we do not favor such a method of raising funds? Let's answer that by asking another. Why is it necessary to have a Bazaar just to support the work? Why not use the Bazaar for other purposes? For instance, a bazaar is a great place to meet old friends at least once a year and have a good old fashioned gossipfest about what we used to do. Who got married to whom, and where he or she "move to" out of Southwark, who died when and where. Or whose baby got christened, etc., ad Infinitum. In case we get hungry or thirsty while we visit around from group to group, there will be the Lunch Counter, where you can join each other in "dunking a doughnut" in a cup of Java or "chewing a doggie" or indulging in an ice cream spree. Or if you feel like doing your Christmas shopping conveniently you just need to walk around the room and wherever you go you will find some tempting object not too expensive that will fit right into your Christmas budget. You can do even your marketing there economically and buy the best. When you get weary you can go over and sit in a few radio games and you will be amused and occupied while you are resting. Before going home you can step up to the candy table and buy a box of candy or a layer cake, or go over and buy an half dozen oranges and take 'em home to the folks. If you have any little girls they will be interested in our Doll Table, of course. You can take her over and show her how many varieties of dollies we have. Perhaps she will want you to buy one. Well, why not? You were young once yourself and you know how it is with the children.

What did you say? Am I not forgetting the big idea previously expressed that the church should be supported by gifts and donations and not by the income from a Bazaar or some other mouey raising method?

Yes, I did say that very thing. But there is nothing so inconsistent about us. I still think we ought to DIG DEEP for funds for the Church; but also I still think WE OUGHT TO HAVE A BAZAAR JUST FOR THE FUN OF THE THING. I am not saying we don't need the money for parochial use NOW but what's wrong with praying for Grace to GIVE more to God's work? However, until we can feel the grace to give adequately to the Church we must use the proceeds of our Bazaar a little longer to pay our bills.

Anyhow, there's lots of fun in a Bazaar and we are going to go and have the time of our life and until we are "broke" and have done "our bit" for its success. Remember the dates are—

BUY AND BUY AND BUY

THE DOMESTIC TABLE

We forgot to mention the Domestic Table as one of the list of tables for our BAZAAR. It was an oversight which we were glad to have brought to our attention. The Domestic Table is one of the important tables of the Bazaar. On it we have pot holders, tea towels, dish rags, all sorts of kitchen utensils and carving kits. We can sell soaps, scrub brushes, household ammonia, mops, aprons, oilcloth table covers, boxes of tacks, can openers or anything else, even to pots and pans and skillets and knives and forks, and spoons—if we can persuade some good kind folk to donate them.

BAZAAR --- DECEMBER 2nd - 3rd - 4th

HOW DO YOU LIKE OUR MONTHLY BUDGET?

Several months ago we sent appeals through the parish for a prompt return of overdue church envelopes in order to pay our bills that were unpaid because we had no funds in the Treasury. We were answered, Yankee fashion, by some of our members who wanted to know why we did not inform the communicants as to how much money we needed and why we needed it.

That query made us sit up. It was a perfectly just and proper question and deserved a frank and cordial answer. Since then we have been thinking of the best way to get over the required information to our members, so as to give them an intelligent idea as to the expenses of the parish.

The result of our cogitations was a monthly postal card statement of our parish needs. Just a simple statement of how much money we required to pay our monthly salaries for service, coal and light bills, repair and stationery bills and for necessary supplies for our Sunday School departments, church and choir. You know, now that we have a double choir of 50 voices, the expenses for vestments, laundry and mending, as well as for sheet music and tuning and repairing the church organ and pianos, we have enormously increased our budget of expenses. But when we are in church and are being led in worship by our choirs, we cannot but feel the cost of maintenance is money wisely spent.

The point we wish to make is—we know we ought to report our needs in dollars and cents to our people and also let them know what balance, if any, we have on hand to meet our needs and then remind each that we do not need extraordinary ways of raising our funds, if every member of the parish will promptly support the parish by paying up their envelopes EVERY MONTH in the month the envelopes are due.

It's just like paying your rent. You have a definite date when your rent must be paid and you pay it on that day. Well, you have a definite limit to the time you ought to pay your church dues and you ought to pay it on that day. In order to stimulate you in doing so, we have devised this method of informing you of the amount of the parish obligations with a reminder that the bills for the month can be paid without embarrassment if YOU—YOU WHO ARE READING THIS, will turn in your church envelopes containing your offerings every Sunday, if possible, but at least every month. You ought not to allow your church envelopes for one month to overlap those of the next month.

Here is the information you received this month as to our parish obligations. If you return ALL your envelopes, both due and overdue; and your Fireside dues, we can easily pay our bills. Here is the set-up for November.

OUR NOVEMBER BUDGET

Salaries, Sexton, Parish Visitor, etc.	$144.00
Gas and Electricity, Parish House and Church	30.00
Repairs	25.00
Supplies, Stationery, Postage, Music, Bibles, Prayer Books, etc.	50.00
Coal, estimate for month	150.00
Total	$399.00

If YOU pay in YOUR Church Envelopes and YOUR coal Fund dues we can pay the bill with ease. If YOU default in paying YOUR missing offering, it will create a serious situation for the parish.

We have tried to give you an honest and fair statement. Now will you be equally fair to us and to your Church and turn in your envelopes and bring your church accounts up-to-date?

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Who is to blame for the decline of the Sunday School system? To us this is a timely question and needs to be seriously considered and some sort of program set up that will strengthen this most important of all departments of religious education.

The blame, in many instances, rests upon the attitude of the priest of the parish. For some mysterious reason some of our brothers of the cloth disparage the Sunday School and seem to consider the institution as worse than worthless to the Parish. Usually their parochial weakness and lack of influence testify to the fallacy of their theory.

Again the blame lies solely at the door of the home. The father or mother, or both, feel that it is a sort of cruel and unusual punishment to send the boy or girl to Sunday School every Sunday when they might join their companions in hiking or other juvenile social events created for the day.

Sometimes the blame belongs to the child. He rebels against the Sunday School and plays "hookey" when the parents send him and trusts to a well planned lie to get over the delinquency if the question arises.

These and many similar causes are responsible for the weakness of the Sunday School.

Naturally the question arises, "What difference does it make, after all, whether the Sunday School is strong or weak?"

The answer to that question is written in statistics so big and so emphatic that it is impossible to ignore it. Men of highest integrity and culture are on record as judging the power and influence of the Sunday School of inestimable importance to growing children.

How any parent can be so inconsistent as to insist that the son or daughter apply themselves to their school studies because those studies, properly pursued, means future MATERIAL success of the child; and then be so unconcerned about their Sunday School studies, which so profoundly affect their whole SPIRITUAL development, is incomprehensible. They do not "get the idea" that a trained mind minus a spiritual governor (the conscience) is most unsafe and, in the end, often causes complete wreck of not only spiritual but also physical life.

A few weeks ago we received notice from our boiler insurance that all our boilers and heating apparatus must be equipped AT ONCE with proper valves and conductors for safety's sake. May we suggest that every boy and every girl needs to be equipped with the governor of spiritual restraint to keep him or her, within the laws of moral and spiritual safety.

If you boy or your girl goes wrong and wrecks their career we are sure that a little investigation will show you that the spiritual governor (the conscience) went "hay wire."

Be wise! Don't ignore the spiritual education of your son, your daughter. Do not imagine the most important thing for your offspring is FUN.

All FUN and no SERIOUS THOUGHT makes Jack, and also Jill, pretty dangerous.

STANDARDS OF VALUES

How Do We Estimate the Worth of Things?

The question sounds academic and maybe it is. However, from the start we want it understood we are not about to take a deep plunge into the mysteries of values. We are dubs and probably do not know what we are talking about.

Now that we have made it safe to proceed we will, for the nonce, dally with glittering generalities and try not to lose ourselves in the jungle of statistics. What we mean is this:

I have a blank piece of paper, 6 2/16 x 2 9/16 inches. Now that piece of paper is not worth a cent to me. Yet that piece of paper, under certain conditions, possesses enormous possibilities and a value beyond one's wildest dreams.

For instance, I know of a certain corporation who can take that or a similar piece of paper of the same size and quality and by certain manipulations can make it worth 100 times a cent. I willingly accept its new valuation. I will give a dollar in exchange for it. Or, I will give a dollar's worth of merchandise for it. Or, I will give a dollar's worth of work for it and will not feel that I am being cheated just because it is a piece of paper.

WHY?

Simply because that corporation made that piece of blank paper WORTH a dollar. As a matter of fact it IS a dollar; because that corporation, i. e., the United States Government, has stamped that value upon it. Its stamp has enhanced its value 100 cents. The Government can perform even greater miracles with pieces of blank paper. It can stamp another piece of paper of the same size and quality and make it worth 200 cents. It can stamp another piece and make it worth 500 cents. It can stamp another piece and make it worth 1000 cents. And it can go on stamping pieces of paper of the same size and quality up to as much as $1,000,000 and you and I accept it at what we call its face value.

What is the secret of the Government's power to perform such magic? How can it make a piece of paper, worthless in itself, command one thousand dollars of commodities of any store, firm or bank in the country?

Of course, the answer is the Government has resources of sufficient value in reserve to warrant it in endowing that piece of paper with whatever value it so chooses. It GUARANTEES that. Back of that stamp there are one thousand dollars worth of funds deposited in favor of that piece of paper.

Now that is just about the way the value of a man's life is created. We know that just as human beings we do not rate very high with the world. What we mean is—if all the newborn babies of the community were laid side by side they would appear to be so many naked little human animals. You could not tell which was the son of poverty or which was the heir of millions. Then at the sorting out process a certain number of those babies are claimed by poor parents. They are the one dollar babies, according to the world's standard of values. Others go into better environments and became two dollar babies. Others are claimed by wealthy parents and they will become million dollar babies. Yet, all the time they are just babies. Their values are estimated only in dollars and cents. All belong on the same plane of animal life. All are endowed with human powers, instincts, passions, feelings and needs. Yes, a dollar baby and a million dollar baby may be so nearly alike as to be mistaken for twins. Yet, their values are different.

WHY?

Just because the resources of the respective families enabled them to stamp them of such value. All the time they still are just human babies—born equal in God's sight.

Now take man for instance. Men are just men when stripped of wealth and power and prestige. Yet some are of more value to the community than others. Some possess initiative, imagination, creative and executive powers. Some are scientific, some artistic, some just sons of toil, all brawn and bone and physical power. All these men, in their several capacities, are of value to the community. Some more. Some less.

WHY?

Just because the SUPREME POWER, possessing inexhaustable resources takes man and stamps him with certain value. That stamp marks him a man apart from his fellow man. His value to the community depends upon the mental or physical or spiritual capacity God has endowed him with. You must always remember man is just another animal until God stamps him with HIS nature and HIS likeness. Therefore "why indeed should the spirit of mortal be proud?" Like a piece of blank paper, so many inches long, so many inches wide, we are worthless until we are stamped by the Supreme Power of Life—God. Then we are such as He wills. Some of small currency, others of high denomination. Both NECESSARY values to Him.

No man would buy a loaf of bread with a thousand dollar bill even if he were worth a million. A fact which teaches us the great necessity of currency of little value. So with God's currency—men—we are not all of high value; yet, those of LESSER VALUE are really MORE NECESSARY to God in most human transactions. So, if you at any time should feel of little value to yourself, remember the currency most in circulations is small change. Dollars are in most everybody's pocket and constantly circulate in trade and stores. Thousand dollar notes, which are a thousand times more valuable, are kept in banks out of sight and work only once in a while.

Personally, I would much rather be a dollar bill always in circulation and always doing a dollar's worth of good, than be a thousand dollar note which goes nowhere except from bank or vault, to vault or bank, and then always secretly.

MEMORIAL FLOWERS

A Beautiful Tribute To Our Beloved Deceased

Only those who have gone down into the Valley of the Shadows know how often and how lovingly our hearts and our minds look back over the way of life to the crossroad where we parted for a season from our beloved. We know just when and where they turned aside and we went on. We never want to forget that time. Every year its anniversary brings back memories of those other days when we walked and talked with them. We feel the urge to do something to show their memory lingers.

What can be a more beautiful tribute to them than flowers on the Altar of Jesus Christ who, through Divine Love, died that we might live.

You know our way of placing a memorial bouquet upon St. John's Altar. You have seen them and know how big and beautiful they are. The object of this paragraph is to remind you that you too can avail yourself of this way to remember your deceased.

The bouquets, large and beautiful as they are, cost you only $1.00. Give your dollar with the name of your beloved and the date of the anniversary and on the Sunday nearest to that date a memorial bouquet will be placed upon the Altar. Also, the name of the person in whose memory the flowers are given will be published in the new Memorial Column of the Broadcaster.

Miss Anna Schabacker has sole charge of the Flower Fund. Give her your memorandum, along with the price of your floral tribute, and you can confidently rely upon her looking after the details.

Furthermore, you have absolutely the disposal of the flowers after they have served their purpose. You can claim them if you choose to take them to the cemetery and place them upon the grave. Or you can direct Miss Schabacker to send them to some sick or shut-in in the parish. You may choose, if you so desire, the sick or shut-in who shall receive the flowers. Or you can direct that they be sent to a local hospital to brighten up the ward for the patients.

Of course, it will be necessary for the money to accompany the order as we are on a cash basis with our florist for all such bouquets. THANKSGIVING DAY, all the Sundays in ADVENT, CHRISTMAS DAY and EPIPHANY are very appropriate for

MEMORIAL FLOWERS.

OUR NEW BLOWER

Finally, we stopped blowing about blowers and installed one. We really did need it, but we could not reach a unanimous opinion on the size and cost of the new equipment. So the only way to settle the question was to get a blower attached to the furnace and give it a tryout with the understanding that it must give satisfaction or be removed without cost to the church.

There were many important reasons for getting a blower, the chief of which was the poor draft in the cellar which made it next to impossible to force heat to the boilers; consequently, artificial draft had to be created. Another important consideration was the time and coal it saves in heating the church. In extremely cold weather it was dangerous to bank the fires for the heat would die down at once and the chill would last for hours. Now it is possible to preserve an even temperature with less use of fuel. And last of all it promises to reduce our coal bill about $100.00 a year, because we get a better and a hotter fire from a bed of rice or buckwheat coal than we do from a larger and more expensive size coal.

The blower, including all electric connections, cost the parish $95.00. We need the members of the parish to help raise the money to pay the bill.

WILL YOU HELP?

BROADCASTING FROM S. T. J. C.

A big Thanksgiving Offering on Thanksgiving Day means PART-PRICE COAL for the poor of the Parish. We will be able to reduce the price from $9.75 to $7.00, but to do so our T. O. must be not less than $200.00 and ought to be $300.00.

The new Blower is attached to the church heater and is working. It cost $95.00 and is not paid for as yet.

We are out to make JACK FROST sweat or get out of our church this winter. He is one fellow who is NOT welcome. Yet he always comes to churches and chills the worshipers who do not pay their coal bill. So be warned, you slackers, "JACK FROST will catch YOU if you don't watch out."

The increased attendance in our Sunday School is a source of great satisfaction to us.

The Rector suggests that in order to stimulate class interest that the teachers of each class set a date for a class party and dance, to be held either at the home of the teacher or of one of the scholars living in the vicinity of the church. It has been further suggested that the scholars be asked to invite friends to the party who are not members of the class but who might be induced to join if the ice is broken by contacts with other class members at such a function.

One or two teachers suggested they have "hikes" instead of parties. Not a bad idea. Encourage the class members to invite their friends to go along.

ALL THESE CLASS FUNCTIONS OUGHT TO BE HELD BEFORE DECEMBER 1ST, IF POSSIBLE.

THE BIBLE

As we have it today, in the King James version, it is incomparably the finest piece of literature in our language. No poetry is more sublime than the Song of Solomon or the Psalms of David. No drama is greater than the Book of Job; no narrative finer than the Gospel of St. Luke; no vision in words more exalted than the Revelation.

If every other piece of printed or written matter in our language were to be destroyed, and one copy of the Bible remained, the power and beauty of our common tongue would remain in perfect structure.

Not only is it the source of Christian truth and the rule for Christian life, but the most dependable of all guides for personal and group conduct. In his famous Bunker Hill speech to the descendants of the Pilgrims, Webster said "It teaches man his own individual responsibility, his own dignity, and his equality with his fellow-men."

"There never has been found, in any age of the world, either religion or law that did so highly exalt the public good as the Bible," said Lord Bacon.

"I have always said, I always will say, that the studious perusal of the sacred volume will make better citizens, better fathers and better husbands," said Thomas Jefferson. And from Milton this: "There are no songs comparable to the songs of Zion; no orations equal to those of the prophets, and no politics like those which the Scriptures teach."

"A Bible and a newspaper in every house, a good school in every district—all studied and appreciated as they merit—are the principal support of virtue, morality, and civic liberty," said Benjamin Franklin.

What others have said of it may mean much. What you yourself will find in it means more than words can tell.

THE HIGHWAY

Two men were riding along one day,
Each seemingly traveling the same highway.
Said one to the other: "What a terrible waste—
Just look at those flowers! They are every place;
And there, where a garden ought to be,
Flowers! flowers! are all you can see."
Said the other: "They are just God's way
Of showing His love on this great highway.
We, the sons of men, are blind,
But He knows the needs of all mankind.
Gardens supply the physical needs,
But flowers inspire us to beautiful deeds."

The highway of life—how full it should be
Of the flowers of love, for all to see.
Kindness should blossom in every heart;
Flowers, freely given, their fragrance impart
To all whom we meet, by night or by day.
Thank God for the flowers along the highway!

—Re Throckmorton.

THE MAN WHO'S SQUARE

There is something in the twinkle
Of an honest fellow's eye,
That can never be mistaken
And can never be passed by!
Be his station high or lowly,
There's that dauntless, upright air,
That convinces all beholders
That the man they see is "square."

Heaven gives such men influence
Over those they daily meet;
If they see a fallen brother,
They will help him to his feet!
Make the sneaks a bit uneasy,
Make the false act kind of rare,
For the greatest rogue on record
Will respect the man who's "square."

—Selected.

"ATTAINMENT"

Use all your hidden forces, Do not miss
The purpose of this life, and do not wait
For circumstance to mould and change your fate.
In you own self lies destiny, Let this Vast truth cast out all fear, all prejudice,
All hesitation. Know that you are great,
Great with divinity. So dominate
Environment, and enter into bliss,—
Love largely and hate nothing, Hold no aim
That does not chord with universal good.
Hear what the voices of the silence say,
All joys are yours if you will but put forth your claim,
Once let the spiritual laws be understood,
Material things must answer and obey.

BOOK OF BOOKS

Thou art a lamp whose flickering light is old;
Yet, in the darkened hours of earth's new day,
It shines anew, to mark the certain way
Of joy and peace and glories still untold.

Thou art a flame which purifies the gold
Of man's true self, and burns the dross away.
Misshapen by the forms of baser clay,
Tomorrow's life must find thy nobler mold.

Thou art a blazing sun whose warming light
Still dries the dew of penitential tears,
Gives life to all the world, makes clear to sight
The power of Truth, the love that conquers fears.
O Book of Books, our Lamp, our Flame, our Sun, Reveal! Refine! Inspire! till Heaven is won.

—Alfred Grant Walton.

OUR PRESIDENT BISHOP ELECT

The Rt. Rev. Henry St. George Tucker

Those of St. John's people who attended the Missionary Mass Meeting in the Church of the Holy Trinity on Friday night, November 12th, and heard the stirring message given by the Rt. Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, the Presiding Bishop-elect, must have been convinced that in his selection to this high office the cause of Missions will go forward under the leadership of one whose whole ministry has been characterized by a deep devotion to that great cause.

We of St. John's, who are a part of the great body of Church people in the Diocese of Pennsylvania and who have never faltered in our support of Missions, joined in the welcome to the Presiding Bishop-elect. We, along with others of our Diocese, are justly proud that the Presiding Bishop-elect's first visitation to any Diocese outside his own has been to Pennsylvania.

Although Bishop Tucker does not assume his duties as Presiding Bishop until January first, there is already unmistakable evidence throughout the whole Church of a determined effort to rally around him in advancing the Church's Missionary work in all fields.

Bishop Tucker has long been a conspicuous figure in the Missionary life of the Church.

Immediately following his election as Presiding Bishop by the General Convention in Cincinnati last month, he declared that promotion of the Missionary cause, in obedience to Christ's command, would be the one single purpose of his administration. We, of St. John's, will gladly follow his leadership.

Bishop Tucker is a member of a distinguished Virginia family which has provided many notable leaders in the life of the Church in America. His father, deceased in recent years, was the Rt. Rev. Beverly Dandridge Tucker, for long years the beloved Bishop of Southern Virginia. A brother, the Rev. Beverly Dandridge Tucker, Jr., is Rector of historical St. Paul's Church in Richmond, Va. A sister is the wife of the Rev. Dr. Luke M. White, Rector of St. Luke's Church, Montclair, New Jersey.

The new Presiding Bishop was born in Warsaw, Virginia, July 16, 1874. Being 63 years old he will complete two Trienniums before the age of 68 compels his retirement at the next General Convention to follow that milestone. Bishop Tucker is a graduate of the University of Virginia, and after courses at the Virginia Theological School, Alexandria, was in 1899 successively made Deacon and Priest. He immediately volunteered for service in Japan, served variously in Sendai and Hirosaki, and completed ten years as President of St. Paul's University, Tokyo, before his election as Missionary Bishop of Kyoto. The Bishop served during the war as a Major in the A. E. F. and continued Red Cross work in Siberia, being in charge there of civilian refugees. In 1923 Bishop Tucker resigned as Missionary Bishop of Kyoto, returned to the United States and succeeded his brother, the Rev. Beverley Dandridge Tucker, Jr., as Professor of Theology in the Virginia Theological Seminary. He was translated to be Bishop Coadjutor of Virginia, May, 1926, and a year later, upon the death of the Rt. Rev. William Cabell Brown, became Bishop of the Diocese. As a member of the National Council Bishop Tucker has been conspicuous for service along missionary and educational lines. Only recently he returned from Japan, where he was the official representative of the Presiding Bishop and the National Council at the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Holy Catholic Church in Japan, an independent Japanese Church, the daughter of the three Anglican missions, American, Canadian, English.

Bishop Tucker was married in April, 1911, to Miss Lillian Warnock. He is the author of "Reconciliation Through Christ" and in life and ministry, as this tile would suggest, is a consecrated evangelist.

A PRAYER FOR THEE

On you may Bethlehem's Holy Christmas Star
Send down its peace to bless you from afar,
And faith and hope your happiness renew,
As God's great love enfolds and comforts you.

BROADCASTING FROM STATION S.T.J.C.

Do your Christmas shopping economically.

* * * * * *

Some folk celebrate Christmas all year. They buy presents on installments and pay and pay and pay—till Christmas comes again.

* * * * * *

Don't forget your Christmas present for Jesus Christ. It's His birthday—or at least the day on which we celebrate his birth. Put your gift in your Christmas Envelope.

* * * * * *

Every good Christian begins his Christmas celebration at the Altar rail in Holy Communion.

* * * * * *

The true Christmas Spirit is expressed by St. Paul in Acts 20:35. Commit the verse to memory before Christmas.

THAT NECK TIE PARTY

"I almost died laughin'."

That's the answer you got for a week after the Neck Tie Party if you happened to be asked what sort of a time you had that night.

There wasn't an idle moment all night. We were doing something crazy all the time. And the whole thing wound up with a grand dunking spree with doughnuts and coffee. The way it all started was—the Rev. W. W. W. of C. M. fame came around one day making long faces and saying his male charges in the Home for Indigents had no neck ties. Well, as W. W. W. is one of those pathetic individuals who everybody feels sorry for, we went into a huddle and came out again with a plan to hold a party—all the men invited to bring their used neckties and all the ladies invited to bring doughnuts and coffee with trimmings. We had it Thursday, October 28th, after choir practice. A clothes line was stretched around the four posts in the S. S. room and hanging on it were from three to four hundred ties. First we had folk songs by the crowd. Then dancing, then a game called Jungle fight. And believe me, it was! After that it was a riot of fun and singing. The last thing we remember was seeing Mrs. W., most dignified and sedate ordinarily, standing on the platform all by herself pointing to a little hallowe'en candy corn and meowing like a pussy cat at the top of her voice.

Margaret Nelson was responsible for our looney stunts. She has more funny things up her sleeve than just her funny bone and all of us fall hard for them.

Soon we are giving a Dust Cap Party for the female members of his Indigent family. W. W. W. says he would like to get for them pieces of good material the women can make up into dust caps. That's the style of millinery the ladies in the Home wear to church and elsewhere about the premises. We want our ladies to bring nice fresh pieces of material big enough and good enough to make into caps.

This time the men must bring the doughnuts and the coffee. The date of the party will be Tuesday, November 23. EVERYBODY COME.

THE MIGHTY CENT

How big things were done by the despised cent

This reads like a fairy tale but it is simply a statement of fact. It is the story of what wonderful things a cent can do when put to work.

Here is the first instance:

Twenty-five years ago we were scared out of our senses to learn there was a mortgage of $3,333.33 on our property and we were responsible for a 5½ per cent interest on that mortgage. It had been placed when the church was built and interest amounting to almost $3,200.00 had already been paid and we still had the principle to pay. That made us do some hard thinking. It didn't make sense to negotiate a mortgage for $3,333.33 then pay interest to the amount of $3,200.00 and still have the whole amount of $3,333.33 left to pay.

So out of our think box hopped the idea of stop paying the interest and begin to pay the principle instead. That looked good in a way, only the question of ways and means arose. Where in St. John's Parish were we to get the money to pay the mortgage. The church was a wreck and there were not many of us and all of us were as poor as that historical church mouse. Then somebody, who seemed more of a cheerful idiot told us to raise a cent-a-day and pay the debt. We laughed and laughed. And then we stopped laughing. We did a little figuring and began to wonder. Finally we experimented and found the idea had its points. We started a campaign of a cent-a-day among ourselves and our friends and, believe it or not, in less than three years the mortgage was paid.

Here is the second instance:

Several years ago next door to the church on Third Street was a teamster's yard full of trucks, etc. Back of it was a wagon shed and a big stable that smelled to high heaven, especially in the heat of the summer when we had the church windows open. Also there was a two-story house on the property occupied by the teamster and his family. We needed that property for a parish house. We learned it could be bought for $10,000.00. So we got our cent-a-day scheme out, oiled it up and set it working. Result—in a few years the parish owned that property free of debt.

Here is the third instance:

We needed the Parish House we were dreaming about. Just about that time Bishop Garland launched his big campaign for funds to finance the missions and weak parishes of the Diocese. We told him of our need, how we had bought the property next door and how we would like to build a Parish House. Through his good offices we got about $28,000.00 cash and had to negotiate a loan of $10,000. Eight years ago the Parish House was built. At once we started to raise funds to pay the mortgage. We tried memorials, but times were so hard our folk were not able to pay in full and anyway there were not enough memorials to count. So out came our cent-a-day game again and we went to work to pay off that $10,000 at once.

That was eight years ago. On Sunday, November 7th of this year our Rector announced to the congregation that at last the Parish had paid the mortgage in full and we did it with our Mighty Cent. The congregation rose to its feet and gave that good old fashioned Christian cheer known as the Doxology.

Christmas Communions, 6:30 A. M. - 10:45 A. M.

What is going to be the fourth instance?

It's started already! The Rector and Parish committee have passed a resolution to make a special survey of the Parish with a view towards increasing the cent-a-day club and making it a permanent institution to raise the salary for an assistant clergyman to help the Rector in his work. We are anxious to supply this need, because the Parish has grown beyond the control of one man, especially as that one man has a real job of his own already to occupy most of his time and attention, and we must engage a priest on part time at least to help carry the load.

Emergency sick calls, burial services, assistance at Holy Communion, oversight of parochial organizations, christenings, etc., etc., etc., drive a clergyman to distraction if he cannot find time to attend them.

And the Parishioners!

Several in the past who thought the Rector had deliberately neglected them in time of suffering and need showed their resentment by leaving St. John's and joining the congregations of a neighboring parish.

Of course they shouldn't have done it. But human nature is human nature and we cannot blame them too harshly. Personally it was a physical impossibility to always be around when needed and they didn't understand.

Now, we have a chance to engage an assistant to help look after our needs. And we can do this by joining our 85 Club. If our members will do this we can raise at least $1800.00 a year. And for that sum we can take our pick of the finest.

How do you feel about it?

Don't you think your Rector deserves a break?

YOUR CHURCH ENVELOPE

Probably before you read this you will have received your new package of church envelopes. Please do not forget to turn in all the envelopes still due from the last year. And especially fill in the 85 Club pocket. That cent-a-day is going to help us raise funds to engage a part time assistant who is sorely needed in our Parish. We sincerely hope you will pledge yourself to aid us in this matter. The members of S. John's deserve this attention in times of sickness and distress.

Also we hope you will perform the duty of making your church offerings promptly and with regularity. We are sending out a postal budget of our expenses every month and we are publishing it in Broadcaster so that you will have knowledge of the financial requirements of the parish for the month.

If you never had a package of church envelopes we hope you will take one for the coming year and help us pay our debts.

Give the Rector, or Mr. Weber or Miss Nuttall your name and address and we will supply you gladly with a package of church envelopes.

THE PERSONAL COLUMN

Something New; Something Useful

We want to add a Personal Column to the Broadcaster which will add interest and be of service to its readers. The idea is to devote a certain amount of space to communications and news articles submitted by members and friends of St. John's Parish.

What we mean is this—Suppose you know of a wedding in the offing. Such an event is always of interest to any community in the civilized world. And if the contracting parties are members of St. John's the gossip about the affair will be most interesting. Of course, we must have the consent of the principals before breaking the news. If we knew where and when the happy event would take place we would feel that we had a personal interest in it and when the time came we would all enjoy the thrills even if we were not invited guests. And if you are invited and go—which of course you will—you can write a description of the event—how the church was crowded, how the family, especially mother, wept throughout the service, how the bride and her retinue were gowned, how proud and happy the groom looked, how everybody kissed the bride afterwards in the Sunday School room, how the groom retaliated by kissing all the bridesmaids and every other pretty girl present, what they had to eat at the bridal supper, where they went when they left, when they returned, etc.

Goodness, what an interesting story you can tell! Even baptisms have their interest "complex" as we term such things today. Every month somebody's baby is being christened. Such matters as what did they name the baby, who were the god parents, did the baby cry, how did the dear little thing look in its christening dress, did they have a lunch afterwards, what did they eat and what brand of coffee did they use?

We would like to publish news of the sick of the Parish. Generally only other members or friends of the family know of such cases of illness. It is a matter of importance to us as a Parish and any information along this line will be greatly appreciated. Many of our fellow members get sick and we know nothing of it until they are either well or dead. A little item about a sick friend would be greatly appreciated.

The news column can be used as an Information Bureau about new families moving in the Parish. A little item giving the name and address of the new comers, asking church folk to visit them would create a big interest in that family; and, if they see their name in the Personal Column of the Broadcaster it will tickle 'em all over and they will like it so much they will come to church to get better acquainted.

If you know of any member about to go on a vacation or take an extended trip, that fact will have its Parochial interest to some of us and we would like to know about it. An accident, injury or mishap of any kind; such, for instance, as somebody losing their job and needing another might prove beneficial, for some others of us may know where they are "taking on" men.

And in this connection, if you know where help is needed you could do a big favor to the unemployed of the Parish if you wrote a little news item to that effect for our Personal Column.

You could publish that you know of a needy family

BIBLE SUNDAY, DEC. 5th

who must be supplied with groceries, clothing, coal, doctor's care, rent, etc. That you have sent the name and address to the Rector and you wish the members of the Parish would send aid through him to them.

These are only a few matters of parochial interest you can discuss through this new medium of parochial information.

Another item—you might give the names and addresses of aged, crippled and shut in folk who would like to come to church if some of our more fortunate communicants, owning cars, would go after them and see they got home again. It would mean only a few minutes to run from the home to the church and back again—but oh, what deep pleasure it would give to the sufferer whom you helped to worship God in his holy temple.

Send all your letters to the Rector—The Rev. H. Cresson McHenry, 225 South 3rd Street. Make your communications as long as you please. If it is too long, we can remedy that difficulty by a judicious snip of our Editorial Scissors.

BAZAAR APPOINTMENTS

The Rector has invited the following members of the Parish to serve the tables at the Bazaar, December 2-3-4:

Lunch Counter—Mrs. Frank Pine and Margaret Holton.

Men's Goods—B. Frank Drumm, John E. McHenry, Jake Preole.

Novelty Goods—Mrs. Frank Schmidt, May Hopkins.

Dolls Booth—Margaret Nelson, Elizabeth Jaeschke.

Domestic Goods—Lillian McAvoy, Helen Ashman.

Fish Pond—Ruth Rutter, Emma Kaiser.

Candy, Cakes—Helen McHenry.

Toilet Articles—Minnie Schoch, Lottie Reid.

Groceries—Hannah Nuttall, Annie Schabacker, Howard McFadden, William Gilbert.

Radio—Herman Jaeschke.

Soft Drinks—Mrs. Laura Young.

Fancy Table—Mrs. William Shives.

These appointments are made with the understanding that the Supervisor of each department has the right to invite as many persons to assist as may be desired. The number of assistants is unlimited. Also each Supervisor is urged to solicit donations for the Bazaar from the stores where they shop as well as from friends and neighbors.

H. Cresson McHenry, Rector.

THE ENEMIES OF JACK FROST

Here is a list of folks who can't stand the presence of Jack Frost in Church and who have contributed to our coal fund so as to keep the Church fires burning so as to make it too hot for the frosty old fellow. He is the only fellow who is not welcome to old St. John's Church. Every time he gets in he sends chills down our spine.

We think and we hope we have a full record of Coal Fund contributors. It is most difficult to make up the list for we get names from many sources. If you have contributed and your name does not appear on this list send the Rector word immediately and tell him to whom you gave your contribution and the error will be adjusted at once. Please don't "get mad at us" but give us a chance to correct our mistake. One final word: The Rector appreciates the co-operation of so many parishioners in raising this money for coal. He has only one further request to make of you who are not yet FIRESIDERS—won't you please join our Club and make it easier for us to account for every contributor?

IMPORTANT NOTICE

The members of the Parish are requested not to buy chances or give money to any person soliciting funds in the name of ST. JOHN'S CHURCH, unless the solicitor shows the signature of the Rector on the face of all such chance cards or books.

By request of the Rector.

A Cincinnati candy store near the Convention hall has a sign painted on its window that proves something or other, depending on your point of view. It reads: "Nuts from all parts of the world. Welcome Episcopalians."

An Englishman was visiting this country for the first time, and as he was driving along the highway, he saw a large sign: "Drive slow. This means you!

The Englishman stopped in surprise and exclaimed: "My word! 'ow did they know I was 'ere?"

At a party the husband of one of the guests arrived very late.

"I have come to take my wife home," he explained.

"Oh, my dear Mr. Blank," said the hostess, "why didn't you come sooner?"

DECEMBER THIRTY-FIRST

By Joseph R. Cushing

Dirty job I've had today!
Throwing heaps of trash away,
Cleaning up my attic of the year.
Funny what a motley hoard
Of useless things I found I'd stored,
But I'm thankful now I have it clear.
In a musty, reeking pile
I've discarded all the vile
And the nasty little deeds I knew;
All the malice, hate and greed
That my attic held I've freed,
Brushing out the lesser slanders too.
All the selfish acts for gain,
All those little hurts that pain
Others when they're loosed by reckless tongue
Have I dusted from the door
Of this year that's gone before
And from it all jealousies have flung.
Dirty job, I must admit,
But I'm satisfied with it
When I see the cleanliness and cheer
It has brought, I hope to stay—
Ah! My attic is today
Clean to welcome in the coming year.

CHRISTMAS AT ST. JOHN'S

As usual, Christmas was a very busy time for all, from the sexton to the rector, including the officers and teachers of the Sunday School. Things began to happen the day before. It was spent in distributing to the shut-ins and poor children dinners, grocery orders, coal orders, orders for new shoes for boys and girls and new suits of clothing and other wearing apparel necessary for this time of the year. A few baskets of fruit were sent also to some of our communicants who are too poor and too aged to afford such luxuries.

Right here we want to thank our generous and interested friends who helped us build up our Christmas Fund. Without their interest we could have done nothing for our poor. Naturally this aid in the time of need gave Christmas just the right start and created the proper atmosphere for a jolly time. The presence of so many communicants at the two big Christmas celebrations next morning was imposing proof of the gifts of Christmas Eve.

The Church and Chancel looked like fairyland with its wreaths, Christmas trees, all alight with Christmas bulbs, the Altar banked with potted poinsettias and the many memorial bouquets scattered around the Chancel, in the Font and on the Organ. The first feature of each service was a prelude by the Junior Choir. They came marching two abreast from the Sacristy, through the Chancel and spread in double rows in front of the Choir. There they stood in their brilliant red vestments with that background of blazing glory of golden lights and red and white altar flowers. It was breath taking in its beauty. The selection they chose to sing was "A star is the sign of the Saviour." We wish to add parenthetically that we marked a very great improvement in the singing of our Juniors. They were less self-conscious in their manner and their rendition was a marked improvement over last year's effort. Since the Junior Choir work on Sundays has become an integral part of the service, the members have developed amazingly, until now they are singing in true choral style. We owe this development to the time and effort Margaret Nelson has spent upon their training. We are so used to acknowledging the nice things Margaret does to make us happy that sometimes we get to wondering what we ever did without her all those years she was using to grow up in. (That's an awful sentence but it expresses exactly how we feel.)

The two celebrations at 6.30 and 10.30 A. M., were very well attended. Christmas is one of the two days the communicants put forth extra efforts to be in church. Also, it is the day on which many put forth extra endeavor to contribute to the offering. We were glad to see so many folk we missed during the year and hope they promised both Jesus Christ and themselves that they meant to make Christmas the day of a new start at being regular and punctual attendants in the future. And we are sure that all those who made their Christmas Communion found the rest of the day fuller and brighter with good will because of their act of adoration.

We naturally supposed that the next day being Sunday that our services would be lightly attended as people would scarcely have recovered from their Christmas jollity by then. You can appreciate our surprise when we faced a very representative congregation. The music of Christmas was repeated and personally we think it was rendered better than on the previous day.

In the afternoon we had a pageant entitled, "The Drama of the Nativity." It was given by the girls of the Junior Daughters of the King in costume and in the church. It is a beautiful story and was impressively rendered by the girls. The girls had been trained by Helen McHenry who is their leader. We want to congratulate both the leader and the girls upon the interesting way they illustrated the Drama.

Again, through the kindness of our friends we were able to give the children of the parish a pleasant and practical Christmas treat on Decembeer 28th (Holy Innocents Day). The children themselves, under the instruction of Margaret Nelson, presented a beautiful Christmas program. Then we received boxes of candy, oranges, books, toys, handkerchiefs, neckties, games and scores of other useful and not so useful presents to remind them it was Christmastide.

We again thank our friends for making our Christmas so cheerful. We know they must have enjoyed their Christmas so much the more because they made it possible for so many others to celebrate the day with real joy.

And we wish every one of them a Happy and a Prosperous New Year. He who gives to the relief and happiness of the poor, deserves God's richest blessings.

NOTES OF OUR CHRISTMAS SERMON

"GLORY TO GOD IN THE HIGHEST AND ON EARTH PEACE, GOOD WILL TOWARDS MEN"

I. What I heard over the Radio on Christmas Day. "THE MOST BEAUTIFUL FESTIVAL OF THE CHRISTIAN YEAR IS CHRISTMAS."
The fact which makes this sentence interesting is—it fell from the lips of a Jewish Rabbi. He was broadcasting his CHRISTMAS message to the world.

II. His theme: "Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace, good will to men."

III. His comment was—such sentiment is needed today.

IV. He is right: such sentiment IS needed today and WILL BE needed until it is realized as a matter of fact.

V. The sneer of the doubter—Christ came with his philosophy two thousand years ago and look at the world now! Are not these present frightful conditions of war and downright banditry enough to convince the most optimistic that the hymn of PEACE ON EARTH is nothing but a beautiful piece of sentimentality?

VI. There is no denying it. Conditions are pretty bad and discouraging. There seem to be neither peace nor good will on earth or among men.

VII. Where lies the fault? Has God lost his grip on the affairs of men?

VIII. We are sure he has not. If he so chose he could bring about a condition of peace and good will NOW. But in order to do so he would adopt the methods of a divine dictator and could no longer be addressed as "Father"—a title which God loves.

IX. Then how shall the ideal of peace and good will be realized?
Ans. Not until you and I are intelligent and willing enough to understand and apply the ideals of peace and good will.

X. We cannot fulfill the ideal of Christ until EVERY son of man is awake to the necessity of peace and good will and determines to do HIS INDIVIDUAL PART in bringing them into the scheme of life.

XI. Peace and good will can come ONLY through the will of the individual.

XII. How close are we to the ideal? I do not know. I should judge from what I see of your and my stupidity and selfishness that we have still about ten thousand years to go. Of course, we can shorten the time if we follow the lead of the PRINCE OF PEACE.

XIII. Every disobedient son of God is retarding the day of peace and good will. Our duty, therefore, is to help them realize the sin of their foolish blockade and to examine carefully our own lives and assure ourselves we are not retarding the progress of peace and good will.

OUR ANNUAL BAZAAR

It Was a Social and Financial Success

Thanks to our fellow worker, George Downes, the Bazaar looked like fairy land. The decorations were beautiful. The color scheme was canary and orange and was most striking and effective.

We had made certain changes and additions in our Bazaar which promised to develop into profitable ventures. First of all, we eliminated the supper arrangement and substituted the lunch counter idea. We felt that the expense and labor required to prepare suppers were out of proportion to the profits we received. Also, our dear friend and faithful co-worker, Mrs. Pine, has been so sorely afflicted lately, physically, that we felt it was thoughtless and cruel to ask her to labor so hard. The lunch counter "went over" half way so to speak. The way and how were these: Mrs. Pine dispensed hot dog sandwiches, pies, cake, ice cream, coffee, etc., on Thursday night. But she evidently felt she was not working hard enough. The outcome of her cogitations was a big fish cake supper as a substantial annex to the lunch counter business on Friday. On Saturday it was a full supper of succulent sour kraut and weiners. By closing time Saturday night she was nearly dead of fatigue; but happy, conscious she "seen her duty and done it."

We made another change by dividing the Candy and Toilet Articles table into two separate tables and putting in charge of the toilet articles, Lottie Read and Minnie Shoch. The result of the change was most satisfactory. We installed a "Post Office" under Mrs. Georgia Weise, the idea being a person would bring a package to the Post Office addressed to another person who paid the price of the postage marked on it, supposed to be not more than 25 cents. Like all ventures into the unknown it worked somewhat stiffly but the results were sufficient to consider enlarging the idea next year.

There is always something fascinating about fortune telling, even to those who boast that they are not superstitious. We had a fortune teller with us, too. Her name was Mrs. Bernard. She knew how to enter into the spirit of the thing and dressed the part to perfection. Evidently many of our patrons got a "kick" out of the nonsense and want it repeated.

The following is a list of our Booths and their receipts.

Fancy Goods and Novelties	$108.00
Candy Table	28.79
Soft Drinks	5.20
Doll Table	134.60
Radio	43.38
Grocery Table	109.50
Fish Pond	8.35
Kitchen	38.05
Men's Furnishings	233.16
Toilet Articles	111.25
Domestic Table	26.53
Post Office	5.70
Fortune Telling	5.60

We are greatly encouraged over such a good financial showing. It is much better than it has been for many years. Yet we do not consider the financial success was the most important feature of the Bazaar. We liked the fine, warm friendly atmosphere of the place. It was a great gathering of St. Johnites from far and near. Many folk we had not seen for ages and ages. Their absence was due to removals to distant parts to live. Naturally, their visit was in the nature of an homecoming. And were they welcomed! It made us feel warm in the region of the heart to see that old St. John's still held sway in their affections. Their return has given us a new thought. Next year we intend to turn one of the Bazaar nights into OLD HOME NIGHT and we are going to search all the records and advertise all around for all ancient St. Johnites are expected to be our guests on OLD HOME NIGHT. No matter where they are or where they worship now we want them to come back home just that one night so that we can talk over old times and swap tales of happenings to us from the day they left. It is going to be a grand gabfest of all the folk who used to sing and pray with us in the dear old church.

So remember old timer, you have a rendezvous to keep next December.

THE LIONS CLUB INVITES—

The Independence Square Lions Club Invites Some of St. John's Boys to Their Christmas Party

Wednesday noon, December 22nd, the Independence Square Lions Club invited a baker's dozen of St. John's boys to their Christmas Party. The lucky fellows were:

Howard West, Joseph West, William Weise, William Robbins, John Tittermary, Calvin Tomlin, Buddy Substalae, Chris Henderson, Charles Smith, Charles Johnson, Walter Dean, Robert Munion.

We had the only crippled soldier in the bunch—Howard West, who had to come on crutches. There were a bunch of kids from other parishes and children's homes, too. First thing they did was EAT. We had a big lunch consisting of soup, hot roast turkey sandwiches, new peas, mashed potatoes, cranberry sauce and ice cream. The men had coffee and the guests had milk to drink.

The first present the boys got was a little treasure sack containing ten new pennies. While we sat at the table we would break off eating for awhile and begin to sing Christmas carols and songs. After the ice cream was served every boy was given some soup beans and told to drop four of them in his glass of water. Then they were given straws and told to draw the beans out of the glass of water by means of the straws,—the idea being to poke the straw at a bean, then suck it fast to the straw and lift it out of the glass. It is not so easy as you think. But a St. John's boy was the champion and won a Bingo game. He drew his beans out in less than five minutes.

Then they had a balloon busting contest. Every boy was given a balloon and told that at the word "go" they were to inflate their balloons and the first fellow who burst his balloon would win the prize. Again, St. John's team flooded itself with glory. Scarcely had the signal been given than "smack" went William Substalae's balloon and he won first prize as champion balloon buster and received a bingo game as a reward.

This was followed by a donkey party. Who won that contest we do not know. There were so many (tails) about the affair that it was hard to believe which one was nearest the truth, or in other words nearest that part of the donkey where the tail naturally belongs.

Then we had a movie about animals in Africa. It was a great show. It showed how zoo folk go out to Africa to get the animals to bring back home. It surely was one exciting picture of wild life.

That wound up the party. Then came the presents. And would you believe it, every boy received THREE Carry-All Bags FULL of presents and eats. Think of it, not one, but THREE big bags full. In one of the three you could see chicken feet sticking out. That meant a Christmas dinner for the family.

How did they get home with THREE Carry-All Bags to carry? Huh! that was easy. The Lions brought their cars around and gave the kids a ride all the way home and brought their carry-all bags with them.

It was a great day, but I bet you the members of the Lions Club got a big thrill out of the party as well as the kids.

WE NEED AN ASSISTANT

A quarter of a century ago we volunteered to serve the Church of St. John the Evangelist as missionary under the direction of the Convocation of South Philadelphia. It seemed such a small job then that we thought we could handle the job with ease. We never imagined it would grow to its present size. Then we had nobody, we registered zero. Now we have a parish register of over 900 names. Observe a distinction here; we say names, not persons. The reason for this is the same as is that of every parish under the sun. The names remain on the Parish Register while the persons do a disappearing stunt which is most mysterious.

In parishes provided with assistants, however, the elusive member finds it more difficult to evaporate than he does in parishes not properly manned with assistants, like St. John's Parish, for instance.

Had the Parish remained small in numbers we would have no need for aid. Now, however, something must be done to serve the parish and its needs adequately. It is no longer a one man proposition, even if that one man could give all his time to the parish, which he cannot. Parishioners feel neglected. They are not visited by the parish priest as in neighboring parishes. They do not receive the Sacraments on occasions when the Sacraments are expected and required. They are not visited in hospitals or in other public institutions where it is decreed they spend some time. They do not receive words of comfort; advice or admonition they so sorely need on occasions. In short there are many occasions arising constantly where the priest of the parish is needed and he is not available. People cannot help make comparisons which, on the surface at least, seem justifiable between a parish well ministered and a parish neglected. Take, for instance, our neighbor across the street. The members of the Sacred Heart Parish are shepherded like a flock of sheep. Why? Because of their big and efficient staff of assistant priests and trained female workers.

If YOU give YOUR rector just one priest for an assistant he will guarantee you efficient service, too. Never forget for one minute that your rector has another job that demands his attention every day and that job is to business manage the City Mission and serve as Dean of the Missionary Staff.

If you do not feel inclined to give your rector an assistant please do not criticize him if he seems to neglect you in your time of need.

You CAN provide an assistant if you will. And it will cost you very little to do so. Here is our suggestion.

When we built our Parish House we pledged to pay one-cent-a-day until the mortgage had been paid. This fall we paid the last dollar we owed on the mortgage and now we are out of debt.

If you will agree to join that cent-a-day-group, for they mean to continue, and YOU will pay a-cent-a-day into that fund you will make it possible for us to engage an assistant priest who can help at the celebrations of the Holy Communion, can visit the sick in their homes, or in hospitals, can assist at burials, in christenings, at weddings, ministering to the poor; respond to emergency calls and do a thousand other things a well governed parish has the right to expect.

Here is how it works: Suppose you give one-cent-a-day every day in the year by putting 7 cents every week in the other pocket of your church envelope. You will have given 365 cents at the end of the year. In other words you would give without feeling it $3.65 a year towards an assistant's salary. Now suppose everybody in the parish gives the same amount in the same way. Don't you see how easy it will be for you and how much more satisfactory such an arrangement will be for all of us.

Why not start now and give a-cent-a-day towards engaging an assistant for Easter Communions and for visiting the sick and shut-ins during the Easter season? Let's see how that would work out in actual cash.

In 1938 Easter comes Sunday, April 17th. From January 1st until then are 107 days. If YOU put in 1 cent every day you will give $1.07. If 400 members of the parish do the same as YOU do we will receive $428.00 or enough and more than enough to pay for the Easter work. We will get enough to pay an assistant to keep right on going until vacation season. He can help with the confirmations, too.

ARE YOU INTERESTED ENOUGH TO PLEDGE A-CENT-A-DAY UNTIL EASTER?

OUR THANKSGIVING DAY OFFERING

There are so many poor families without fuel of any kind that we are compelled by common humanity to do something to aid them to buy coal. Our church funds are so low that we did not dare to spend money for relief. We thought that possibly, if the members of the parish were informed of the desperate situation of their poorer fellow parishioners, they would cheerfully make a special effort to contribute what little they could afford towards a Parish Fuel Fund. We could not ask them to make an extra offering because not many of us have more than sufficient of our own family needs. We did think, however, that we who are somewhat better fixed financially might be willing to make a THANKSGIVING DAY OFFERING for buying part-price coal for as many of our needy as we could afford; especially for homes in which there was sickness, or newborn babes or old folk.

The offering was not as large as we hoped it would be, but it was at least a gesture in the right direction and we hope that when the idea gets fixed in our hearts and in our minds, the importance of a part-price coal fund will so impress ALL our parishioners that they will be more generous with their support.

Because of our peculiar position in christian social work it is possible for us to buy coal at bottom prices. If we can pay one-third of that low cost and our client pay the other two-thirds, it puts the price of fuel within their reach and we are enabled with but a small investment in each case to help a number of needy families buy coal. This is the way it operates. Say for instance the price of coal is $9.60. We agree to pay $3. towards the purchase of a ton of coal if they will try to raise $6.50 to make up the deficit.

In really desperate cases, where we know conditions are such that no money can be raised, we will furnish an half ton of coal and pay $4.25 out of our little fund.

We feel that the names of those who cooperated with us on Thanksgiving Day ought to be published in order to show the parish there are compassionate ones whose hearts throb sympathetically for their suffering brothers.

We wonder if there are others in the parish, who felt they could not afford to contribute on Thanksgiving

Day, who would like to give something later in the season. If there are any such and they will give their mite to the Rector he will be glad to credit the gift to their account; see that it is used for the purpose intended, and that the names of the donors are published in the Broadcaster.

YOUR SUIT OF CLOTHES

And The Thoughts and Feelings It Inspires

Every man and woman ought to dress as well as they can afford.

Some half baked philisopher, who thought he was smart, said one day, "Clothes do not make the man."

Do we believe that?

We do not!

First of all, if you want to retain your self-respect and moral courage, you will look to your clothing and see that you are well dressed.

Second of all, your employer, prospective employer, social sponsor, department store, bank, even the casual acquaintance, invariably measures your suit of clothes before estimating you.

If your suit is well cut, conservative in quality and refined in color, you are well received and you get the attention you seek.

If your clothes are extreme and ultra-modern in style and the pattern just a little off the conservative, you will appear well but the world's reception committee will gauge your character accordingly. You will receive polite attention with a faint tinge of reservation; for there are too many gate crashers who make the mistake they must be exceptional in order to make the grade. At the same time there are a certain class of sound folk who do not have discrimination in choosing their suits of clothes.

Life is just a little more difficult for all such; not because they lack anything in morals or mental and social equipment, but because their suit of clothes is inharmonious.

And if you really want a lesson in the psychology of a suit of clothes, put on an old, much worn suit and then go out to meet the world. Your first re-action will be a feeling of humiliation. You will feel its shabbiness. Then you will imagine (and rightly so) that your suit is drawing unfavorable attention. You unconsciously assume an apologetic attitude of mind and manners. If you are noticed at all it is with a look of suspicion, pity or distaste. Were you to go into a business place and ask for a job, the "prospective employer" would look you up and down, see the ill fit and shabby suit you are wearing and feel he could not afford to employ one who could not dress better. The bank would politely explain it must have absolutely sound collateral; the casual acquaintance will stay very casual after one glance at your suit of clothes; you can not hire anybody to be your social sponsor; your word is not as good as your bond—all because of the clothes you wear. A cold blooded villian in a fine and well chosen suit of clothes according to the world code is much more to be desired than an honest man in rags.

Therefore, a new suit of clothes always raises the temperature of our self-respect. After wearing it awhile we get used to it and forget we have it on. Then some day we notice it begins to look the worse for wear. The seams are beginning to stretch; the surface looks shiny; the buttons sag; the coat is out of plumb with the body; the trousers are baggy; in short the suit shows signs of old age.

What is to be done about it?

Why, the obvious thing, of course!

We will go down to the tailor and get measured for a new suit. We do so, and in course of time our new suit of clothes arrive and our self-respect is restored. We see that our friends and acquaintances are noticing the improvement too and their manner show their approval.

Well, we have come to the time of the year when we ought to cast off our old suit and get new clothes.

Now we can't afford to buy a new pair of trousers to wear with the old coat and vest, nor can we buy a new coat to wear with the old trousers—the contrast would be too ridiculous. Our friends and acquaintances would be sure we are unbalanced. No, it must be a whole new suit or none!

Yes, it must be a whole new suit or none! We cannot cast off one bad habit and retain others. We must have all our habits harmonize. Our heads must be crowned with purity and righteousness; our hearts must be clothed with charity; our hands must be gloved with grace and gentleness; our feet must be shod with the tireless strength of service and our whole body must be garbed in love. Then you will be ready to greet the world on New Year's Day.

And the world will look us over. It will see the excellence of our new suit of clothes and will smile and will greet us with

A HAPPY NEW YEAR!

Did you have a Merry Christmas?

* * * * *

Are you planning a Happy New Year?

* * * * *

The way to celebrate Christmas all the year is to buy your presents on the installment plan.

* * * * *

I knew a young fellow who bought his girl an engagement ring that way one Christmas. The following Christmas he was still paying for it and was married to another girl.

* * * * *

Here are a few homely precepts which everyone should repeat until they are memorized:

"You may give until you are rich, and you may keep until you are poor.

"Doing nothing except for one's self is the undoing of one's self.

"Do not blame God for the harvest when you yourself do the sowing.

"You cannot whiten yourself by blackening others.

"Religion is not a thing of dispute, but of experience.

"You cannot possibly do good without being made better."—The Little Visitor.

* * * * *

Our Christmas offering was the poorest we have made for many a year. Why is your envelope missing?

* * * * *

The Christmas Pageant given by the Junior Daughters of the King, Sunday, December 26th, was beautiful.

* * * * *

We were glad to have such a splendid congregation of young people on St. John the Evangelist Day.

* * * * *

Did you start the year by making your Communion Sunday, January 2nd?

* * * * *

Some men smile in the evening, some men smile at dawn, but the man worth while is the man who can smile when his two front teeth are gone.

—Iowa Green Gander.

* * * * *

The poor and the shut-in of the Parish had every reason to be happy this Christmas. Through the kindness of certain friends of St. John's we were able to provide Christmas dinners, coal, shoes, clothing, candy, toys, books, games, etc. Also the Independence Square Lions Club gave a group of St. John's boys a swell time. They fed them on hot turkey sandwiches and sent them home with 3 carry-all bags full of food, candy, toys and sweaters for each boy.

ANY CHUMP CAN KNOCK

Don't criticise your neighbors' faults, no matter what they do. Don't ridicule the masses, or malign a chosen few. Don't think yourself a censor of the silly human flock; but just remember, as you go, that any chump can knock.

Don't laugh at those who make mistakes, or stumble by the way, for you are apt to follow them—and almost any day. Don't think that folks are shifting sand while you are solid rock. And don't forget, for goodness' sake, that any chump can knock!

Don't be a puller-down of fame on other men conferred. Don't give the parting kick to one who fell because he erred. Don't think that you are perfect and the only size in stock. And now, once more, just bear in mind that any chump can knock.—"The Uplift."

* * * * *

How would we get along without some folks we need not mention? They are always on the job and "doing their bit" to the glory of old St. John's and the pleasure of all. God bless them all!

* * * * *

Our Junior Choir were "the tops" Christmas morning. Incidentally the J. C. has shown wonderful development this year.

* * * * *

Don't forget to join the Fireside Club, Now.

THE ODDS HAVE IT

Modern Definitions

Some of the following have been rather accurately and seriously put into practice in recent years:

Service—a successful effort to be helpful.

Success—doing what you want to do and making money.

Courtesy—the eye which overlooks a friend's broken gate and sees roses blooming in his garden.

Praticing Physician—a doctor who says, "If this doesn't cure you I'll give you something that will."

Orator—a man who can take a 300-word idea and blow it up to hold six thousand more.

A Garden Plot—the bugs and worms planning to eat up your garden stuff.

Tuneful Lyre—a music teacher who does not keep his engagements.

Man of the Hour—one who keeps up to the minute.

Woman's Tears—the world's greatest water power.

Taxation—the art of so picking the goose as to secure the greatest amount of feathers with the least amount of squawking.

Courtroom—a place where justice is often dispensed—with.

Counter-irritant—a fashionable woman out shopping.

Modern Music—the kind that puts the "din" in dinner and takes the "rest" out of restaurant.

Literary Aspirant—what an author takes when he has a headache.

Cooperation—a word consisting of eleven letters that can be spelled with two—W-E.

We are glad to tell the Parish that the new blower is paid for absolutely. That's another thing the Fireside Club did. It shows what you can do by joining and paying only 10 cents a month dues. Join now. Ask your District Superintendent for a dues book and start doing big things with little dimes.

Camper: "Well, what is on the menu today?"

Camp Cook: "Why, we have thousands of things to eat."

Camper: "What are they?"

Camp Cook: "Beans."

There lived in Washington a doctor and a minister who, although great friends, delighted to exchange repartee on the subject of their respective professions.

When they met one day recently the minister said that he was "going to call on Mr. Cunningham," and asked (for the old man was a patient of the doctor), "Is he very much worse?"

The physician gravely replied: "He needs your your help more than he does mine."

Taken off guard, the minister exclaimed anxiously, "Poor fellow; is it as bad as that?"

"Yes," said the doctor; "he is suffering from insomnia."—Nashville Christian Advocate.

A violinist was very much disappointed with the account of his recital printed in the paper.

"I told you three times," complained the musician to the owner of the paper, "that the instrument I used was a genuine Stradivarius, and in this story there was not a word about it, not a word."

"That is as it should be. When the Stradivarius Company advertises its fiddles in my paper, under ten cents a line, you can come round and tell me about it."

A surgeon, an architect, and a politician were arguing as to whose profession was the oldest.

Said the surgeon: "Eve was made from Adam's rib, and that surely was a surgical operation."

"Maybe," said the architect, "but prior to that, order was created out of chaos, and that was an architectural job."

"But," interrupted the politician proudly, "somebody must have created the chaos!"—Mutual Mag.

THE DAUGHTERS OF THE KING, SENIOR CHAPTER No. 2

On November 15, 1937, Senior Chapter No. 2 of the Daughters of the King was organized at the Church of St. John the Evangelist. The meeting was opened by the singing of the Daughters of the King hymn, after which we were led in the devotions by Miss Adelia Pearo and Miss M. Beatrice Fisher. Extracts from the handbook of the Daughters of the King were read by Miss Mae Leach and Miss Ethel Stenger.

The matter of election of officers was then taken up and Miss Adelia Pearo was elected President; Mrs. J. Francis Preole, Secretary; and Miss Mae Leach, Treasurer. The charter members present in addition to the officers already mentioned were: Miss Helen Ashmen, Miss Ethel Stenger, Miss Edna Holton, Miss Margaret Holton, Mrs. Mary Keough, and Miss Theresa Henderson.

For the purpose of study it was decided that we would first take up making ourselves more familiar with the Prayer Book, especially in the matter of finding the Collects, Epistles, and Gospels for the different Seasons in the Church Year.

The girls have selected for their work for the present, the mending of the choir music which stands very much in need of their attention.

The business meeting adjourned at nine P. M. after which the girls retired to the choir room to do their practical work for the evening.

I. C. M. C. Hymn

"A CHRISTIAN HOME"

The home where Jesus Christ is crowned
As the King of Kings divine,
Is one wherein a light is found,
That in after years shall shine,
Shall follow us the world around
A pure and fadeless sign.

Chorus

To know Him in childhood, to know Him in youth,
Is to store the mind with wisdom, and with purity and truth:
Abroad we may travel, afar we may roam,
But no years can dim the mem'ry of a blessed Christian home.

The home wherein the Saviour dwells,
As an ever welcome guest,
The place in which His gospel tells
What is wisest, what is best,
Is one that to its members spells,
A future bright and blest.—Cho.

Thank God for homes like these, that bless
With their memories new birth,
The after years of toil and stress
That shall prove to men our worth
These temples of His holiness—
His kingdom sent to earth.—Cho.

PASTORAL LETTER

Dear Parishioner:

Twenty-five years ago I volunteered to serve St. John's Parish as missionary without salary. Then, the job was easy, because there were few members. Now, the job is too big for me. We have 900 names on our register and because of our phenominal growth something must be done to serve their needs. Members are complaining of being neglected. They are not visited as are members of other parishes. They do not receive the Sacraments promptly. They are not visited in hospitals and other public institutions. They do not receive words of comfort, advice and admonition when they should. In short, the Rector is not available when he is needed.

You cannot help comparing ours with other parishes, or with our neighbor across the street. Their members are ministered to adequately.

We acknowledge this discrepancy with sorrow. We know the comparison is TRUE; yet it is not JUST. There are three matters we must consider side by side with their and our efficiency. The first is they PAY their priests and ministers a SALARY. The second is their clergy have ALL THEIR TIME to give to service. And third, they pay SALARIES to others TO ASSIST the Rector. Now compare that statement with ours.

First, you DO NOT pay your Rector a salary. Second, your Rector CANNOT GIVE ALL his time to your needs. Third, you DO NOT PROVIDE AND PAY the salary of an assistant. Give your Rector an assistant for PART TIME ONLY and FUNDS TO PAY HIM, and we will give you efficient service, too.

We suggest that now the Parish House mortgage is paid off by means of our Cent-a-Day Club, YOU join the Club and pay a-cent-a-day for an assistant.

Here is how it will work: Suppose you give a-cent-a-day from New Year's to Easter Day, you will give $1.07. If 300 members pay $1.07 when Easter comes we will receive $321.00, or enough to pay an assistant, not only for Easter work, but also we can keep him to help with Confirmation work; give Easter Communions to the sick and shut-in; visit members in hospitals; assist in burials, christenings and weddings and do an hundred other duties that ought to be done in every parish.

Your CENT-A-DAY, or, 7 cents a week in the other pocket of your Church Envelope, will provide an assistant.

If you WILL NOT give your Rector an assistant, then you MUST NOT criticize him nor compare his work to parishes who pay their Rector a salary for all his time and do give him an assistant.

Will YOU pledge a-cent-a-day to pay the salary of an assistant? Then sign the enclosed postal and send it to me and next Sunday begin to deposit 7 cents in an envelope and put it on the Alms Basin towards the assistant's salary.

EVERY DAY
PUT A CENT IN THE ENVELOPE
and
GET AN ASSISTANT

Affectionately your Rector,

H. Cresson McHenry.

P. S.—It must be definitely understood that your ASSISTANT CLERGY FUND must not, under any consideration, lessen your Church Offerings for Current Expenses. If you do take out of one pocket to put in the other, you will bankrupt the parish.

AN INTERESTING EVENING

Not so very long ago one of the matrons of the younger set in the parish entertained the Rector and a few of our communicants at an evening dinner. Needless to say, the dinner was delicious and beautifully served. Our hostess was perfect as an entertainer of such a group.

After the dinner, and when all were gathered in a cozy and intimate circle, we experienced an intellectual treat which was invigorating and inspiring to a degree. The conversation drifted naturally to the discussion of topics of interest of today. Finally it crystallized into exploiting three subjects of universal interest,—books, pictures and music. It was refreshing to sit back and listen to the vigorous manner members of the circle expressed their views upon present day "popular" literature and how fearlessly they dissented from the fulsome sales talk of interested publishers of certain leading sellers of today. It was rather astonishing to listen to the guests condemn the broad pictures of licensiousness and lasciviousness of several of the highly praised novels of the year. To them, the idea that a book is good and uplifting just because the sales talk of its publishers is a carefully prepared and camouflaged untruth told for the purpose of pushing under their several noses a moral and sexual stench, is an intolerant and indecent betrayal of their reliance on the publisher's judgment. Their resentment against these book clubs which choose a NEW book for its readers each month, was pretty emphatic, too. The prevalent opinion of the group was they are merely sales agents for putrid literature which otherwise would die of neglect if left to the decent discrimination of a cleanminded public. This revolt against the modern novel was not unintelligent because nearly every member of the circle had been at one time or another seduced into reading one or more of them by friends and companions who posed as being sophisticated and broadminded.

As it was with literature so was it with the "movies"; except here, to our extreme surprise, the sentiment seemed to prevail that there is emerging a cleaner and more decent series of subjects. Quite emphatic satisfaction was expressed over the apparent reverting back to the old classics for material and plot. We were startled at this observation because we were not quite conscious ourselves of this tendency but when picture after picture, all in the popular class, was mentioned with approval and pleasure, we realized the justness and sense of the criticism. Again this group of independent thinkers were breathlessly wholesome in breaking away from the traditions of accepting the approval or disapproval of so-called critics, and condemning or commending for themselves. To them a clean picture is a clean picture and a dirty picture is a dirty picture.

In this little session of free thinkers for the improvement of thought and feeling, there entered expressions of opinion on matters of the night clubs and their high jacking methods of fools and lunatics who don't know when they are being kidded into being suckers for pirates. And also a little slam at the jungle noise some modern idiots without an ear for harmony or tonal color call "syncopated." A medley of maniatical, crazy and lust stirring noises from the blackest spots of black Africa.

It was a wonderful experience to sit in with that group of modern young folk and listen to them tell how old civilization must turn again to righteousness in thought and feeling.

The modern young men and women are already on the march for old time decency. Editors, playwriters, composers, entertainers—

ABRAHAM LINCOLN
1809 -1865
Some Incidents of His Life

Lincoln was born in a cabin in a dreary region in Kentucky. It was a one room house about fourteen feet square, built of logs. In this one room the family cooked, ate and slept. Very few children have started life in so poor and barren a home.

When he was seven years old, his parents moved to Indiana, into a wild and wooded region, and built a hut for a home. It was a one room cabin, with rough home-made furniture. A log smoothed on one side, was their table. The bedsteads were made of poles fastened to the walls. The chairs were just blocks of wood. All the cooking was done in the fireplace.

The family was extremely poor and every member had to do hard work on the farm. After laboring all day, the young boy would often lie down before the fireplace and read by the light of the burning fire. Then, when too tired to read any more, he would climb a ladder made of pegs driven in the wall, and go to sleep on a pallet of straw, covered with skins of wild animals. He had little chance to get an education. He did not go to school more than a year all his boyhood days. And the school teachers in those days were very ignorant themselves. But he did learn to read such books as Aesop's Fables, Pilgrims Progress and the Bible.

He borrowed the "Life of Washington" from a neighbor and sat up far into the night reading it. He kept it in a crevice of the wall near his bed for safety. One night it rained and he found the book soaked through and through. The owner made him work three days to pay for it, and then let him have it. That was the first book Lincoln ever actually owned.

He was accustomed to listen to every preacher and stump orator who came into his neighborhood. Once he walked fourteen miles to hear a trial in court. When one of the lawyers finished his speech, Lincoln walked across the room in his bare feet, with his trousers rolled up, and said quite audibly, "I want to shake your hand. That is the best speech I ever heard." Years after, when Lincoln was President, the lawyer grown old and feeble, came to the White House and reminded Lincoln of the incident.

When Lincoln was about twenty-one years old, his father and two of his neighbors moved to Illinois. Lincoln walked all the way, through mud and water and over rough roads, driving an ox team. They settled ten miles from Decatur. Lincoln split the rails with which he fenced in the new clearing. He helped build the cabins and plant the spring crops. Though he was of age he stuck by the family until they got a new start.

He needed new clothes for he still wore the buckskins of the frontier. He bargained with a neighbor to make him a pair of trousers out of brown jean, dyed with white walnut bark, agreeing to split rails in payment. That pair of trousers cost Lincoln fourteen hundred split rails.

Lincoln was six feet and four inches tall, spare built, very strong and in perfect health. He was loved by those of the community and was popular with the men. He could outrun, out jump, and out wrestle anybody in the neighborhood; and, as a rail splitter, he had no equal as to the number he could split in a day.

He was a good story teller. All his life he had an inexhaustible supply of funny stories for any occasion. He had a reputation for honesty and square dealing and was called "Honest Abe."

One day a woman came into the store, where Lincoln worked. After she had gone, he noticed she had given him six cents too much. That night after he closed the store he walked six miles to the woman's house to return the money.

By dint of hard study after his days' work he was admitted to the bar and elected to the legislature. He was sent to Congress and was candidate to the United States Senate.

As a lawyer he was shrewd. Upon one occasion he defended a son of a poor woman. He was satisfied the boy was innocent. The trial began. The principle witness was called, who said—

"I saw him strike the man and kill him."

Lincoln inquired, "What time was it when you saw him?"

"It was about eleven o'clock," the witness replied.

"How could you see so well at night?" asked Lincoln.

"The moon was shining, and I could easily see," he replied.

Lincoln sent for an Almanac and showed the jury, that there was no moon that night. The accused was acquitted.

Lincoln became President of the United States in the period of the Civil War. He was a man of strong convictions and of great firmness. Yet he was always sympathetic and tender. In spite of his keen sense of humor his disposition in repose was melancholy and he brooded deeply over the state of the Union.

A VISIT FROM THE DIOCESAN PRESIDENT OF THE DAUGHTERS OF THE KING

On Monday evening, January 17, 1938, Miss Clara Stackhouse, Diocesan President of the Daughters of the King, visited the Church of St. John the Evangelist for the purpose of getting better acquainted with the members of our various chapters. As the meeting of the Junior Chapter precedes the meetings of the Senior Chapters, Miss Stackhouse devoted the early part of the evening to becoming acquainted with that group. The opening service was conducted by Miss Emma Kaiser. The girls then gave reports of the work they had done, especially in the way of Cottage Prayer Meetings which are conducted by some of the girls every Sunday afternoon. The girls then worked on their Scrap Books.

At 7:45 Miss Stackhouse was conducted to the joint meeting of the two Senior Chapters. The program for this meeting was left entirely in the hands of the new Senior Chapter and was presided over by their President, Miss Adelia Pearo. The meeting was opened by singing of hymn No. 105, Mrs. John Preole playing the accompaniment. Miss Pearo led us in the Creed and Prayers, and Miss Helen Ashmen read the Scripture Lesson, St. Matt. 25:31-46.

Miss Pearo then turned the meeting over to Miss Fisher, the leader of Senior Chapter No. 1, who introduced Miss Stackhouse as one who is not only our Diocesan President but also as a friend for whom she has very great admiration.

Miss Stackhouse stressed several points which she feels are necessary in developing the chapters of the Daughters of the King and we will mention the most important. She said that in order to have a real chapter of the Daughters of the King we must first develop our individual devotional lives by Prayer, Bible reading, and all the means of grace at our disposal. We should also feel it incumbent upon ourselves to be regular in our Church attendance unless prevented by circumstances beyond our control. While the work of the chapters at their meetings is very important Miss Stackhouse feels that visiting is the most important work they have to do and is the work from which the Daughters receive the greatest joy. In her chapter at St. Thomas', Whitemarsh, they usually go by two's and do not often make more than two or three visits in a month but they are real visits. Miss Stackhouse had brought with her a Scrap Book on the writings of St. Paul to Timothy, which had been made as a part of their study on this book. The pictures were very beautiful and well chosen.

Miss Stackhouse called attention to the Local Assembly Meeting of the Daughters of the King on Sunday, February 6, at which our Sacrifice Offering will be presented at St. Simeon's Church, 9th Street and Lehigh Avenue. The Sacrifice Offering is devoted to the work of the Order in China which is very badly needed, especially at this time.

In conclusion I wish to express my appreciation of the cordial welcome given to Miss Stackhouse and to commend the members of the Junior and Senior branches for the reverent manner in which they conducted their services.

M. Beatrice Fisher.

THAT ASSISTANT'S SALARY

In order to avert any misunderstanding as to how we propose to raise the salary for the Rector's assistant, we feel we ought to remind our Parishioners that we are not thinking of imposing a new tax upon them but that we mean to continue our old cent-a-day-scheme which helped us over many a financial mountain in the past.

Those who are paying seven cents a week now are asked to just continue doing so in the future. That is their cent-a-day contribution henceforth. They will not be asked for an extra contribution. The appeal we are making is to those who are not contributing a-cent-a day or 7 cents a week in the mortgage pocket of their weekly church envelopes. The non-contributors to that fund hold the decision as to whether we shall or shall not have an assistant the Parish so sorely needs.

Furthermore, there are hundreds in the Parish who have no church envelopes and consequently no means of conveying a-cent-a-day once a week to the church for the offering. We would be glad to furnish special cent-a-day envelopes for this purpose. Please send in your pledge post cards and let's get organized. We want an assistant by Easter.

REMEMBER

Only those who are not contributing a-cent-a-day are asked to make this pledge. After we have become organized we will make out a list of the Cent-a-Day Club, publish it in the BROADCASTER and post it in the Church. New names will be added from time to time to the list. (All members who fail to keep up their dues, and get one dollar behind in their payments, will have their names removed until the delinquency is paid. Of course, all such will be notified before action is taken.)

H. CRESSON MCHENRY, Rector.

WHAT WOULD YOU HAVE DONE?

1. The Rector of the Parish received a call for a burial service for Monday, January 31st, at 2.30 P. M. Commital at Fernwood Cemetery. The service to be at the home of the sister of the deceased, 4103 Comley Street. The family antedated the rector's assumption of duties by perhaps a quarter of a century. Consequently their request for his ministrations at such a time was paramount to a command.

2. The Rector received a notice from Mrs. Rogers, undertaker, on Queen Street beween Front and Second, of a funeral service for Mrs. C. Kingsland, 1416 S. Howard Street, for Monday, January 31st, at 2 P. M. The family were not regular communicants of the Church but they were in trouble and needed the services of a Priest.

3. The Rector had an emergency call to give the Sacraments to Mrs. W.—, 324 Emily, Monday, January 31st. The call came through at 1:30 P. M. It probably was a matter of life or death. Here is the problem:

Burial Service 2:30 P. M., Monday, January 31st.

Burial Service 2:00 P. M., Monday, January 31st.

Emergency Sacrament, 1:30 P. M., Monday, January 31st.

How can the Rector minister to all three families in distress and neglect none?

Of course he did it, with the help of two friends who answered his S. O. S. But you see how utterly impossible it is for him to impose continually on the good nature of his fellow priests in helping him out of such "jams" which are continually occurring.

Don't you agree with the Rector that we simply MUST have an assistant Priest?

Don't you think you would rather pay a cent-a-day towards the salary of an assistant than be neglected or deprived of the ministrations of the church in your hour of need?

Think it over. Sign that post card. Begin now to contribute a cent-a-day.

IT IS THE CHEAPEST INSURANCE IN THE WORLD.

THE JUNIOR CHAPTER OF THE DAUGHTERS OF THE KING

The girls from our chapter have read many letters from other Junior Chapters in the "Messenger"—the Junior Daughters of the King paper—and we decided to tell other girls how we get along in our chapter.

We meet every Monday night from 7.00 p. m. - 7.45 p. m. To keep ourselves busy when not meeting we visit the absentees from the Sunday School. This work is showing splendid results—many scholars have returned because of our visits.

On Sundays after Sunday School we visit the shut-ins and hold services for them. We sing their favorite hymns, have prayers and a Bible reading, then sit and talk with them a while. Often we take the Altar flowers to brighten up their rooms. The people appreciate these services so much—and often join in the hymn and prayer themselves.

From October till December we were busy on meeting nights making stocking dolls which we donated to the church for the Bazaar the first week in December.

The Sunday after Christmas we gave a Pageant for the Sunday School. It was called the "Nativity"—and it was held in the church. The Sunday School took part in the singing of the carols which were an important part of the Pageant.

In January we started making scrap books for the children in the American Episcopal Home down in Panama. By Lent we expect to have finished them, and during Lent we expect to spend some time in study and to do some sewing for needy children.

GEORGE WASHINGTON
1732 - 1799
Some Incidents of His Life

George Washington was a man of immense height and physical strength and enduring powers as these incidents show. He was six feet two inches tall and weighed 220 pounds. His eyes were light blue. His face was grave and thoughtful though his disposition was full of cheer and good will.

He was very athletic with a strong right arm. He once threw a stone from the bottom to the top of the Natural Bridge in Virginia, a height of over 200 feet. Also he threw a piece of slate, round and as big as a dollar across the Rappahannock River at Fredericksburg, a feat no other man has ever been able to equal.

One day at Mt. Vernon they were throwing an iron bar to see who could cover the greatest distance. Washington, watching them, said, "Let me try." Without taking off his coat he seized the bar and, to the amazement of all, threw it far beyond the longest throw.

One time he was watching a wrestling match. Finally the champion challenged Washington to a trial of strength. Washington turned and without a word, seized the champion and threw him flat on the ground. The man remarked afterward he felt as though a lion had grabbed him and when he hit the ground he thought every bone in his body was broken.

He was fond of parties. He often rode, on winter nights, a distance of ten miles to a dance and would get back home just in time for breakfast. He kept this up until he was sixty-four years old. He was a dandy in his dress. He wore ruffled shirts, blue broadcloth coats with silver trimmings and marble colored hose. He dressed well, up to the very day of his death.

He was fond of riding. Lafayette once said of him, "I never beheld so superb a horseman." Jefferson wrote, "Washington was the best horseman of his age."

He was a good business man and farmer. By his ability he became a very wealthy man for his time and died worth an half million dollars. His estate at Mt. Vernon covered 8000 acres. He had 500 slaves and laborers. He was very hospitable and said his house was more like a tavern than a plantation.

He was very correct in his habits. He ate carefully and slowly and of the simplest food. He was in fact the perfect gentleman.

When in Philadelphia he attended Old Christ Church, 2nd Street above Market Street. You should go and see the pew in which he sat.

Not to be loved.
To give, not to get;
To serve, not to be served.
To be a strong hand to another in the time of need;
To be a cup of strength to a soul in a crisis of weakness;
This is to know the Glory of Life."

There is a story of a miserly old man who was visited by a Rabbi, who called him to the window. "What do you see?" asked the Rabbi.

"I see men and women and children," answered the rich man.

Then the Rabbi took him to a mirror, "What do you see now?" he asked.

"Now I see myself," the rich man replied.

"Yes," said the Rabbi, "both the window and the mirror are made of glass, but no sooner does a little silver come between you and others than you cease to see others, and see only yourself."—The Uplift.

Do you remember our Lenten Thank Offering Boxes? Those you must ask for or you do not get them? Well, Miss Nuttall has them this year. If you ask her for one she will give it to you. That's the little box you put on your dinner table and when you sit down to eat, and think of the hundreds of hungry folks who have no food you drop a "coin of grace" in the little box as your gesture of Thanksgiving to God for feeding you. Also that is the little box you can give to any Sunday School class to help them make up their Sunday School Lenten Offering. Last year these Volunteer Thank Offerings totaled $100.00. Which was one ninth the amount raised for our Lenten Offering.

So often we hear people say, "I am going to," when they have in mind the doing of some more or less important duty, but the chances are about nine to one that they never get around to it. It is the fellow who says, "I'll do it now," that makes his way in this world.

We live for today, and therefore should accomplish today's tasks today. "I'm going to" never gets it done.

IT'S EASY TO QUIT

It is easy to quit. Anyone can say,
"The hill is too high," or "it's too far away."
Anyone can say, "I'm too tired to keep on,"
And stop halfway there. But don't be that one.
Whenever life gives you a task hard to do,
Don't stop in the middle, but see the thing through.

It is easy to quit. Any fool can explain
To himself and his friends why the struggle was vain.
It doesn't take brains when you start cutting loose
From a difficult task to think up an excuse.
There is always a plausible, soul-soothing excuse
On the tongue of the chap who says "it's no use."

THE FOUR PLANTS

A wise old tutor was once taking a stroll through a forest with a shiftless youth by his side. The tutor suddenly stopped and pointed to four plants close at hand. The first was a tiny sprout, just coming up out of the earth. The second had rooted itself quite firmly in fertile soil. The third was a small shrub. The fourth had grown into a well-developed tree.

The tutor said to his youthful companion, "Pull up this first plant."

The youth pulled it up easily with his fingers.

"Now pull up the second."

The youth obeyed, and with slight effort the plant came up, roots and all.

"And now the third."

The boy pulled with one hand, then the other, but it would not come. Then he took both hands, and the plant yielded to all his strength.

"And now," said the master, "try the fourth."

The youth grasped the trunk with all his might, but hardly a leaf shook. "I cannot move it," he exclaimed.

"Just so, my son," said the tutor, "with our bad habits. When they are young and small, we can cast them out, but when they are full grown, they cannot be uprooted."

A LETTER OF APPRECIATION

January 24, 1938.

The Reverend H. Cresson McHenry
225 South 3rd Street
Philadelphia, Pa.

My dear Mr. McHenry:

You and your people are entitled to a great deal of generous praise for your own generous gift to missions. If every parish and mission responded as nobly as St. John's there would be no missionary problem in our Church today.

Your letter of the 19th addressed to Bishop Taitt has been handed to me, and I shall do what I can to get a missionary speaker to you for Sunday or Wednesday evening during Lent. You'll hear from me later about this.

With all kind personal regards, I am

Sincerely yours,

FREDERICK P. HOUGHTON.

"SAYING GRACE"

How do YOU say grace?

Maybe somebody wants to know what is "saying grace" anyhow?

Well, maybe it would be better if we did know what we are talking about before we start the discussion.

"Saying Grace" means giving thanks to God in a short prayer at breakfast, dinner or supper for the food we are about to eat.

It's a quaint old custom which goes back thousands of years.

Long before the Christian religion appeared men of all faith and religious beliefs; yes, even the benighted heathen, said grace for the good things of life.

"Grace Sayers" can easily be divided into classes.

First there is a big crowd of folks who never say

"grace." Somebody shouts "dinner's served" and the members of the family run pel-mel to the table, grab up things, heap their plates and begin to eat. They may be nice people but they have not got good table etiquette.

Some eaters, we think they must be dyspeptic, come slouching into the dining room at meal time looking as gloomy as though they were in a torture chamber, and meals are — — to any dyspeptic. You don't find many "grace sayers" among that class of eaters. Others come to the table, sit down and find fault. The meat is too tough to chew. The coffee is not fit to drink. The bread is stale or soggy, the vegetables are cold. To hear them talk poor mother just did her darndest to spoil every dish of food she cooked. Such folks are just common low minded people who are so graceless in thought and feeling that they couldn't possibly say grace without choking to death.

Some people love to seem like nice people, and when the parson comes to tea they always ask him to say grace before eating just as though it was a daily practice when were truth to pop up and speak, she would let the cat out of the bag, for the only time grace is said by this particular group of eaters is when the parson calls.

Sure, there are those who can and do "say grace" gracefully! They are the elect of God. They know who provides all their needs. They know He will never forget them for as He provides food for all living things when they are hungry or in need so does He give to them abundantly.

These are real "grace sayers"! Every time they come to the breakfast or dinner or supper table they "say grace" with thankful hearts.

Now, such folk always realize they ought to say "grace" with something substantial and nice. Just like, for instance, saying it with flowers to the girl friend, or patient wife, or sick friend, or when the wedding bells are ringing or some other occasion.

We have been making the opportunity for all such "grace givers" to indulge this desire every Lenten Season. It is a simple and beautiful and a most acceptable ceremony to God. Some of you know all about it because you have been "saying grace" with small gifts of money at every meal, every day in Lent and turning your "Grace" money into the Sunday School Lenten Offering.

No body asks them to take a "Grace" box. Only those who ask will receive. As we said before, they who say "grace" with offerings are those closest to God and understand Him best, who make their offerings not by persuasion or through compulsion but with gratitude.

And such persons need neither be coaxed nor urged. The "Grace boxes" will soon be on the tables in the hall of the church. Somebody will be there to whom you can give your name and address in case you want to join the group of grateful "grace sayers."

LENT

Lift up Thine eyes unto the hills,
For now has come that season when
Each contrite heart communes with Him,
Who cleanses all the stains of men.

Walk not as one whose steps be trod
In unrelenting slough and mire,
But lift Thine eyes unto Thy God
And seek such joys the Saints aspire.

Just once have things Terrestrial been,
Enhanced by clear Celestial strain,
That we might see anointed souls
Made clean and pure and sweet again.

Then lift, O clay! Thine eyes above
That level where you blindly stood,
And try, by penance, prayer and love,
To reach His arms: to kiss His Rood.

Jos. R. CUSHING, '38.

THE AUTHOR OF "LENT"

It gives us real pleasure to acknowledge our debt of gratitude to Joseph R. Cushing for composing specially for this issue of the BROADCASTER the beautiful poem entitled "Lent." Your Rector has always been a great admirer of Mr. Cushing's ability as a poet, and has read with appreciation scores of his productions. In 1927 he published a little book of 37 war poems entitled "Doughboy Ditties." They are short sonnets and odes with peculiar poignant power which somehow makes you see a picture of these stern hard-days in a subdued and softened light. They were the heart throb of humanity that beat on through death and destruction. That peculiar sympathetic feeling runs all through his poems. His are not like the cold stringing together a chain of beautifully sounding words minus sentiment. His are aflame with brotherly love and sympathetic understanding.

In our next issue we hope to publish an original poem by the same author entitled: EASTER.

LENT

HISTORY AND TRADITIONS

The word Lent is derived from the old English word "Lenckten," and referred to the Spring fast of the church which ended in the Feast of Easter. It is usually supposed to be in commemoration of the fasting and temptations of our Blessed Lord in the wilderness. But more probably it originated from a regard of our Lord's words—"the day will come when the Bridegroom shall be taken away from them and then shall they fast in those days." S. Matt. 9:15.

LENGTH OF LENT VARIED

We learn from Christian Church History that the primitive Christians began this solemn period on the afternoon of the day on which they memorialized the Crucifixion and continued it until the day of the Resurrection. The whole interval being about forty hours. To these forty hours originally observed additional days were added, but with great variety in their numbers, according to the judgment of the different churches in different parts of the world. Some prescribed fasting three days in the week before Easter. Others four, and still others six days in Holy Week. A little later some of the churches extended the fast to a period of three weeks, others to six weeks, and still others to seven weeks. In order to reduce the period of fasting to a definite number of days to be observed throughout the Christian Church it was eventually fixed to forty days commencing on the Wednesday in the Seventh week before Easter (Ash Wednesday) and excluding the intermediate Sundays which are always observed as festivals of the Resurrection.

OBSERVANCE OF LENT IMPERATIVE

The 61st Apostolic Canon reads thus: "If any Bishop, priest, deacon, reader or singer do not keep the holy Fast of Lent, forty days before Easter, or the Wednesdays and Fridays, let him be deposed, if he be not hindered by some bodily infirmity; but if he be a layman let him be suspended from Communion."

BY AUTHORITY OF THE CHURCH

That the term of forty days was settled at an early period is evident from the writings of the Bishops of those times; who refer us, in vindication of their Episcopal letters to the examples of Moses, Elias and our Lord, all of whom fasted forty days. Naturally, therefore, we arrive at the conclusion that, though fasting is frequently alluded to in the Scriptures as a Christian duty, yet the set time for its observance is referred solely to the authority of the church.

DAYS NOT INCLUDED

As we previously stated, the Lenten Fast does not include all the days between Ash Wednesday and Easter; for the Sundays are so many days above the number of forty and are referred to as Sundays in Lent and not Sundays of Lent.

PRINCIPAL DAYS OF LENT

The principal days of Lent are Ash Wednesday, see article in this issue, and Passion week—particularly Thursday and Friday of that week. Passion week has always been considered its most solemn season. It was one time called the "Great Week," from the important transactions which were then commemorated. And also Holy Week, because of the increase of the devotional exercises in the churches and among the believers. Thursday in Passion week (Maundy Thursday) is that on which our Lord instituted the Holy Eucharist. Good Friday is the day following Maundy Thursday on which we commemorate the suffering and Crucifixion of our Saviour Christ. As this day has been kept holy by the Church from earliest times so has it been made a day of the strictest devotion and humiliation for all time.

ASH WEDNESDAY

Western Church—the first day of Lent, so called from the ceremonial use of ashes as a symbol of penitence in the service prescribed for the day. The custom, which is ultimately based on the penance of sackcloth and ashes spoken of by prophets of the Old Testament has been dropped in those reformed churches which still observe the fast, but is retained in the Roman church, the day being known as Dies Cinerum (Day of Ashes). The ashes, obtained by burning the palms or their substitutes used in the ceremonial of the previous Palm Sunday, are placed on the altar before High Mass. The priest, vested in a violet cope, prays that God may send his angel to hallow the ash, that it may become a "remedium salubre" for all penitents. After another prayer, the ashes are thrice sprinkled with holy water and thrice censed. Then the priest invites those present to approach, and, dipping his thumb in the ashes, marks them as they kneel with the sign of the cross on the forehead or, in the case of clerics on the place of tonsure with the words—"memento, homo, quia pulvis es, et in pulverum reverteris" (Remember, man, that thou art dust, and unto dust thou shalt return). The celebrant himself either sprinkles the ash on his own head in silence or receives it from the priest of highest dignity present.

This ceremony is derived from the custom of public penance in the early church when the sinner to be reconciled had to appear before the congregation clad in sackcloth and covered with ashes. When it was extended to the whole congregation is not known.

The phrase dies cinerum appears in the earliest extant copies of the Gregorian Sacramentary and it is probable that the custom was already established in the Eighth Century. The Anglo-Saxon Aelfric, in his Lives of the Saints (996 or 997) refers to it as in common use, but the earliest evidence of its authoritative prescription is a decree of the Synod of Beneventum in 1091.

Of the reformed churches, the Anglican alone marks the day by any special service. This is known as the "combination service," its distinctive element being the solemn reading of the general sentences of God's cursing against sinners, gathered out of the seventh and twentieth chapter of Deuteronomy, and other places of Scripture. The lections for the day are the same as in the Roman church (Joel 2:12 and Matt. 6:16). In the American Prayer Book, the office of Commination is omitted with the exception of the three concluding prayers, which are derived from the prayers and anthems said or sung during the blessing and distribution of the ashes according to the Sarum Missal. The ceremonial of the ashes was not prescribed in England during the Reformation; it was indeed enjoined by a proclamation of Henry VIII (Feb. 26, 1538) and again in 1550 under Edward VI, but it had fallen into complete disuse by the beginning of the Seventeenth Century.

WHAT ARE YOUR PLANS FOR LENT

Just now it is the fashion to sit down at a certain period of the year, New Year's day preferred, and budget your income and expenses. You are reasonably sure what your income will be, therefore you are in a position to divide that income so as to meet your current expenses and lay aside a little for emergencies or a vacation.

WHY NOT BUDGET LENT?

Now suppose you were to budget Lent—how would you do it so as to get the best possible results? You are given forty days plus six Sundays. What can you do with them? Well, here are a few suggestions you might consider:

First: Every day increase your hours of devotions. None of us spend enough time on our knees before the throne of Grace and we can well afford to spend a greater portion of our Lenten allotment in that useful spiritual exercise.

To help us increase our periods of meditation and prayer noonday Lenten services are held in several parts of the city. Generally these services are conducted in such a way that the business and working man or woman can attend them with little or no inconvenience. All these services are conducted with a view to emphasize the need of a deeper devotion and a close contact with God, through Jesus Christ who was tempted, suffered, crucified in his war against sin and for our salvation.

Second: Every day take more time to search the Scriptures. Follow the Church Calendar of lessons, not only for convenience and systematic procedure, but also to get an intelligent idea what it is all about.

Oh, but you say, I cannot afford that much time. There are too many things to do in the morning. I must get up, rush through my toilet, dispatch a hasty breakfast and hustle to work. Should I be late I would lose my job.

Well, there is an easy answer to that little objection. Suppose you add fifteen minutes to your day by getting up that much earlier in the morning. You practice daylight saving time in the summer to grab off an hour's extra pleasure. Just start a new fashion of daylight saving time in Lent and squeeze out fifteen minutes extra for daily Scripture reading. The benefit will be twofold. It will be good discipline and you will learn a lot more than you ever knew before about God's scheme of Redemption.

YOUR EASTER OFFERING

Third: Every day deny yourself something you want but do not need. In nearly every instance you will benefit physically as well as financially and certainly the self denial will be good discipline for your soul.

Now speaking of the financial benefits you will derive from your self denial. It is not necessary for you to benefit personally in added dollars in your pocket; but for you to benefit personally in consecrating your savings to the Glory of God by adding them to your Easter Offering. And that would mean your Offering would jump from a minimum of one dollar to a maximum of perhaps twenty-five dollars. Take for instance cigarettes. How many packs a day do you smoke? I'm not a C. S. but I understand each pack costs fifteen cents. If you were to donate the cost of one day's "smokes"—say you are a moderate smoker and consume only a pack a day—you would donate 15 cents per week. In six weeks or covering the Lenten period you would add to your E. O. ninety cents. Now suppose you donate the price of one movie a week. Put it at the low figure of 35 cents. At the end of Lent you will add to your E. O. $2.10. Now suppose you donate a portion of the money you spend weekly on desserts, ice cream, candy, chewing gum, drinks, smoking tobacco, cigars, perfume, lip stick, nail polish, week end trips, etc., etc., etc., and suppose you make the minimum to be $1.00, which, both you and I know is absurd, would amount to $6.00 for the six Lenten weeks. Now suppose you were to donate a portion of your automobile expenses in gas and oil and general maintenance by keeping it in the garage one day a week in Lent. And let us add the modest sum of $2.00 saved in those six Lenten weeks we would find our accumulated Lenten donations would amount to a rather surprising figure. It would sum up something like this.

Cigarettes	$ .90	during 6 weeks of Lent
Movies	2.10
Luxuries	6.00
Automobile	2.00
Total	$11.00

That sum is ten times larger than most of us give in our Easter Offering Envelope. Somehow it makes us feel as though we are a company of expert cheese parers when we think of that dollar we put in our Easter Envelopes and pretend we have sacrificed adequately for Jesus Christ in return for his adequate sacrifice for our salvation.

Fourth: Every means of Grace afforded by our parish Church ought to be used by every parishioner. Especially the extra Lenten Services on Sunday and Wednesday to hear the Gospel preached by visiting priests of the church; and also especially to avail ourselves of the benefits of the Sacraments whenever possible.

Such a budgeting of your days, your resources and your spiritual activities during the six weeks of Lent will be the best piece of managing you can possibly do for your own spiritual growth and for the spiritual development of the parish. So our advice to you is to:

BUDGET LENT!!

OUR S. S. LENTEN OFFERING

We must raise $1000.00 S. S. Lenten Offering.

Why?

Because, it is the only way we can pay our Diocesan Apportionment.

Because, once our parochial life hung upon the generosity of our Diocesan Missions.

Therefore, we must never be unmindful of our Moral obligation to Missions.

THE MIGHTINESS OF THE MITE

This is the issue in which we ask you each year to consider the strength of weakness, the size of littleness and the might of the mite.

About 99 per cent of folk do not realize that strength, power and size, no matter how great, are, after all, just the simple multiplicity of tiny units. There is nothing really big or forceful or strong. Everything is nothing but a bundle of electrons, which form the atom which forms the molecule, which forms matter, etc.

Now an electron is so small that it is invisible to the naked eye. It is so light it cannot be weighed. It is so inconceivably weak as, to apparently possess no power. But the mighty mountain is the startling picture of the invisible and weak electron multiplied a trillion, trillion times.

To illustrate, how inconceivably small and weak is an electron we can use the mighty ocean. Its bulk and the power and force of its waves are made up of drops of water and each drop of water in turn is formed in size and weight by billions of electrons. Yet the mountain and the ocean are sired by the electron. Should the electron disappear from nature, nature itself would disappear.

Come to think of it, the earth, the sun and the moon, the stars; in fact, the whole universe and all life are the eminations of the invisible and weak electron.

So you see that there is strength in weakness, there is bulk in minuteness, when certain laws attract and hold them together in one common mass.

LENT --- HUNTING SEASON FOR CANDIDATES

A wealthy man is wealthy because what he owns is calculated in dollars. Those dollars in turn are calculated in cents. So after all a man's wealth depends upon the cent and not on the dollar.

At last I've reached the point I want to make. To me a little coin which by multiplication makes the dollar is the cent. Consequently I do not want you to try and fill your Lenten Mite Chest with dollars, but I do want you to fill it all the way up to the top with coins worth only one cent each. If all our boys and girls will do just that and no more each mite chest will contain two dollars on Easter day.

And I'm sure that after hearing Archdeacon Boyle tell about his Indian friends, and other missionaries tell their interesting stories you will want to add your mighty mite to the mites of others and help build a mountain of gold for the spread of God's Kingdom.

I want you to receive your mite chest with a prayer that you will fill it and guard its contents and turn it back to your Master on Easter day filled to bursting with your Easter Offerings for Missions.

$1,000.00 IS OUR GOAL

AN EVENING WITH ARCHDEACON BOYLE

OF BEMIDJI, MINNESOTA

We applied to the Rev. Frederick P. Houghton, D.D., Executive Secretary of the Diocese, for a Missionary to give a talk before a pre-Lenten gathering of St. John's parishioners. In reply he recommended Archdeacon Wellington K. Boyle, of Bemidji, Minnesota, who is a native Indian who has spent his entire ministry in ministering to the Indian tribes of Minnesota. He speaks both English and the Ojibway languages fluently and is considered an authority on all things pertaining to the life of the Ojibway tribe. Among other activities he served in the A. E. F. during the world war. The Archdeacon has a pleasing personality and a well developed sense of humor. You can easily estimate how interesting he speaks when we tell you he held our bunch of young folk spellbound for over an half hour. It was a treat to sit and observe that group of wriggly kids sit with mouth open and eyes staring and bodies still as wooden totems while he cast an Indian sign over them.

For instance, he told how the Indians of Minnesota lived in the winter with the temperature registering anywhere from 35 to 45 degrees below zero. He told of a time he went to visit an Indian family several miles from his home. He was caught in a blizzard. Soon the right side of his face was a cake of ice. His right eye was frozen shut, he had to keep rubbing his left eye to keep that from freezing. He was lost and wondered what he would do. Just then he remembered that Jesus Christ said—"Lo, I am with you always." Then he prayed and asked Jesus Christ to be with him in this blizzard. A little later he bumped into a strange cabin, kicked open the door and fell in the room. Standing in the room was a very big plainsman who greeted him with gruff cordiality, invited him in and shut the door. For said he, it is a little chilly out today. The Archdeacon asked him if he had any idea how cold it was? The man told him to look at the thermometer. It seems the thermometers out there are built to register 52° below zero. When the Archdeacon looked he found the mercury had sunk absolutely out of sight.

Another interesting incident he related was about how the Indians like long sermons. He said that he was told while at Seminary he must never talk any longer than 15 minutes. He followed the instructions literally, until one Sunday morning a big Indian waited for him outside the cabin chapel and registered complaint. He said, "I walk six miles to chapel every Sunday and I walk six miles back again just to hear you preach for 15 minutes—please preach longer—say for about an hour." Since then he has preached much longer sermons and his congregations have increased materially and seem more contented. Maybe your Rector will try one hour sermons on you . . . maybe!

He told of two boys who travel six miles on snow shoes to attend Sunday School and in summer tramp the same distance over rough, dusty, wild country roads with the thermometer registering over 100°. And both the chapel and the Sunday School are filled.

He told a story of once when he addressed a big audience in New York. A woman got up and asked if she might put a question. The Archdeacon said he would be happy to answer it if he could. Then she said, "Archdeacon do the Indian men, women and children go around with no clothes on and with their faces painted?" He replied: "May I answer that by an observation I made today while waiting on a busy corner in your city?" "While standing there I saw more people with less clothing and more paint on their faces than I ever saw in my life before."

He told us the history of scalping. He said, before the white men came over the Indians knew nothing of that barbarous practice. But the French people, who had migrated to Canada, offered a bonus for the scalp of every white man who was not French and who was living on territory they (the French) claimed as theirs. There sprung up a regular scalping trade among the French and the Indians. Later the Indians scalped their enemies and prized them as war trophies.

He told us that the Indian language does not contain any swear words. The name of God is never taken in vain because their idea of God is too exalted. The worst they can call a man when angry is "dog" and that is a terrible insult.

In speaking of the innate honesty of the full blooded Indian he told of a habit an Indian family had of laying a small branch on the sill of the door of their cabin when they went on a visit to friends or on a long journey. Persons, whether friends or strangers, seeing that stick laying there would not think of stepping over it and entering the house, even if the door was open. He told another story along the same line. It appears that Bishop Hare was traveling from one Indian village to another with some Indian friends. Part of the journey was negotiated in an Indian canoe, part was through the forest. He got out of the canoe, laid his overcoat on a rock while he helped others in landing their camp stuff. Then forgetting his coat he continued the journey. After he had gone six or eight miles he missed his coat and said he had better turn back to get it. "Oh, that is not necessary," said his Indian guide, "there is not a white man within thirty miles of here."

At the close of the evening a mob of young folks, led of course by Mary Weissinger, rushed the Archdeacon for his signatures in English and Indian and for twenty minutes the poor man was busy filling the orders. We told him to let go a war whoop and scare them away if they made a nuisance of themselves. He replied that he ought to have brought his Indian club along, then he could make them behave.

$1,000.00 S. S. LENTEN OFFERING

INTERDENOMINATIONAL COMMUNITY MOTHERS' COUNCIL FOR PARENT EDUCATION AND CHILD STUDY

The South Philadelphia Council of the above named Social Service organization held its January meeting in the Sunday School room of St. John's Church, January 5th, from 1:30 to 3:30 P. M. Mrs. Harry D. Kaiser presided.

The meeting was opened with singing of a hymn, prayers, reading of poems on childhood and home. After the singing of another hymn the minutes of the previous meeting were read.

The speaker for the occasion was Mrs. Daniel A. Poling. The subject assigned her was "THE HOME: The Training place for the Children." Naturally, in the course of her remarks, she touched upon the importance of family and individual prayer, reading of the Holy Bible at the table after the morning or evening meal or at some other appropriate time in the day.

YOUR EASTER COMMUNION

Time spent, even if only a few minutes, in reading God's Holy Word, was well spent. Home environments, even in the homes of the poor, were too important to be ignored. Cleanliness, neatness, discipline and friendship in Jesus Christ are good antidotes for temptation and sin. The foundation of a Christian home must be in the heart of every parent to train the child in love and obedience."

Parenthetically: How often has the writer of this article insisted upon the parent interest in the child's moral and spiritual development along precisely the lines Mrs. Poling lays down. Sunday School attendance, church duties, attendance upon the sacramental necessities of the spirit, service, charity etc., come under this matter of parent interest.

So back to Mrs. Poling's address: Every parent to do this must have the love of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ build in the home, an altar; not of wood and stone necessarily, but in the heart of every parent. Only then can the parent guide and guard the child in truth and right.

As Mrs. Poling is the mother of a large family, she knows very well the trials and difficulties which beset child development. Consequently she speaks with the voice of authority upon her chosen subject.

At the end of the formal address she expressed a wish that those present would ask questions. Many of her hearers availed themselves of the opportunity which resulted in the asking and answering many interesting queries on the subject of home life.

The meeting was very well attended and we were gratified to see St. John's Parish was represented. One interesting feature was the nursery in which the children of the parents were cared for by a nurse provided by the I. C. M. C. Such arrangement made it possible for the mothers to give their full attention to the things of the occasion.

The next meeting of the I. C. M. C. will be held, before this article appears, in the Evangelical Presbyterian Church at 18th and Tasker. Anna G. Bramble will speak on "THE NECESSITY OF PLAY IN THE HOME." Miss Bramble is the head worker of the House of Industry Settlement.

Wednesday, March 2nd, the Grace Settlement House, 1032 Federal Street, will be the meeting place. Dr. William J. Baker, fellow, The Institute, Penna. Hospital, will speak on "THE ADOLESCENT PROBLEM." YOUR RECTOR URGES ALL THE MOTHERS OF THE PARISH TO ATTEND THE I. C. M. C. GATHERINGS.

THE POWER OF PRAYER

What a copy of "Forward" will do for the unfortunate who had never acknowledged God and the results obtained by that booklet was demonstrated by a hospital inmate.

Visiting the Mercy Hospital on Sunday, December 12th, I found a patient dreadfully cut about the head lying senseless on his bed. Saying prayers for him I left a copy of "Forward" on the table at his bedside. On December 19th I again visited that same institution and found the patient very much improved. Again having prayers he asked whether I had left the copy of "Forward." Assuring him I had he remarked, "I have read those prayers over many times every day. I've never been a churchgoer nor have I taken time to think of a Supreme Being or have I even said a prayer but after studying those prayers something seemed to click in me and after that things seemed different and when I began reading those prayers my mind seemed so clear and I'm truly convinced that God has answered my prayers for I expect to leave the hospital in a few days.

The average American workman who labors only 18 minutes for a pound of bacon would have to work at least twice that long to make a similar purchase in most any foreign nation, a survey of comparative buying power and wages has shown.

For example, the Englishman would have to work 45 minutes at the prevailing British wage; the German 89 minutes and the Belgian 156 minutes. Almost the same ratio applies to all standard foodstuffs, the survey shows.

In this respect, a market basket filled with 1 pound of bacon, 1 pound of beef, 1 pound of butter, 1 pound of bread, 1 pound of potatoes, 1 dozen eggs, 1 quart of milk, and 1 pound of sugar, would represent 1½ hours of labor by an American industrial worker at the prevailing wage average. For the same grocery order the Englishman would work 3¾ hours, the German 7 hours and the Belgian 14 hours.—Frisco Mechanics' Magazine.

Few finer things can be done in human life than to greet the New Day with hope. It is good for man that he cultivate within himself a desire to think and speak with faith. Yesterday may have been hard; but yesterday is as certainly past as is the year 1492. Today is here, and its character is not yet determined. There will be sunshine or showers according to the operations of laws which we may well control :: Was yesterday a disappointment? I am sorry. But this is another day. The earth has turned around since yesterday. Face the New Dav with good cheer!

A MEMORY GEM

Some one started the whole day wrong;
Some one robbed the day of its song;
Early this morning some one frowned,
Some one sulked until others scowled,
And soon harsh words were passed around—
Was it you?

Some one started the day aright;
Some one made it happy and bright;
Early this morning, we are told,
Some one smiled, and all through the day
This smile encouraged young and old—
Was it you?

YOUR EASTER OFFERING

IN DAYS OF YORE

A man was leisurely seated in a library, but had his face imbedded in the pages of a large and very old book. He was oblivious to all his surroundings when suddenly someone slapped him on the shoulder.

"Why the trance, Smith? Reading for that style?" It was Jones, his neighbor, who dared to intrude.

Smith looked up with mingled displeasure and enthusiasm. "Listen, Jones," he exclaimed, "Nehemiah would have made a crack business executive. He put it all over on those who opposed him. Ever read about it? Talking of carrying, messages to Garcia, why Nehemiah was McKinley, Rowan, and Garcia, all in one!"

"What do you mean, Smith? Nehemiah who—and what did he do?"

"Nehemiah was only a cupbearer at Shushan, the winter palace of the Persian King. He learned that his people, who had returned to Jerusalem after the Captivity, were sorely tried. 'The city lieth in waste, and the gates thereof are burned with fire,' Nehemiah cried; 'this is a reproach to all; something must be done, and I am going to do it!' Only he used stronger words."

"And what did Nehemiah do about it?" asked Jones in idle curiosity.

"The King noticed Nehemiah's intense feeling for his own people, and asked the cause. Then the King offered his help. Nehemiah asked for a leave of absence, and requested that he be sent to the aid of his people with full powers to seek their welfare. The royal governors were instructed to convey Nehemiah through their dominions and furnish him with building materials for his undertaking.

"He spent three days in Jerusalem looking things over. He made a secret survey of the ruins at night. Then he revealed his plans to the nobles and rulers and laymen, and asked them to help rebuild the walls. In a few days he had the entire population at work."

"What was there so exciting about that?" asked Jones.

"When the people in the near-by towns heard it, they laughed Nehemiah to scorn, despised him, and said, 'What is this thing ye do? Will ye rebel against the King?' They called the workers all kinds of abusive names, just like they do in our industrial strifes. A hostile leader of the striking hordes said to Nehemiah that any wall his 'feeble Jews' could build, a fox could break down. Attacks were made upon the city, and they threatened Nehemiah's life. They stirred up discontent among the people, just like some are doing today, and Nehemiah had his hands full for a while.

"Those who wouldn't work exerted every effort to induce Nehemiah to quit. When they threatened his workers he armed them, gave military precepts, set a watch, and ordered his own allowance to be given to his friends, for 'the bondage was heavy upon them.'

"When the enemies found that scoffing and ridicule and threats availed nothing, they invited Nehemiah to make a temporary truce, just long enough to come down to the plain of Ono, and 'talk things over.'

"Four times the leaders of the enemies urged, and four times Nehemiah stopped just long enough to send back word that he was busy and could not come. 'Why should the work cease,' he asked them, 'whilst I leave it, and come down to you?' Bribes and threats could not move him."

"Nehemiah was a regular Tom Girdler, I imagine," offered Jones.

"In just fifty-two days Nehemiah and his comrades rebuilt the walls of Jerusalem. Then they began erecting new homes and remodeling old ones. Nehemiah invited the people from the plains to make their abode in the city, thus promoting its prosperity."

"A clever business move," again intercepted Jones.

"Sanballat, the leader of the conspirators, played his last card when he accused Nehemiah of seeking to make himself king, threatening to send word to the King to that effect. Nehemiah paused again just long enough to tell Sanballat that such things did not worry him, and that he was 'feigning them out of his own heart.'

"The walls built, equipped with gates, and improvements under way inside, Nehemiah admonished the people to observe the traditions and laws of their fathers. Then he packed his baggage and returned to the service of the King as quietly as he had left it."

Smith was silent a moment in thought. So was Jones. Then Smith spoke again. "'Nehemiah would have made a great business executive. He was master of himself, kept others on the job, and refused to be drawn into an argument. Opposition stimulated him to greater effort; he had love for his fellows, worked with wonderful speed, and proved himself a successful organizer. He could have had an easy-chair promotion from his King. Instead he wished on himself a difficult undertaking and a long, hard journey. A great man—this Nehemiah! We have Nehemiahs today—right here in America!"

Jones strode out of the library. Reaching home, he took the old family Bible, reclined on the lounge, and read Nehemiah's dramatic account of his triumph all over again.*

EASTER

Hosanna! Hosanna! Weep not as one bereft;
But blend thy notes in thankful praise
Of Him, to Whom our voices raise,
And turn to where a Corpse was left.
He's Risen!

See yon! Where sepulchred with tears
Of Mary, but three days aback;
Removed from Calvary's painful Rack
Your Christ, and mine, lives through the years.
He's Risen!

The Massive stone before His tomb
Is rolled away and where That Form
Was placed, 'mid mingled love and scorn,
Is hallowed light—for he has met the Groom.
He's Risen!

With high hosannas let each breath
Be filled with acclaimation for
This day of proof; this day He bore
His certain Victory over Death.
He's Risen!

EASTER OBSERVANCE

W. W. W.

Everyone knows of Easter Day and what a grand, joyous day it is. We all know that we should observe Easter and most of us do by having a glorious time appearing in our brand new spring clothes and munching our Easter Eggs.

But so many of us have never given a thought to the real meaning of Easter Day. It is a religious feast; in fact, except for Christmas Day, the greatest of religious feasts. On Christmas Day we celebrate the coming of Christ into the world as the "Light of the World." But on Easter Day, we have something that is personal, something that is of the greatest interest and importance to us as individuals. Easter Day spells to us "Hope." "For," as St. Paul says, "If Christ be not risen from the dead, then is our hope in vain." In other words if Christ had not risen from the dead, all that He had done before would have been marvelous but not personal to each and everyone of us. It is the fact that each of us has the hope of living on with God just as Christ does, that makes Easter Day the Queen of Feasts for us.

We may love Christ and our neighbor. We may have faith in Christ and our neighbor, but this is not enough. But with the hope that we may live eternally with Christ and our neighbors, makes the feast of Easter very real and vital to us.

Suppose, for example, I am quite fond of someone and have a great faith in someone. That is fine and good, but it wouldn't affect me personally unless and until I have the hope of the constant companionship and association with that person. Again, we may use the example of the family. Men and women fall in love. They have hope of marriage which will bring them together in constant companionship. This hope realized, happiness and contentment ensues.

So is Easter Day to us. It gives us the hope of being in constant companionship and contentment with Christ and those whom we love.

Now, with this in mind, what is the proper way in which to observe Easter Day? First, it is a religious feast and that means that we should want to be in God's house to worship and praise Him who gives us the hope of companionship with Him in the future life. Secondly, we should want to receive His Spiritual Body and Blood into our souls. That is, we should want to make our Communion on that day. And thirdly, we should be glad to contribute to His Church and for the more unfortunate of His flock. As we receive Him at the Altar Rail let us remember:

Not for our wants only
We this offering plead
But for all Thy children
Who Thy mercy need.
Bless Thy faithful people
Win Thy wandering sheep
Keep the souls departed
Who in Jesus sleep.

YOUR EASTER COMMUNION

"AS FOR THIS MOSES, WE WOT NOT WHAT IS BECOME OF HIM"

V. M.

The people of Israel were not taking absolute leave of their God when they made the Golden Calf. I think they were rather trying to localize God. Moses had helped them to see God and Moses was up on the Mount. "As for this Moses, we wot not what is become of him." In losing sight of Moses they lost sight of God. They could only see the gold that was poured into their Golden Calf.

How easy it seems for us to forget the sacrifice of Jesus on the Cross when our pocketbooks are concerned, when we should be filled with gratitude to God for the offering of our Lord and the Sacrifice on the Cross.

Your EASTER OFFERING will reflect how much you value that sacrifice or whether you have lost sight of the wondrous deeds of Christ and christianity and have replaced them in your heart with the Golden Calf.

Remember your EASTER OFFERING is used for Current Expenses only. It helps make possible the Church of St. John the Evangelist at Third and Reed Streets, from which corner have come spiritual and material aid to every one of us.

I know many persons who are ordinarily very clear and straight thinking people who prepare for Easter by spending time and money between Good Friday and Easter Day in gathering together the ingredients to make Eggnog. How horrified they would be if you suggested they do the same on the anniversary of the death of one of their family. And yet during the period of time that was spent by our Lord in the Tomb, people have money to spend for preparing Eggnog to drink on the anniversary of His glorious Resurrection.

We are very inconsistent regarding our responsibilities to our Church. We have money for relaxation, food or necessities, but we have to do a bit of thinking before we keep our just obligations to our Church.

To me Easter is the beautiful season of the Christian Year. It is the time when the worst sinner can look with hope to Gethsemane. The world and our immediate neighborhood is filled with poverty and want and we should be thankful for any blessing we have and should show our thankfulness by giving according to our means. Let us have a faith that never loses sight of God, never needs or worships a Golden Calf. Let us give a THANK OFFERING TO GOD before we take our Easter Communion and as we go up to the Altar, think of that beautiful hymn—

"When I survey the Wondrous Cross
On which the Prince of Glory died,
My richest gain I count but loss
And pour contempt on all my pride.

Were the whole realm of Nature mine
That were an offering far too small,
Love so amazing, so divine
Demands my Soul, my Life, my All."

PLEASE READ THIS LETTER

Rev. H. Cresson McHenry
Phila., Pa.

I, Mrs. E. S. K., would like to have Church Envelopes. Also the Easter self denial. Since I am working I will give as long as I am employed. Would also like the PARISH BROADCASTER. Enclosed is $1.00 for one year and if you have any left from the Confirmation edition, which has all the names of those confirmed, I would like one as I didn't get any. I thank you.

I remain,

E. S. K.

Editor's Note:

If all the members of St. John's Church would write similar letters, enclosing a dollar bill like Mrs. E. S. K. did, St. John's Parish would be the strongest parish in the Diocese, both financially and actively. If you analyze this wonderful letter you will see how completely she covers one's responsibilities and privileges as a member of Christ. She asks for:

1. A package of Church Envelopes.
2. Also a self denial Easter Envelope, with a pledge that she will pay as long as she is able.
3. She encloses $1.00 for one year's subscription of the BROADCASTER.

To be able to say so much in so short a letter is an art in correspondence.

Please practice her style and see if ALL our members can learn to write as good a letter and MEAN IT.

Needless to say the letter came to us entirely unsolicited and as a big surprise. That is the reason we appreciate it so much.

OUR YOUNGEST CENT-A-DAYER

A month or so ago we received this most interesting communication from a young gentleman who has started early in life to take notice of things and help make the world safe for something or other.

Dear Godfather:

I have just examined the PARISH BROADCASTER and taken a bite out of the article entitled "That Assistant's Salary."

After examining my bank I find it liquid enough to support a contribution of a-cent-a-day and therefore request that you list me as a contributor.

Since I have no checks on that bank will you tell me how and when to start these contributions.

Sincerely your Godson,

T. A. S.

Instantly we replied to this businesslike communication as follows:

Dear Godson:

You are certainly the most precocious kid that I ever contacted. Your signature at the end of your letter which is so beautifully typewritten is really translatable and the way you express your sentences shows that you must have absorbed the dictionary and are able to sling words together in the most approved fashion, and I am delighted to note the sentiments that are beginning already to develop along with your other signs of genius.

I appreciate more than I can possibly tell you what your sacrifice of a-cent-a-day must mean to you. Think of it—365 days of candy gone with the wind every year just in order to help me pay an assistant's salary.

There is just one dubious construction of your last sentence that I wish to have clarified. You say "since I have no checks on that bank will you please tell me how and when to start these contributions." My answer is you had better put some checks on that bank of yours or soon you will have no money left to start the contributions. Perhaps we can persuade Pop to send us a cent-a-day check once a month and then you can hand him your bank and let him rob it if he is lacking in conscience and principle.

With best wishes I am always

Affectionately your Godfather.

That young man believes in doing things in a big way. A few days ago he sent us 100 days' pay in advance.

How old is he?

Oh, almost 365 days old.

Gee! that seems like a long time, don't it?

EASTER DAY DISTRICT CONTEST

Easter day is a day of obligation and every communicant should make his Communion as a matter of duty as well as one of high privilege. Yet some of us do become forgetful of such necessary acts of devotion; or else we get the mistaken impression that other things are of more importance and we neglect this most imperative of all duties.

In order to stimulate our sense of duty and spiritual responsibility we are about to institute a District Campaign in each of our Parochial Districts to stimulate us to our duty of receiving our Easter Communion.

In order to do this I'm asking each District Superintendent to organize his District and try to get out the greatest percentage possible of his communicants on Easter morning at either the 6:30 or 10:45 o'clock celebration. The idea being that the District Superintendent who succeeds in getting out the biggest percentage of his District makes his the Banner District until some other District Superintendent overthrows him with a bigger percentage.

The reason why we use the word "percentage" instead of the biggest number is because some Districts are larger than others and such a contest is fair only when put upon the percentage basis. It makes the Superintendent of a big District "dig harder" to get the edge on the Superintendent of a little District.

In the meantime there is a big district of "Outskirters," i. e., communicants in Jersey, North of Washington Avenue and in West Philadelphia who belong to no District but who will be urged to stage a contest against all Districts by coming out strong to Easter Communion.

Now you know who your Superintendent is, go to him with any suggestion you may feel will help your District win first place in the Parish.

THE DUTIES OF OUR DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENTS

May we take this opportunity to inform the members of our Parish just what are the duties of our District Superintendents. First of all they are supposed to get acquainted with all church members living in their districts; to report all births, sick cases and deaths to the Rector; to report all new families moving in their Districts; to report the removal of all church families moving from one district to another, or out of the parish entirely, along with their new address. They save the Parish about one hundred dollars a year in postage by delivering the BROADCASTER, Easter and Christmas letters and envelopes and Communion notices. Also they are authorized to receive weekly church envelopes of those unable to get out to church, the Fireside Club dues, the cent-a-day dues for the assistant's salary. Also in case the Rector has special communications to deliver to the members of the Parish they act as his couriers. They are also expected to drum up candidates for Confirmation and urge their clients to attend church and Sunday School services.

May we impress upon the Parish that our District Superintendents receive no compensation whatever. They volunteer their time and effort. It makes no difference how hot or how cold is the weather or how stormy it is, they go through with their duty to the glory of God and the Parish of St. John.

WHITE PLUME AND HER MITE BOX

COMPILED FROM OTHER SOURCES BY H. W. McH.

Far out on an Indian Reservation, there was a little girl whose name was White Plume. White Plume had many homes, or perhaps we should say she had no home at all, for her father was a shepherd and the family moved from place to place wherever pasture land seemed best. White Plume was lonely. She had nothing to play with except a doll she had made herself from a piece of rag her mother had given her. White Plume was sick, too. There was something the matter with her eyes, and often White Plume didn't care whether she played or not. Her mother and father loved her very much and often wished they knew how to help her, but there was nothing they could do.

Early one morning, White Plume saw something coming in her direction that looked like a great box on wheels. We would have known it was a trailer, but the little Indian girl had never seen anything like it before. The trailer stopped just outside White Plume's home, and a white woman stepped out and came toward her. White Plume watched shyly and silently. She had seen very few white people, and she would not speak first to the stranger. But the stranger was holding something in her hand that made White Plume gaze in wonder. It was the first real doll the child had ever seen. Imagine her joy when the lady handed the doll to her and told her it was hers to keep. White Plume and the stranger soon became fast friends, and for many weeks the trailer stayed beside the Indian home. Indians from other families began to stop to talk to White Plume's friend who was a missionary. She told them many of the stories we know about God, and she taught them to sing hymns and to say their prayers. But that was not all. She taught the Indian mothers how to care for their children and she cared for White Plume's eyes herself.

One day White Plume asked her friend why she had come there to live with them, and the missionary told her about the white children and their mite boxes. It was hard for White Plume to understand how the white children could love her enough to send her a friend when they had never even seen her, and she thought about it often.

One night, after White Plume had gone to sleep with her doll held tight in her arms, she had a dream. Her doll had come alive and was as big as she. They had gone together to a big city where many white children lived. It was Easter, and they came to the doors of a church just in time to see the boys and girls marching into the church, each one carrying a red box. As White Plume watched, she saw that there was a flame burning over every box. Some of them were very tiny lights and some were large and burned brightly. White Plume was puzzled. "Do you suppose the boxes with the big flames are the heaviest and have the most money in them?" she asked the doll. "It can't be that," the doll answered, "because some of those boxes that have the large flames burning look very heavy indeed, but some of them seem very light and do not rattle much at all. And look at that girl over there—her box is so heavy she can hardly carry it, and yet the flame over her box is so small, and she does not seem a bit happy." Suddeny the doll exclaimed, "I know! I can tell you what makes the difference! Look at the faces of the children whose lights burn so brightly. It isn't the amount of money they put in their boxes, but it's because they gave generously and gladly just as much as they possibly could!"

The next morning White Plume asked the missionary if she could have a mite box. The missionary was surprised, because White Plume had very few pennies. The child smiled and said, "Well, perhaps my box may always be light but I hope my flame will burn as brightly as the ones I saw in the procession!"

THE SINGING OF A HYMN

A TRUE STORY

Music, whether it be vocal or the playing of any musical instrument, invariably has a tendency to attract the listening ear and in turn the person with an inquiring mind will travel to the point from which the sounds come.

Asking a blind man at the Wills Eye Hospital whether he would like to attend service, boasted that he had never been accused of attending church services and that he didn't feel like breaking that rule now. He being a man of sixty-five years and with those convictions made one feel that it was useless to urge him further.

With an assembly of forty-one people and every one singing the hymn "Nearer My God to Thee" naturally the volume of voices was carried to the entire floor and the floor above. The hearty singing of that old favorite hymn prompted having another familiar tune as every one seemed to enter into the spirit of hymn singing.

As we were about to start singing again the blind man appeared at the door and asked if there was a place for him to sit. Following close behind him was one Jewish and three Italian women who also took seats in the assembly room.

It made one realize that other souls were being awakened to enter into the praises to Almighty God. With prayers, short address and singing three more hymns the service was brought to a close.

As the blind man was leaving the assembly room he stated he had enjoyed every moment he spent at that service and hoped to be able to attend the following Sunday. True to his word he was there long before the appointed time and remarked he couldn't afford to miss it.

RECIPE FOR LIVING

Some things a man must surely know,
If he is going to live and grow:
He needs to know that life is more
Than what a man lays by in store,
That more than all he may obtain,
Contentment offers greater gain.
He needs to feel the thrill of mirth,
And sense the beauty of the earth,
To know the joy that kindness brings
And all the worth of little things.
He needs to have an open mind,
A friendly heart for all mankind,
A trust in self—without conceit—,
And strength to rise above defeat.
He needs to have the will to share,
A mind to dream, a soul to dare,
A purpose firm, to fight, to plod,
A faith in man, a trust in God.

Alfred Grant Walton.

AT THE CHURCH'S DOOR

I am a pilgrim in the throng
Of those who seek life's nobler goal,
Vouchsafe me shelter, house of God,
And bread to feed my soul.

Oh do not give me forms and creeds
Nor homilies of endless length;
Mere husks are these; my weary heart
Cries out for hope and strength.

You seek a noble social dream,
A brighter earth, a fairer day,
I too shall seek, but help me first
Find out the Master's way.

Alfred Grant Walton.

THE EASTER OFFERING

Easter Day above all others ought to fill our hearts with gratitude. Worshippers everywhere, in all parts of the world, appreciate the vital significance of this day. Churches will be filled to overflowing. The offering on Easter Day ought to reflect in an unmistakable way the sincere expression of our joy. Money is a material thing but it can be used to express high spiritual convictions. Young and old, rich and poor, ought to welcome the opportunity of giving tangible evidence of their gratitude to Him who is the source of our Easter joy.

We hope that every Parishioner, in proportion to his means, will feel the privilege of registering his interest and gratitude in the work of the Church. If each one will do his share, our offering will reach our expectations and answer our needs.

EASTER DAY

Easter Day lifts us up for awhile at least to wider spiritual horizons. Every Sunday celebrates the fact of our Lord's resurrection. But Easter Day has rightly become the climax of the Christian year, certifying with triumphant faith to the reality of our highest hopes.

It is a commonplace of our experience that we cannot linger long in high spiritual altitudes. Our Lord and His disciples did not tarry on the Mount of Transfiguration. They passed quickly from that transcendent experience back to the commonplaces at the foot of the mountain where a suffering lad lay waiting for our Lord's healing touch. It is ever so. If we attain high moments of spiritual illumination it is only that we may take our revelation of God back to the ordinary tasks that await us.

How fine it would be if we could carry the enthusiasm, the reverence, the consecration of Easter Day through the entire year! It is an alluring thought. But we are not humanly constituted that way. We cannot spread our enthusiasm evenly over the year. Life has its hills and its valleys. The best we can do is to appreciate our higher hours as they come, thanking God for the rich and luminous days of special blessing, and determined as we pass on inevitably to lesser days, to be faithful to the vision we once saw. One crowded hour of high spiritual insight can lighten a hundred duller days when the spirit plods heavily among its duties.

We meet the Easter sunrise, flooding the darkest facts of human experience with light and understanding. We see life radiant in the brightness of the noonday sun. Jesus has conquered death. As we pass into the afterglow, with the memories of a beautiful day still lingering to bless us, let us remember that the risen Christ is in our midst, eager to abide with us if we will have Him.

AN EASTER DAY RESOLUTION

I will start this morning with a higher, fairer creed;
I will cease to stand complaining of my ruthless neighbor's greed;
I will cease to sit repining while my duty's call is clear;
I will waste no moment whining, and my heart shall know no fear;
I will look sometimes about me for the things that merit praise;
I will search for hidden beauties that elude the grumbler's gaze;
I will try to find contentment in the paths that I must tread;
I will cease to have resentment when another moves ahead;
I will not be swayed by envy when my rival's strength is shown;
I will not deny his merit, but I'll strive to show my own;
I will try to see the beauty spread before me, rain or shine;
I will cease to preach your duty and be more concerned with mine.

"THERE IS A LAD HERE"

S. JOHN 6:9

If I were permitted to add to the world's epigrams, I would offer this: Despise not the strength of the weak nor the bigness of the little.

Again, if I were asked what Sunday in the Church Year is appropriate to dedicate the boys and girls to service in the Church, I would say the fourth Sunday in Lent. Again, if I were asked if the boys and girls of christianity were organized in one big organization for service, what would I name it, I would suggest the Junior Co-Workers with Jesus.

We older folk are too slow to realize the importance of youth. "Children should be seen and not heard" is the worst epigram ever uttered. We have scriptural proof of the good influence of youth. Take, for instance, that little slave girl who "waited on Naaman's wife." Suppose she had allowed herself to be seen and not heard, Naaman would have died a leper. Read II Kings V and find out for yourself. And suppose that lad had not let it be known that he had five barley loaves and two small fishes, how would those 5000 hungry folk have been fed?

So you see the unknown slave girl and the unknown boy of the loaves and fishes took an important place in the world's events. The girl provided Elisha the prophet, the oportunity to exhibit Divine Power to cure. And the boy provided the means for Jesus to exhibit Divine Power of providence.

There are other instances related in the Bible of child power. You ought to read of the boyhood of Joseph, or of Samuel, or of David, or of the boy king! It would surprise you to learn of the strength of the weak and the bigness of the little.

I suppose you noticed in this story of the lad of the loaves and fishes that before Jesus fed the 5000 hungry folk he said, "he knew what he would do." He knew his little assistant was there with the material he needed to perform the mightiest miracle of his ministry. With the lad's co-operation he astounded the people. And even today we are still wondering about that miracle. No man or woman thought of cooperating with Jesus in feeding the 5000. The disciple Philip was stumped. The disciple Andrew could think of nothing to do but to remark in a hopeless sort of a way that all the provisions in camp were five loaves and two fishes and he jeered at the thought of satisfying 5000 hungry people with such a crumb of food. However, nothing daunted and without unnecessary talk, Jesus and his junior helper set about feeding that hungry mob to repletion.

So there you are! It goes to show that every boy and every girl has power to help Jesus Christ. Their weakness he will make strong. Their littleness he will make big and cooperation with him means the performance of undreamed of miracles.

How would you like to join up with these bright boys and girls of the Bible and form a Guild and call it the JUNIOR COOPERATORS WITH JESUS, and make the Fourth Sunday in Lent the annual meeting date to come together in our church and re-dedicate our youth to the service of Jesus Christ?

Let's start now with—not five loaves and two fishes—but with our MITE CHESTS and bring them full of pennies on Easter.

WHY A LENTEN OFFERING

The Sunday School Lenten Offering has become a fixed institution of the Church. We wonder sometimes if those who started the system of raising money for missions in this manner, ever imagined what a profound influence upon the progress of the Church and the development of missions not only at home among mountain whites, negroes, Indians and the underworld, but also in foreign lands, in China, Japan, Liberia, Central America and a score of other races of people—ever dreamed their efforts would grow to the gigantic importance and influence it has reached.

YOUR EASTER OFFERING

We wonder, too, if they had any conception of the millions of dollars which would be given voluntarily to the cause of Missions; that boys and girls would sacrifice and work with enthusiasm to get money to help spread the Gospel of Jesus Christ among those who did not know him.

We wonder if the pioneers of the Sunday School Lenten Offering movement realized how greatly the Church would be enriched by the conversion of nations of people to whom our missionaries, teachers, physicians, nurses and all that great army of consecrated and self-sacrificing christians so gladly endure hardship and poverty, have gone with good will to lead them to the light.

We wonder if the founders of this great system imagined how profoundly the S. S. L. O. would stir the hearts and desires of our boys and girls to the great missionary activity we witness today. Every year the challenge is renewed. Every year we feel the irresistable urge to work harder, sacrifice more, devise new ways and means to increase our gifts; and if we fail, as we have in the past few years, our disappointment is real. We feel a sense of defeat and are discontented with our failure.

Now let us get a good grip on ourselves and determine that this year, inspired by the Holy Spirit we will stage a grand comeback and give an old fashioned Sunday School Lenten Offering.

Suppose we read our Bishop's letter of challenge again and then "go to it with all our might." Here it is:

"To the Boys and Girls of our Church Schools:

The Lenten Offering last year was $42,859, while back in 1931 it was $68,221. This decrease has undoubtedly been due to the depression. I should like to see us begin to climb back again to the splendid amounts we used to give for our Missionary work. As you know the great work of the Church has been suffering during these last few years.

This year we are going to have one great Presentation Service at a central place about the middle of May. I will be interested to see, when it is printed in the program, how well your Church School has done.

Will you make an extra effort by your denials and work to help our Diocese do its part in the general program of the Church?

Faithfully yours,

FRANCIS M. TAITT.

Now how WILL we give the Bishop a loud and a unanimous "Yes"? Well, one way to do it is for every boy and girl of St. John's Sunday School to bring YOUR MITE CHEST full to bursting on Easter afternoon. That will be your PERSONAL answer to our Bishop's question.

In the meantime, let's keep on earning more pennies and sacrificing more candy, and movies and things so as to help raise a whopping big S. S. L. O.

CONFIDENCE

When life seems troubled, all at sea,
It always greatly heartens me
To think how much of goodness cloaks
Within the breast of common folks.

The man of toil, though poorly fed
Will freely share his crust of bread,
Forgetting self, without a heed
Except to serve another's need.

The humblest man will loose his purse
To ease some wretched beggar's curse,
And hurried feet will ever stay
To help the sightless on their way.

No aching heart, no sigh of pain
Calls out for sympathy in vain,
And even earth's dumb creatures find
A wealth of pity in mankind.

Oh, there are evils, not a few,
And yet so much of virtue too;
I hold to faith—I know I can Still keep my truth in God and man.

Alfred Grant Walton

THE EASTER REVIVAL

We were astonished at the outpouring of the communicants at old St. John's Parish on Easter day. Folk we have not seen for years were present at one or the other service. We never had such a big attendance at an early Easter service. We just about concluded that the whole parish determined to make their communion early. We were pleased with this for we had a priest to assist us at that service and felt we could manage the later celebration alone as, so we thought, the communion would be light as there would be only a few to receive. You can imagine our amazement when a perfect stream of communicants came pouring in at the later service. The congregation was much larger than at the first service and the number who received was within twenty-nine of those at the first service.

Another surprising feature of the day was the size of the Easter Offering. In order to appreciate the significance of this offering one must remember that about 40 per cent of our communicants are unemployed or employed only part time. Yet the offering amounted to over $400.00. The Sunday School Easter festival in the afternoon was an equally exciting occasion. We had a hard time getting started on account of the classes counting their S. S. Easter Offering. However, when we got going things moved. We had our regular Easter service, after which we were ready to present our Sunday School offering. While the committee was counting the returns we distributed the prizes for Easter Service attendance. The adults received a beautiful Scripture motto framed in silver and the children under ten years got little gold and enameled crosses. The crosses were so beautiful that many of the adults wanted them too. As we happened to have a few left over, we told the school we would sell the lot and turn the receipts into the Lenten Offering. So far the offering has reached the very satisfactory figure of $1000.00. This too was a surprise for the kids down our way don't have many pennies to spend. Such an offering means a real sacrifice for them.

After the afternoon service we distributed all the Easter flowers in the choir and chancel among the sick and shut-in members of the Parish. Also, as usual, we sent a lot of flowers to the patients of Mount Sinai Hospital.

On Easter Monday we were boasting of our wonderful experience of Easter day. Very much to our surprise and delight we learned that other parishes in the city had exactly the same experience. There must have been a regular revival in all our churches on Easter day. We need such an experience to give us courage to persevere in the work.

26th ANNIVERSARY—CONFIRMATION

Bishop Taitt has chosen Whitsunday, June 5th, for his annual visitation to old St. John's Church for Confirmation. On the same day we hope to celebrate our 26th Anniversary of Service. From the beginning we have observed these two events on the same day, which was generally Trinity Sunday. Because that was the Sunday we held our first services in old St. John's twenty-six years ago.

The choice of Whitsunday this year is a very happy one for many reasons. First, it is only one week in advance of Trinity Sunday and therefore is near enough our Anniversary date to enable us to celebrate our Anniversary consistantly. Second, it is the first Sunday in June, the day of the month we always celebrate the Holy Communion, and third, it is the day upon which we celebrate the coming of the Holy Spirit, who came to continue and to complete the work of our Lord Jesus. And as our beloved Bishop lays his hands upon those to be confirmed that dramatic and holy scene of the Descent of the Holy Spirit is actually re-enacted in the lives of each of our candidates.

CONFIRMATION -- WHITSUNDAY -- JUNE 5th

The spirit of the day should stimulate us to put forth extra efforts this year. Every communicant ought to feel the urge to do something worth while for our blessed Saviour on this important holy day. And we can think of no better way to respond to that urge than to bring a real offering to the church that day.

What ought that offering be?

Can you think of one that would be more acceptable to God than a human soul? Surely, you must know some one, some boy or girl or man or woman who is not yet pledged to the service of our Master. Somebody who, perhaps is just waiting for you to invite them to come with you to work for and worship God.

Many years ago a Christian missionary met an Indian Chief in the forest. He and the chief sat side by side upon the trunk of a fallen tree while he told the chief the beautiful story of the Gospel. At the finish of the tale the chief stood up and said—why has white brother been so long coming to tell me of my Father's love and care?

Do you suppose there is a friend who is wishfully waiting for you to tell him of our Father's love and care? Wouldn't it be a wonderful experience for him and for you too if you were to bring him to his Father on Whitsunday?

Or, perhaps you know of a friend who is a true believer in Jesus Christ, but who has no parochial connections now. Who is just drifting. Who knows he is just waiting for you to invite him to come and join us in fellowship and worship. Just a little interest in his spiritual welfare might be the means of bringing him out to be confirmed on Whitsunday.

Incidentally, now is the time to work for an increase in church membership. Easter day was a startling revelation to the whole Church everywhere of the revival of God's cause. Every church was packed with worshipers. Vast sunrise services were held in the open. Everybody seemed keenly conscious of the significance of Easter. The altars of Christ were crowded with men and women renewing their allegiance in the blessed Sacrament. It was a startling demonstration of the power of the personality of Jesus Christ to awaken the imaginations of the sons of men.

Therefore we say, now is the time to strike. Your friend, your acquaintance, your next door neighbor, your loved one who sits in the family circle is waiting for you to speak. Pray God to give you courage and power to do it now.

As for our Anniversary—nothing can give us greater pleasure than the consciousness that our twenty-six years of service with you had produced real permanent results for God in Southwark in adding new names to his list of converts. On Whitsunday, the 26th Anniversary of our service, we want to repeat history and present to our Bishop a big and representative class for confirmation.

Note: There are many names missing from this list that would have appeared had it not been on account of unemployment.

Note: The three mite chests containing the highest amount was: First, $25.00; Second, $10.10, and Third, $10.00. The first was a scholar, the second was another scholar and the third was a teacher.

WANTED—TEACHERS

St. John's Sunday School is in serious need of teachers to take the place of those who have been forced to give up their classes for various reasons, leaving the classes without any responsible head. Also we need teachers for new classes of boys and girls who ought to be promoted from the Intermediate to the Senior Department. We dare not form new classes under the present conditions, we would be sure to lose the scholars to the Sunday School if we could not guarantee them teachers who would be prompt, regular and interested. The training they are receiving in the Intermediate Department is of a very high order and it would be a shame to remove any scholar from such an atmosphere unless we can assure ourselves that we can give him advance training in congenial surroundings.

WHAT IS REQUIRED OF A TEACHER

Great emphasis is being made upon requirements for S. S. teaching and the necessity of young men and young women taking special training for such work. We do not discount such preparation for teaching—the more experience and training one has for teaching the better equipped he is for the job. But there is something more important than just the mechanics of teaching. That something more is personal magnetism and amiability. The power to attract and hold the imagination of the scholars is an asset of the first magnitude. In other words, I would rather have attractive young men and women possessing ordinary mental capacity and knowing how to dress neatly and up-to-date, for teachers than to have trained up-to-the-minute specialists, who are plain square toed, low-heeled, black tied and lacking in esthetic taste and spiritual spontaneity. Boys and girls are worshipers of the beautiful and attractive. And if such a young man or young woman volunteers for the job of teaching we will welcome them enthusiastically. IF YOU WANT TO KNOW WHAT WE MEAN JUST CAST YOUR EYES OVER OUR PRESENT INCOMPLETE STAFF OF TEACHERS. We want four more like the kind we got—attractive, intelligent and interested.

WILL SOME OF YOU YOUNG FOLK OF PERSONALITY VOLUNTEER TO JOIN OUR STAFF?

SEE YOUR RECTOR WITHOUT DELAY

OUR GRACE OFFERING BOXES

Just a few words of appreciation should be offered for the way many of our parishioners responded to our suggestion that during the Lenten Season it would be a real act of devotion should members ask for Grace Offering boxes for their dining room tables in which they could drop a coin at each meal in recognition of God's Providence for our good and comfort. It is always understood that the contents of the Grace Offering boxes be turned over to the Sunday School Lenten Offering on Easter. This year the return from these boxes was nearly $100.00. A sum which helped us to raise such a splendid Lenten Offering.

Friends often express their wonder at our ability to make such fine offerings considering the financial standing of our families. There is really no mystery about it. There was a time when St. John's parish was forced to receive aid from the Missionary funds of the Diocese. Had it not been for this support the story of old St. John's would have had a different ending. In return for that aid we have always felt that we are under the moral obligation to contribute to the limit of our resources towards this missionary fund. Perhaps the life of some other parish depends upon the financial aid it can receive from the missionary funds of the church.

CONFIRMATION -- WHITSUNDAY -- JUNE 5th

BROADCASTING FROM S.T.J.C.

LET US REJOICE—HE IS RISEN!

* * * *

Was there ever such an Easter? The whole world joined in the glad occasion.

* * * *

Our early celebration was attended by the biggest congregation ever seen at an early communion.

* * * *

The late service was even larger in attendance than the first.

* * * *

Number of communicants receiving their Easter communion was over five hundred.

* * * *

Amount of Easter Offering over $400.00.

* * * *

Amount of Sunday School Lenten Offering over $1000.00.

* * * *

Over 150 attendance rewards were distributed at the afternoon service.

* * * *

Potted plants and big bunches of Easter lilies were taken to the homes of our sick and shut-ins.

* * * *

The return of mite chests was larger than that of any previous Easter day.

* * * *

One Mite Chest contained $25.00; another $10.10, and another $10.00.

* * * *

NOW COMES CONFIRMATION AND OUR 26TH ANNIVERSARY.

* * * *

The date for these two events is Whitsunday (June 5th).

* * * *

Do you love old St. John's Parish enough to help make the Confirmation and the Anniversary a success?

* * * *

WANTED

TWO YOUNG MEN AND TWO YOUNG WOMEN TO TEACH SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASSES. We must have applicants at once.

* * * *

Confirmation Class for School Children meets every Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Prizes given to everybody bringing new candidates.

* * * *

Revival Vespers every Sunday evening 7:30 to 8:30 o'clock, D. S. T. Nature of Service—Strictly informal, lots of old fashioned singing, volunteer prayers, simple Bible instruction. Prayers offered on request for sick, poor and wayward persons. Period of answering questions about religion, Christianity, the Protestant Episcopal Church, the Sacraments, the need of living according to God's laws, and a thousand other questions answered satisfactorily or not at all.

Adults interested in confirmation are specially invited.

* * * *

Before you refuse to co-operate in Sunday School teaching, seeking candidates for Confirmation, supporting your church with your presence at church services on Sundays, won't you retire to some place where you will be absolutely alone and examine honestly the events of your life—from the first day you entered St. John's Church—with a view to learn how much your contact with the dear old church has influenced your career? We mean in every way. What has it brought into your life—In the matter of friends, whom later became your beloved? In the matter of jobs you are holding today, which you would not be holding had you not been members? In the matter of being helped over rough and desperate times when you are unemployed? In times of sickness and death? That cozy little nest you live in with your loved ones—do you owe it and what it contains to your contact with old St. John's? Your hope for the future is one of your blessings your contact has brought to you.

If you were to complete your silent examination by kneeling in prayer and ask God to show you the path of gratitude and duty do you think you would arise from your knees convinced you owe no service to God and His church? THAT YOU HAVE PAID BACK YOUR DEBT TO GOD IN FULL?

OUR EASTER OFFERING

Every year we like to publish the names of our communicants who make their Easter Offerings to the church. Compared to more opulent parishes, our offering may seem small. Yet our parishioners, as a whole, give what they can afford. And we feel that the long list of those who make the sacrifice is an inspiration to all of us. We like to know that so many of our fellow parishioners are motivated by a consciousness of their debt to our Lord Jesus for His great and important sacrifice for us.

Many names of earnest parishioners do not appear on this list because misfortune or unemployment make it impossible to give. We know who they are and we want to assure them that the Lord Jesus knows them too and upon them He bestows His blessing for the will to do.

As with many, perhaps all, parishes there are those who do not grasp the tremendous significance of the sacrifice of our Lord Jesus. Whether their spiritual attitude is due to ignorance or greed is known only to them. Their names are never found on such lists as these. We are sorry they deprive themselves of the joy of such offerings. Perhaps, someday, they will understand and then they too will be enrolled with the FAITHFUL.

THIS IS OUR ROLL OF HONOR FOR EASTER 1938:

MIGRANTS

SOMETHING THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY HEARD ABOUT

Monday evening, April 11th, the Woman's Auxiliary held an exceptionally interesting meeting. After the usual routine Miss Helen Weir McHenry, Director of Religious Education of the Memorial Church of the Good Shepherd of Germantown gave us an informal talk on the subject of our article. We learned not only what migrants are but also how very common they are in our country. She told us they are human beings just like you and me; but their manner of living differed from ours so greatly that they would seem to be the product of a totally different civilization. We learned too that tho they are more or less nomadic yet they are not tramps; neither are they gypsies. Taken as a whole they are independent and industrious. They are the men, women and children who travel—not from one state to another but from one crop to another. They are berry pickers, cotton pickers, tobacco pickers, etc., etc. When they get through one crop they move on to another—always on the move. Miss McHenry gave us a vivid picture of conditions in which the migrants live. It was not an attractive picture at all. They live in a crowded and an insanitary condition which leave them constantly exposed to disease, even to such diseases as small pox and scarlet fever. Not a very pleasant thought when we consider how much of the food we eat they handle first. Then the children have no sort of child life. Often at the age of four they are helping pick berries. The babies are frequently born right in the open, wherever the expectant mother may be at the time. The children get little or no education, first because the migrants are always on the move and secondly, because they are too dirty to associate with normal children. So far as church training goes, they are not welcome in the ordinary congregations because of their habits and consequently they know little indeed about Jesus Christ and His Gospel.

The evening was one of the most interesting we ever spent as a Woman's Auxiliary. We felt after listening to the story of the migrants that we had been living in a different world and mingling with a strange people, who were fascinating in their manner of living, and that this peculiar people are constantly moving north and south; east and west—never still—in every state of the union except two.

Miss McHenry promised to give us a talk on the subject of the Mountain Whites of the South. She has delivered these same lectures before several church gatherings in the Diocese and has aroused a great deal of enthusiasm among our church women and a desire for the church to do something, materially and spiritually for these neglected souls who are living so close to us.

The lecture on the subject of the Mountain Whites of the South will be given by Miss McHenry, Monday, May 9th at 8 P. M. Everybody is invited, especially the Senior and Junior chapters of the Daughters of the King, the members of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, the officers and teachers of the Sunday School, the members of the choir and all the members of the parish.

Later in the year she will give her lecture on the American Indian.

Admission Free—Everybody Invited.

SELF EXPRESSION

THE MODERN SCHOOL THEORY FOR THE YOUNG

Bishop Francis M. Taitt in an address, at a meeting held in St. James Church, Friday, April 29th, uttered these words of profound wisdom: When it is realized that 70 percent of the first offender criminals in Philadelphia are 17 years old or younger, the idea of modern educators to allow self expression is all wrong."

Many a pedagogue will quarrel over that statement and will accuse our good Bishop as being a moss back and a horse and buggy driver, and hopelessly out of the running with modern streamlined philosophy on child development. Be that as it may, the fact remains that the Bishop is 100 percent correct in his judgment: because his observation is backed by incontrovertable facts and not by pedagogical theory.

Self-expression, guided wisely, is all to the good. But youth like all growing things and animals, needs discipline, pruning, training and careful cultivation or else it runs wild and grows rank and useless and deadly.

For instance, here is a story from real life taken right out of our parish. A few years ago we were in constant attendance upon a woman parishoner who was slowly dying of tuberculosis. She knew she could not possibly get well and was resigned. One matter worried her intensely however. She had two very interesting boys who were very young. Her death meant she must leave them to the care and keep of a man and a woman who were totally unfit to have the custody of the children. The mother's premonition was only too well founded. She died and her orphan boys passed into the keeping of the foster parents who were ultra modern. Soon we noticed the boys were no longer attending Sunday School. They had been recently confirmed and now they were neglecting their communion. They stopped attending church service. We got busy and called on the family to inquire into the sudden change of attitude of the boys towards religion. We were told very frankly and very emphatically that the boys could use their own judgment about attending church or Sunday School that—in so many words—they had a right to judge for themselves and if they did not choose to keep up their religious habits as taught them by their mother it was entirely up to them. They, the foster parents, would not "force" them to go to church.

We persevered, but it was no use. The guardians didn't care anything about the moral and religious training of the boys so they just ran wild.

What was the result? Why, just what every parent, foster mother or guardian ought to expect. They spent their Sundays in all sorts of places and indulged themselves in all sorts of unrestricted pastimes and pleasures. They lost the fine spiritual concepts so carefully imparted to them from their sainted mother. Down, down they slid and eventually tumbled into the criminal court. From there they went to prison cells and today are paying the penalty of their "SELF EXPRESSION" in crime. Of course their guardians disclaim all responsibility. To their way of reasoning the boys were naturally viscious. That is a lie!

Those boys were just like all other healthy, active, alert kids. They had the good of their mother in them but they were not properly curbed and trained like all active young human animals require. They were allowed to run wild, they became social mavericks and now their lives are ruined.

Who says those guardians should not have been jailed instead of the sons of the widow?

But, you say one case does not prove a rule. Now you have said something! But many cases do prove something. We just learned that 8 boys who started attending Sunday School and church and who were allowed by their parents to run wild and neglect the church and its teachings are in jail too. There are others and many illustrations of wayward boys and girls, whose parents are either too weak or too cowardly to guide and advise them, who are in danger of social vengeance. If a little more checking and disciplining and a great deal less of wicked indulgence are not instituted in the young of our community the hopper will go on grinding out criminals, drunkards and worse in our community and the sin will be on the parents and guardians of our young.

Read the wise words of Bishop Taitt again, and then pray God to give you strength to be a real friend to your boy and girl and teach them the ways of righteousness

THE MIRROR

Once when a prophet in a palm shade lay,
A traveler stopped at noon one dusty day,
And asked, "What sort of people in this land?"
The prophet answered, lifting happy hand,
"Well, friend, what sort of people whence you came?"
"What sort!" the traveler snorted; "knaves and fools!"
"Well," said the prophet, "when your fever cools
You'll find the people here the very same."

Another stranger at the dusk drew near
And paused to ask, "What sort of people here?"
'Well, friend, what were the people whence you came?"
"Ah," smiled the stranger, "they were good and wise."
"Then," smiled the prophet, laughing in his eyes,
"You'll find the people here the very same."

LITTLE DO WE KNOW

Little do we know
How much the heart can bear,
What latent powers are given to man
To meet his load of care.
Nor grief nor pain can force retreat,
The regnant will knows no defeat
And mocks at cruel despair.

Little do we know
How kind the heart can be,
What tenderness may dwell within,
What boundless sympathy!
Rare gifts indeed:—and who can tell
How great their power, how far their spell,
When love has set them free.

Little do we know
How high the heart can rise,
For dreams may soar on tireless wings
Beyond the farthest skies,
And noble thoughts, when given birth,
May break all shackles of the earth
And enter Paradise!

THE PRESENTATION OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LENTEN OFFERING

IT WAS A BEAUTIFUL PAGEANT

Was it thrilling!

I'll say it was!!

We old timers just stood up and chuckled to see the return of the good old round-up of all the Sunday Schools of the Diocese in one big Mass Meeting.

Suppose it had been a clear day instead of cold and rainy—we would have held the service in Rittenhouse Square.

What a difference when the Presentation was held on the same Sunday in different Convocations and that centralized service this year.

Do you remember how the church looked the past few years? It resembled the Sahara Desert with here and there small oasis of young folk—a depressing sight—one that put the snuffer on enthusiasm.

But this year!

First greeting we got at the door of the church was, "All adults upstairs." We didn't like it at first. When we reached the gallery and looked down on all those hundreds of empty pews we wondered what was the big "ideer" in reserving so much space. We recalled the previous years and how anxious we were to have more people, old or young, come in and fill the vacancies. So we sighed and sat back to watch results.

Then at the crack of the gun, or the gong of the clock, four P. M., the organ began to play and the pageant was moving through the middle doors and up the main aisle of the church. They came in four abreast, led by the church choir, the officiating clergy, the Deans of the Convocation and Bishops Taitt and Fenner.

Back of them came four abreast, too, the choirs of the parishes of the Diocese, all arrayed in their distinctive vestments. Such a colorful sight you never saw; black and white, all red, red and white, all blue, blue and white, all white, all brown, brown and white and about a dozen other combinations.

And how they sang as they marched in!

At first we wondered whether there would be enough children in the procession to fill a third of the pews. When the third of the pews were filled and the kiddies still came in four abreast, we hoped there would be enough to half fill the space. When half the pews were filled and still the procession was pouring through the church doors, we wondered if all the space would be occupied after all. Then when every pew of the vast church was crammed back to the doors and the singing hordes of kiddies continued four abreast, we got as nervous as a cat wondering where these last were going to sit or stand. The aisle was packed with singing throngs while the distracted masters of ceremonies or ushers, or whatever they were, were scampering around the Chancel and the Choir and the Bishops were personally directing the disposal of this mighty overflow. At last, somehow room was found for them. But whenever anybody moved in the Chancel or Choir, everybody had to stand up and turn around, too. It was like four people sleeping in a bed built for two—when one wanted to turn, he gave the signal and all turned together.

Then we had a short service of Sentences, Gloria Patri, Psalm and a Lesson which was followed by the packed church singing, "Jesus shall reign wher'er the sun." After the Creed and Prayers Bishop Taitt made an address of greeting to everybody. The Bishop's address was of particular interest to all St. Johnites. In commenting on the offerings from the parishes he made special reference to the Church of St. John the Evangelist and its miraculous "comeback." From a church RECEIVING missionary aid, to a church GIVING $1,000.00 for Missionary aid, and that regardless of the fact that over 40 per cent of our membership are either unemployed or on half time.

If you ever want a funny feeling go to a gathering of hundreds of humans and listen to a speaker say complimentary things about you right out loud. It makes you feel like finding somewhere else to go, if you get what we mean.

The Presentation of the Lenten Offering was made at the conclusion of the Bishop's address. It was received by the Deans of the Diocese standing at the front of the choir while representatives from the Schools brought forward their certificates. Then the Doxology was sung which was followed by the big congregation singing the musical melody of that beautiful and stirring hymn, "Fairest Lord Jesus."

Bishop Fenner, Bishop co-adjutor of the Diocese of Kansas, who was the next speaker, commented on the singing of that hymn. He said that he always wanted to hear it sung as it should be sung and at last he was satisfied; that it took a Philadelphia congregation to sing it correctly and with true feeling.

Bishop Fenner captured the attention of his congregation at once. The kiddies and the grown folk, too, were deeply interested in that tale of getting lost on their way to a fishing camp and meeting an English sheep herder who lived fifty miles from everywhere and later of the trapper whose home was still deeper in the mountains and how he got them interested in his little mission, which by the way, was built with the money given for that purpose by Philadelphia friends, and how one of the sons of the sheep herder eventually was ordained and is now ministering in rural districts. Our personal feeling is that Bishop Fenner can come again to Philadelphia and give us another talk.

The glorious service was finally brought to a close by prayers and blessing of Bishop Taitt and the Recessional of the augmented choirs who were so mixed up on account of the necessary crowding that the procession looked like a jumble of every color imaginable. Anyhow they did get out of church and back to the parish house—anyhow.

What a contrast from the Convocational system of presenting the offering; and were we old timers pleased with the excitement and disorder and turmoil of the occasion which always spells life in capital letters.

But take warning, O Diocese, next year get somebody to LEND us (not lease) the Academy or the Auditorium. For if you repeat the Mass Meeting idea and it is a clear day, you will find you need every inch of space of either building.

A NEW CHAPTER OF THE DAUGHTERS OF THE KING INSTITUTED

Sunday, May 8, the 3rd Sunday after Easter, a new chapter of the Daughters of the King was instituted in St. John's Parish. The Service was held at 9:45 A. M. It was attended by the members of Senior Chapter No. 1 and also by those who were about to be admitted as charter members of the new chapter, Senior Chapter No. 2. The Service was held in the choir of the Church. After the admission of each new member and the presentation of the Daughter of the King Crosses, the Rector celebrated the Holy Communion, in which both the first and also the new chapters participated. After the reception of the Communion, the Service of Admission was concluded with prayers and blessing taken from the Daughters of the King ritual. The new chapter was presented by Miss M. Beatrice Fisher.

The members of the new chapter are: Misses Helen Ashmen, Helen Lotz, May Leach, Adelia Pearo, Ruth Preole, Ethel Stenger, Mrs. John Preole and Mrs. George Glaze.

Officers of the chapter are as follows: Adelia Pearo, President; Eleanor Preole, Secretary; and May Leach, Treasurer.

The chapter meets the 3rd Monday of the month at 8:00 P. M.

THE YEARS OF KNOWLEDGE OF GOOD AND EVIL

WHEN IS A CHILD OLD ENOUGH TO BE CONFIRMED?

There seems to be an almost unanimous opinion among protestant bodies that no child should be confirmed until he knows what he is doing. It is generally supposed that this period of knowledge is after he has reached the age of twelve years. Just why that is the year of knowledge has never been quite clearly explained. Certainly it is not intimated in the offices of Baptism or Confirmation and it is rather doubtful whether a case in its favor can be found in Scriptures. Evidently it is an idea that somebody expressed and everybody accepted without thinking.

When you do stop and think you realize that instead of being a matter of age it is more a matter of moral and spiritual apprehension. For instance, there are scores of children in every community who have finer and clearer conceptions of right and wrong and duty than many adults old enough to be their grandparents; many of whom are so deficient in moral and spiritual things that today they occupy prison cells.

But suppose we stop speculating and turn to an authority on the subject. The highest and most unimpeachable authority is, of course, Jesus Christ himself. In St. Matthew's Gospel, Chapter 19:13-15 is recorded an incident which fully and clearly illustrates the workings of the Master Mind on the matter. We quote:

"Then there were brought unto Him little children, that He should PUT HIS HANDS ON THEM, and PRAY: And the disciples rebuked them."

"But Jesus said, suffer little children, and FORBID THEM NOT, to come unto me; for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven, and he LAID HIS HANDS ON THEM, and departed thence."

The Church uses this passage to justify her position on the matter of Infant Baptism and is perfectly right in so doing. Yet the curious fact of the matter is that it has not the remotest connection with the Sacrament of Baptism. On the other hand it is intimately tied up with Confirmation because we are expressely told that the little children were brought to Jesus that he would LAY HIS HANDS ON THEM AND PRAY. And He DID LAY HIS HANDS ON THEM, which is exactly what the Bishop does in the Confirmation Service while HE PRAYS over each candidate.

As the Church uses this passage in the Baptismal Office it is quite evident she interprets the expression, "Suffer little children," etc., to mean very young children—even infants. Also there is another very interesting matter to consider. If you read the Baptismal Office you will learn that the sponsors receive very specific directions in the matter of presenting children to the Bishop to be confirmed by him. The last question to the sponsors is "Wilt thou take heed that this child, SO SOON AS SUFFICIENTLY INSTRUCTED, be brought to the Bishop to be confirmed by him.

The answer is "I will, God being my helper."

Naturally, you will notice THERE IS NO MINIMUM AGE LIMIT in the service as to when a child is to be confirmed. Hence there is no ground upon which to build up an age limit. It is after all a question of the moral and spiritual apprehension of the child himself.

Ah, you say, now we have you on the weak spot. Pray tell us if any child under 12 years has a clear knowledge of right and wrong; of God and His spiritual standards?

The best way to answer that question is to relate certain things which have occurred in our Confirmation talks to school children this year.

In teaching the Lord's Prayer and its meaning, we turned to the class with our initial question, "What is prayer?" Instantly a girl of 7 years stood up and said. "It is talking with God to help us be good." Further along we asked, "Will God forgive us our sins if we ask him?" A boy in his eighth year replied, "No, not unless we forgive others."

In reviewing the commandments we asked the class what is "false witness against our neighbor?" The answer came right back at us. "It is gossiping and lying about people and trying to get "em in trouble." Again we asked what does the word "covet" in the 10th Commandment mean? We got our answer in these words, "It means to want something somebody else has and we try to cheat him out of it."

These are answers from children under 12 years of age to the question has any child under that age a clear knowledge of right and wrong?

Why this knowledge at such an early age? Because, my brother, the child is very close to the heart of God and his spiritual vision has not yet been dimmed with sin as is the case with those who are older and have eaten the fruit of the tree of knowledge of good and evil.

OUR SUMMER ACTIVITIES

It seems as though it is just one busy season after another. We begin the church year with Advent and the Christmas festival. No sooner are we through with them than we are plunged into Lent and the Easter season. When we emerge from them we are well on our way to the summer holiday season, only to find there is no recreation for us. After the Confirmation we open up our Summer Bible School, the daily vacation school and the summer camp. Much of this work demands our personal attention. Much is in the hands of experienced and faithful aids. Mrs. John Nelson, Jr., will continue to take charge of the daily vacation school. That is a big responsibility lifted from our shoulders. The Shack-in-the-Pines camp will be under new management this year. The former hostess, Miss Helen Weir McHenry, is no longer available due to the fact she is now Director of Religious Education of the parish of the Memorial Church of the Good Shepherd, Germantown, and all of her time is required in that field. We are fortunate, however, to have her assistant, Miss May Leach, to take over the job. She will be assisted by Miss Helen Ashman, who though new in the executive position of aide, is very familiar with the camp work and, aside of being a close friend of May's, is very popular with the young folk of the parish.

St. John's program has always been very complete. We hope this year we will be able to contribute the same amount of recreation and health to our young folk as we have in the past. Of course, the extent of our work will depend upon the contributions we get from our friends. However, we have been so fortunate for so many years that we look with confidence to the future.

The really important branch of our summer work is our Summer Bible School. Beginning Sunday, June 12th, we meet at 10.00 A. M., in the Sunday School room in one large group. The service is built up on hymns, the Catechism, a study of the Books of the Bible and the Collect, Epistle and Gospel for the day. A careful record of attendance is kept and at the end of the school term the scholars who have been regular in attendance receive a special outing. The Bible School is open to persons of all ages and the program is so arranged that everybody enjoys it. Come and see for yourself.

During the sessions of the Summer Bible School the hour of the morning service is changed from 10.45 to 11.00 A. M.

HERE IS AN IDEA

WHY NOT ADOPT IT?

The Sunday School Class, of which Martha McFadden is the teacher, has $11.30 towards its 1939 Easter Offering. It is the proceeds from a roller skating party given several weeks ago.

What is to prevent other classes from doing the same thing and starting now to raise their Lenten Offering instead of waiting until Lent arrives? Roller Skating parties are very popular. It is good, clean, healthful fun and the young people like it.

If such parties do not appeal there are other equally pleasant ways of raising the offering. For instance, the Brotherhood of St. Andrew chapter has already started a Chapter Mite Chest in which each member makes a weekly deposit. The contents of the box will be donated next Easter to the Men's Bible Class.

An idea has just occurred to us which we would like to see tried out. In some respects it is not original; in others it is very original indeed. Wouldn't it be a good idea for each class to have a birthday box? Now, just wait until we explain what we mean. Of course, we know that for a class to have such a box for the class members only would not prove to be a very great source of income. What we have in mind is something very different. Suppose, for instance, we were to make up a family birthday calendar and check up all the family birthdays during the year; then on the Sunday nearest a birthday go to whoever is going to have one and ask him or her for as many pennies as he or she is years old for your class birthday box. Don't you think that would be a pretty comfortable source of income for your Sunday School Lenten Offering? We think it would be fun to get all our officers, teachers and scholars to make up such birthday calendars out of any calendar they might have and hang it in a prominent place in the home where everybody can see it and know when their turn to give a birthday offering comes. On the calendar we might mark up the birthdays of our Dad and Mother, brothers, sisters, uncles, aunts, wives, husbands, nephews, nieces, grandparents, great grandparents, great, great grand-parents, sons and daughters, all our in-laws, etc., etc., marking them with red ink and naming them the

FAMILY RED LETTER DAYS

For example, here is what we mean. Let us take an hypothetical family. In it are Mother and Father, six children, two cousins, an uncle, an aunt and a grandparent. We will take an ordinary calendar and mark in their birthday when they occur, somewhat after this fashion:

January, Father's birthday, 35 years, 35 cents for Birthday Box.

February, Mother's birthday, 35 years, 35 cents for Birthday Box.

March, twin's birthday, 15 years, each 30 cents for Birthday Box.

April, Charles' birthday, 12 years, 12 cents for Birthday Box.

May, Rose's birthday, 10 years, 10 cents for Birthday Box.

June, Cousin No. 1 birthday, 12 years, 12 cents for Birthday Box.

July, Cousin No. 2 birthday, 11 years, 11 cents for Birthday Box.

August, Uncle's birthday, 38 years, 38 cents for Birthday Box.

September, Aunt's birthday, 37 years, 37 cents for Birthday Box.

October, Grandparent's birthday, 70 years, 70 cents for Birthday Box.

November, Your birthday, 15 years, 15 cents for Birthday Box.

Total amount, Birthday pennies for family, $4.05. If one family years will give 4.15 in birthday pennies how much would you get from a whole class of boys or girls if each would start a family calendar at home? In 1939 we would have our Sunday School Lenten Offering of $1,000.00 before Lent and would not have to resort to all sorts of desperate measures to raise our apportionment.

WHY NOT GIVE THE FAMILY BIRTHDAY CALENDAR A TRY?

Suppose there are more than one or two of the same family in the school—divide the family statistics among them and there you are!

WE ARE SORRY

Due to the Easter excitement some envelopes containing the Easter Offering of Communicants got mixed in with the regular church offering envelopes and failed to be recorded in last month's list of Easter Offerings. We are sorry the omission occurred and hasten to make amends. Those whose names are missing are as follows:

Sarah Cunningham
Ellen Lafferty
Mary McDowell
Howard McFadden
Martha McFadden

YOUR SUMMER VACATION

WHERE ARE YOU GOING TO SPEND YOUR VACATION?

It does not matter much where you go, does it? The point is where will you get the most comfort, as well as the most enjoyment. Some enjoy the shore and the ocean breezes. They like the salt tang in the air, the sun bath on the beach and the strenuous bathing in the ocean. It fills them full of vigor and health. Others like the quiet of the country, where there is little or nothing to do than loaf as much as one pleases. To take long hikes in the country and come back tired enough to go early to bed and get a good, long sleep, breathing in all the night the sweet blossom scented and pure air of the country.

Others like to jump into their cars and go touring through the country, stopping where they choose and traveling as far as they choose,—probably to the cool climate of Canada, or the beautiful country of California or the ever popular resorts of Florida. It is an ideal way to travel, especially if you have a congenial companion or two along.

Well, wherever you go we hope you choose the right spot and that you will get lots of pleasure out of it.

HOW ARE YOU GOING TO SPEND YOUR VACATION?

It matters a lot as to how you spend your vacation, if your vacation is to be a truly recreational period. Most folks don't know how to use the time they have on their hands. Some think it is a time to break loose and do things they would not think of doing any other time of the year. They think that now they are away from home they can throw off the restraints which hold them in check in the presence of those who know and associate with them back home and can do things a little irregular because they are among strangers.

Well, so they can; but, the question is whether a vacation spent in indulging in irregular pleasure is really beneficial. There is a big difference between pleasure and dissipation. The first is admissable, the second is taboo. A good rule to establish when you are away from home on a vacation is—never do anything, go anywhere or travel in any company you would be ashamed of at home.

There is a way to help you keep that rule, too. When you arrive, find out where the church is located. Then be sure you attend the services, especially the Holy Communion, with regularity. Sunday observance will in no wise interfere with your good times and will help to toughen your moral fiber. Lots of people find that church going in vacation is a real pleasure. So, when you take your vacation from work, don't take a vacation from church. WHEREVER YOU GO BE IT KNOWN UNTO YOU THAT GOD IS THERE, TOO. And to worship Him in spirit and in truth is the beginning and end of all wisdom.

HOW MUCH ARE YOU GOING TO SPEND ON YOUR VACATION?

Of course, it is understood you are going to loosen up and spend. You are not going to be overly economical and you are going to spend money for things and pleasures that any other time of the year would not tempt you. But we would advise a certain amount of common sense and caution in your spending. Go the limit of your resources if you choose but DO NOT BE A FOOL AND GO BEYOND THAT LIMIT. Remember, debts must be paid. Loans, for instance, must not only be paid, but the interest on loans must be paid, too. And if you tie yourself down to obligations which must be met AFTER your vacation, you will find the strain is not so good on the nerves. And if you should be so unfortunate as to lose your job or be cut down to part time, you may find your vacation will cause you many a moment of regret. Be sensible, spend all you can afford but do not spend what you cannot afford.

And always remember your obligations to your church and be sure your weekly offerings are COUNTED OUT of your vacation funds. THAT MONEY BELONGS TO GOD AND IS UNTOUCHABLE.

WHITSUNDAY AT OLD ST. JOHN'S

Whitsunday was a big occasion at old St. John's this year. Bishop Taitt had chosen it for his annual visitation and as we always celebrate our Anniversary on or near Trinity Sunday, we combined the two occasions and had a grand time. At 10.45 A. M., we celebrated our Anniversary Communion. It was well attended by the communicants of the parish and also by a number of personal friends of the Rector. One distinguishing feature of the service was the music rendered by both the Senior and Junior Choirs. In the afternoon we had a parish meeting. As it was Whitsunday, we made that the feature of the service. Instead of reading the lesson, however, we read the Collect, Epistle and Gospel for Whitsunday. Then we had a "spelling bee" of all the names found in the Gospel. It was most interesting to learn who could spell and who could not. It gives us an idea. We think next year we will build up our system on spelling of the names of people and places, studies in history and also geography of the people and lands of the Bible period. Such a course would be most interesting and very educational.

Another feature of the afternoon was the flower festival. Members of the parish were asked to bring at least one bloom each. After the service they were made into bouquets by Ruth Rutter and Emma Kaiser and distributed among the sick and shut-ins of the parish by members of the Junior Daughters of the King and their friends.

The Rev. Walter Ware was the speaker for the afternoon and, of course, was well received by our scholars as he is one of our most favorite visitors.

We got a slow start in the evening because one of our candidates is a very sick man and it was necessary for the Bishop and the Rector to go to the man's home to confirm him. It was one of those unexpected surprises we are forever springing on our Bishop and we had not made the proper time allowance for it. However, we were not long in getting organized when we returned to the church and the service moved as smoothly as a machine to its conclusion.

We must give a little praise to the Junior Choir for the part they took in the service. Their singing was beautiful and was one of the bright spots in the service.

Fifty-eight candidates were presented and confirmed, thirty of whom were girls and women and twenty-eight were boys and men.

Also, we had the honor of the presence of the Rev. Fr. Harriman of the Parish of St. James the Less who presented two young men of his parish for Confirmation; making 60 persons in all who were confirmed.

The Rector noticed two very beautiful memorial bouquets of carnations at each end of the Altar on which were cards in memory of his father, Daniel and his mother, Mary McHenry. He does not know who placed them there, but he wants whoever it was to know that he will never forget the gesture; especially as his thoughts were dwelling on them before he made the discovery that the flowers were on the Altar in memory of them.

At the conclusion of the service the Bishop received the usual St. John's Parish Salute, the shaking of hands by the whole congregation, which marked the close of another year's work and the opening of still another year's work.

The names of the candidates confirmed are:

BROADCASTING FROM S. T. J. C.

The Presentation Service of the Sunday School Lenten Offering was a most impressive ceremony. We just love the excitement of a big Mass Meeting like that.

* * * *

We are very grateful to Bishop Taitt for his kind comments concerning St. John's efforts. We don't mind working our heads off for a Bishop who notices things.

* * * *

WE NEED SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS SERIOUSLY!

* * * *

Mrs. Howard Miller (nee Magraret Tittermary) has taken over a class of girls that has been without a teacher for several months. You can see a big improvement in the class already.

* * * *

Be sure all your weekly church envelopes are paid up to the end of your vacation BEFORE you take it.

* * * *

We must have funds to run the Church in the summer, as well as in the winter. The summer is hot enough without making us "sweat" over finances.

* * * *

Mary: "How did you see so clearly the intentions of the cad?"

Ann: "He made a spectacle of himself."

* * * *

We are very grateful to the members of the Senior Choir for their faithful cooperation and loyalty during the past season.

* * * *

The Memorial Service of the Slook Montague Post was well attended. The new uniforms of the band are very nifty. It is always an honor to have the Post visit old St. John's. Every member is always welcome, both individually and collectively.

* * * *

A special word of thanks to all those who helped to make the Rector's 26th Anniversary Party such a happy occasion.

* * * *

Farewell until Fall! Enjoy your vacation and come home fit for the job of hustling for old St. John's.

THE HOLY BIBLE

THE TESTIMONY OF GREAT MEN

MAHATMA GANDHI: "The New Testament has influenced me most."

GEORGE V, KING AND EMPEROR OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE: "It is my confident hope that my subjects may never cease to cherish their noble inheritance in the English Bible, which in a secular aspect, is the first of national treasures and is, in its spiritual significance, the most valuable thing that this world affords."

GEORGE WASHINGTON: "Above all, the pure and benign light of Revelation has had a meliorating influence on mankind, and increased the blessings of Society."

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS: "The first and almost the only book deserving of universal attention is the Bible. I speak as a man of the world, and I say unto you, 'Search the Scriptures.' "

ABRAHAM LINCOLN: "I am profitably engaged in reading the Bible. Take all of this book upon reason that you can and the balance by faith, and you will live and die a better man."

THOMAS HUXLEY: "The Bible has been the Magna Charta of the poor and oppressed."

ROBERT A. MILLIKAN, American Scientist (Nobel Prize 1923): "I consider an intimate knowledge of the Bible an indispensable qualification of a well educated man. Contact with the finest influences which have ever come into human life can be obtained only in this way."

HORACE GREELEY: "It is impossible to mentally or socially enslave a Bible reading people."

JOHN GREENLEAF WHITTIER:

"We search the world for truth; we cull
The good, the pure, the beautiful,
From graven stone and written scroll,
From the old flower fields of the soul,
And weary seekers for the best,
We come back, laden from our quest,
To find that all the sages said—
Is in the BOOK our mothers read.

OUR OBSERVATION: Thoughts of great men are pearls of great price to the seeker after truth. Therefore, let us treasure them and read the Scriptures with their eyes.

SLOOK-MONTAGUE MEMORIAL SERVICE

Sunday evening, May 29th, the Slook-Montague Post 354, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, held their annual Memorial Service in the Church of St. John the Evangelist at 8 P. M. The Post was led by its famous band, dressed in their brilliant new uniforms and accompanied by a large delegation of their Woman's Auxiliary.

The Post left its quarters, 2113 S. 13th Street at about 7.30 P. M., and proceeded in parade formation to the church. The music of the band and the colorful appearance of its flags and dress made a most thrilling incident. Naturally, there were crowds lining both sides of the streets. One of the most effective figures in line was the beautiful girl drum major. She led the parade like a veteran.

On arriving at the church the Post marched into the lower hall in parade formation and broke ranks while the combination Senior and Junior Choirs formed to lead the Procession in church.

The Processional was "The Star Spangled Banner". This was followed by the Creed and Prayers by the whole congregation, led by the Senior Layreader, Vernon Matthews. After the prayers the Junior Choir rendered a beautiful patriotic anthem. The Rector then made a short address of Welcome to our guests. John Nelson, Jr., rendered a Baritone Solo in his usual effective style.

The religious program was followed by the Veterans Memorial Service conducted by Commander Walter Cunningham, Sr., who, by the way, is the husband of our Ida Cunningham and the father of our Walter, Jr. He conducted the service with a military dignity which was most effective. The Drum and Bugle Corp rendered a stirring rendition of "Work for the Night Is Coming." Then the whole congregation rose up and sang, "My Country 'Tis of Thee." The text of the Rector's sermon was the Tenth Commandment, "THOU SHALT NOT COVET." He pointed out the importance of that commandment:—how all wars of all ages were the evil eminations of covetousness—a hateful example today being the war of the Japs on China and other such unjustifiable military expeditions in other parts of the world, where weaker nations were being destroyed by the stronger whose lust for power and wealth had made fiends of them all.

The Senior Choir rendered the Offertory Anthem in their usual beautifully finished style, which was followed by Closing Prayers and the Benediction by the Rector. Then, led by the combined Church Choirs the Post and its friends filed out of the church and, after the closing prayer, formed ranks and marched back to their Headquarters.

It was a most interesting evening, full of thrills and one we will long remember. The one outstanding number of the evening was the beautiful recital of Lincoln's Gettysburg speech by Miss Georgia B. Edding.

A PRAYER FOR THOSE WHO HAVE VANISHED FROM THIS WORLD

O God, who art our Father for ever and ever; Bless my beloved who, through the gate of death, have passed into Thy nearer presence. Tell them my love, and grant me to know their love. In ways I cannot fathom grant me to help them, even as they are permitted to help me. Give to them such happiness as this world can never know; and beyond all my power to ask, grant them to be noble and great in thy sight; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

THE QUIET NIGHT

What is death but a quiet night of sleeping:
All weariness forgotten, and all pain;
Our eyelids closed and shaken of their weeping,
Our bodies waiting strength to come again.

We say goodnight to our beloved, then turning
Go through the shadowy hall and up the stair,
A little light goes out that has been burning,
We watch the stars beyond the window square.
Then soft as nightfall on the meadow flowers,
Sleep comes and bears us dreamlessly away.

And rest is sweet though long or short the hours,
Until we waken, and again 'tis day,
With its strange glory and its sudden splendor,
And, dazzled by the golden light that spills,
We will arise, all lithe and strong and slender
And young again, to climb the glittering hills.

By GRACE NOLL CROWELL.

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

IS IT AN ASSET OR A LIABILITY?

Many persons are definitely persuaded that the church is a liability. To them there are no visible assets aside from the usual Sunday services, social affairs and priestly ministrations of more or less importance—ministrations to their way of reasoning, founded more or less on tradition than on necessity. They feel they do not get the "worth of their money" from the church and a community is just as well off without it. They are not sure it is not a hotbed of superstition and fear. At all events it is an irritating nuisance and interferes with one's pleasures and is an expensive luxury.

There is, for instance, the expense of keeping the church and its furnishings in repair; the salary of the Rector who has a sinecure instead of a job; an organist, a Parish Visitor, a sexton, leaders of organizations, all drawing salaries for work that is of dubious value for the community at large and these salaries, furnishings and repairs are paid by folk who are deluded into thinking it is all necessary to the social order.

To our way of thinking the critics of the christian church would have a tough time proving the justice of their criticisms. The church is the greatest asset of any community in many important ways.

First of all it is the custodian and dispenser of a moral and a spiritual force that makes the difference between hope and despair; between decency and debauchery; between a Godly civilization and ungodly superstition. It is the star which guides to a nobility of living all men who are smart enough to take their directions from it. No man is ever lost or confused or despairing who goes to his church for inspiration. There he is sure to come in contact with a mighty spiritual power which enables him to overcome all things menacing to his welfare.

This spiritual power is the christian church's greatest and noblest asset. It is priceless. No gold nor jewels are to be compared to it in value. If you remove the church from the community, the community shows a marked deterioration in less than a year. Like an uncultivated field—the poisonous weeds of evil grow up and choke all decent impulses and the community becomes a menace to life, decency, and property.

WHAT WE HAVE JUST STATED IS FOUNDED ON SOLID FACTS!

Yet the church has other assets of real MATERIAL, as well as SPIRITUAL value. It is developing more and more every year a social consciousness superior to all scientific endeavors in the field of social service. The state, as well as the community, business as well as a profession, are turning with confidence to the church for information and enlightenment about its members and thereby placing it in a position of a bureau of reference and they govern their decisions according to the information they get from it. For instance:

1. There is an increasing demand on your Rector to endorse C. C. C. applications. Speaking in terms of dollars and cents this averages in board, lodging, clothing and wages a minimum of $75.00 a month to the individual. Certainly that is an asset that can be appreciated by the most materialistic.

2. Your Rector's signature in many cases, is required on insurance papers before the money can be drawn. Surely such a requirement is of great value in dollars and cents to a communicant.

3. Business men demand baptismal certificates to prove the age of a child applicant for work before they will hire him. Surely this is an asset of monetary value and can be easily calculated in dollars and cents.

4. Bonding companies send questionnaires to the Rector to fill out and sign for persons applying for positions of trust. Their success in obtaining the job depends entirely upon how the Rector answer those questionnaires. Surely this is an asset in dollars and cents upon which the support of the family rests.

5. Parishioners are constantly asking for letters of recommendation to prospective employers. When they get the job they get a weekly income. Surely this is a valuable asset earning dollars and cents for the parishioner.

6. Scores of parishioners seek the Rector's influence to land jobs for them. And frequently he does so. Today he can name many who are holding jobs paying them weekly or monthly salaries they obtained through him many years ago. These jobs are surely a valuable asset to those job holders and must be rated in dollars and cents.

7. And aside from this permanent service of value there is also the matter of temporary relief, i. e., food, fuel, clothing, rent, medical service, summer outings, etc., all of which has an enormous monetary value to the needy and sick. The Church spends hundreds of dollars in such relief. Can you think of a greater asset to any community than that of relieving poverty and sickness?

You simply cannot deny these and scores of other beneficences of the christian church, which are wholly material and physical and contribute towards the comfort of human beings and lessen to a great degree the suffering of living to those who are unfortunate.

Taking into consideration these spiritual, moral and financial benefits derived from the christian church, do you not think we had better revise our estimates of its importance and value?

And do you not think it would be well to cherish and support such an important institution just for utilitarian purposes alone, knowing all the time that it is ever refining and ennobling us by its teachings of a higher spiritual attainment in which finally our mortal problems and struggles are merged into a satisfactory attainment of all our ambitions and desires.

In other words don't destroy the only security of life—the Church—by neglect BUT BE WISE and strengthen it more and more with your presence and patronage that in time of need it will be your Rock of Dependence.

IT RAINED

WE WERE AMONG THOSE WHO SUFFERED

During July and part of August, the rainfall was torrential along the Eastern Coast. The damage done to crops and property ran well up into the millions.

We tell of the sufferings of others because it helps us feel optimistic over the damage we sustained and which is going to cost us a pretty penny to repair. The Shack and the Summer House developed leaks in many spots; drains were clogged up and overflowed. The Parish House roof sprung a leak in several places, which means we must put on an entire new roof. The woodwork is so badly warped in places that it will be necessary to do a lot of repair work. The cost of the damage done will reach nearly $250.00. This unexpected expense is pretty serious, coming as it does this time of the year. However, it is nothing we cannot cope with, especially if YOU will come forward and pay up your overdue weekly church envelopes.

I wonder how many of our parishioners realize that there is due the parish in unpaid envelopes over $1,000.00 for the first part of the year 1938. Some members have paid nothing at all since the first Sunday in Advent. Many have paid less than half their dues. Others are three months behind and scores owe all their summer envelopes.

Our current and extra expenses to date are:

Wages and salaries	$290.00
Repairs	250.00
Supplies	80.00
	$620.00

So you see the difference between what YOU owe the church and what THE CHURCH owes its creditors. Here it is in short meter:

Overdue church envelopes	$1,000.00
Church expenses	620.00
Balance	$380.00

AND REMEMBER THIS—

That EVERY overdue envelope is responsible for this $1,000.00 debt due the church so do not shrug your shoulders and say, "Oh well, others owe more than I and my few unpaid envelopes don't count so much."

LET ME INSIST:

EVERY UNPAID ENVELOPE COUNTS!

SO YOU PAY UP AND HELP US PAY UP.

OUR SUNDAY SCHOOL

WE ARE ABOUT TO MAKE A FEW INTERESTING CHANGES

Sunday, September 18th (the 14th Sunday after Trinity) is the day set aside by the Diocesan Sunday School Association for opening the Church Schools for the year. The lessons arranged by the Joint Diocesan Lesson Board begin on that Sunday. The subject of our study this fall and winter will be our christian environment. The first lesson will be on "WHAT WE DO DEPENDS UPON OUR IDEA OF GOD." You will agree with me that this a most intriguing statement. It means anybody can tell what we think of God by the way we do and say and feel and think things. If our idea of God is low then our living will be upon a low plane. If God is all in all to us then we will strive to imitate Him and it will not be hard for others to see and know we are GOD'S children.

But this is just the first lesson of the course. The other subjects are just as practical and just as interesting. I am sure that this switch to the Diocesan Series of Lessons is going to prove very satisfactory in every way.

We shall continue our Catechism form of opening service as we feel that the constant reviewing of the catechism is very helpful both to the scholar and the teacher in training for Confirmation. And even after the scholar is confirmed it is well to keep up the mental exercise of catechism instruction.

We hope also to include in our schedule a Bible Drilling including the learning of the names of the Books, their subject divisions, number of chapters, contests in Book, Chapter and verse finding. We think we can squeeze in this exercise if we start promptly and shorten the lesson period.

Every Sunday School is finding that it is increasingly difficult to keep up the attendance. This is due, of course, to the multitude of week end attractions of these modern times. The family automobile is perhaps the most influential in carrying the children off to the country in the fall and winter, as well as in the summer. The railroads help by advertising one day Sunday autumn excursions to the mountains and Sunday Ski parties in the winter. Then the movies come along and "do their bit" by keeping open house on Sundays. Also the modern youth has developed a Sunday social complex which seeks diversion in club life.

All these diversions war against the spiritual education of our children. Sunday School is deadly dull in comparison. Even the parents cannot see the necessity of "forcing" children to attend.

This sort of attack upon our Sunday School institutions must be met with some sort of counter attack. We must put over the idea that moral and spiritual education of youth is vital, not only to the individual but also to the community and the nation. Physical culture is necessary for physical development. Strong bodies are always to be desired. Mental culture is a necessary education factor. It is one of the foundation stones of science and civilization. But spiritual culture is more necessary than either or both of the other cults. It is the keystone of life structure. Without it life is chaotic and all other cultures are worthless.

Therefore, we MUST put over, somehow or other, the necessity of spiritual education. It will come of course. Self-preservation, world salvation demand it. So let's begin working on the problem now.

How can we make our Sunday School attractive enough to counteract the recreational week ends? What inducement can we offer to draw the attention of the young to our spiritual program? Can you answer these questions by suggesting counter attractions? We doubt the value of a compromise. What we need is a program of real spiritual attraction for our Sunday School system. And we are so much in earnest in solving this problem that we offer to publish and adopt any program that has the virtue of inducing the youth of our parish to "seek the Lord in the days of his youth."

We hope to have a hymn study period added to our program. There are a number of beautiful hymns we do not know and I am sure all of us will get a big thrill out of learning them. All this year we have been singing the hymns Margaret Nelson taught the children in the 1937 Vacation School. Also, the Junior Choir has been doing splendid work in learning new selections. Not only they, but the whole parish has been delighted with the new and beautiful selections they have sung Sunday mornings after the second lesson. Probably we might reach the heart of our youth through a well selected musical program.

Any suggestions as to how we can capture the attention of our boys and girls will be appreciated. So put on your thinking caps and evolve something we can use to increase our Sunday School attendance. But don't make the mistake of offering a compromise. "Ye cannot serve two masters."

PARISH ORGANIZATIONS, ATTENTION!

We want you to make this year one of unparalleled activity and aggressive service. We want you to meet at once and map out a line of work that will keep you busy every time you have a meeting. We want you to do something really purposeful for the parish. You will get a lot of interest and enjoyment out of a real program of service than you would in trying to work up a program of pure pleasure and pastime.

Now don't get us wrong. We know that all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy. We also know that all play and no work makes Jack a bad boy. We also know that some work and some play makes Jack a broth of a boy. And that's the kind of boys and girls we want to develop in our Parish.

THE JUNIOR DAUGHTERS OF THE KING

First on our list of suggestions of helpful service is our JUNIOR DAUGHTERS OF THE KING. There are TWO VERY IMPORTANT things your Rector wants you to do. The first is—get the names and addresses of all the girls of your age, who were confirmed in June and give them a party. The second is to organize under the leadership of Jake Preole for Sunday Shut-in Services. I've asked Jake to take over this most important work and I know all the members of the Junior Daughters will be glad to help make the services interesting. Probably the girls who have just been confirmed might get a thrill out of going along. Get them to meet you at the church Sunday afternoon and try it out.

If I remember, the Junior Daughters did some kind of work for the church at their meetings last year. I wonder if at your first meeting this fall, you could plan something practical to do for some poor family of the parish, or for the sick children who live in our neighborhood. I think it would be a great idea for the Junior Daughters to make it their special business to look after the poor and sick children of the church.

DAUGHTERS OF THE KING No. 1

There are a number of women who were confirmed in June who are eligible for membership in this branch of the Daughters of the King service. Again I would suggest having a party and invite them to be your guests. Remember they have joined our church and no doubt are expecting something to be done about it. You are the logical group to approach them and start them doing things. And I know they are just human enough and feminine enough to appreciate such interest and attention. Also, I would suggest that, beside Bible Study on meeting night, that you take time out to discuss ways and means to improve Church and Sunday School attendance; to plan to visit the sick men and women of the Parish; to lay out a campaign for getting men and women candidates for Confirmation; to take over at least one poor family with lots of children and care for them; to think up practical suggestions for doing parochial work along new lines and submit them to the Rector.

DAUGHTERS OF THE KING No. 2

I am very deeply interested in our No. 2 Branch of the Daughters of the King. Its membership is composed of some of the most intelligent young women of the church. Most of them have always been identified with one or more parochial activity and are dependable when needed in an emergency. May I suggest that the first thing this organization does, as soon as possible this fall, is to give the young women who were confirmed in June a party with refreshments. The Rector will be glad to help on the expense side. Of course the idea of the party is to get these newly confirmed young women interested in the Branch and join. So many times we lose new members because nobody gets interested in them and they are neglected. Naturally they in their turn lose interest and drift away. The Rector supplied the names and addresses of these women once, but in case they are mislaid he will be most happy to supply another list. The Rector understands that Branch No. 2 took over the repairing of the books and music last year when they met. I wonder if they could continue doing so. Another important feature along this line could be the sorting out the old prayer books and hymnals from the new. Some organization ought to take over this duty because the old and the new get hopelessly mixed, which is most embarrassing for worshipers during service.

I wonder if it would be possible too for Branch No. 2 to do a little sewing and simple fancy work. Things which might be donated either to a poor family or to the annual Bazaar. Home made aprons, doilies, table linen, towels, etc., etc., are always in demand and bring top prices.

THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

This is really the only Woman's Organization that is recognized by the Church at large. Its membership is composed of all baptized and confirmed women of the Church. Women belonging to other church societies consider themselves members of this world organization and are proud of their membership. The Rector would rejoice if ALL the women of the parish would become active Auxiliary members. Some churches of much fewer communicants have a great deal larger attendance at their Auxiliary meetings. We hope to live to see the time when OUR Auxiliary will be among the largest and strongest of the Church at large. We would like the members of our standing committees to take some of our newly confirmed members to some of the meetings at the Church House so that they can see for themselves what a really important society is the Woman's Auxiliary. The Rector hopes the Auxiliary will get an early start this year and not miss a meeting all season. Generally the meetings are divided into devotional business and recreational periods. Let's stick to that program. It is a good one. May I further suggest that the members of all other woman's organizations are most cordially welcome because as a matter of fact, by virtue of their Confirmation, they ARE members already.

Two things the Auxiliary ought to do at once—first, to arrange some sort of a social affair to raise money for the Auxiliary Treasury and second, to begin to plan for our Annual Bazaar. Don't let's waste time. Let's get busy NOW.

THE BROTHERHOOD OF ST. ANDREW

The first thing the members ought to do is to round up all the young men and others who were confirmed last June. Don't let them get away. Stick to them until you have them well broken in and treking to every meeting every Thursday evening along with the rest of us. Also, do not let any grass grow under your feet in the matter of getting members for our next Confirmation Class. As the District Superintendents are active members of the Brotherhood and always have their hands more than full of work, it seems to me that it is up to the rest of us to volunteer our services in cases of emergency. The Brotherhood has made startling records in bringing members into the Church. Last June one member succeeded in sponsoring eighteen persons. Since the Brotherhood men have interested themselves in building up the personnel of the congregation, we have met with great success. Now it is up to us to see that backsliding is taboo. No man nor boy who has once been confirmed must be allowed to lose personal interest in his spiritual welfare and the welfare of others. This responsibility rests on the shoulders of every Brotherhood man. Let's see to it that we do our duty that not one may be lost.

THE BOYS' CLUB

We hope to hear good news from the Boys' Club this year. We asked Ray Cressee if he would be willing to be Director of a JUNIOR BROTHERHOOD OF ST. ANDREW, the boys to be chosen from the members of the Club. He cheerfully consented to do so. Now this JUNIOR BROTHERHOOD will be a distinct organization. It will be organized and recruited from the Boys' Club but it will have one night a month which will be all their own and only members of the Junior Brotherhood will attend. We are most anxious not to have too many members. We want to select boys who are capable of doing things for the boys and young men of the parish. There are certain of the older members of the Boys' Club who are young men of real character and we want to give them elbow room to grow into the fine men they promise to be. A few of them have already promised to accompany Jake Preole and the Junior Daughters of the King Sunday afternoon on their Shut-In Services. We are hoping they will do it and will like it.

Several boys and young men were confirmed last June. Again I would suggest that the Boys' Club lose no time in throwing a party for them and get them to join the Club. If you haven't a list of the names, the Rector will be glad to give them to you.

THE GIRL SCOUTS

A few of the girls confirmed in June are too young for the older organizations. How about the Girl Scouts taking them over and making them feel they are a real unit in the parish. St. John's Girl Scout Troop is one of the venerable troops of Philadelphia. It has been in existence for about twenty-one years; first as No. 66 and later, upon reorganization, as No. 50.

Of course the Girl Scout Troop is not really a parochial organization because its membership is composed of girls of all faiths. But St. John's Church is its headquarters and it is administered by St. John's folk; consequently, it has a parochial identity and many of its girls are communicants of our parish.

LET'S TRY IT OUT

A few days ago a gentleman came into our office and made an interesting proposition to us; that is to say, he made an old proposition with a new slant to it. He told us that for a certain specified low rate he would agree to sell us the latest in moving and talking movies and run them twice an evening for as many evenings in the week or months we might desire. He further stated that he would provide all the apparatus needed and would guarantee every movie to be standard. We have known this gentleman for a long period of time. He is in the moving picture business in a big way here in Philadelphia and has his studio on Vine Street among other movie agencies.

We have contracted with him to produce a sound and moving picture FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 30TH, two shows, the FIRST at 8 P. M., and the SECOND, at 9.30 P. M. The charge will be, Adults, 25 cents; children under twelve, 15 cents. The title of the picture is "DRUMS OF DESTINY." The kids will love it.

Be sure to come. If the night is a success we will keep the pictures going. The proceeds will go towards the S. S. Lenten Offering. The suggestion is made to every S. S. Class to raise the Class Offering by getting the class members to sell tickets.

MISS EMMA KAISER HONORED

On Saturday afternoon, June 18th, a Junior Assembly of the Daughters of the King was organized in St. Thomas' Church, Whitemarsh. Of the five Junior chapters in the diocese, representatives were present from four of them. The delegation from the Church of St. John the Evangelist was one of the largest to attend. The parish was doubly honored at this meeting as Miss Emma Kaiser was elected the first President of the Junior Assembly of the Diocese of Pennsylvania. Emma was also appointed as Chairman of the Committee to draft the Constitution and By-Laws.

The meeting was very interesting and was addressed by Miss Lillian Janet Soper, National Secretary, of the Daughters of The King.

After a very delicious supper, served by the members of the Senior Branch of St. Thomas' Church, the meeting adjourned.

THE FIRST THING YOU MUST DO

The first thing you must do, now that Vacation is over, is to pay your church debts. Many a weekly envelope was forgotten while we were playing at the shore or in the country or mountains. And also many a bill presented itself to be paid just when the treasury was at its lowest. The bills represent just current expenses for the summer months when most everybody was away. Now the time has come for us to think what a grand vacation we had and we are going to show the parish that we did it without robbing the church one cent.

Get out your package of envelopes; see how many are overdue; fill them up and bring them in next Sunday.

WE'LL BE LOOKING FOR YOU.

BIRTHDAYS

The Rector, in order to get an up-to-date list of the birthdays of our parishioners, is asking the District Superintendents, Sunday School teachers and leaders of every parish organization to register the names, addresses, place and date of birth of all members under their supervision. His object is to have in hand the information thus obtained for the purpose of mailing birthday cards and greetings to each person on his or her birthday. There is no other motive behind the request. He has heard of how other rectors have done this and how much real pleasure it has given the members to be remembered in this gracious way. Please cooperate with him and send in your list without delay. It is not necessary to ask a person his age. We don't want to know that. All we want is information on what date of what month the birthday occurs.

The Rector would consider it a favor if the names and addresses of all sick persons were sent to him promptly, so that he can send the invalid flowers or convalescent cards. Folk can appreciate flowers when they are sick. After they are dead they cannot enjoy them at all.

Also it is the Rector's intention to distribute the names of the sick and convalescent parishioners among the church societies for their members to call on the sick, whether they are in the hospital or at home. The Rector was sorry to learn from a member who had been sick for almost a year that no member of the church or of any church organization had ever visited them. The Rector knows now of at least three who have not been visited by a fellow member for over a year. Now let those, who are always saying the Rector is not a faithful pastor, show him how to visit the sick of our parish. He wants everybody to criticise him by doing what he is at fault in not doing—instead of telling the world how remiss he is in his visiting among the sick; let them set him a wholesome example of parochial service by visiting our sick and sending them flowers and cards. If you do this the Rector will thank you sincerely. He will consider himself rebuked and will do his utmost to emulate the good deeds of his parishioners.

But if you WILL NOT visit the sick of brother members you MUST NOT find fault with the Rector if his other duties make it impossible to swing around the circle of the sick.

How would it do for EVERY parish society to organize a Visiting Committee for the sick and make the report of that committee at its stated meeting an item of business of first importance.

In other words, the Rector needs the cooperation of the parochial societies in ministering to the sick and convalescent of the parish.

WILL YOU GIVE IT TO HIM?

THAT GRAND AND GLORIOUS DAY

What a grand and glorious day it will be when we can get up in the morning and know that all's well with the world and we owe no debts. In the meantime we are plagued with bills—some overdue. Now, if we can only persuade our brother members who have unpaid church envelopes that we can easily meet our obligations if they will do the wishful thing and pay promply what is due the church, we will reach that dearly desired day of solvency.

Of course we realize that summer is no time to expect people to pay promptly. But now summer is over! We have had our fun and paid for it. 'Tis true there is not much left in the old purse, and payday is pretty far away and we simply must live in the meantime. Yet, just a few of those delinquent church envelopes deposited in the Alms Basin each Sunday would be heartening to our vestry.

So why not use the installment plan in catching up on your church debt and deposit two or three envelopes each Sunday in the offering. Before you can say—pussie jump over the fence—you will find your name on the right side of the Church Ledger and the poor, bedeviled, debt ridden treasurer of our parish will forget his age and rheumatics and will dance and shout for joy.

Come on—be a sport—and add a few more years to our Treasurer's career. Let's give him a surprise party and fill his pockets with pennies, and dimes, and quarters, and half dollars, and dollars, until he sags all over. Then let's say to him, "What are you grouching about? You got scads of gelt. Why don't you pay your debts and stop looking like a what-you-might-call-it.

Money did dribble in the church coffers in tiny drops during the summer. Now let's turn on the spigot, knock the bung out of the barrel, raise the dam and let'er pour out plentifully until all our debts are thoroughly and absolutely liquidated. In the meantime, don't forget your FIRESIDE CLUB dues. In scores of cases those dues are overdues and that's no pun.

THE SHACK-IN-THE-PINES

Through the kind generosity of interested friends we were again able to open up our summer camp at Browns Mills on Little Pine Lake. This year May Leach was our hostess and Helen Ashman her assistant. And what a fine team they made. Both are known and loved by the juveniles of South Philadelphia. And both of them are used to children and their needs. The days came and went with a smoothness and efficiency that was astonishing considering the camp was under new management. We want to congratulate both May and Helen on the success of their administration. We did not hear one word of criticism from any child or parent. Everybody seemed to be happy.

We were rather unfortunate in having so much damage done our Parish House where we held our Vacation School sessions and also at the Shack-in-the-Pines. It rained so hard and so long in July that all the roofs sprung a leak while all our drains were clogged up. As we are forced to economize to meet our expenses in normal times, such misfortunes caused us financial embarrassment. However, we have always come out somehow before. I am pretty sure we will do it again.

Now let's open up our fall and winter campaign with a bang! Let's get started now and do something!

OUR SUMMER WORK

A Short Synopsis of What We Did and the Results

THE SUMMER BIBLE SCHOOL

Our program was both simple and interesting. In the summer one does not feel very energetic and likes to follow the line of least resistance. Our sessions were planned with that idea in mind. We would start promptly at 10 A. M., by singing a popular hymn. After which we had a simple service of prayer. Then we played a sort of game of searching the Scripture to get us used to using the Bible. We learned the Books of the Bible and where to find them quickly. Also we learned how to turn quickly to Chapter and verse. In fact, we made a friend of the OLD BOOK and now we are on familiar terms with it.

Another interesting feature of our Bible School was the study period when we would have read to us stories about the different Bible personalities. Most of the stories were about boys, like Joseph and David, who lived exciting and colorful lives, and were real heroes in the service of God. The young folk especially were deeply interested in the careers of these great men of old times.

We were careful not to make our sessions too long and generally, by 10.45 we were dismissed and on our way to Church Service.

During the summer the singing was in the hands of the Junior Choir and we want to congratulate them. We would like to mention especially their work on Communion Sundays. It was so hot and sticky we did not wear vestments at all. The boys and girls were in their ordinary clothes and were as cool and comfortable as they could be under the circumstances.

Considering everything we can honestly say that summer Sundays at St. John's were bright spots of the week.

THE SUMMER VACATION SCHOOL

Our Vacation School has become a very necessary part of our parish life. Every weekday, from 9.30 until noon, the school was in session and under the very able management of Margaret Nelson, a public school teacher and an important member of St. John's Parish. She was assisted by May Hopkins, who understands children and was an important aide to Margaret.

The schedule was ideal for summer occupation. It was so well planned out that the scholars enjoyed every minute of the sessions and unconsciously absorbed many valuable lessons. New games were played, hymns and prayers and Bible Verses were committed to memory. All sorts of novelty creations and arts were attempted and successfully worked out. At stated periods during each week ice cream was served. The only thing we failed to do was to go on picnics once a week. But we were prevented from doing so on account of the days and days of rain. But that Atlantic City excursion, although at this writing has not come off yet, will make up for all the outings we missed.

I think if the question was put to a vote it would be the unanimous opinion of our boys and girls that our Summer Vacation School "can't be beat."

FARADAY'S LOST CUP

A workman of Faraday one day by accident knocked a beautiful silver cup into a jar of strong acid. In a little while it disappeared, being dissolved in the acid as sugar is in water. But the great chemist, standing by, put some chemical mixture into the jar, and in a little while every particle of the silver was precipitated to the bottom, and he took it out, now a shapeless mass, and sent it to a silversmith, and the cup was soon restored to the same size and shape as before.

If Faraday could do this how easily can God restore our sleeping and scattered dust, and change our decayed bodies into the likeness of the glorious body of Christ.

OCTOBER'S PARTY

October gave a party;
The leaves by hundreds came—
The Chestnuts, Oaks and Maples,
And leaves of every name.
The Sunshine spread a carpet,
And everything was grand,
Miss Weather led the dancing,
Professor Wind the band.

The Chestnuts came in yellow,
The Oaks in crimson dressed;
The lovely Misses Maple
In scarlet looked their best;
All balanced to their partners,
And gaily fluttered by;
The sight was like a rainbow
New fallen from the sky.

Then, in the rustic hollow,
At hide-and-seek they played,
The party closed at sundown,
And everybody stayed.
Professor Wind played louder;
They flew along the ground;
And then the party ended
In jolly "hands around."

WHY DO YOU GO TO CHURCH?

A gentleman to whom this question came has written out the following reply:

First, I go to Church now BECAUSE THE HABIT OF GOING WAS FORMED WHEN I WAS QUITE YOUNG, and it has become a regular part of my life.

When the Lord's Day comes it is a matter of course with me to make my way to the Lord's House.

I am very grateful that the habit was formed and I expect to keep it up as long as I am able to go out of my own house.

Second, I go to Church because it MAKES A PLEASANT BREAK IN THE ROUTINE WORK OF THE WEEK. There is always danger of getting into a rut, and it becomes a positive relief from the monotony of the week's work by having opportunity to engage in something entirely different.

One of the elements of genuine rest is change, and the Church Service provides that in a very pleasant way.

Third, I go to Church because I believe it to be my duty to UNITE WITH OTHERS in the public worship of GOD.

I find that people who believe in God believe that He requires the performance of this duty, and so I take my place with those who feel moved to make public acknowledgment of His mercy and His goodness.

Fourth. My next reason for going is because I NEED THE INSTRUCTION I GET THERE.

No one can ever know enough of religious truth and religious duty. I find the services of the Church and the sermons helpful to me in recalling truths already learned and in impressing new views of truth as bearing upon the daily life.

Fifth. I go because I am convinced that I NEED ALL THE HELP I CAN GET TO PREPARE ME FOR ANOTHER LIFE BEYOND THE PRESENT. I am to live somewhere when I leave here and my condition in that other world depends somewhat upon how I use my opportunities here. My hope of a happy future is based upon what my Saviour has done for me but I cannot forget that He has bidden me to follow Him. Can I be called His follower if I neglect the Church which He has founded here?

Sixth. Finally I go to Church because as I look around me in the world I see that PEOPLE WHO NEGLECT THIS DUTY ARE APT TO GROW CARELESS IN DOING OTHER CHRISTIAN DUTIES, and that some of them give up their religion altogether and live only for the things of the present life.

The downfall of many has begun when they began to neglect their Church, and I do not want to be untrue to the vows I have made or to lose my interest in religion. I want to be faithful to the end.

I could mention still other reasons why I go to Church, but these convince me that I am doing right to keep straight on with a habit begun long ago and which has been continued now for many years.

I have heard all kinds of reasons given by others for not going. Some are mere flimsy excuses that will not bear examination, and others are based upon ignorance or misconception.

I would be sorry to be influenced by reasons so

BIRTHDAY GREETINGS

Everybody likes to be remembered on his birthday. It is the most important day of the year to each of us. It is the date he came alive to begin his mortal career.

Your birthday is your special anniversary and we want to make you conscious of its importance by sending you a special greeting when it falls due. We celebrate the birthdays of Washington and Lincoln. Why should not we celebrate yours, too. Of course, they were pretty important people, but then so are you. Besides we are better and more personally acquainted with you.

The October issue of the BROADCASTER is our BIRTHDAY NUMBER. We are going to publish all the names and birthdays we have received so far. We notice that in many instances we have the name and birthday of only one member of the family. We want the birthdays of EVERY member of the family for our list. Please cut out and fill up the birthday coupon in this issue and give us the names of everybody in your family and the date of his or her birth. DO NOT SEND US THE YEAR IN WHICH YOU WERE BORN. We do not want to know how old you are. That is your private affair and definitely is not for publication.

Following is our birthday calendar. It is by no means complete. But we must start somewhere so we begin here and now. In each succeeding issue we will add to our calendar the names of others as we receive them.

Please help us make up a complete list and send in yours and every member of your family's birthday at once. We want to have the list complete before Christmas.

The Rector has appointed a BIRTHDAY COMMITTEE who will help him in this most important matter. Besides sending each of us birthday cards we hope they will arrange quarterly birthday parties when we can have dancing, games, ice cream, singing and things.

Get the whole family in on this right away. Don't delay! We will give you from now until Thanksgiving to contact us. IF WE DO NOT CELEBRATE YOUR BIRTHDAY IT IS GOING TO BE YOUR OWN FAULT.

John Weber

St. John's Parish has sustained a major loss in the passing of John Weber, who died in St. Agnes' Hospital on the morning of Wednesday, September 14th.

His decease was totally unexpected. He had been ill since the preceding Wednesday, but early Wednesday morning he seemed to be so much improved that everybody was confident it would be a matter of only a few days when he would be restored to his normal health. However, though sudden his death, he was prepared for the change. His life was singularly blameless and his love for his church was an inspiration to all his associates.

John Weber was born on the same street in which he lived before he died, Sigel Street, July 28, 1862. He worked for fifty-eight years for the A. H. Wirz Company, Chester, Pennsylvania. To illustrate how well and truly he served the firm that length of time, his superior officer said that if anything should ever occur to John to incapacitate him for work, his salary would go on just the same as long as he lived. In these days of cold, commercial materialism such a gesture of esteem is sufficient proof of his sterling character.

John Weber was confirmed in St. John's Church by Bishop Mackay-Smith in the year 1902. For thirty years he was Accounting Warden and held that office until the day of his death. He was the most regular attendant to Church services of any communicant in our Parish. He leaves behind him an enormous circle of friends who loved him for his quiet simplicity and Christian virtue.

Our love and sympathy go to his dear, faithful wife who is bearing her burden of sorrow with resignation. May she ever feel the presence of the Holy Comforter and rely with patience upon His Grace.

HIS RECTOR.

shallow or by arguments so inconsequential.

I certainly would not like to offer any such weak explanations of neglect when I pass into the light of the other world where the secrets of all hearts shall be revealed and where we must all give an account of ourselves before the Judge.

PAROCHIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

Friday, September 30th, we will present a moving and talking picture entitled the "DRUMS OF DESTINY." There will be two shows given, the first at 8 P. M., the second at 9.15 P. M. This is a professional and not an amateur picture—the quality you see at your favorite movie house. We have made a contract which enables us to run the picture at a profit for adults, 25 cents, under 12 years, 10 cents. The proceeds are to be given towards the Sunday School Lenten Offering of the Men's Bible Class. We want you to patronize us on this one night and see for yourself whether the picture is worth the price of admission. If you find that it is—then we will arrange for a whole series of movie nights under the auspices of other Sunday School classes.

We expect to give a door prize after each performance. Of course it will not be money, because that is illegal, but we hope it will be something that is acceptable.

Now, all of us like to go to picture shows so why not go to our own and give the receipts to missions or something we need for the church?

We would like to make the offer that any person selling four adult tickets or seven child tickets; will be entitled to one FREE adult ticket or two child's tickets.

May we suggest also that we would like to arrange a series of SKATING PARTIES this year. Please choose your night and let us know. The prices will be the same as last winter. We wonder if the choirs would help the cause along with either a musical or dramatic night. They are always big money makers.

How about a few snow dances to help fill the coffers. It seems everybody enjoys them.

A couple of suppers would help things nicely, too. Maybe the ladies of the parish would like to give a few. If they will do so the rector will help by getting a travelogue moving picture to help the program and we are pretty sure we can get an instrumental or vocal soloist to help make the occasion interesting.

We are throwing out these suggestions now so that we will get an early start raising funds for missions.

We ought to have a S. VALENTINE NIGHT and also a S. PATRICK'S NIGHT of frolic and fun and refreshments. Who will be the first class or society to apply. We want a CHRISTMAS PARTY and a NEW YEAR'S PARTY, too. A NEW YEAR'S PARTY could be made a Masquerade Dance. The same idea could be carried out in organizing a HALLOWE'EN PARTY.

Now that we have made the suggestions we hope everybody in the parish will cooperate and do everything possible to develop the social side of our parish.

And above all things—
LET'S KEEP PAID UP OUR WEEKLY CHURCH ENVELOPES

THE FIRESIDE CLUB

A few years ago the suggestion that we start a club to raise funds to pay the coal bills of the Church was suggested. We acted upon the suggestion and it worked well. The idea was to get everybody to join the Club by paying 10 cents for a dues book and then make monthly payments of 10 cents a month; those under 12 years, 5 cents. In turn we promised the parishioners if the idea was adopted we would not ask the members to make a contribution to the Coal Fund on Coal Sunday.

We were gratified over the results. Many members joined and paid their dues. The result was when our coal bills came due we had almost enough cash on hand to pay them. Of course we felt that it was no more than just to ask and expect those who did not join the Club to give an annual contribution on Coal Sunday as usual.

Last year we became a little lax in keeping up our Fireside dues. The result is ominous. Winter is coming on and we have little money for coal. We urge you to pay up your dues NOW. The next time you see your DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENT pay your dues and get him to bring your book up to date. Those of you who live outside parochial lines, if you are not members of the Fireside Club, be sure to join and mail your dues in—once every quarter—40 cents—to the Rector or else make a liberal donation on COAL SUNDAY which is SUNDAY, OCTOBER 16th.

We would suggest also that all members of the FIRESIDE CLUB who are behind in their dues can put what they owe in a coal envelope, mark on it unpaid Fireside Dues and bring it on COAL SUNDAY. Your Due Book will be brought up to date by your Superintendent.

Be sure you remember COAL SUNDAY, SUNDAY, OCTOBER 16th.

OUR SICK AND SHUT-INS

How often you hear the remark, "I was sick for several weeks and during that time not one member of the parish came to visit me."

One virtue we christians lack—with few noble exceptions—is visiting our sick. The Rector, because of his position at the City Mission, is handicapped and cannot visit as frequently as other parish priests do. He does the best he can, but his best falls woefully short in this priestly function. Under the circumstances, he is asking for the cooperation of the parishioners. His first step is to publish the names of the sick and shut-ins of the parish in the BROADCASTER with the hope that you, dear reader, will see the name of someone you know; and then the second step, to visit that person yourself. Or, if that is not possible, send the sick or shut-in a card or a letter of sympathy. You will be surprised to learn how gratefully your attention will be received. And too, you will be surprised to learn how you enjoy such visits or correspondence. Somehow you get a new interest in folk. And the more you visit, the more you want to visit.

On our list of permanent sick are:

Mr. John Jackson, 1721 S. Orianna Street
Mr. Charles Poynter, 236 Wilder Street
Mr. William McGarvey, 305 Earp Street
Mr. Edward Carr, 5812 N. 7th Street
Mrs. Harry Gresh, 145 Pierce Street
Mrs. Margaret Ashman, 151 Snyder Avenue
Mr. Isaac Strang, 2842 S. Warnock Street
Mrs. Helen Neill, 118 Daly Street
Mrs. Mabel Thesing, 122 Titan Street
Mrs. Anna Sanders, 124 McClellan Street
Mrs. Margaret Erickson, 2702 S. Hutchinson Street
Mrs. Lydia Greenfield, 1413 S. Vodges Street
Mrs. Annie Embershied, 5736 Pentridge Street

Our list of Shut-Ins are:

Mrs. Nancy Johnson, 1323 E. Moyamensing Avenue
Mrs. Lillian Maneely, 2831 S. Camac Street
Mrs. Ella Murphy, 1404 S. Howard Street
Mr. and Mrs. Watkins, 1341 S. Howard Street
Mrs. Annie Holt, 41 Tasker Street
Mrs. Elizabeth Starr, 1110 S. Front Street
Mrs. Mary Woodruff, 2831 S. Camac Street
Mrs. Annie McVaugh, 1930 S. Front Street
Mrs. Harry Carbarnes, 2636 S. 2nd Street

IMPORTANT!

If any parishioner knows of any sick or shut-in not published on this list we will be grateful if you will give such names to the Parish Visitor.

CAN'T FOOL HIM

A little boy was taken to London for the first time. After being shown some of the sights, he expressed a wish to see "Thames Station."

"Don't be silly," said his mother, "there no such place."

"Oh, yes, there is," persisted the child. "I say every night in my prayers, 'And lead us not into Thames Station'!"

HOUSE OF DREAMS

Earth has its beauties rich and rare,
Dew-drops distilled in morning air,
Sunsets of red and clouds of white,
Meadows and streams and stars of night.
But in the heart there lives in me
Something of greater ecstasy,
Beauty beyond earth's noblest themes,
Memories shrined in my house of dreams.

Here are my treasures old and new,
Travels and books and friendships too,
Music and paintings, full of grace
Love revealed on a mother's face,
Dreams of the sea, the scent of flowers,
Joy of my childhood's care-free hours.
Nothing can equal—so it seems—
Memories out of my dreams.

Often when life seems dark and cold,
Gladly I turn to days of old,
Faces and scenes return to bless
Bringing remembered happiness,
And as my weary way I trod
Courage returns and I see God.
What though the day with trouble teems,
Gladness is mine—in my house of dreams.

OUR SUMMER VACATION SCHOOL

MARGARET NELSON

When the summer draws to a close it brings with it a feeling of loss to nearly all of us who attended or were deeply interested in our vacation school work. Those of us in charge miss the children and they in turn miss the comradeship of each other. When we opened our school I wondered just what would happen. I realized many of our regular scholars were growing up and would be needed at home. Sure enough we found some old faces missing but we also were glad to welcome many newcomers. We had many more young children this year, the youngest being only two years of age. Despite the rainy, sultry weather of July and the intense heat of August we managed an average daily attendance of 60. On one occasion we had 91.

Our day began with the Creed and Prayers. These were followed by hymns (new ones, too, for each week we added a new one to our repertoire.) Next came our Bible verses. We succeeded in committing to memory nearly all the verses of scripture used in the morning and evening service and those relating to a cheerful giver found in the Communion Service. After this we had a Bible story read and you would be surprised to hear just how much we learned from these stories. Last of all we sang any number of songs: camp songs, popular songs, etc. Among our accomplishments in handwork we had vases made from jars covered with crepe paper, silhouettes made with figures painted on glass, paper plates with designs shellaced on them, and an embroidered dining room set. This we are chancing off at five cents a chance.

We played any number of games in a group—checkers, cards, rope, ball, quoits, etc. We had radio, too. We were honored by the presence of several distinguished visitors. The session ended with ice cream. Each Friday brought an amateur show enjoyed by all. It is amazing the talent we have in our summer school.

At the end of the season we had a grand party with lolly pops for all and prizes for those with regular attendance who were too young to go to Atlantic City.

Our excursion to the shore was a huge success. The day dawned clear and the children arrived promptly with enough lunch to feed a restaurant. We visited the pier, paraded the boardwalk, went on the amusements, ate ice cream, bought souvenirs, and returned home tired and with sore feet but happy. Thus ended a very happy summer. We all join in sending our thanks to Mr. McHenry and to all those who make possible such a safe, profitable and enjoyable summer at St. John's.

P. S.—We are especially proud of the older boys who joined our ranks when they returned from camp.

OUR PAINTED DOORS

Have you noticed them? This is the first time they have been painted since Methuselah was a kid. They got in such awful condition that they gave us the jitters. So one day we took up our telephone and called up Ted Seidel. He is in partnership with his father who is a contracting painter. We asked Ted if we might buy the painting materials through him if we could get some of the men of the church to do the job. We said we thought John Gallagher, a member of St. John's and a mechanic employed by Seidels, would be willing to oversee the work on days he was not busy.

Now Ted is one of those rare individuals who get a big kick in doing favors for folk. So, without any hesitation, he said he would be glad to cooperate. He thought they had some materials at the shop we could use and that John would be idle a few days and Ted was sure John would be willing to help. Well, the result of our phone talk was John got the materials and started the job. The only expense to the church was the graining of the doors. Of course, that work can be done only by a professional grainer and he has to be paid.

Well, you have the finished job before you and we hope you are as pleased as we are.

This is an instance illustrating how the men and women of the parish can help us save in the matter of repairs and improvements.

Take another example. The Sunday School windows were in an awful state. Now they are as good as new and can be opened and shut as every self-respecting window should, just because Frank Drumm came around with his little saw and hatchet and a few strips of wood and a pocket filled with nails and window chain and began tinkering. That job had to be done and if Frank hadn't done it, we would have been forced to pay an outsider to do it for us and he would never have done it as well as Frank did.

Take another example: Our DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENTS are saving us dollars and cents all the time by delivering the Broadcaster, Communion Cards, collecting Fireside dues; giving out Christmas, Coal and Easter envelopes, as well as all special communications. Once we tried to estimate the amount we saved annually in postage alone through their cooperation. We figured it could not be less than $200.00. Now that much saved is of great importance to our treasury.

Why don't YOU look around and see if YOU can do something to help us save expenses. Such saving is as important as offerings through the weekly envelopes and will help overcome our deficit. If you cannot give much money in your weekly offerings, make up for it by doing something needful for the parish. This advice is for the women and boys and girls as well as the men.

One thing you CAN do! If you are last in a room TURN OUT THE LIGHT!!!

THANKSGIVING CONTEST

Here is something new. We want to know how many in the parish have any experience or blessing in the past year that has added to their pleasure or comfort and for which they are truly thankful to God.

THE CONTEST is to send in a TRUE list of HAPPY HAPPENINGS which you can prove have HAPPENED to you this year. Give date if you can.

THE PRIZES are three in number.

First—a Thanksgiving Basket with Turkey

Second—a Thanksgiving Basket with Chicken

Third—a Thanksgiving Basket with Roast of Pork

All lists must be sent to the REV. H. CRESSON McHENRY, 225 S. 3rd Street.

Contest closes THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 17th. Lists received after that date will not be accepted.

Everybody belonging to St. John's Parish is eligible and every member of a family can enter.

Announcements of the THREE WINNERS will be made SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 20th, at the 10.45 A. M. Service.

The three best lists of blessings will appear in the Parish Broadcaster.

Suggestions

To get you started we mention certain possible blessings: Personal recovery from sickness, recovery of a loved one or dear friend, getting a job, a raise in salary, relief in time of need, etc., etc., etc.

EVEN IF YOU CAN AFFORD TO BUY YOUR OWN FAMILY THANKSGIVING DINNER, GET IN THE CONTEST ANYWAY AND IF YOU WIN, GIVE YOUR PRIZE TO A FAMILY YOU KNOW NEEDS IT. You will be surprised how such generosity will add sweet savor to your own Thanksgiving Feast.

Be sure to sign your full name and address.

THANKSGIVING VERSES

The object of this course is to search the Scriptures and locate the Scripture Sentences.

WILL YOU CO-OPERATE?

Our major problem is how to raise funds to pay for the heat and light for our Church.

Most folk think that we need fuel only to make the church warm and comfortable for church services and church social meetings.

We had a sexton once who thought the same. He, too, was mistaken. That cost the parish almost $800.00. He banked the fires one winter's night and turned off all the heat. The result,—all the water pipes froze and burst. The ceilings of the church, Sunday School and infant rooms were frosted and came down on our heads in chunks. We repaired and painted our church ceiling and put steel ceilings in the two Sunday School rooms. Had the heat been kept above freezing point that night we would have not suffered such an heavy loss. We saved money on coal and wasted money on repairs. That is what you might truthfully call, EXTRAVAGANT ECONOMY.

Beginning January we will install a new Fireside Club idea. We propose to deliver a coal box to your home and ask you to fill it—not with coal, but with pennies. Every two months your District Superintendent will come along and empty your family coal box and give you credit for what it contains. One box can be put on the table and every member in the family can daily drop in the smallest coin of the U. S. A. and assure the church of at least one cent's worth of heat and protection and everybody who gives their cent will be a member in excellent standing in the FIRESIDE CLUB.

A WARM CHURCH BURNS UP JACK FROST. HE WON'T SIT IN SUCH AN ATMOSPHERE. LET'S COOPERATE AND CHASE HIM OUT OF OUR CHURCH.

PARISH SUPPORT

Every parish has its own financial problems to solve and every parish has its own way of solving them. The solution naturally depends upon the mental attitude of its communicants rather than upon their ability to pay. Many so called wealthy parishes, i. e., parishes where wealthy families attend, frequently find themselves in a desperate state of insolvency just because of the lack of interest of their members in the question of parish support. On the other hand many of our more humble parishes support with ease their parish organizations and pay their bills promptly. There are reasons for this very satisfactory state and these reasons are worthy of our notice. The reason why parishes in which the membership is composed of wage earners is seldom in the red, is because its members early learn the value of a dollar and how to get one hundred cents work out of it. Furthermore, they know a church must be run upon the same basis as a family in the matter of its receipts and expenditures. And, because the Church is their social as well as their religious center, they correctly estimate its value to the community and support it accordingly. Consequently they include among their MUST expenses their weekly Church Offerings.

This is the ideal way to support the parish, especially when the weekly church envelopes are PAID weekly. We are not very enthusiastic over the habit of some who pay their WEEKLY envelopes MONTHLY. We notice that many of our monthly payers feel the strain of giving because it is harder to give FOUR quarters at the end of the month than it is to give ONE quarter at the end of the week.

We would strongly advise that you develop the habit of laying aside 25 cents EACH WEEK for your Church Offering. Put 13 cents in the Current Expense pocket and 12 cents in the Assistant Minister pocket. Put the envelop in a safe place until Sunday, then bring it with you to church. Or, if you find it impossible to attend church, hold it until your District Superintendent calls and turn it over to him. In the meantime, PLEASE turn in ALL your unpaid weekly envelopes at your earliest possible convenience.

HOW MUCH DO YOU PAY?

Just as a matter of interest to yourself put opposite each of the following items the sum of money you spend on them (or it) in one week, Sunday morning to the following Saturday night inclusive.

Item of Purchase	Cost of Purchase
1. Ice Cream
2. Soda Water or other beverages
3. Candy or Chewing Gum
4. Moving Picture Shows
5. Gas and Oil for car
6. Weekend Outings
7. Suppers or Dances
8. Cigarettes, Cigars, Pipe or Chewing Tobacco

HOW MUCH DO YOU PAY?

WHAT SHE DOES

When we first came to St. John's Parish we met a little Irish-American girl who attracted our attention because of her beauty and quiet manner of talking and acting. She was just entering her 'teens. Every Sundays she was in her place in Church and Sunday School. When she was old enough we appointed her teacher of a class of girls. They loved her dearly as we knew they would. In course of time she married and she and her husband moved to another section of the city. As so frequently happens in such incidents, she was forced to relinquish her class and give up regular attendance to church. In course of time a child was born and employment was hard to get. These were days of stress and the little family was forced to economize in a most rigid way.

She could not send in her usual weekly Church Offering. Eventually things began to ease a little. The first thing she did was to start mailing to us her Church Envelope every week. Now, as surely as Monday comes around, her letter arrives enclosing the Week's Offering. She never forgets the church in which she was confirmed and married and where her baby was christened. She remembers the times it was her privilege to receive the Holy Sacraments at the Altar of St. John's and the afternoons she taught in St. John's Sunday School.

Just as we were writing this her usual weekly offering came through and is on our desk before us.

DO YOU LIVE OUTSIDE THE PARISH LIMITS?
ARE YOU DOING WHAT BECKY DOES?

SALUTE OUR NEW TREASURER AND ASSISTANT

The passing of John Weber, who was treasurer of St. John's Parish for so many years left us with a real problem on our hands. We were compelled to act immediately in order to save ourselves from financial complications which would have been disastrous. Fortunately we had been thinking that we would be faced sooner or later with such a situation and had been casting round for a likely successor to fill John's position when the vacancy should occur.

With the passing of the years the parish had greatly increased in membership and we were pressed with new problems. We needed a treasurer who could cope with the situation and assist us to make our increasing membership money conscious of the church. We had our mind fixed on a man upon whose integrity and loyalty we could rely. We put the matter of filling the treasurership up to him and, after due consideration, he consented to accept, provided he could have an assistant to help him. The provision was very reasonable as he has duties that keep him occupied both day and night and he really needed help to handle our finances.

We therefore want to introduce to the members of the parish our new TREASURER, MR. VERNON MATTHEWS and our new ASSISTANT TREASURER, MR. WILLIAM SHIVES. With such a team turned loose "in our midst" we may expect a great improvement in the parish finances in the near future.

They will naturally reorganize the parish system and, no doubt, will install methods by which our Church Envelopes will be received with greater regularity. Also, they will no doubt arrange to approach parishioners, who are not regular in their offerings, with plans by which they will be able to make Church Offerings that will help finance the Church and at the same time will not be too hard on the individual. What the new Treasurer and the Assistant will need above everything else is cheerful co-operation from all of us.

LET'S HELP THEM PUT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH ON A SOLID FINANCIAL BASIS. LET'S BEGIN NOW AND ASK FOR A PACKAGE OF CHURCH ENVELOPES.

Things to Thank God For

For making me strong and well, and able to run about and play.

For my Daddy and Mummy (and Brothers and Sisters).

For my home.

For the games I have played today.

For the treat I have had.

For the present someone gave me.

For the letter I had today by post.

For a lovely fine day.

For a rainy day, when the flowers and trees wanted rain.

For a drive in the motor-car.

For a nice surprise.

For a party.

Something to Do to Please Jesus Today

I will do what I am told at once, without making a fuss.

I will be kinder to my little sister (or brother) than I was yesterday.

I will behave nicely to somebody I don't much like.

I will give up something I like to another child.

I will speak the truth even if I get punished.

I will try and remember sometimes how brave Jesus is and be like Him.

I will be polite to everybody.

I will play fair at games, and be honest at school.

THE CHRISTMAS SYMBOL

Only a manger, cold and bare,
Only a maiden mild,
Only some shepherds kneeling there,
Watching a little Child;
And yet that maiden's arms enfold
The King of Heaven above;
And in the Christ-Child we behold
The Lord of Life and Love.

Only an altar high and fair,
Only a white-robed priest,
Only Christ's children kneeling there
Keeping the Christmas feast;
And yet beneath the outward sign
The inward Grace is given,—
His Presence, who is Lord Divine
And King of earth and heaven.

OUR ANNUAL BAZAAR

IMPORTANT NEWS ITEM: The Rector was informed October 6th by a member of the Parish that he had bought a new watch to be chanced off during the Bazaar. The watch will be on exhibition in the window of Howard F. Frick, Jeweler, 1727 South Second Street. Take a squint at it and buy a hatful of chances.

IMPORTANT NOTICE: Our friends are warned not to buy chances from or give money to any person soliciting in the name of St. John's Church unless such solicitor shows the signature of our Rector on such cards or books.

ANOTHER FLASH: Tickets for admission to the Bazaar, 10 cents STRAIGHT. Coupons worth a 10 cent purchase. We can no longer afford to sell the tickets for 3 for a quarter, but all tickets have a 10 cent purchasing value.

OUR PERSONAL OPINION: The Church of Jesus Christ ought to be so adequately supported by our Church Offering through our weekly envelopes as were the Temple and the Synagogues of the Jews. And we ought not to raise funds for church work by means of Bazaars.

IN THE MEANTIME: We must have our Annual Bazaar to help pay our bills. Therefore on December 1-2-3 we will carry on and we want you to come and help make it a success.

Come before supper and let Mrs. Pine feed you. Nobody in South Philadelphia is her equal in cooking a supper that makes you want for more. And her pies—Oh, my!! And her ice cream and cakes, and cookies and coffee and tea and milk and pepper pot and hot dogs and sour krout, and roast turkey and everything makes you want to forget home and mother.

We want all kinds of kitchen utensils, pots and pans, roasters, flour sifters, skillets, boilers, rolling pins, knives, forks, spoons, table spoons, hand towels, dish towels, iron holders, pot holders, combination kitchen sets, spice, sugar, coffee, flour boxes, bread boxes, aprons, rubber gloves, soap cups, oil cloth table covers, scrubbing brushes, garbage pails, tin dippers, doughnut molds, ice box dishes, and a thousand other articles, including kitchen soap, wax paper, dust cloths and pans, brooms, brushes, etc., etc., etc., and also dust caps for our KITCHEN GOODS TABLE.

We want all sorts of donations for our Fancy Goods Table. This is generally the most attractive table in the Bazaar, so make something beautiful and donate it to the table.

You may give anything you can eat to our Grocery Table. We will be well stocked with groceries, canned goods, sugar, soap, salt, pepper, breakfast food, vegetables, fruit, special combination baskets of all sorts of good things and each worth a lot of money. We will sell both in wholesale and retail quantities and will deliver the marketing right at your house for a small price to the boy.

We hope Mrs. Young is going to sell us soft drinks this year. I wonder if she could add sweet cider to her menu. Perhaps it might sell and yield good profits.

OUR DOLL DEPARTMENT will show something new and interesting in the doll line this year and we know that all our little girls are going to be fascinated with the charm and beauty of our dollies.

We are advising all the girl friends not to buy the boy friends their Christmas presents until they have inspected the ties, and socks, and mufflers, and handkerchiefs, and the jewelry and one hundred and one other interesting items of masculine adornment you will find on our GENTLEMAN'S COUNTER.

The Bazaar will ring again with the shout of RADIO!!! And the Radio fans will pick their spot and stick to the end of the game determined to win or bust. Well we don't want you to bust so we hope you will win.

And you boy friends who are hoping to impress those girl friends of how big hearted and open handed you are, cut the bluff, walk right up to the make-up and perfumery counter and show "her" you know how to spend all right, all right!! She may fall for it and vote "yes" in the next private convention. Anyhow it's worth a try, hey?

REMEMBER THE ANCIENT AND HONORABLE FISH POND and the two feminine beauties who preside over the poor fish—just like all such beauteous godesses preside over other kind of fish and keep them swimming in hot water. You say the F. P. is passee and out of times? Well, what do WE care! It gives us an excuse of going over and talking to Ruth and Emma and that pleasure is worth 10 cents in any man's money.

And don't walk away from the candy table without first giving it the once over. Even if you have the tooth ache you will find something sweet and delicious to chew. And even if you do have that tooth ache—walk right up to the candy counter and buy a pound or so of our tooth pulling candy and save a dentist's bill.

If we meet you at the door with a smile and hand of welcome do not misunderstand and turn around and go right out again when we greet you with the cry of—Buy, Buy. We are not saying Bye, Bye. Oh, my, no!

AND DON'T FORGET TO GO TO FRICKS AND SEE THAT WATCH — 1727 S. SECOND STREET.

MINUTES FROM THE VESTRY

Among other things the Vestry at its regular monthly meeting took up the matter of church finances. Out of a possible 900 membership only 254 communicants contributed through the envelope system; which leaves a relinquency list of 646. The Vestry feels that not less than 50 per cent of our members or 450 communicants should contribute. They realize of course that many folk are on relief now and cannot afford to give just yet. But times are improving and with this improvement more support should be given the church.

* * * *

The Treasurer reported that the names of all holders of packages of church envelopes, who contributed nothing during the year, are stricken off. If for any good reason such non-contributors wish to be restored to the givers of offerings, they may make application to the Treasurer, Rector or any church officer for a package of church envelopes and they will be supplied.

* * * *

The Vestry requests that permission for any social function to be held in the Parish House be made to the committee composed of the Treasurer, Ass't Treasurer, Secretary of the Vestry and Rector. So as to escape the mixing up of dates, a matter that has caused much embarrassment in the past.

* * * *

Also they wish to announce that a deduction of 10 per cent will be made from the net receipts of all social affairs that are not given toward the current expenses of the church. This deduction is to pay for heat and light.

* * * *

Also the Vestry passed a resolution that all money raised by means of any social function must be turned over to the Treasurer of the Parish not later than two weeks after the affair has been given. This also applies to chance cards or candy sales and covers the Sunday School Lenten Offering funds. Much money has been lost to the Parish because of our loose method of collecting unused tickets and money in past years. The Vestry hopes that everybody will co-operate in conserving all such resources.

As the members of the Vestry are volunteering in administering the affairs of the Parish it seems that we are in duty bound to be guided by their judgment. We know they are giving their best thought to developing Old St. John's influence and work, and knowing it we must give them our solid support.

"LET'S MAKE A SURVEY"

Why should we be satisfied with what we have? Why not get all we can? There are dozens of families in our parish who are neither Jew nor Roman Catholic who ought to be claimed by some religious body.

Why should not that body be St. John's Church?

We have everything to offer. We have a beautiful church in which to worship. We have a beautiful Sunday School room where we teach children every Sunday. We have a splendid Senior and Junior Choir. We have a corps of Sunday School teachers which is improving rapidly. Some of our new teachers are amazingly well equipped for their job. We have a fine parish house for all sorts of social affairs and games. We have a wonderful Sunday School Superintendent, Assistant Superintendent and Treasurer. We have some of the best men of Philadelphia on our Vestry and managing our parochial affairs, economically and well. We have a system of District Superintendents who carry the news to every family in each district, collect Fireside Club dues, weekly Church Envelopes, report the sick, poor and shut-ins of their district, etc. We have Senior and Junior Chapters of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew. We have a big Boys' Club. We have a Girl Scout Troop. We have three Chapters of the Daughters of the King, Senior, Chapter One and Two and a Junior Chapter. There is a Cradle Roll for our babies. There is our chapter of the Woman's Auxiliary and there is our Chancel Guild.

With such a plethra of organizations certainly we have a spot of interest for any non-church going family or individual within our parish limits.

Now what we hope you will do is this: We hope you will accept your District Superintendent's invitation to join a district group to visit ALL the families of EVERY home in the district. We want to get a line on every family — whether Jewish, Catholic, other Protestant denominations or non-church goers for the purpose of digging out everybody who ought but does not attend church. In such cases, where we meet lack-of-interest families or folk who have forgotten what stands on the northwest corner of Third and Reed Streets and don't care a cent why it is there, we want to give them special good will treatment and get them to COME ON OUT AND PRAY.

We are asking our District Superintendents to round up a group of district scouts by January First and designate certain streets for each two persons of the group. And let's make a survey and then have a big church council and make parochial whoopee with everybody in it.

SUPPOSE YOU WERE THE RECTOR—and you were to ask the members of the parish to help visit the sick and only a tiny few responded, what would you do about it?

Or you were to ask members to be leaders of parish organizations and they would ask to be excused—what would you do about it?

Or you were to exercise your pastoral obligation and urge the parents to send their children regularly to Sunday School for religious instruction, and you should be told that the children could go or stay away just as they pleased—what would you do about it?

Or you were to remonstrate with members who spent dollars for pleasure and gave pennies for offerings and you were treated with cold indifference for your trouble—what would you do about it?

Or you were to budget the receipts and expenditures of the parish, showing a deficit of no mean proportions, and you should ask the non-paying members to take our Church Envelopes and pledge weekly support, and you met with profound silence—what would you do about it?

Or you were conscious of hundreds of non-church goers in the parish who might be confirmed if some one would be interested enough in their spiritual welfare, and you begged your parishioners to go out and bring them in, and you found you were talking to a crowd of deaf people who would not listen to the voice of opportunity because it is not convenient—what would you do about it?

Or you were to remonstrate with a member who was becoming indifferent and was gradually wandering away from church services and neglecting the Sacraments, and you were told to mind your business—what would you do about it?

Or you were conscious that the members of your flock were in the habit of placing all church and spiritual affairs in a secondary place and giving their time, money, thought and energy to secular matters almost entirely—what would you do about it?

Or you were to learn that some members came to church in a social frame of mind and not in a spiritual frame of mind. That is they came to the House of God to meet one another rather than to meet God Himself—what would you do about it?

Or the church needed repairs or supplies and nobody responded when you asked for money to pay the bills—what would you do about it?

Or you were to try to make certain members understand that they need Jesus Christ in stormy weather, as well as fine weather; in summer as well as winter; every day as well as Sunday, and you were treated as a busybody instead of as a friend and well wisher—what would you do about it?

Or you were asked by certain members to do favors for them; such as for instance, as getting jobs, writing them letters of recommendation, using your influence in their behalf, placing them in permanent positions of earning their living, and then you should ask them to help you in your job of parish building only to find that they are not interested—what would you do about it?

There are many, many other questions which perplex the poor, bewildered Rector he would like to submit to you for advice but we are afraid we will be thought a nuisance and a fault finder if we go too far. Yet we would like to know what you would do in such instances if you were in the Rector's shoes.

Please send your answers to your POOR, PERPLEXED PARISH PRIEST.

THE NEW JUNIOR BROTHERHOOD

Thursday, October 20th, at 7.30 P. M., we organized a Junior Chapter of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew known as the Church of St. John the Evangelist Junior Brotherhood of St. Andrew, Chapter Number 1675 J.

The charter members are: Thomas Dean, 141 McClellan Street, Director; B. Frank Drumm, 2128 S. Lee Street, Advisor; Joseph Robbins, 214 Manton Street, Secretary; Frank McCall, 130 Manton Street; Charles Weist, 341 Mercy Street; Joseph Heisler, 206 Mountain Street; Edward Heisler, 206 Mountain Street; Harry Brown, 131 Manton Street; Albert Weise, 409 McClellan Street; Harvey McCall, 114 Federal Street.

The members will be instituted Sunday before St. Andrew's Day, November 27th, at 9.30 A. M. The special work we hope to get from this fine group of young men is to act as couriers in cooperation with the District Superintendents of the parish. Also to assist around the church in preparing for the Bazaar and other affairs of interest. We hope to lead up to a pretty big and effective program of social and spiritual service when once we get shaken down and begin to do team work.

Joseph Robbins has already taken over a Sunday School Class of fifteen boys and is making a good job of it. Walter Pine, our Sexton, finds the young fellows mighty helpful about the Church Building when he needs a helping hand. When it comes to helping distribute Broadcasters, Communion Cards and parish letters under the direction of the District Superintendents, they will begin to show their real value. As times goes on the Juniors will become more and more serviceable to the parish and eventually will graduate into the Senior Chapter.

We do not intend to enlarge the membership of the Chapter for the present at least. We are afraid of numbers. The Chapter could easily become top heavy and unwieldly. We need trained Juniors first. Later on we can consider expansion.

MAY WE CALL SPECIAL ATTENTION TO THE CHANGE OF THE CORPORATE COMMUNION FOR MEN AND BOYS AND THE INSTALLATION OF OUR JUNIOR CHAPTER, TO THE SUNDAY NEXT BEFORE ST. ANDREW'S DAY, NOVEMBER 27th, at 9.30 A. M.

"THOUGH YOUR SINS BE AS SCARLET"

How many, many times the missionary is startled by vivid illustrations of the power of God unto salvation. A brother priest, chaplain of one of our public institutions, one whose life is consecrated to the salvaging of derelict souls, told us of a young woman, who by evil chance had acquired the awful habit of using drugs. She came under his spiritual care. The result of his ministrations in her behalf is recorded in the following letter written by the young woman after her return to private life.

We publish it because of the spirit of hope and joy over her happy release from her bondage to an evil habit. May it be that some one reading this letter who is struggling too against sin and feels it is a losing battle, be inspired by her victory and take heart and renew the fight for liberty.

Dear Reverend B:

I am so sorry that I didn't get to talk to you again before I was dismissed from the hospital. I wanted you to know that your sermon last Sunday seemed to me to be directed to myself and my problem. "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."

Last winter, I suffered unspeakable agony. For three months I was kept under hypodermics before the surgeons dared operate. I acquired the drug habit.

We find our hell on earth. I found mine. I couldn't stand the thought of the future, facing the world as a drug addict. My little boy—three years old—his future worried me. I came to the hospital determined to fight the addiction for his sake. I cured myself in ten days. It was a horrible, frightful experience. And a wonderful one. I saw such suffering there in the hospital. I helped the patients which were unable to help themselves. The nurses and doctors praised me for my co-operation. I found I had a will power. No matter what I suffered I could find someone whose suffering was greater. Helping them fight the good fight relieved my own suffering.

When I went to the Chapel last Sunday I knew I was to be dismissed next day. I dreaded the following day. Dreaded facing the world. Would I have strength enough and will enough to stay away from drugs. You showed me the way. I cannot tell you the peace which descended on me in church. I found I could pray and get strength.

I am free now. I must go back to my baby. Thank God I can look him in the eyes again. Thank you a million times for your help. You have helped to make me a free and useful citizen again.

Thank you again and may God bless you and yours,

Sincerely and gratefully,

I am going to S— now to my baby. Think of me as a well and happy woman. No one must ever know why I went to the hospital. I wanted you to know because you were responsible for my peace of mind. Thank you again.

"GETTING EVEN"

The other day while I was riding to town in the train I found I was unintentionally listening to a conversation between two high school girls. One sentence caught my attetion and held it. She said, "She needn't think she's going to get away with it, I'll get even with her—see if I don't." Naturally I wondered what the absent girl had done to cause such a brain storm in the mind of this present indignant young lady. No doubt it was just a school girl spat, and the two probably would be kissing each other before the sun had set.

In the meantime, that expression "I'll get even" was churning in my brain. I asked myself the question, really how does one get even with one who had done one an injury which caused him pain or distress of mind?

"Getting even" must mean getting on the level with the sinner. What I mean is—if an acquaintance should tell lies about me I mean to "get even" with him—I mean my resentment is so hot against him that I am GOING TO GET DOWN TO HIS LEVEL by doing him an injury even greater than the one he has done to me.

Well, that is all right from an hateful point of view; but it is all wrong from a christian or a sensible point of view. WHY do you want to lower yourself to the moral level of one whose despicable act has caused you suffering? True, you may cause him pain by retaliating but see what damage you have done yourself. You have done yourself a worse injury than your enemy has done. YOU LOWERED YOUR MORAL STANDARDS by hate and vengeance. You paid pain with pain and in doing so you have lost the most preeious gem you possessed—love for your fellow man—even though he were a sinner.

The only way to "get even" with a sinner is to stoop over, reach down, grasp his hand and PULL HIM UP TO YOUR LEVEL OF BROTHERLY LOVE and both of you will be on an higher level. Incidentally, YOUR LOVE WILL KILL HIS HATE.

Paragraphs by Rev. Alfred Grant Walton, D.D.

Real Religion

Religion belongs to everyday life. It should make us different because we possess it. When we have caught its spirit our inmost nature will be changed, our conversation will be more wholesome, our attitudes more unselfish, and generous impulses will rise within us, shining forth in full beneficence in every thought, word and deed that we express. Thus faith will live in action. No amount of profession can be compared to the value of a friendly smile, a look of sympathy, an act of generous love. Such religion expresses more than an affirmation of belief or a gesture of devotion. It reveals God in the heart of man. When a person lives such a life his deeds are more eloquent than the most forceful pulpit pronouncement ever heard. He is God's truest ambassador, a living witness to the things that are eternal.

Alfred Grant Walton

Personality

Personality is an intangible thing, as elusive as a shadow and yet as real as life itself. It is like a mosaic made of many fragments of glass or stone. The material comes from many sources, but each man designs his own pattern. Conversation, manner, mood, gait, habits of conduct, all are a part of it. Personality is not dependent upon attractiveness of physical features or fineness of wearing apparel. A man may be uncomely, awkward in manner and devoid of all social graces and yet he may be eagerly sought in important circles, attentively heard at every council table and highly esteemed in all places of respectability and honor. A friendly smile, a wholesome cheerfulness, an animated interest in life give winsomeness and charm to anyone. Courtesy, sympathy, kindness, friendliness without condescension, and tolerance without compromise—these are qualities which make the humblest man interesting and engaging.

Personality is the garment of the soul. It is highly important how we are clothed. It is our gift of singularity to humanity, our individual contribution to the life of the world.

DECEMBER 31st

Dirty job I've had to-day!
Throwing heaps of trash away;
Cleaning up the attic of the year.
Funny what a motley hoard
Of useless things I found I'd stored,
But I'm thankful now, I have it clear.

In one musty, reeking pile
I've discarded all the vile
And the nasty little things I knew:
All the malice, hate and greed
That the attic held, I've freed,
Brushing out the lesser slanders too.

All the selfish acts for gain,
All those little hurts that pain
Others when they're loosed by reckless tongue
Have I dusted from the door
Of this year that's gone before
And from it—all jealousies have flung.

Dirty job! I must admit,
But I'm satisfied with it
When I see the cleanliness and cheer
It has brought, I hope to stay,—
Ah, my attic is, to-day,
Clean—to welcome in the coming year.

Jos. R. Cushing.

METHODS VERSUS COOPERATION

Every executive learns sooner or later that there is a very close and intimate contact between method and cooperation which spells either success or failure for any venture, be it financial, political, social or otherwise.

METHOD or SYSTEM is no doubt the fetich of every successful man or woman. Everything must have a place and everything must be in its place. To have haphazard ways and confusing conditions and no proper place for anything makes the soul of an orderly man writhe. Not only that but lack of method is expensive and extravagant. Not to know how much, if any of a commodity and go guessing you are out of stock and after you have bought a new invoice of goods only to learn that you are already overstocked but had lost contact through careless listing or otherwise, is to needlessly increase your overhead and probably force you to sell at a loss in order to reduce your supply and get back to normal. Along those lines lies failure in business.

No, if you are aiming to be a successful business man or if you are aiming to be successful in any way, you must always pay due respect to method and orderliness. It is economical, labor saving and tends towards efficiency and success.

Yet, you must not delude yourself with the thought that system spells complete success. There is another and a most important element one must consider along with method and that is cooperation.

Business and Society is like a big complicated machine. The machine is powerful and capable of accomplishing undreamed of results—so long as it is in perfect running order and each unit of that big machine is functioning smoothly. But if one bolt or cog or electric line goes wrong the whole machine is stopped or ruined until the disturbing factor is brought once more in line of functioning as intended. Consequently METHOD must have COOPERATION as its helpmate. Every beautiful theory goes wrong if the items cannot be brought under control and made to work smoothly with every part of the theory.

As it is with machinery, business and society, so is it with church work, no matter how beautifully the work of the parish is planned. You may have a perfect system of services, parish organizations, means of raising funds for current and missionary expenses. You may have your Vestry divided into efficient committees to look after the functioning of the machine. In a word your plans may be admirable and workable and yet not produce results because of one thing lacking. And that lacking thing is—

CO-OPERATION.

Now cooperation means operating or working with others in a common cause. If you and you and I agree to put over a certain piece of work we can put it over. Buf if you and you will not help me the job cannot be done. Simply because it takes our UNITED strength to do it. So you see, if we have a plan or a method for raising money, getting new Sunday School scholars, hunting up delinquent scholars and church members, visiting sick and shut-in members of the parish, reporting new families who move in the parish, asking members to join our parish organizations,—such for instance as the Woman's Auxiliary, the Daughters of the King, the Mothers Meeting, the Senior and Junior Chapters of the Brotherhood, the Boys' Club, the Girl Scouts, any Sunday School Class, patronizing parish social affairs, such as dancing, entertainments, suppers, bazaars, radio and other parties, etc., and we cooperate, i. e., work shoulder to shoulder for the success of all these things, St. John's Parish will be the greatest parish in the Diocese.

But, though our plans and methods are good and easily operated we are not getting 100 per cent cooperation; consequently, our METHODS are not producing results.

Everybody knows if we have a sale or social affair of any kind only about twenty per cent of our membership patronize them. We must depend upon strangers almost entirely to make our social events a financial success. HERE IS A SERIOUS LACK OF CO-OPERATION. We are a poor parish and it is necessary for us to have special occasions when we need special money for missions or for current expenses in order to raise that money. If all the parishioners would cooperate in putting over these money raising plans, it would be most encouraging to your rector.

Please think over the matter of METHOD and COOPERATION and make a promise that YOU for one will be a cooperator!

SUGGESTIONS FOR ALTAR GUILDS

The head of this guild is the rector, ex officio, whose directions the guild exists to perform. The members should be communicants of the parish. Their number may vary according to the size of the parish and the amount of work required of the guild. There should be a president, or directress of the guild. Knowing the wishes of the rector, the work should be done in a manner to save him the trouble of all detail. The sanctuary should be found clean and in readiness for all services, as also the font, the lectern, prayer desks, and pulpit; the altar linen should be spotless, the silver and brass shining, the lights (if used) in good order, the flowers fresh, etc. In the sacristy the vestments should be found in equally perfect order.

To obtain this result the work must be carefully planned, and meetings of the guild should be held at intervals to report progress and for the general stimulation of the work. There should be a secretary to keep the records and send out notices, and a treasurer to handle the funds.

One method of arranging the work is to divide the members of the guild into committees of three or four, each committee serving one month of the year in rotation, sharing all the various duties for which the guild is responsible. This plan allows all members to take an active part in the work of the guild and gives to every one a general knowledge of all the work.

A second method is to appoint several committees, each of which takes charge of certain duties throughout the year, leaving, however, the sancuary work proper to be performed by all the members in turn, serving, two at a time, for one month of each year, or for one week of every month. If, for instance, a committee with a chairman and a few members, attends to the linen, sees that it is properly laundered, mended, and renewed throughout the year, the result is apt to be better than when new members undertake the work each month. It is the same with the flowers,—a committee can best see that they are always provided. With the vestments and lights it is the same.

The sanctuary work thus reserved for all the members of the guild to perform in turn is usually done on Saturdays, at an hour arranged by those serving to suit their convenience. It includes the thorough cleaning and dusting of the sanctuary and all that pertains to the altar and to any chapel which may be in the church, also the font, the lectern, prayer desks, and the pulpit. (On the shelf, or somewhere, in every pulpit there should be a Bible, a Prayer Book, and a Hymnal.) On this day, also, the flowers may be arranged and placed with the other ornaments upon the altar, and the altar vested for the services to follow on Sunday. The protector, however, is not removed from the altar until just before the service of the Holy Communion, after which it is at once replaced, so that the fair linen shall at all times be protected from dust and falling flowers. The sanctuary work includes the preparation for the service of the Holy Communion.

Any work done in the church, in preparation for a service to follow, should be finished at least ten minutes before the service begins, and there should be an interval of about the same length of time afterwards before going into the sanctuary, so that the devotions of the congregation shall not be disturbed.

In order to remind ourselves of the privilege it is to have our share in the keeping of God's house, and to increase our reverence for it, let all work in the church be begun with a few moments of silent prayer at the chancel rail: "This work is for God's house—may I do it worthily." The work itself should be done in silence, as far as possible, and without haste.

A corporate communion service for members of the guild on at least one Sunday or Saint's Day during the year is very desirable.

In some churches members are admitted to the guild by a simple form of service, and this emphasizes the dignity of the work. Surely it is in proportion to the spirit of consecration and love in which this work is done that it is acceptable to our Master, or of value to the rector and congregation.

THE SACRISTY

In the sacristy there should be "a place for everything and everything in its place." Here, if possible, there should be running water and an appliance for boiling it. This will provide for a thorough cleansing of the communion vessels after the service. Such luxuries are not always obtainable, however, and where they are not, a special bowl may be kept for this purpose, the water boiled elsewhere and brought to the sacristy. Special towels should be kept for these ablutions.

A small table, or sacristy credence, should be in the sacristy, on which to place the communion vessels before and after the service.

When Eucharistic vestments are used, there should be in the sacristy a special place in which to keep and arrange them. The chests in which to keep the altar linen, hangings, and other vestments must vary according to the size and limitations of the sacristy and the number of articles used, but it is of great assistance to the sacristans if there can be shelves and drawers sufficient to keep these things in an accessible place, where they can be neatly kept and readily found.

A small chest with a lock, or a safe, is desirable, in which to keep the chalice and paten, the flagon or cruets and the canister for bread or wafers. Here the communion vessels may be put away, after being cleansed, fully vested and ready for the next service.

There should also be a closet for brooms and all cleaning materials, silver and brass polish, etc. Here on shelves may be kept the empty vases, the alms basins, candles, etc. If there is electricity or gas, an iron and small board will be useful. A mirror, soap and towels should also be on hand.

It is of assistance to have a book, hanging in a convenient place, in which is written in detail the work expected of the sacristans, the order in which to perform it, and the places where the various articles needed are to be found. A bulletin-board may be upon the wall, where messages can be left.

SPREADING CHEER

On Saturday afternoon, December 10, the St. John the Evangelist Senior Chapter No. 2 of The Daughters of the King took a party to the Women's Department of the Home for Indigents at Holmesburg. They sang many songs and carols in which the inmates of the Home took great pleasure in joining. One of the songs which the girls sang was called The Easter Parade, in which they wore various kinds of hats made out of things from around the house. For instance, one girl wore a funnel trimmed with flowers; another, a colander trimmed with nosegays; and a third had an ice bag trimmed with ribbon.

They took with them a treat of oranges, apples, and candy. All of the girls could not go but all joined in making the party possible.

Two of the older members of the Junior Daughters of the King were invited to accompany them and all were glad that Miss Emma Kaiser found it possible to accept.

M. Beatrice Fisher.

OUR ANNUAL BAZAAR

When the closing bell put out the lights of the Bazaar Saturday, December 3rd, we were too tired to talk. We just dropped everything and went home to bed. But oh, what a glorious three nights we had! Everybody came out and we had a big rally and old home week every night. Walter Pine added greatly to the pleasure as well as the profit of the occasion by renting a nickleodeon which supplied music and dancing for every night and turned over to the Bazaar Five Dollars profit.

The proceeds fell about fifty dollars below those of last year. We have every reason, however, to believe that when all bills are paid and the scattering amounts still outstanding are gleaned and in the treasury, we will find out net profits are much higher than a year ago. The reason for this is due to our being able to buy materials at a much lower cost. Also this year, instead of buying a watch to be chanced off during the Bazaar, William Little donated a beautiful new gold watch. That meant a saving of twenty-five dollars, the cost of our prize last year. All the money we got this year was so much clear gain. Incidentally the watch was won by Mrs. O'Neill, 144 Tree Street. We congratulate her for she has won not only a handsome but a very valuable wrist watch.

Then, too, the beautiful toilet set, which was chanced off by Mrs. Orenette Krafft and won by Miss Dorothy Weist, turned in a very neat profit to our treasury. These prizes and a few other such of less importance, were the means of building up our net profits over that of last year.

No doubt we could have sold much more from all departments had we not been overly cautious in our buying. For instance, the candy table, the kitchen and the men's furnishings counter were entirely sold out two hours before closing time. Our caution was due to the wish that we did not want to have a surplus amount of goods on our hands at the closing hour. It is a tradition of our Bazaar that goods MUST NOT be reduced in price on the last night just to get rid of them. The establishing of that rule was the only way we could break up the custom of everybody waiting until the last night to buy goods at bargain prices. Hence our reason for buying materials so close. Now the very few things we have left over may be used for radio prizes during the winter.

We want to call your attention to the jump in the receipts of the Domestic Table. This year it was in charge of Mrs. Howard Miller and Miss Helen Ashman. What a team they make! They did splendid work and are still hard at it trying to see a few left overs which are too good to be used as prizes. We would suggest they make a list of articles they have on hand with prices opposite the articles and the the list tacked on the bulletin board. Perhaps they can dispose of all their stock and raise the receipts of the Domestic Table.

Mrs. Frank Pine deserves special mention for the successful management of the kitchen. It was really astonishing the way the people raved over the appetizing suppers that she served. And the praise was not only from folk whose appetites savored the viands; but it was sincerely offered by women who have every right to boast of their own ability to cook. Whatever would we do without her so ably supervising our eats. Her department was sold out every night long before closing time.

Minnie Shoch and Orenette Krafft are a smooth working team and certainly put over a good job at the Toilet Articles Counter. The receipts from their table were much larger than usual.

So far as the other members of our selling staff go, we are just the same old crowd trying our best to do our bit and succeed in muddling through somehow.

We are wondering if next year it would be well to eliminate Thursday night and confine the Bazaar to Friday and Saturday nights. What do you think about it? The list of the Bazaar Booth Receipts are as follows:

Novelties and Fancy Goods	$122.72
Candy Table	17.98
Soft Drinks	10.37
Doll Booth	116.97
Radio	21.03
Grocery Counter	106.48
Fish Pond	6.95
Kitchen	50.59
Men's Furnishings	180.55
Toilet Articles	36.00
Domestic Table	40.90
Post Office	1.20
Fortune Telling	2.70

DO YOU KNOW THE ADDRESS?

(The following is a copy of a letter received by your Rector and he is unable to help because the writer failed to give the address of the person to be benefited)

"Reverend McHenry.

In reference to an neighbor of mine I know the children go to your church. The father has been laid off from W. P. A. and he will not receive a relief check until the 21st of Dec. Anything you can do I know will be appreciated.

Thanks.

    Answer: 5 Books of History, 14 Pastoral Epistles, 7 General Epistles, 1 Book of Prophecy.

TURN OUT THE LIGHT

It is surprising how big bills from little, thoughtless actions grow. Take, for instance, the matter of electric lights in the Church and Parish House. So many of us are in the habit of turning on the light when we enter into a room and then forgetting to turn out the light when we go out. Result—such illumination continues uselessly to burn and our light bill is increased to no purpose. Take, for instance, the amazing increase in our November bill for electric light. It was one hundred per cent more than the previous month.

Why?

Well, because we do not TURN OUT THE LIGHT when we no longer need it. Sometimes we turn on the light when it is not needed, too.

Now if you and I will just make a big vow that we will NEVER turn on the light when it is NOT needed and we will ALWAYS turn off the light when we are THROUGH USING IT; if we will do THAT we will not have another increase of $10.00 a month in our electric light bills.

Probably the best thing to do would be to ask Walter to TURN ON THE LIGHT when we need it in any room and to TURN OUT THE LIGHT when we no longer need it.

HOW TO BEGIN THE NEW YEAR

The first day of the year occurs on Sunday. This fact gives us a fine opportunity to begin the new year right. It is not only the first day of the year but it is also the FIRST SUNDAY IN THE MONTH. That, of course, means we will have our regular celebration of the Holy Communion on that special day. Would it not seem to you to suggest a fine way to begin the New Year? Many folk make what they call New Year resolutions. Personally, I think it is a fine thing to do. It denotes a sensitive conscience and a realization that we have a moral and spiritual responsibility to ourselves and others.

If we should think to make our New Year resolutions on bended knee before the Altar of Jesus Christ we might get special spiritual strength from on high to keep those resolutions. I'm quite sure that if we were to make such resolutions on the Blessed Sacrament we would hesitate a long while and think very seriously before we broke a vow made to God in such a solemn way.

At least we can make the experiment and as we partake of the Body and Blood in Holy Communion we can murmur in our hearts, God help me keep my New Year vows. I am sure He will hear such a cry for help and will give you strength.

BROADCASTING FROM S. T. J. C.

The Bazaar is history. It is an history of a very successful and delightful time.

We want to thank our many friends who contributed such lovely dolls to our Doll Booth. There was such a variety of dolls that the boys, as well as the girls, got excited over them. Incidentally the Doll Booth was most successful financially.

* * * *

Also, we want to flash our thanks to SAMUEL SNELL for that fine donation of fruit and vegetables. We would estimate that his gift was worth between twenty-five and fifty dollars. There were cabbages, turnips, potatoes, onions, oranges, grapefruit, apples, all of which were choice variety and in fine condition.

We missed the home-made fudge from the Candy Table. It mustn't happen again.

Again Mrs. Holton made those delicious candied applies. She has been doing this for quite a few years. Hope she will keep up the good work. The kids just love them.

Old Santa will have made his visit and returned North before you read this. Hope you got what you hoped for in your stocking!

Time to buy presents for next Christmas is in January. You'd be surprised what fine gifts you can buy for little money right AFTER Christmas. Wrap them up; put on the name of the one you bought it for and put it away until Christmas comes again. You will enjoy the rush and bustle of your friends who do their Christmas shopping late.

Some good Resolutions to make for Anno Domini 1939:

1. I will attend Divine Service regularly.
2. I will try not to miss my Communion.
3. I will ALWAYS bring a worthy offering unto the Lord every Sunday and will make a special offering every Holy Day, such as Easter and Christmas.
4. I will help the Rector and visit the sick in the Parish.
5. I will call on folk I miss from the services and learn the cause of their absence.
6. I will offer myself to the Rector for any service he thinks I can render.
7. I will be specially careful of my words and acts before the youth of the parish and will try to set them a good example in christian living.
   and my church.
8. I will try always to give something to the needy.
9. I will go search for candidates for Confirmation.
10. I will try not to let anything come between me

Irving Caesar, author of many song hits, including "Is It True What They Say About Dixie?" would have you believe he overheard it in one of the better restaurants. . . Two customers decided to dine well and had themselves a veritable banquet. . . When the check was requested the waiter first brought two finger bowls. . . Bewildered, they surveyed the mysterious objects, looked at each other inquiringly, and finally one spoke up. "What could they be?" . . The other shrugged. . . After ten minutes one's curiosity almost strangled him. . . "Waiter," he said, "if you will be so kindly, parm me, but you shouldn't take offense, but these bowls with water, what are they for?"

"They are finger bowls," he said, "to wash your fingers."

Said the silent one: "It serves you right. You ask him a foolish question, so he gives you a foolish enser."

A GOOD START

Boys and girls who have taken part in track athletics, know that a good start is half of any race. Once you have started well, it is comparatively simple to keep up the pace. But if you get off on the wrong foot and falter at the very beginning, you are likely to be beaten before the halfway post. That's why all runners practice their starts over and over again.

Of course, it's possible to get a poor start, and yet make up for it by a whirlwind finish. But it's a lot harder that way. And that's something to be thinking about as school starts this year. If you dawdle and "take it easy" the first few weeks, it will be just that much more difficult to get into your stride later on. But if you start with a rush, getting your first few days' lessons well, you will acquire the habit of running strongly, and you'll be able to keep it up all year.

Some botanists were one day hunting for specimens of mountain plants in the Highland of Scotland, and observed several scarce and beautiful plants growing at some distance down the face of a steep precipice, fully two hundred feet down.

They saw a boy near, and offered him a handsome present of money if he would allow himself to be lowered by a rope and fill a small basket with the flowers.

The boy shrank back at first, but he remembered that his parents were poor, and that the money would be of great use to them. So he bravely said, "I will go if my father holds the rope."

And then, with unshrinking nerves, and his heart strong and bold, he suffered his father, when he came, to lower him down the precipice.

It was only the boy's trust in the strength of his father's arm, and in the love of his father's heart, that enabled him to take the risk.—William Moodie.

Truth and philosophy, when combined, make something that is good for most of us. They become both meat and drink. Below is an adaptable combination:

"When you buy for price these days, you can never be sure. It is unwise to pay too much, but it is worse to pay too little. When you pay too much, you lose a little money—that's all. When you pay too little, you sometimes lose everything, because the thing you bought was incapable of doing the thing you bought it to do..

"The common law of business balance prohibits paying a little and getting a lot. It can't be done. If you deal with the lowest bidder, it is well to add something for the risk you run . . . and if you do that, you will have enough to pay for something better."

BURIAL SERVICE

This rich and affecting portion of our ritual has long been considered an evidence of the admirable judgment which tempered the minds of the reformers of the Church of England. Some slight alterations have been made in the American edition by the revisal or the omission of a few expressions liable to misconstruction, but nothing to efface or diminish the sweet serenity and holy feeling which pervade the entire office.

Religious solemnities at funerals can never be lightly esteemed by those who reflect on the destiny of the human body. That body is the handiwork of God, and will one day be raised to renew a life, not of months and years, but of immortality like that of the Angels of Heaven. Among all the usages of the Church, there is none which takes us so near to the brink of eternity as this; which opens so vast a range of meditation on futurity; and which gives a more healthful tone to a mind too apt to be cankered with this world's pursuits. All Christian nations have felt this, and hence have arisen the rites which always accompany sepulture in every part of Christendom.

The second Rubric at the end of the Order for the Burial of the Dead is as follows: "It is to be noted that this Office is appropriate to be used only for the faithful departed in Christ, provided that in any other case the Minister may, at his discretion, use such part of this Office, or such devotions taken from other parts of this Book, as may be fitting." This Rubric calls attention to the fact that the service really was framed and thus is appropriate to be used only for the faithful departed in Christ, but it gives the Minister authority to modify the service as shall seem to him to be fitting. It in no way forbids the Minister from officiating in any case.

The proper place for the use of the Burial Office is the Church, and it ought not to be used in houses, except for great cause.

THE NEW LIFE

ONLY a little shrivelled seed—
It might be a flower, or grass, or weed;
Only a box of dirt on the edge
Of a narrow, dusty window-ledge;
Only a few scant summer showers;
Only a few clear, shining hours—
That was all. Yet God could make
Out of these, for a sick child's sake,
A blossom-wonder as fair and sweet
As ever broke at an angel's feet.

Only a life of barren pain,
Wet with sorrowful tears for rain;
Warmed sometimes by a wandering gleam
Of joy that seemed but a happy dream.
A life as common and brown and bare
As the box of earth in the window there;
Yet it bore at last the precious bloom
Of a perfect soul in a narrow room—
Pure as the snowy leaves that fold
Over the flower's heart of gold.

CHRISTMAS AT ST. JOHN'S

With Christmas occurring on Sunday the real significance of the day was emphasized. The Church was simply decorated with just two large Christmas wreaths hanging on each side of the Reardos and two beautiful trees, illuminated, in the Chancel on each side of the Altar.

THE EARLY SERVICE

As usual the 6.30 Service was the most popular of the day. Parisioners flocked to it and the church was full of worshippers. As a prelude to the service the Junior Choir, in red cassocks, filed out of the Sacristy into the Chancel, and facing the congregation, sang a lovely Christmas Carol, after which they proceeded down the main aisle to the door, and with the Senior Choir sang the Processional "Hark the Herald Angels Sing."

We, immediately afterwards, went into the Communion service as far as the Creed, when the anthem "Nazareth" by Gounod, was rendered by the Senior Choir with unusual expression. Following the anthem we made our announcements of the events to occur during the Christmas season, mentioning the 10.30 Celebration of the Holy Communion on St. John the Evangelist's day and the Sunday School Christmas Festival on Holy Innocent's night. We made a special appeal for a generous Christmas Offering because first, it was the birthday of Jesus Christ and our Christmas Offerings were really in the nature of a birthday present to Jesus Christ, and in the second place, as the offering always goes towards the current expenses of the Parish and as our income for the year had been less than usual, we were looking forward hopefully for a one hundred per cent offering from our members.

After the announcements the Christmas Offering was received while the Senior Choir sang "There were Shepherds" by Vincent. Then followed the Consecration and reception of the Holy Communion. In place of the Agnus Dei the Choir sang softly and most effectively that lovely Christmas Carol "Silent Night, Holy Night." At the close of the reception of the Sacraments the Senior Choir rendered Mozart's "Gloria in Excelsis" with expression and power never before equalled. So wonderful was their artistry that we found ourselves keenly regretting the lack of radio service that the public might hear it too.

In conclusion we had special prayers for all the sick, shut-ins and unemployed of the parish which were followed by the singing of the Sevenfold Amen by Stainer. Then we chose to sing for our Recessional that Christmas gem so precious to every Philadelphia churchman and women, "O Little Town of Bethlehem."

THE SECOND CELEBRATION

At 10.30 o'clock we again celebrated the day with an elaborate service before a surprisingly large congregation. In the main the service was a duplication of the early celebration and need not be repeated here.

OUR CHRISTMAS CAROL SERVICE

At half past two the Sunday School and members of the parish assembled in the Church and had a short service composed almost entirely of Christmas carols. We had felt somewhat dubious about this afternoon "sing." We were not at all certain whether the day, being Christmas, anybody would attend. Imagine our pleasure and surprise when we stood before one of the largest congregations of men and women, BOYS and GIRLS,—get that emphasis of ours—we ever had the pleasure of seeing at any Christmas Carol singing. Among other things that happened at this service was the presentation of a beautiful Schofield Bible to Mrs. Howard Miller, teacher of a Sunday School Class who had maintained a 100 PER CENT ATTENDANCE for one whole month before Christmas. The Bible was the prize offered by the Rector to every Sunday School Class making such a record. The several beautiful bouquets upon the Altar were distributed to the sick and shut-ins after the service.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL

On Holy Innocents' Night, December 28th, we held our annual Children's Festival. The Parish House Auditorium was crowded to the doors and folk were standing four deep because we did not have enough chairs to accommodate them. Though crowded the audience was the most orderly of any Christmas Festival we ever had. Generally this is a night of wild excitement and noise. It seems all the noise makers stayed home and their vacancies were filled by a quiet and appreciative bunch. The entertainment for the evening was provided by Margaret Nelson which is as much as to say it was first class. The children were well trained. Santa Claus knew his stuff and all the choruses were rendered with spirit.

We keep asking ourselves where do all the children stay from one Christmas to another? If we had as many regular scholars every Sunday as were present that evening we would need to build Parish House #2.

There occurred one little incident, however, that made us feel nice and warm in the region of our heart. Before beginning the entertainment I announced to our big audience that we had provided candy, oranges and toys for all the boys and girls of the Kindergarten and the Intermediate Department. But I had not provided gifts for the Senior Department or the Bible Classes—not because I did not have enough funds because I did have, as a matter of fact—but because I was using the money to buy food, coal, clothing, medicine and Christmas cheer for the poor and sick of the Parish who, because of their poverty and infirmities were unable to be with us. Naturally, I expected to hear murmurs of disappointment after making the announcement, but instead, I was surprised and delighted when applause broke out over that whole big audience. YOU CAN'T TELL ME ST. JOHNITE HEARTS AREN'T IN THE RIGHT PLACE!

AND HERE COMES LENT!!!

THE FIRESIDE CLUB

The Club was started to encourage everybody to contribute his just share towards the Coal Fund of the Church by making small assessments of 10 cents a month per member. The collections are made by the District Superintendents of the Parish. The first year of its existence it was very successful. One Superintendent turned over the sum of $100 to the Coal Fund through his collections. Other Superintendents were likewise successful and our coal bills were paid promptly and without embarrassment to the Treasurer of the Parish.

Last year the members of the Club were not quite so prompt in paying their club dues. The result was we were constantly running in debt with our coal dealers. Some of the club members withdrew and said they would contribute annually to the Coal Fund.

Did they do it?

Judge for yourself!

The receipts on Coal Sunday for 1938 was less than $50.00. The contributions should have been not a cent less than $250.00 had the members kept their promise. That they defaulted in their promise is only too evident by the small receipts for the day. One wonders why some folk are so careless of their reputation for being good sports that they will evade the payment of such small dues as 10 cents a month for such an enormous necessity as coal.

Think of it!

The FIRESIDE CLUB dues amount to less than 1/3 of a cent a day—an assessment easily within the reach of the most poverty stricken member of the church, yet we have been told in all seriousness by some of our members, employed every work day, that they cannot afford to keep up the dues of 10 cents a month.

The matter is too serious to ignore.

You MUST assume YOUR responsibility.

We are directing every DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENT to make a special drive for new members and also to collect back dues of delinquent members.

We must raise $275.00 to pay this winter's coal bill.

There will be no "Coal Sunday" this year. That day afforded too many a means of evading their clear duty. Had they kept their promise our receipts for the day would have been far in excess of only $50.00.

Our coal bill amounts to $400.00 PER YEAR. YOUR share of that bill is 10 CENTS A MONTH. Either pay up or listen to the birdies say Cheap, Cheap every time you go roaming in the woodland.

OUR CONFIRMATION CAMPAIGN

WE HAVE MONTHS OF HARD WORK AHEAD

The time has come for us to start our CONFIRMATION CAMPAIGN. Our success in the past has been due to an early start in compiling our lists of men, women, boys and girls. Every parish organization is urged to do its share in this big missionary effort of the parish. Success depends upon three fundamentals—the neglect of any one spells disaster to our efforts.

COOPERATION

The first fundamental is Co-operation. You know the old "saw," "United we stand, divided we fall" or in this particular instance fail is the more appropriate word. You, of course, know that your Rector is so engaged with his official duties as to be helpless in making visits. Consequently, he must plan the campaign and depend entirely on YOUR COOPERATION under his directions to put over the job. The way to make this COOPERATION effective is to do your visiting through the parish organization to which you belong. It is hard for most persons to make missionary visits successfully if they go alone; but, if some other person goes along they hold each other up and are better able to do an effective piece of work.

The big Confirmations of other years were the fruit of COOPERATION. Everybody joined hands and tackled the job with enthusiasm and when Confirmation night came we startled the Diocese with our results.

This year we can do the same as usual if we CO-OPERATE. Will you join hands with us in seeking candidates for our next Confirmation Class?

ORGANIZATION

After we promise to cooperate then we must get organized. The reason we hear of so many failures of well intentioned and enthusiastic groups, is due to the lack of system. It is necessary to be willing but it is important to be certain as to what we are to do and how we are going to do it. Every parish organization ought to carefully plan the Confirmation Campaign and delegate members congenial to each other to visit in pairs the individuals or families who are prospects. Each organization ought to select the sort of prospects they should visit. For instance, the Woman's Auxiliary, the various chapters of the Daughters of the King, the Mother's Club, ought to use their energies among the women and girls living in the parish. The men and boys of the Senior and Junior Brotherhood of St. Andrew and of the Boys' Club ought to confine their drive to the men and boys of the parish, always keeping in mind the big exception that if either the male or female workers should happen on one of the opposite sex while on the drive, to go get 'em regardless of sex.

To keep the organization active and on its toes, each parish society should make CONFIRMATION an important order of business at every regular meeting.

VISITATION

The most effective and at first the hardest feature of our Confirmation Campaign is Visitation. It is curious, but nevertheless a fact, that most of us can discuss frankly and without shame our personal matters, such as our surgical operations, our family skeletons, our state of finances, our jobs,—even our moral delinquencies with one another but stand shamefaced and mute before a person we approach to discuss church membership and Confirmation. We can talk and work enthusiastically with strangers, and make appointment after appointment to meet them, and if they turn us down the first time we redouble our efforts if we want them to join our lodge, let it be Red Men, P. O. S. of A., K. of P. or Odd Fellows or what have you. We go so far as to offer prizes and organize teams under captains and leaders and consider it a disgrace if we allow any other team to make more visits and land more candidates than our team. Then we are dumb and scared to death to walk up to a man and invite him to come to church and join up.

If you boast of your missionary work for your pet lodge why can't you show some real "pep" for your pet church. You visit sick members of the lodge. Suppose you try visiting spiritually sick friends and talk over the matter of Confirmation quietly with them. You will be surprised how cordially they will receive your advances.

Last year the prize winner of the parish was a man who talked 17 other persons into being cofirmed. There are hundreds of unchurched men and women, boys and girls in our parish who are still prospects.

GO GET 'EM!!!

OUR SUNDAY SCHOOL

Folk who profess to know tell us that the only way to put across an idea is just to keep on talking about it until people begin to realize you have an idea.

You know, I think they have something there. At least I'm giving the thought a try-out just to see what happens. With that thought in mind I am planning a Sunday School column for each edition of the BROADCASTER hereafter. The column will contain things of interest which happen to any person or persons who are members of the Sunday School Department. It would add interest to the column if our Officers and Scholars would use it to express their opinion concerning the management and schedule of our different departments. One point must be made clear, however; and that is we will publish nothing of a controversial or negatively critical nature. We want and welcome constructive suggestions but will not publish anything that will cause embarrassment or resentment.

Here, for instance, is the sort of news we would like to publish. It is the habit of the Rector to visit each department every session of the School to get a personal idea of the work that is being accomplished. For the last several weeks he has noticed that there are many more boys than girls in this department. This is rather surprising for it is generally supposed that girls are always in the majority in Sunday School attendance.

There is another little item we would like to add.

Can anybody tell us what to do in such a matter as this?

We will put it as an hypothetical question as lawyers say when they want to get an answer to a problem in a roundabout way. Suppose you know of two boys, who are brothers, who are sent to Sunday School every Sunday. One wants to attend. His brother wants to skip it. The boy who does not want to go is afraid to stay away unless he can make his brother stay out with him. When they reach the church the one who wants to go somewhere else threatens to "beat up" his brother if he goes to school. At last he scares his brother into staying out too and in going with him. What would YOU do? Would you tell the family or would you try to reason with the truant?

If the little girls who belong to the Sacred Heart Church and who stand in the hall every Sunday will ask permission of their priest we will be happy to let them attend the school as visitors and sit in class with their friends until School is dismissed.

We were glad to see that another Sunday School Class reports one hundred per cent attendance. Sunday, January 8th, the class of Miss Naioma Davis achieved that success.

We would like to have the names and addresses of all scholars irregular in attendance reported to us every Sunday. Please do not remove the attendance card from the class envelope no matter how many times they are absent. Every scholar is a member of the school until we personally are satisfied, after investigation, that the absentee should be dropped. No Sunday School Class will be credited with one hundred per cent attendance if absentee scholars cards are removed in order to report all class members present.

Parents should ask questions of the children when they return from Sunday School, on what happened at school. It would help them appreciate what the School is doing for the child. Incidentally, it will please the child to feel that you are really interested in his Sunday School.

The present Sunday School Staff is as follows:

Superintendent—Mr. George Cressee.
Asst. Superintendent—Mr. John E. McHenry.
Secretary—Mrs. Vernon Matthews.
Treasurer—Mr. B. Frank Drumm.

Mr. Vernon Matthews	Miss Viola Young
Miss Ruth Rutter	Mr. Thomas Dean
Miss Helen Lotz	Mr. Joseph Robbins
Miss Florence Armstrong	Miss M. B. Fisher
Miss Myrtle Dean	Miss Ethel E. McHenry, Substitute

AN APPRECIATION!

It is our pleasure once more to say "Thank you, Mrs. Shives" for your yearly Christmas gifts to the sick and shut-in members of St. John's Parish.

We assure you that your thoughtfulness and kindness of heart were doubly appreciated by the recipients and we sincerely hope you will "stand by" for many years to come.

PLEASE BE CAREFUL

Have you noticed what a fine job of painting John Gallagher did to our iron fence, the Church hall and the window sills of the Sunday School rooms? Of course the job and the paint costs money. We have a hard time raising funds for repairs and would not get very far if we didn't have such fellows as John to do the jobs for us.

Now that we look so fine we want to keep nice looking for a long time and we are asking the boys and girls to see how careful they can be of the new paint. For instance, let's not swing on the front gates. Let's try not to kick the doors or scrape furniture along the woodwork in the halls. And also, let's try not to climb up on the window sills and make ugly scratches on the beautiful enamel. Just a little care will help keep the paint looking fresh for a long time. We have a beautiful church. Let's all take pride in keeping it nice looking.

JANUARY BIBLE ACROSTIC

J - esus said unto her, I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live. John 11:25.

A - sk and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you. For everyone that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh, findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened. Matthew 7:7-8.

A - ll we, like sheep, have gone astray; we have turned everyone to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all. Isaiah 53:6.

R - emember the word that I said unto you, the servant is not greater than his Lord. If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you. If they have kept my saying, they will keep yours also. John 15:20.

Y - e are of God, little children, and have overcome them; because greater is he that is in you, than he that is in the world. I John 4:4.

TIME YOURSELF

Here is something to do with your Bibles which is a good game and will be most helpful to you in learning how to handle the Book.

The idea is this: Form a group of two or more contestants. Have as many Bibles as there are players. Have an announcer whose part is to call out certain questions as those following. Also a timekeeper who keeps score. Then get set. At the word "go" the announcer calls his question. The contestants immediately search their Bible for the answer. The first one finding it stands and gives the answer. The timekeeper gives the player credit for the time it took to get the answer. At the end of the game, the "finding" time of each player is added up and the player who took the LEAST number of minutes and who got the GREATEST number of correct answers is the winner. In cases of tie each contestant is given the same credits. The following is a list just to start you off. Hundreds of other tests can be made up for all sorts of occasions.

TURN QUICKLY TO—

The Ten Commandments	The Sermon on the Mount
The Shepherd Psalm	The Beatitudes
The Birth of Jesus	The Good Shepherd
The Resurrection of Jesus	The Prodigal Son
The Lord's Prayer	The Golden Rule

"Now abideth, Faith, Hope, Charity"

"Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest"

Between what books is Amos found?

How many chapters in Genesis?

What Books in the New Testament have 28 chapters—24 chapters—22 chapters—16 chapters—13 chapters—6 chapters—5 chapters—4 chapters—3 chapters—1 chapter?

What is the only Book in the Bible that has just 2 Chapters?

Does the Old or the New Testament have the most books of but one chapter? Name them.

NOTE No. 1. In order to play fair and make the contest really interesting Bibles without references ought to be used.

NOTE No. 2. As we said before, hundreds of similar tests can be prepared for other occasions.

SHUT-IN'S REMEMBERED by Senior Daughters of the King No. 1

During the Christmas Season the members of The Daughters of the King of Senior Chapter No. 1 endeavored to spread cheer to the various sick and shut-in members of the parish by taking to each one some small reminder of the holiday season and impressing upon them the fact that even though they are not able to be with us we still remember them in our thoughts and prayers. To some we took fruit, some were the recipients of candy, while others were rememberd with plants.

It is our hope that we will be able to bring a little cheer at Easter to the unfortunate members of the parish.

Any women of the parish who would care to participate in this work, will be welcome at our meetings on the first Monday evening of the month.

Any one who would be interested in making the work amongst the sick and shut-ins possible may do so by consulting any member of the chapter.

M. Beatrice Fisher.

BROADCASTING FROM STATION S. T. J. C.

CHRISTMAS WAS A GREAT DAY!

* * * *

Some folks celebrate Christmas all the year once a week, paying installments on that Christmas present they couldn't afford to give.

* * * *

Now all together! How many went to the loan office and borrowed money to put in the Christmas envelopes? It's unanimous.

* * * *

DO YOUR CHRISTMAS SHOPPING NOW. Things are selling at less than half price. And you can get all next year's presents before the end of February.

* * * *

The man who keeps New Year's Resolutions is strong. The man who breaks New Year's Resolutions is weak. The man who makes NO New Year's Resolutions is a coward.

* * * *

THE EPIPHANY—FRIDAY, JANUARY 6TH

Closely connected with Christmas, as the name "Twelfth Night" shows and was looked upon as the close of the Christmas Festival. Christmas adornments should be removed.

* * * *

ASH WEDNESDAY — FEBRUARY 22ND

The name is derived from the practice of sprinkling ashes on the heads of those who were put to public penance and temporary excommunication on that day. The faithful are most rigid in keeping a fast and a day of prayer and confession.

* * * *

LENT

Season of 40 days, including Ash Wednesday but excluding all Sundays. It is a time of extraordinary self examination, confession, prayer and determination to keep God's will and commandments more consistently in the future. Also it is a season of willing offerings of MONEY and TIME and STRENGTH to the cause of Christ.

* * * *

EASTER: APRIL 9TH

The old name for the day was PASCHA. The Pasch-egg, the symbol of life out of what seemed dead. In early times it was the practice of freeing slaves and ransoming captives. It was the great day of Baptism and Holy Communion. It was the day penitents were restored to Mother Church.

Upon the facts of Easter rest the hope of Christianity, for it is the memorial of the RESURRECTION, a grant to every son of God through the Grace of Jesus Christ.

* * * *

YOUR OFFERINGS
SHOULD BE DAILY FROM ASH WEDNESDAY
UNTIL EASTER

* * * *

Why don't you join the FIRESIDE CLUB? See your District Superintendent AT ONCE. Your dues are—adults, 10 cents a month. Under 15 years, 5 cents a month. Either do this or we will be coming around making BLOCK COLLECTIONS. We must keep warm. We must buy coal to keep warm. We must have money to buy coal to keep warm. YOU must give money to buy coal to keep warm. So you see it's another game of the "House that Jack built."

* * * *

Nearly 400 members received their Holy Communion Christmas Day. About 500 more should have done so.

AND LAST, BUT MOST IMPORTANT

We thank our many interested and generous friends for the gifts of money and materials which helped our Parish make a Merry Time for our poor, sick and shut-ins.

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

A BALLAD OF TREES AND THE MASTER

Into the woods my Master went,
Clean forspent, forspent.
Into the woods my Master came,
Forspent with love and shame.
But the olives they were not blind to Him,
The little gray leaves were kind to Him:
The thorn tree had a mind to Him,
When into the woods He came.
Out of the woods my Master went,
And He was well content.
Out of the woods my Master came,
Content with death and shame.
When Death and Shame would woo Him last,
From under the trees they drew Him last:
'Twas on a tree they slew Him last
When out of the woods He came.

—Sidney Lanier.

A VISION

I will give you, if I may, just the vision that came to me—a wonderful, glorious vision—God knows if it will ever become more than a vision—of what this church might stand for. You won't laugh at it will you? You won't look upon it as the foolish dream of a boy? Listen to it, if you will, without a smile, and wonder to yourselves, and think out whether it be possible for you and me to build together something grand. And this is what I saw. I saw a great and splendid church, standing in the greatest square of the greatest city of the world. I stood on the west steps and saw what this church would be to the life of the people. There passed me, into its warm inside, hundreds and hundreds of all sorts of people going up to the Temple of their Lord with all their difficulties, trials, and sorrows. I saw it full of people dropping in at all hours of the day and night. It was never dark. It was lighted all night and all day. And often and often tired bits of humanity swept in. And I said to them as they passed: "Where are you going?" And they said only one thing: "This is our home. This is where we are going to learn of the love of Jesus Christ. This is the altar of our Lord where all our peace lies. This is St. Martin's."—DICK SHEPPARD (in his first sermon after induction as vicar of St. Martin-in-the-Fields, London.)

YOUTH

The gospel: "And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man."

"Trailing clouds of glory do we come
From God who is our home.
Heaven lies about us in our infancy."

Eternal youth!—to be rather than to do—that is the fine quality of life,—relationships, human and divine, create!

SALVATION

Salvation is always a social process. It comes by human contact. The word must become flesh if it is to save. . . . When a lost soul is infolded in a new society, a true humanity, then there is a chance of salvation. WALTER RAUSCHENBUSH.

WE MUST FACE FACTS!

We Episcopalians are a little fraction of the total Christianity of America. The familiar theories which would call us to look condescendingly down upon the Protestant world are precisely the same in principle as that which we count so fallacious in the position of the great church of Rome. It is of course much easier to hold our theory and forget the facts. But there they are,—bodies of Christians in America, far larger than our small body in numbers, including in their membership a very great proportion of the real theological scholarship of this country and often putting us to shame with the depth and power of their devotion. If we are going to have unity we must be prepared to look them in the face.—BISHOP PARSONS.

THE EARTH KEEPS LENT

The earth keeps Lent in her own reverent way;
She doffs her snowy mantle, and the plains,
The vales and hills, in somber brown and gray,
Are washed with cleansing penitential rains.

The wind-swept trees intone a mournful song,
The swelling brooks repeat their litanies,
And to the seas, as swift they flow along,
The rivers chant their sad antiphonies.

And while in suppliant trust the earth awaits
A benediction, softly there is borne
A radiance pulsing from the wide-flung gates
Of heaven, and lo, it is her Easter morn!

S. S. WALBERT, Kulpsville.

OUR DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENTS AND THEIR DISTRICTS

In 1935 we divided the Parish of St. John the Evangelist into six sections and over each we appointed a member of the Church as District Superintendent.

His duties are multitudinous and important. He has the shepherding of every church family and individual residing in his bailiwick. He must notify headquarters of the moving out of his District any family or individual and give the address of the new place of abode.

Furthermore, he must be on the alert to visit and welcome every family or individual who moves into his district and give the name and address to the Rector.

He must make monthly distributions of the BROADCASTER and COMMUNION CARDS. Also, he must distribute all pastoral letters, such as EASTER AND CHRISTMAS ENVELOPES; notices of special services and the Rector's suggestions on various parochial matters which must be circulated among the faithful.

He gives out the packages of weekly CHURCH OFFERING ENVELOPES to the communicants within his district lines. He is REQUIRED to make collections of FIRESIDE CLUB DUES of all his district members. He is the ONLY person to whom you should trust the return of your CHURCH OFERINGS in case you are unable to attend church services on account of sickness or some other unavoidable reason.

HE is the man to whom you should report any case of need, sickness, accident, birth or death that may occur in your district. In matters of christenings, sick communions, confirmation candidates, weddings or burial services, your quickest and surest way of reaching your Rector is through your DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENT.

Your D. S. is your link between yourself and your Rector. He has the Rector's confidence and he should have yours. In every case you will find that your D. S. is your sympathetic friend and is prepared to do you any service in his power. The more you use him the more will he respond.

And now, in order that you may know in what District you live and who is your Superintendent, we give you the following outline of the parish. If you live within certain boundary lines you will know from the schedule who is your Superintendent.

District

No. 1—Market to Dickinson Streets
Superintendent—Walter Pine, 1242 E. Moyamensing

No. 2—Dickinson to Sigel Streets
Superintendent—William Gilbert, 233 Watkins St.

No. 3—Sigel to Snyder Avenue
Superintendent—John F. Preole, 116 Daly St.

No. 4—Snyder to Daly Street
Superintendent—Frank Drumm, 2128 S. Lee St.

No. 5—Daly to Martin's Village
Superintendent—John Gallagher, 121 Mercy St.

No. 6—West of Broad, North and South
Superintendent—William King, 2955 Gerritt St.

IMPORTANT

Please, in no case, trust any money or vital communications, to others than your DISTRICT SUPER-

INTENDENTS. He, and he only, is the duly accredited representative of your Rector in your District. If you know of any new families, children not baptized, persons not confirmed or folk not members of the FIRESIDE CLUB, give all your information to your D. S. and try to make YOUR district the MOST ACTIVE district in the PARISH.

COOPERATE WITH YOUR D. S.

Your District Superintendent receives no compensation whatever for his services. He is a volunteer worker, the same as your Rector.

THE MITE CHEST

ITS CONCEPTION WAS AN INSPIRATION

We wonder whether the man who conceived the idea of raising offerings for missions by means of the MITE CHEST had any idea of the flood of pennies that would eventually flow into the missionary channels of the Church from that source. From the first cent dropped into the first MITE CHEST, hundreds of thousands of dollars have followed in its wake.

THE PENNIES OF THE MITE CHEST have done deeds of MIGHT. They have carried the Bible and the Church to lands beyond the borderland of Christianity. They have converted thousands from ignorance and idolatry to a true knowledge of the love of Jesus Christ. They have built missions and churches and hospitals and schools. They have sent priests, lay brothers, doctors, teachers, nurses and mechanical experts to the domestic and foreign and negro missions of the world. They have penetrated every land of heathendom with the light of true civilization. All these and more things have been done by means of the MIGHTY MITE.

The MITE CHEST of your boy or girl is a unit in this MITE-Y Army that is so aggressively extending the frontiers of God's Kingdom. You MUST teach your boy or girl THE BIG SIZE OF A CENT when it comes to getting the pennies together in one MITE CHEST and what GOOD they can do with a FULL MITE CHEST.

On the Sunday before Ash Wednesday we are going to distribute MITE CHESTS to ALL our Officers, Teachers, Scholars and friends and we want YOU to do your bit in getting them filled so full that they cannot hold another mite.

Put the MITE CHEST in a MITE-Y conspicuous place in the house so that nobody will be able to overlook or ignore it.

Each MITE CHEST will hold about 200 pennies. 100 Mite Chests will return $200.00 if YOU HELP.

HOW THE LENTEN OFFERING HELPS THE PARISH OF ST. JOHN'S! IT PAYS OUR ASSESSMENT OF NEARLY $1000.00 TO THE DIOCESE AND WIPES OUT ENTIRELY THAT PAROCHIAL DEBT.

The name of every scholar returning a FULL MITE CHEST will be published in the Broadcaster.

GIVE THANKS WITH A COPPER

For several years we have followed the custom every Lenten Season of distributing special THANK OFFERING BOXES to communicants of the parish who are so deeply conscious of God's Providence that they welcome this simple means of giving their thanks to Him in a material way, 'though it only be a copper cent.

The beautiful cardboard bank is placed upon the dinner table, so that when you sit down to eat the food God gives you, it will be there and ready to receive your THANK OFFERING. We have always liked to have our friends ASK for one. It makes their offerings wholly voluntary instead of having you give because of persuasion from us. It is an act of gratitude expressed in a material offering. One year these VOLUNTEER THANK OFFERING CHESTS brought in over $100.00 for missions and incidentally aided us that much to meet our apportionment to the Diocese.

Boxes may be procured from Miss Nuttall, Parish Visitor; Walter Pine, Sexton, or from the Rector.

The name and address of all applicants will be taken and published in the BROADCASTER issued after Easter.

REVIVAL SEASON

A FAMILIAR EXPRESSION AMONG OUR SISTER DENOMINATIONS

Revival Season to a Methodist means a special season for holding special services for the special purpose of arousing the individual's interest in his moral and spiritual progress—especially if he is a sinner. In fact, all through the Revival Season, emphasis is laid upon the real need of conversion. A MAN MUST TURN FROM HIS SINS TO BE SAVED. It is a season in which the interests of the offender against God are considered rather than it being a time for self-examination of the Faithful. For instance, LENTEN SEASON of the Church is the time of seclusion and meditation of such christians who are interested in their PERSONAL spiritual affairs.

It is curious how the Revivalist and the observer of Lent differ in this respect. Both agree on the need of a special season for repentance—only the REVIVALIST seems to ignore the need of his personal spiritual development and lends his time and energies in converting his sinning or unbelieving brother. While the Lentenist seems to emphasize the need of personal self-examination and spiritual adjustment and ignore the spiritual state of the sinner.

It seems scarcely fair to say it, but the REVIVALIST seems to assume his personal righteousness as sufficient and gives his attention to developing righteousness in others less fortunate. While the LENTENIST seems to consider his personal righteousness, the all important factor in his life—even to the exclusion of an interest into his brother's welfare.

It seems to the writer that both the REVIVAL-

IST and the LENTENIST are wrong. The REVIVALIST ought to give special thought and care to his own spiritual state before he constitutes himself an evangel to the unchurched. On the other hand, the LENTENIST ought to give more thought to the condition of the sinner and not spend all the precious moments of Lent on his own spiritual improvement.

Lenten Season is a wonderful opportunity to carry on in the matter of bringing wanderers into the Kingdom of God. I've often thought it would be fine if all our Bishops would devise some method by which mass confirmation services could be arranged right after the Easter Festival; an occasion when all those CONVERTED from a career of sin or unbelief by the many parishes and individual church members during the Holy Season of Lent and presented as their living offerings to God as their sacrifice of love for His mercy and His grace.

It would be something to boast about if we LENTENISTS could add to the church annually men, women and children who had been persuaded to drop their spiritual indifference and be fired with an enthusiasm for holy things.

Dear Parishioner:

We are now in our LENTEN SEASON—the REVIVAL SEASON of our church. Do you not think that NOW is the time "to seek and to save"? We are living in a changed atmosphere. Men's minds and hearts are wide awake and on the alert. A WORD SPOKEN NOW will fall on listening ears. Do not stay forever dumb but speak the word that will inspire the chained spirit of some indifferent soul to strain himself free from his bondage and go his way exalting in that freedom.

YOU MUST KNOW some person who SHOULD be kneeling before the Altar of our Christ in devotion but has not yet surrendered. Why do you hesitate to speak? His Salvation will multiply your joy a thousandfold and he will always think of you as GOD'S APPOINTED EVANGEL to bring him to the foot of the throne.

Use your Lenten Season in seeking for souls and when Easter comes you will be rich in offerings of gratitude to your Risen Lord.

WORK TO DO IN LENT

There are two sides to the Lenten Season, each of which is just the reverse side of the other and both of them are most important to the christian who would make the most of the most spiritually refreshing season of the church year. The one side is the—

SENTIMENTAL SIDE

That is the side which teaches us through contemplation and prayer the exalted beauty of a christian experience. It reveals to us how desirable are the virtues of love, hope and charity. It shows by contrast how much more beautiful is good than evil. It stirs in us the dormant love of the spiritual life and awakes in our hearts the determination to cast out the evil and embrace the good. With that decision fixed and put into execution we soon apprehend the value of the sentimental side of Lent and our lives are profoundly changed by that knowledge. The other side is the—

PRACTICAL SIDE

An intelligent use of Lent does not mean only a season of rapt contemplation, in which one dreams beautiful dreams and sees stirring visions. It is just as much a period of activity. It is a growing wish and determination TO EXERCISE, as well as TO BE STILL. This exercise must be well thought, well planned and well used if it is to make us strong.

What must I do?

How must I do it?

How much strength and time and means must I give to it?

These are the leading questions one must answer.

WHAT MUST I DO?

is answered by Jesus Christ himself in His Great Commission to all disciples—"Go"—"Teach." Through contemplation and prayer you have dreamed your dream. You have seen your vision. Now go out in the dark places and flash the light of the Gospel into every nook and corner of your little world so that men seeking the way out of sin will, through your active obedience, find it and return to the Father's House repentent and happy prodigal sons who have too long wasted the gifts of heaven.

HOW MUST I DO IT?

I must imitate the Christ and employ His methods of service. He saved not Himself that He might spend all He had on those who needed so much. It is true we can never give as much nor give it as unselfishly as did He. Our very best will be but a pale imitation of His perfect way. But He who blessed the increase of the loaves will in like manner enlarge our feeble efforts to miraculous proportions. If we employ our Lenten Season in giving OURSELVES, our TIME, our MONEY in prodigal measure at home and to the missions of the Church of Jesus Christ, our joy will be great in proportion to our giving.

HOW MUCH STRENGTH AND TIME AND MEANS MUST I GIVE?

Jesus Christ sacrificed everything. He consented to humble himself and leave His exalted place at the right hand of God and adopt the human flesh and weakness of mortal man that he might be weak where man is weak. That He might be tempted as he is tempted. That He might be misunderstood and hated as other men. That He might be ruthlessly destroyed and crucified as every man of principle is crucified. That through these means and experiences He could savor the bitterness of mortal life and by hard, yet mortal struggle, show man the way out of darkness and sin into the light and righteousness of the Kingdom of God.

My brother, you need not be a hero to follow your Divine Leader. The meanest, the most selfish, the most cowardly, can win through if he goes through his revival season of Lent and eventually, kneeling at the foot of the Cross, casts his burden down as a pledge to the Hero of Calvary that these you leave here to go forth and win Heaven for others.

"BELIEVE IT OR NOT"

Here's one that will out-rip Ripley. It is a "believe-it-or-not" true story that can be vouched for by no less a person than one of our own DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENTS.

It seems that not so very long ago, one Saturday night, he retired to his virtuous couch all unconscious that with the early morning light of the peaceful Sabbath, would come to him an experience too startling and too unbelievable to even form the filaments of a dream. In that languorous Sunday hour when the world is just becoming conscious that it is the dawn of a new day of rest, suddenly there was a sharp buzzing of his doorbell. Not a little startled and wondering at the cause for so early a summons he tumbled out of his warm and comfy bed, stuck his touseled head out the window and shouted, "What's up?"

The ringer of the bell could have been sarcastic and shouted back, "You are!" But he didn't. He just told the DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENT that he wanted him to stop at his home on his way to church. It was a matter of importance!

Wonderingly the DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENT gave assurance he would do just that little thing, slammed down the window and went back to bed.

However, he remembered his promise, and that morning, on his way to church, he stopped at the home of his early caller and had a most unbelievable and startling experience; an experience that has so powerfully exemplified the innate goodness of human nature, that our DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENT has been converted and swears that come what may, in the future he will be an optimist to the day of his translation from earth to his future abode.

He tells us that after he had entered the home of his brother parishioner this same brother parishioner picked up a bag and told the District Superintendent to take it to church. It contained the answer of the said brother parishioner to the Rector's letter.

In a dazed condition the DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENT took the bag, went to church and then took a peep at its contents. And what do you suppose was in it?

Of course you cannot guess!

It really and truly DID contain ALL THE UNPAID CHURCH ENVELOPES OF THAT CONSCIENTIOUS AND HONORABLE AFOREMENTIONED BROTHER PARISHIONER. He evidently is one of those rare fellows who always remembers his obligations to God and His Church and is so honest that he feels the urge to pay off those obligations at the first opportunity.

Oh that other members of our Parish would find this an instance worthy of emulation and that they too would do likewise!

So you see, there ARE worthy christians in the land after all.

IT'S THERE— EVEN IF YOU DO NOT SEE IT

Suppose, after smoking all the cigarettes, you were to glance in the empty paper container what would you see?

Did you say nothing

Well, you are very wrong.

As a matter of fact you will see MONEY in every empty case if you look hard enough.

Now if you would dig out that money, bundle it up and bring it to the church, you would help raise funds for missions and for other objects of expense.

If your eyes are too weak to see the money we speak of, we will give you a hint.

Every cigarette packet contains a small sheet of tinfoil. That is your money! Smelter firms pay good prices for it. Many hospitals get big incomes from it. And there is no reason why we shouldn't turn our tin foil into cash. Other things besides cigarettes come wrapped in tinfoil—all sorts of delicatessen and cheese. Sometimes flowers come from the florist with a sheet of the metal wrapped around the stems. If every member of the parish begins to save the tinfoil that passes through his hands, from cigarettes to cheese and will turn it over to Walter Pine, we will soon turn it into cash for the church.

Don't throw money away.

Save, and give it to the church.

AN APPRECIATION

The teachers of the Intermediate Department of the Sunday School, Mrs. John J. Nelson and Mr. Vernon Matthews, wish to express their sincere appreciation to the many faithful friends and well wishers who not only donated prizes for the Radio Party but also attended on such a stormy evening. We are happy to announce the occasion was a social and financial success.

BROADCASTING FROM STATION S. T. J. C.

LENT is not the BATH TUB season for soiled Christians. It is the REVIVAL season for all mankind.

* * * *

LENT is the GUNNING SEASON of the Church. Every good christian will be out hunting for souls.

* * * *

LENT is YOUR opportunity to get that CANDIDATE FOR CONFIRMATION. He's easy to approach because there seems to be so much spiritual urge all about him.

* * * *

LENT is the time to invite your NON-CHURCH FRIEND to come to the special services and hear our GUEST PREACHERS. A word may be said in a sermon that, like a percussion cap, may blast him out of his indifference and right into the Kingdom.

* * * *

LENT is a time you want to end with a pure heart and full hands. Full of offerings for the Altar of the Lord.

* * * *

LENT is the season to acquire means, by fasting and sacrifice, to SPREAD THE GOSPEL of Jesus Christ among those who know him not.

* * * *

LENT is your opportunity to help raise that $1,000.00 for our SUNDAY SCHOOL LENTEN OFFERING.

* * * *

LENT IS THE MOST IMPORTANT PERIOD OF THE WHOLE CHURCH YEAR. It is full of inspiration and opportunity.

QUESTION BOX

Beginning with the next issue of the BROADCASTER we will publish a QUESTION BOX for the benefit of Parishioners who are seeking information upon subjects pertaining to the Christian Faith and Church History. The question and answer will be published together, except in cases where research is necessary, in which event the answer will be published in a later edition.

We do not guarantee to answer every question put to us. In such case we will publish the question and ask our readers to supply the answer, if they can, which will be published in due time.

Also we refuse to waste our time over catch questions on the grounds that fools can ask questions the wise cannot answer.

If the QUESTION BOX is operated in the spirit of sincerity and reasonableness it ought to be a source of real satisfaction to all. We would suggest also to mail us subjects or texts you would like to have discussed from the pulpit. Such requests can be included in our QUESTION BOX.

AN APPRECIATION

To my many friends in the Parish who have so kindly remembered me during my recent illness with prayers, cards, visits, flowers, messages, etc., I wish to express my deep appreciation and thanks and to assure them that their interest has been a great help in my recovery.

M. BEATRICE FISHER.

VALUE RECEIVED!

Dad criticized the sermon. Mother thought the organist made a lot of mistakes. Sister didn't like the choir's singing. But they all shut up when little Billy chipped in with the remark: "I think it was a darn good show for a nickel."

VERY IMPORTANT

THIS CONCERNS EVERY MEMBER OF THE PARISH

The Parish Committee is dissatisfied with the very small financial returns from social affairs given for the purpose of raising funds for parochial and diocesan support. On certain occasions there seems to be a crowd present but the financial turnover is so ridiculously small that when the cost of light and heat is deducted, there is scarcely any balance left. Naturally, this state of affairs creates suspicion. Are those in charge careless in making their collection for tickets sold and do they wait so long in making collections that they forget who owes? Reports from sale of tickets, sale of refreshments and cash admissions at the door, must be made promptly and all tickets of admission received at the door MUST be surrendered along with the receipts.

Also, the number of unsold tickets must be reported and, if possible, returned separately from the sold tickets.

By a resolution recently passed at its regular meeting the PARISH COMMITTEE requires that returns from every money affair MUST BE MADE WITHIN TWO WEEKS AFTER IT IS GIVEN.

The form we submit is both simple and comprehensive; but, if for any reason, you find it hard to fill in, we have asked either Vernon Matthews, William MacVaugh or William Shives to assist you. Your Rector always stands ready to assist, too.

In the past the parish has been cheated out of Hundreds of dollars by the loose way returns are made. We cannot afford to allow such careless methods of money raising to continue.

THE APOSTLES' CREED

The Apostles' Creed receives its name from the fact that it is derived from the teaching of the Apostles. It contains the main truths which they preached to the world, speaking only those things which they had seen and heard, while they followed the LORD JESUS.

The Church has given considerable prominence to the Apostles' Creed. It is printed in the Book of Common Prayer seven times. Speaking of this Creed, Bishop Forbes writes: "From the days of S. Paul to this, these articles have been the sum and substance of Christianity. Nothing less than that is sufficient. Nothing more than that is of absolute necessity to salvation. When a child is baptized, the Church demands no more of him, or of his Sponsors than an assent to the Apostles' Creed—and when the Christian soul is going out of the world to meet its Judge, it is in the terms of the Creed that the dying man is interrogated."

A MODEL CHURCH

Is there one such on earth? If so, what are its characteristics? We think there is a record of such a church in the New Testament. It is not a perfect model, but it is a model nevertheless. An account of this church can be found in Acts ii. 41-47. It will repay any minister or pastor to make a thorough study of the constituent elements of that church. In the first place, according to apostolic characterization, it was a teachable and obedient church. "Then they that gladly received His word were baptized." Here we have indoctrination in God's Word, then a submission to an ordinance of God's Church. The doctrines of Christ need to be incorporated in the hearts and lives of Church members. The sacraments of this church were few and simple, and one of them was water baptism, as a visible sign of the washing and cleansing of the soul from sin by the power of grace divine. The model church indoctrinates and observes her ordinances gladly and faithfully. There is no merit in such observance, but obedience is manifest.

Then this was a fruitful church. "And the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls." Indoctrination, ceremonial observance in spirit and in truth, are vitally connected with the rescue of souls. This church replenished itself, in doctrinal grace, in sacramental blessings, and in the multiplicity of members. A thoroughly indoctrinated and obedient church will extend the borders of its inheritance and gain an increased number of adherents. This was a healthy revival, produced by God-appointed and divinely recognized and blessed means and instrumentalities.

Again, this was a praying church. "And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread and in prayers." They clung to Christian doctrine, and fellowship together, cultivating a social spirit, and were devout, fervent and prevalent in prayer. Praying brings spiritual life into a church, and at the same time may reveal spirituality among believers. This church continued steadfastly in four things—in indoctrination, in fellowship, in bread-breaking and in prayers. Beautiful characteristics of any local church.

Furthermore, in this model church was manifested the Spirit's presence in wonder-working power. "And fear came upon every soul, and many wonders and signs were done by the apostles." Marvellous works were wrought by the Spirit through the Apostles, as leaders of the Church. The previously mentioned characteristics prepared the way for the miracle-working power of the Spirit. It is a legitimate result of an adequate cause. It was a very harmonious church. "And all that believed were together, and had all things common." This denotes simplicity and unity, in feeling, in purpose, in love, in tender consideration. The desire of each merged into the desire of the other. They were of one heart and of one soul, knit together in a common bond of brotherly love. Not only was there no division manifest among them, but there was manifest the most unselfish interest, which was both mutual and continuous. It was a philanthropic, benevolent and working church. "And sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need." This was altruism pure and simple. There was no affection connected with it whatsoever.

This was no doubt an excellent arrangement for them to strengthen the internal and external organization, and make it effective among the people. The spirit of helpfulness and of philanthropic and benevolent concern for all men should be cultivated and practised in every church. If more of this kind of work were done by the Church, many secular organizations would not exist, and social conditions would be materially changed, and wage-earners would not be so restive. Christians should not only be burden-bearers, but also burden-sharers and burden-lifters. This apostolic organization was also a faithful, sociable and joyous church. "And they, continuing daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread from house to house, did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart." Their worship was simple, hearty, devout and united. Their sociability and hospitality were unaffected, mutually enjoyable, and were prompted by singleness of heart. Their joy was spontaneous and precious. Lastly, it was an influential and growing church. "Praising God, and having favor with all the people. And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved." What a joy this church must have been to God!

AT CALVARY

The dome of sky a Stygian void
As if there'd been no sun to set,
Outlined against this angry ceiling rose
A Cross:—symbolic of a felon—yet
Its rugged arms and staff were shod
With mankind's hope—The Son of God.

On either side a thief impaled
On smaller structures, groaned in pain.
But lo! This greater rack held fast
The One beyond mere Pilate's reign:
The One Whose purpose was to live
Not to condemn, but to forgive.

Then freed the clouds of fury pent
When soldiers speared His tortured side;
And there, midst lightning, gall and thieves,
As mortal man, The Christus died
In prayerful hope His Father would
Forgive them who had judged the rood.

Had not He risen from the tomb,
Had not He been The Father's Own,
A Christian Faith could still have sprung
From this one day of His, alone.
Compassion such as His must be Remembered through Eternity.

Jos. R. Cushing.

EASTER AT ST. JOHN'S

THE DAY STARTED STORMY AND ENDED CLEAR

B-r-r-r-r! It was not only snowing, but it was cold. It didn't look at all like one would expect of the weather on Easter day. We noticed, however, that it takes more than the threat of a storm and the chill of the temperature to weaken the heart of the fair. They were out in all their finest and flouted their Easter hats, etc., in the very teeth of the old grouch of a weather man. Not so with us mere males. We poked our noses out the door, took a squint at the sky and said the old suit for us this day.

How beautiful and cheerful was the inside of old St. John's Church in comparison to the weather outside. The altar and chancel were lovely in white lilies and green palms. Besides, Walter had the Church cozy and warm so that one could forget the weather outside and enjoy the beauty and warmth inside.

The 6:30 Communion was well attended. 236 communicants received. The choir, as usual, rendered the musical part of the service very effectively.

At the 10:45 celebration, though only 196 persons received, the congregation was much larger than that of the early service. The total number of communicants receiving was 432. Though the number is large, it would have been greater were it not for the many cases of illness among our parishioners. The number of our private Easter communions will perhaps be larger than that of many years. The offering amounted to about $400.00, which is a little less than last year. This is easily accounted for by the fact that many of our families lack employment and are unable to "do their bit" towards supporting the church. It was a splendid opportunity for the more fortunate to loosen up and come to the financial relief of the parish. Some did in a most generous manner but we could not help feeling that many more could have done so without the slightest inconvenience to themselves or family.

We want to express our personal appreciation to the members of both the Senior and Junior Choirs for the way they helped to add beauty to both services.

In the afternoon we got off on a late start. We had so much detail to demand our time and attention in gathering in and counting the Lenten Offering that somehow we could not get started. At last, about 15 minutes behind time, we opened with an Easter Hymn. Immediately following the hymn we called for the class offerings, appointed our auditing committee who took the offering down stairs and began to count it.

While they were so doing, we began our regular Easter afternoon service by singing another hymn, repeating the Creed, the Lord's Prayer and the Easter Collects, closing with II Cor., after which we read the Gospel lesson for Easter day. After another Hymn we awarded the buttons and pins for regular attendance at the services during Lent. Then we distributed chocolate eggs and Easter cards to the scholars of the school.

By the time we reached the end of our awards the Committee was prepared to make their report, which was as follows:

Men's Bible Class	$166.44
Women's Bible Class	81.49
Mary West	33.06

Thomas Dean	9.11
Emma Kaiser	8.80
Naomi Davis	40.05
Miss Fisher	9.00
Myrtle Dean	37.70
Viola Young	32.08
Joseph Robins	13.86
Florence Armstrong	6.09
Mrs. Howard Miller	56.13
Intermediate	140.20
Kindergarten	19.29
Sunday School	100.00
Specials	250.00
Loose Offering	3.20

The concluding feature of our afternoon service was the distribution of the plants and altar flowers among the sick of the parish.

Taking it all in all it was a most satisfactory day. We have done better financially in past years, but considering the lack of employment and so many of our families forced on relief, we feel that what we did this year is in reality far in excess of anything we did in previous years. Not only have we succeeded in keeping out of debt, but we have more than raised our quota for missions and diocesan expenses.

THE LENTEN GRACE BOXES

We wish to make special mention of the group of parishioners who helped boost our Lenten offering by turning in their Grace Offering boxes on Easter day. Some of them contained as much as $7.00, which gives one an idea of just how splendid was this volunteer offering. And when we say "volunteer offerings" we mean just that.

Perhaps it is well to explain what we mean. Every year, just before Ash Wednesday, we announce that we have ready for distribution coin boxes which we call Grace Offering Boxes. We explain that the boxes are to be placed upon the table and as each person leaves the table after meals he drops a small coin in the box as his Grace or Thanksgiving to God for the meal just partaken. Of course, this much of the idea is not original. Such a custom was established by others than ourselves years ago. The only thing that might be called original in our method is we refuse absolutely to even offer a Grace Box to anybody. We make the simple announcement that we have such boxes but it would be necessary to make personal application in order to get one. Our idea being that the Grace Box holders must WANT them. We feel that only in this way can they be strictly voluntary contributions to our Easter Offering.

We are proud to publish the list of Grace Box holders, who asked for them because they wanted to show in a material way that they are indeed thankful for God's Providence, a blessing which so many of us take for granted and never even say "Grace" at meal time. The list of Grace Box holders is:

CONFIRMATION—MAY 28th

Sunday, May 28th (Whitsunday), Bishop Taitt will make his annual visitation at 8 P. M. for the purpose of administering the Rite of Confirmation.

We have been preparing for his visit for several weeks and we hope to have a representative class to offer upon the occasion. Our success will depend largely upon the co-operation of the parish organizations and individuals in a united effort to gather candidates for the class.

The Brotherhood of St. Andrew chapter has been working hard to get recruits and its members have accomplished something by their hard work. The list of names of prospective candidates they have given the Rector would indicate that we will have a class, the size and personnel of which will be as good as the best we have ever presented. Now if that list of names will only stay "put" until the night of the Confirmation all will be well. Too often, however, some of the candidates get teetering between I will and I won't and before they are through making up their minds the date of the Confirmation has slipped away.

OUR HAPPY HUNTING GROUND

Southwark is our jungle. Here there are lacking neither material nor opportunity. South Philadelphia needs the Church of Jesus Christ as much as any other part of the city. Our problem is the same as that expressed by our Lord when he said the "harvest is abundant but the laborers are few."

In a recent report on crime conditions in Philadelphia a certain fact finding society attributed the major portion of criminal acts in the city to lawlessness in South Philadelphia. Personally we deny the charge emphatically. We who live in Germantown for instance have long learned we are not abiding in the Garden of Eden.

No, we are not much if any worse than any other section of Philadelphia. But we have enough bad manners and bad actions to make us feel ashamed of ourselves and wish we could do something about it.

Well, why not follow the lead of the Brotherhood. It seems that their job and our job is to round up and gather into our Church the best element of the Parish—present such persons for Confirmation, then combine our forces and fight with all our might for the destruction of evil in Southwark.

Let's make people stop calling us names by making them see our door step has been scrubbed and now much cleaner than theirs.

STRONG CHURCHES MAKE WEAK SINNERS

The Church and the Devil are bad neighbors. Every law abiding man and woman, boy and girl of the community—especially those who have not as yet been Confirmed—and thereby create a strong spiritual center round which to rally the righteous and overthrow sin.

HO! FOR RECRUITS!!

The Church is shouting for recruits. Every right thinking and decent person ought to come out now and volunteer for service. With a little prayer, a little intensive training in right thinking and exercise in obedience to the commands of the King and you will be prepared to go out and fight and win victories and bring captives home to God.

TRAIN YOUR CHILDREN

Teach them the language of prayer, of clean Christian habits, of pure thoughts, of the Cardinal Christian virtues—Faith, hope and charity. Then set them to work before they reach their teens to doing chores of obedience, love and service. Enroll them early in the church. Quit thinking about a child being "too young" to be confirmed. The sooner they enlist the more experienced Christian soldiers will they be.

WHO IS TOO YOUNG TO BE A CHRISTIAN?

For several years the writer was Chaplain of the Eastern State Penitentiary. Through his hands passed every convict sent to that institution. His duty was to get a "slant" on the moral and spiritual concepts of the convicts. Invariably he asked each condemned man in turn the question—What started you in your career of crime? Believe it or not—but in a big majority of cases the answer was—my mother and father never bothered about sending me to church when I was a boy.

Evidently such parents felt that their boy was too young for the church but not too young for the world, the flesh and the devil. Well it is natural for a child to cling to the atmosphere and companions of his youth. If he lives in the world he will naturally be worldly—he knows no other existence. If he is trained in the church he may not be a saint, but he will at least know the difference between good and evil and in most cases his conscience will dictate that he choose the good.

RIGHTEOUSNESS IS NOT ACQUIRED BY AGE.

IT IS THE PURE PRECIOUS JEWEL WHICH EVERY LITTLE CHILD RECEIVES AS HIS BIRTHRIGHT.

HE SHOULD BE TAUGHT FROM INFANCY ITS VALUE, AND TRAINED HOW TO ADD TO ITS LUSTER AND BEAUTY BY OBEDIENCE AND LOVE.

CONFIRMATION INSTRUCTION

As our Confirmation Service is so close to Easter this year, we are pressed for time to instruct our candidate as carefully as in past years. In order to overcome the handicap we have arranged a series of instructions which we hope will give us time and opportunity for proper instruction without trespassing too much upon the interests of our prospects.

We are arranging the following schedule:

Friday afternoons at 4 o'clock, classes for children of school age and over.

Sunday 10:45, Morning service and talks on the fundamentals of our Faith. These will take the place of the sermon.

Sunday 2:30—Intermediate Department. Instructions in the Catechism—stressing the Creed, the Lord's Prayer, the Ten Commandments and the Sacraments of Baptism and Holy Communion.

Sunday 2:30—Main School—Seminar on the rites of the Church and the contents of the Book of Common Prayer.

If we are able to carry this schedule through we will present a well trained class when the time comes.

Now your part in this program is to bring as many confirmation prospects as you can possibly get to any or all of these periods.

If you know of any prospect who needs a prayer book tell the Rector.

If you know that certain candidates are hesitating because they do not have proper clothing report them to the Parish Visitor.

The Friday afternoon class begins April 21st.

THE PARISH CARD PARTY

Friday, April 28th, we are giving a Parish Card Party, the proceeds from which is to go towards building up the finances of the Church. We have reached an alarming "low" in our treasury and we dare not let our account sink any lower. We have been desperately fighting off a financial crisis all year. This crisis is caused by the inexplicable indifference of more than seven hundred members who will not contribute a cent towards the support of the parish. Hundreds of holders of Church Envelopes have not given one cent towards our current expenses this year. A big percentage of these non-givers cannot truthfully claim they cannot afford to give, because we positively know their income is sufficient to enable them to support their families, spend a good sum on luxuries and moving pictures, suppers and entertainments, and have enough left over to meet their church obligations if they would.

Another cause for this unsatisfactory condition is the startling drop in our Easter Offering. 500 CHURCH MEMBERS failed to turn in their Easter Envelopes. We are $300.00 short of our usual Easter offering. That deficit is a blow we cannot possibly lighten by the proceeds of one card party, but we are driven to raising church funds in every way possible to meet this shrinkage.

Again, we are on the edge of vacation season. You will spend your money on trips and living in hotels at the shore, in the mountains and in the country. This will jack up your budget sky high and you will pay cash to the flint faced pleasure dispenser whose business is to separate you from your little bank roll. In the meantime your Church is sweating in the heart of a sweltering city trying to pay its bills out of a treasury in which you forgot to deposit your Offerings to the Lord.

Our sexton must wait for his summer salary because we have no funds to pay his just claims. Would YOU work for anybody who would so indifferently treat your wage claims.

Our Parish Visitor must wait for her pitifully small recompense because YOU have neglected your obligations and have lapsed in your Church offerings. Would you work for next to nothing and then wait for that little because your boss wanted to spend your money on having fun?

Well, these are some of our reasons for having a Card Party. And these are the reasons too you are asked to patronize it and make it a success. If you are one of the few who have met their obligations believe me this article is not for you to read. It is for the man who is neglecting his obligation.

However, we hope you will stand by and be present at our Card Party. You have always been our friend in need.

Of course there will be many absent because they are unemployed and are having a hard struggle for a bare existence. We cannot—and do not—expect them to spend their little on our card party.

OUR 27th ANNIVERSARY

It has always been our custom to have our Anniversary on the same Sunday the Bishop comes for Confirmation. Heretofore he has appointed Trinity Sunday or the first Sunday after Trinity for his visit. This year, however, he has chosen Whitsunday and we decided to move our Anniversary up one week so that we can continue to have both events on the same day.

In the morning we will have the Celebration of the Holy Communion and Sermon. In the afternoon we hope to have a special surprise program and, of course, in the evening we will have our Bishop and Confirmation Service.

We hope sincerely to have a regular home coming of all the old timers. We will not have the usual anniversary dinner and supper, however, because it is so much trouble and expense and those who do the work do not get a chance to enjoy the occasion. We have noticed also that most of the congregation prefer to go home at noon and return later. The hours of service will be the regular schedule—Celebration of the Holy Communion, 10:45 A. M. Special surprise service, 2.30 P. M. Confirmation, 8 P. M.

We hope every candidate will be present by 7:30 P. M., at the latest, so that we will be ready to start the service promptly.

Please scatter the news abroad and aid us to get a good crowd of St. Johnites out for the occasion.

WE NEED A SIGN

We were advised to remove the big illuminated sign above the church door because it was a menace. It had hung there so many years that all the metal work had become corroded by exposure to the weather and the staples which supported it were greatly weakened. In time we would have had a serious accident.

However, the necessity of removing it leaves us without a sign and that is not good, for several reasons. One important being that the front of the Church being brown stone presents a dark and gloomy appearance and needs lighting up. Another being that it is important to have some means of advertising the days and hours of our services, and also to inform the public of important events about to take place in the Parish.

We are shopping around now to learn how much it would cost to get a new one. We are agreed that we do not need a big clumsy sign like the one we took down. We need one that is of a good size, illuminated, of shatter proof glass and a changeable alphabet and placed on the wall of the church in a prominent position. The sign we have in mind will cost about $150.00.

At present our treasury will not stand the withdrawal of any such amount. We are considering the proposal to run a few social affairs, after the Parish card party is out of our way, and raise the funds in that way. This proposition ought to be attractive to all the Parish organizations, for it would be a means of hitting the public in the eye every time any organization needs to advertise. By means of it we could advertise our Bazaars, basket ball engagements, dates of special services and speakers, excursion dates, suppers, dances, etc., etc., most effectively. The sign we have under consideration is not only big but beautiful and when lighted on a dark night it will be a big improvement of the external appearance of the Church. If YOU know how really valuable a church sign is to a church YOU might help raise the funds by sending the Rector a cash subscription.

Perhaps somebody would like to buy the sign as a memorial. It would be cheap and useful and a memorial the public would look at every day in the year.

WHY I MUST GO TO CHURCH

1. To get help, inspiration and strength for each day. Life is a continual struggle between light and darkness, between Christ and evil. Christ is conquering and His Ideals are being established throughout the world. Progress depends on each individual striving for Christian Ideals.
2. To worship the Lord, for the whole Bible inculcates worshipping Him. All Churches worship in many different ways but they worship.
3. To be an example. Actions speak louder than words. The Church is the home of liberty, progress, education, health, ideals and salvation. I must show where I stand.
4. To give the Lord my richest offering—a grateful heart for all His blessings. I surrender to Him.
5. To learn about God, for soon I must meet Him in the Judgment. I want to learn His will and plan of salvation. In the world I hear about this life and the sins of humanity but in Church I hear about practical Christian living and my heavenly home.
6. I am a thinking, reasoning being. The Church brings me in contact with the Lord Jesus producing happiness and contentment ending in immortal glory.
7. I will make no excuses. Excuses are heard. "I am better than the people who go to church" and "I do not learn anything." Too often indifference, pleasure and worldly minds are the real reasons. I will be loyal to Christ and I must go to Church.

THE WORKER'S PRAYER

O Lord Jesus, heal and inspire me
To serve Thee as I ought;
To know Thy word and make it known;
To pray and heal and lead
And love because the world needs love;
To give and not count the cost,
To fight and never heed the wounds;
To toil and not to ask for any reward
Save that of knowing "I did Thy will."

F. S. EASTMAN, St. Philip's Society

WHAT THINK YE OF CHRIST?

The Lord Jesus challenges the attention of the world and meets the needs of everyone.

To the Artist He is the One Altogether Lovely.

To the Architect He is the Chief Corner Stone.

To the Astronomer He is the Sun of Righteousness.

To the Baker He is the Living Bread.

To the Banker He is the Hidden Treasure.

To the Biologist He is the Life.

To the Builder He is the Sure Foundation.

To the Carpenter He is the Door.

To the Doctor He is the Great Physician.

To the Educator He is the Great Teacher.

To the Engineer He is the New and Living Way.

To the Farmer He is the Sower and Lord of the Harvest.

To the Florist He is the Lily of the Valley.

To the Geologist He is the Rock of Ages.

To the Horticulturist He is the True Vine.

To the Judge He is the Righteous Judge of Men.

To the Jeweler He is the Pearl of Great Price.

To the Lawyer He is the Advocate and Law-giver.

To the Newspaper-men He is the Good Tidings of Great Joy.

To the Oculist He is the Light of the Eyes

To the Philanthropist He is the Unspeakable Gift.

To the Preacher He is the Word of God.

To the Sculpter He is the Living Stone.

To the Servant He is the Good Master.

To the Statesman He is the Desire of all Nations.

To the Student He is the Incarnate Truth.

To the Theologian He is the Author and Finisher of our Faith.

To the Toiler He is the Giver of Rest.

To the Sinner He is the Lamb of God that taketh away the Sin of the World.

To the Christian He is the Living One, Saviour and Lord.

What is Jesus Christ to me?

OUR EASTER OFFERINGS

The Easter Offering of the Church is one of the two very important offerings of the year, the other being Christmas. Their importance is due to the fact that the Parish looks forward to them to aid in paying its current expenses. If the Offering is big the Treasurer has few worries. If it is small then trouble begins. The expenses of the Church run right along but the income is inadequate. One of the results is we are not able to pay the salaries and wages we must employ to do the work. The organist, the Parish Visitor and the Sexton must be paid for their work the same as you must be paid for your job. If your boss walked out on you on pay day you would not go on a strike only, but you would sue him for your wages. Yet, YOU, who are employers of your organist, your parish visitor and your sexton—walk out on them and "get mad" if we remind you we need money to pay these employees of yours. Do you know what your Union would do to you if THEY were members of your Union? It would demand that you pay those employees at once—or else. . . .

Let me ask you—why should you have your wages paid when you will not pay the wages of those who work for you?

We want you to examine this list of Easter Offerings with that question in your mind and see if your name is missing, and if it is why is it?

We do not have salaries and wages only to pay. We have bills for gas, coal, electricity, plumbing, repairs of the Parish House and church, repairs of furniture, window glass, prayer books, hymnals, Sunday School supplies, vestments, altar linens, bread and wine, insurance, organ repairs, music, etc., etc., etc.

Did you ever think to ask yourself the question how these bills are paid Did it ever occur to you that if every member of the Parish was a non-paying member what would become of us. Did it ever occur to you that if all the non-paying members would only reform and become paying members what a load of care and worry and nervous strain you would lift from the shoulders of your executives who, for neither salary nor compensation, are striving to their utmost to preserve for you a place of worship for the good of your souls.

We earnestly wish all non subscribing members of our Parish would see our difficulty. We are sure that actuated by the spirit of fair play they would shed their indifference, put their shoulders to the wheel of our worries and help us out of the mire.

Of course we know many of our members are unemployed and cannot contribute even the "Widow's Mite." We do not look to them for aid. But we do feel that every man and woman, boy and girl, who can but will not make their Offerings to the church need our earnest prayers that God will convert them and cause them to see their duty and give them the desire to perform that duty.

If your E. O. is still missing put it in any old envelope and bring it to the church. YOU CANNOT AFFORD TO CHEAT GOD after all he has given you.

PASTOR'S DECALOGUE TO GUIDE FLOCK

A decalogue for church members to guide them in their relations with their pastor is suggested by the Rev. Dr. Walter B. Greenway, president of Beaver College.

Dr. Greenway gave these rules in the form of "shall not" commandments at the recent installation services of the Rev. Russell Paynter as pastor of Bethany Temple Church, 53d and Spruce Streets.

They are:

Thou shalt not expect him to please everybody for he will not.

Thou shalt not expect all of his sermons to be good. (Good cooks may not always have good cakes.)

Thou shalt not expect him to practice telepathy. (When you are sick you call a doctor.)

Thou shalt not expect him to know all things.

Thou shalt not waste his time. (It takes time to prepare sermons.)

Thou shalt not expect him to be an angel.

Thou shalt not allow the devil to substitute for you in your pew on Sunday. (He sits there when you are absent.)

Thou shalt tell him his faults but not other people.

Thou shalt not expect more than what you give. (A five-cent contribution is worth a five-cent sermon.)

Thou shalt not expect him to be a lawyer nor a physician but thou should follow him as a spiritual leader.

* * * *

A small boy had taken his mother's powder puff and was in the act of powdering his face when his sister, aged five, snatched it.

"You mustn't do that," she exclaimed. "Only ladies use powder—gentlemen wash theirselves!"

BROKEN PIECES

And they took up broken pieces, twelve basketfuls, and also of the fishes.—Mark 6:43.

Five barley loaves! O Lord, a man must live,
And every crumb I need. Canst Thou desire
That I should share with those who never thought
To make provision? What dost Thou require?
Not part, but all? How can I give it Thee
And hungry go away? The multitude
Would never miss my little barley loaves,
Or know who spent his all to give them food.

* * *

I gave, O Lord, and saw Thee multiply
My sorry gift the hungry hordes to save;
But, oh, the broken pieces given back
Are more than that I gave!

O Lord, so short is life, so precious time,
So few joys have I, for so many long,
How can I give even an hour to be Consumed in helping make another strong?
If it might serve the need—but just one hour!
Too brief my own desire to satisfy!
Why sacrifice in vain? A hopeless cause!
Is there no one who hath more time than I?

* * *

I gave, O Lord, the time, the strength, the toil—
Combined, they were worth one's while to save;
The power hath multiplied and given back
Far more than all I gave!

—Eda May Allen in "The Lookout."

27 YEARS AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

A Story of the Rise of a Wrecked Downtown Church

OUR FIRST RECOLLECTION

Our first recollection of St. John's Parish was an incident which occurred about three years before we assumed the responsibility of a "comeback" for old St. John's. We were secretary of the old Convocation of South Philadelphia. A convocational meeting was being held in old St. John's. We had adjourned and were passing downstairs to the Sunday School room where supper was to be served. Standing on the stairs was a clergyman of the Convocation who was declaring in emphatic tones that St. John's Church was a dead horse and should have been buried years ago. The remark stuck in our mind because we wondered what would be the reaction on the community if the old horse were buried and the community abandoned to the alien non-Christian groups which had moved in and taken possession of the land. We found ourselves most emphatically disagreeing with the sentiments of our clerical brother—not dreaming at that time how we would be called upon in a few years to either prove or disapprove the justice of those comments.

OUR FIRST CONTACT

Our first contact with St. John's Parish was one to stir the emotions and arouse the righteous indignation of any advocate of fair play. Certain persons, during the incumbency of the Rev. G. Alfred Redels, a true saint in the service of the Master, undertook to stir the vitality of the parish by converting it into a sort of sporting arena—object to raise funds for the Church. As is so often the case, athletics and religion proved a bad combination. The church got only dribbles from the proceeds of the boxing matches, etc., which were held in the Sunday School room of the Church. No doubt the bulk of the money went towards the support of the Club. The inevitable result of this sort of support was a complete "bust up". It resulted in a recommendation to the Bishop that St. John's Church be put out of business. Before doing so, however, a young clergyman of the Diocese of New York had applied for a position in the Diocese of Pennsylvania. The Bishop appointed him to serve as missionary at St. John's. The young man boarded the train from New York, came to Philadelphia, officiated at the Morning Service, and left for New York again by the noon train. He was never heard of nor seen again. That decided the Bishop; and, though a few old families of Southwark, appealed to him to keep the church open, he determined that its period of usefulness was definitely over.

THEN WE APPEAR

The little group of mourners who were about to witness the last rites, thought to call upon the Secretary of the Convocation in a last attempt to avert the closing of the Church. We listened to their story and as we listened, we recalled that scene and the criticism of the clergyman on the occasion of the Convocational meeting held a few years before in the Church. And again we wondered whether we were justified in abandoning the district to the alien and anti-Christian forces of that locality. Finally we agreed to personally contact the Bishop and make an offer to volunteer our services as missionary-in-charge of the Parish and learn whether or not the church was a dead issue in St. John's Parish. We met the Bishop and, after a rather dramatic session, we received his permission to try our hand at resurrecting the "dead horse" with the distinct understanding that no money would be appropriated for the work. Later he relented on that point and granted $850.00 through Convocation for one year's experiment.

WE START OUR CAMPAIGN

So, on Trinity Sunday, 1912, we held our first service! Although the church had been closed two weeks the news of our venture had gone abroad and we found the big front doors open and standing upon the steps was the lone figure of Matthews McKeown, a young lad at that time and evidently one of the pitifully few who still loved the old church.

Well, we started our service. We had an organist who no doubt was holding on hoping to receive his back salary. We had no choir and the congregation of seven persons had to do the singing of the hymns and we read the anthems and canticles because we were afraid to tackle the tunes.

An incident occurred after our little service which we will never forget. One of the seven of the congregation was Mrs. Clara Woessner, a communicant of the parish. She came to me to shake hands and said with such a sweet and confident smile, "I'm glad you came to help us. Now if you will work for the church I promise you I will pray."

Who could resist such a challenge of co-operation! We determined then and there that, God helping us, we would work as we had never worked before. We didn't realize then what opposition and what discouragement we were to battle through before our feet were on solid ground of certain success. Had we known, perhaps we would not have had courage to carry on.

Well, the first thing we did was to take a survey of our surroundings. And this is the picture:

(a) Our congregation was seven—two of whom were there entirely out of curiosity.

(b) The church building was a wreck. The roof leaked, the heater was broken, the church carpet was more holey than righteous and you had to mind your step or you would catch your toe in a rip and take a fall; the windows were so old they were falling to pieces; the brick pavement on both Reed and Third Streets was beyond repair; the iron fence enclosing the church was down in places; the cellar was full of ashes almost to the first floor; the coal and gas bills had not been paid for two seasons; the interest on the mortgage was three years overdue; the floor in the Sunday School room was so worn and splintery that it was dangerous to walk upon. The entire building, both inside and out was sadly in need of paint. In fact, the only two things the Church lacked were a congregation and a treasury.

(c) As to the future, that was in the hands of God and our faith was not quite strong enough to assure us that all would be well. Our heart almost failed us. Had it not been that Mrs. Clara Woessner was praying we most certainly would have stopped working.

SOME MORE ENCOURAGEMENT

On the second Sunday evening of our experiment we were riding home on the trolley after the service. On the same car we met another clergyman of a downtown church. He expressed surprise in seeing us in that section of the city so late at night and asked us where we had been. We told him the "shameful truth" that we had reopened old St. John's. He gave us a pitying look and said with a mournful shake of his head, (other optimists did that, too, and now they are wiser men) "In about one month you too will drop it," meaning St. John's Church. Now it's queer how things work out. That good clergyman has been dead these many years and St. John's Church goes marching on and here we are, still stuck on our job and carrying on strong.

HOW WE MET AN IMPOSSIBLE CONDITION

Here we were with a wreck of a church, no money in the treasury, no credit and bills for every possible thing you could imagine. The mortgage was $3333.33, the coal bill $200.00, the gas bill $95.00, the sexton's salary six months in arrears, the salary of the organist was over $200.00. Our source of income was nil and we could not have raised a loan of $100.00, our collateral was so worthless. Yet something had to be done and at once. Our debtors would soon be calling for a showdown. What to do in such a situation? First, we started a series of anniversaries; that is, we had an anniversary for everything we could think up. There was the anniversary of the church, one of the Sunday School, one of the reopening, one for each organization of the parish; anniversaries for service as Sunday School teachers and other officers. Of course, these anniversaries were sources of revenues because we made gifts of money on each. Also, we had street carnivals, strawberry festivals, sour krout suppers, bazaars, entertainments, excursions, shows, etc. Finally, we got all our bills paid.

Then we started our Cent-a-day Club by means of which we wiped out that mortgage on the church. Then we started in to repair and improve the church among which were the following: Purchase of piano for Sunday School, new chairs for School, electric sign, iron fence, church painted exterior and interior, church wired for electric lighting, floor covering for church, hardwood floor for the Sunday School, new church roof, new heating system, new church windows, new rose window, new church organ, new cement pavement all around the church on Reed Street, as well as Third Street; new Parish House, Memorial Gate between Parish House and the Church, an illuminated Sign and Cross, Metal Ceiling in Main and Kindergarten rooms of the Sunday School; nine Memorial Stained Glass Windows; Chancel and Choir renovated and new Choir enclosed with iron rail; complete renovation of the church interior by the unemployed men of the parish; Senior and Junior Choirs organized and vested and the mortgage of $10,000.00 on the Parish House paid up in full. Of course, along with the expense of all these improvements we, of necessity, raised funds for maintenance, so that today we have a parochial organization, functioning smoothly, effectively and out of debt.

THE FIRST YEAR'S DEVELOPMENT

It must always be kept in mind that the missionary-in-charge of St. John's Church was never free to give all his time and energy to this work. As General Secretary of the Philadelphia P. E. City Mission he was busily engaged on that job all day and every day; consequently, he could spare only his evening hours and odd moments for St. John's affairs. This condition made it necessary to divide the parish into Districts and place each under the control of a Superintendent. The idea worked out admirably from the start and it might be interesting to know how this method helped to add members to the church. To illustrate we give the names of those who were christened, confirmed, married and buried in the year 1912-13. It is to be remembered that we started on Trinity Sunday in June, six months of the year was gone already; hence the necessity of carrying over in the next year.

When one considers that on Trinity Sunday, 1912, the church was opened with a congregation of only a handful of worshipers, such a record as this seems almost beyond belief. But there you are. We cannot invent these names. The Church Register gives proof of each name.

We have another reason for publishing these lists. We are sure that there are many who are still living who will be proud to know their names are among those who were confirmed in that first class.

How we would love to shake hands with them this year if they would only come and help us celebrate this our 27th Anniversary.

OUR CONTRIBUTION TO THE S. S. L. O.

St. John's Parish got a start of about $3000.00 extending over the first five years. In return we have raised and paid over to the Sunday School Lenten Offering over $20,000.00, all of which the boys and girls and Bible Classes earned by their own efforts.

However, we want to acknowledge many generous gifts of money from interested friends whose aid was most timely and helped us over many a rough spot.

In all fairness to the people of St. John's, we wish to lay forever the false and ungenerous rumors of the past, that this work was aided by outside organizations; and, though it is a matter of no special importance, it deflects the glory of such an achievement from that band of faithful St. Johnites who worked so hard and earnestly to restore St. John's Parish to the Diocese of Pennsylvania.

CO-OPERATION DOES THE TRICK

"UNITED WE STAND, DIVIDED WE FALL"

The title and sub-title of this article is inspired by the thought that every time we St. Johnites undertake a task of unusual proportions we like to put our shoulders back of it and push all together. Every time we go at a problem in that spirit we generally put over what we undertake. Such an occasion is looking up in the near future. We refer to our

CONFIRMATION

The Bishop has appointed Sunday, May 28th, 8.00 P. M., for the service. We are most happy over the date selected. We have often wanted to have a Confirmation Service on WHITSUNDAY, for it seems the most appropriate day of the Church Year for such a service. It is the day upon which we commemorate the descent of the Holy Spirit in the shape of Cloven Tongues of fire upon the Apostles of the Ascended Lord, Jesus Christ, and thereby founding forever the Christian Church in the world.

This year the Bishop has favored us with his Confirmation appointment on that day. It seems to us that we ought to show our appreciation of this favor by working hard to get together a Class of Candidates that will be worthy of the occasion. And here is where our Title and Sub-Title enter into the discussion; because CO-OPERATION DOES THE TRICK.

HOW WE CAN CO-OPERATE?

Well, take the BROTHERHOOD OF ST. ANDREW for an illustration. Its members never cease its labors in bringing converts into the Church. Last year 18 of the candidates confirmed were the result of the never ceasing labors of one man. Many others of that large and fine class were the fruits of the kindly and friendly approach of a member of the Brotherhood. All year the members have been seeking candidates for our 1939 Class. They are reporting prospects to the Rector almost every week. Now it must be understood that not every prospect is confirmed in the year we uncover them. But if they shy away from Confirmation this year we are on their trail for next year because we have put their names and addresses on our prospect list and when the time arrives for us to start another campaign we are right on the job and they hear from us. So you see our system is sort of a perpetual motion which never ceases to function, and the Rector is kept aware of prospects all the time. CO-OPERATION DOES THE TRICK.

OUR 1939 MODEL

This year we have planned a new model on the basis of the aggressive work of the Brotherhood; and in saying this we want our very active women laborers in our vineyard to understand how very deeply we appreciate what they have and are doing in their special way. Our women have always been our every ready help in times of emergencies. Their will to do and their active way in doing, is a thing of glory. We can never prosper without them. What we suggest is that they set up a system similar to that established by the Brotherhood; which is to make the getting new Confirmation material the theme song of every meeting. We want the members of the three Chapters of the Daughters of the King to put into active practice the pledge each made before the Altar of the Church that "SHE WOULD BRING HER SISTERS HOME TO THE FATHER'S HOUSE." Each member of each group should have either a report or a suggestion to offer at each meeting. At least a certain period of time should be set aside for discussion of ways, means and prospects for adding men and women, boys and girls to the Church of Jesus Christ. YOUR MEMBERSHIP PLEDGE IS YOUR VOW OF SERVICE WHICH IS MISSIONARY IN ESSENCE.

Not only should the DAUGHTERS follow this line of service but also they should seek frequent conferences with the Rector, not only to report progress, but to plan a campaign of follow-up work among the prospects. Perhaps there are questions to be answered or problems to be solved which a conference between you and him may clarify. CO-OPERATION DOES THE TRICK.

THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

Your Rector would appreciate receiving reports of parochial missionary activities from that fine group of women who are members of St. John's Auxiliary. The reports from the Church House of the missionary activities of our several Commissions are most interesting and stimulating; but our missionary problems in the parish ought to receive a share of our attention. We have several very active women who are working hard and intelligently on certain parochial problems now. But what your Rector wants is a certain amount of the meeting hour devoted to the discussion of ways and means of reaching the unchurched and bringing them into the Church through Confirmation. By "unchurched" we mean those who have lost contact with any branch of the Christian Church, who are good Christians at heart but who have not been overtaxing their religion for a long period. Also we mean those who never have given serious thought to church memberships—who are not opposed but who are indifferent to the church. If our W. A. women can induce such to think seriously of uniting their interests with ours, it will be a real triumph for our Auxiliary Chapter. We will then learn that—and we hope each of you will co-operate in this vital undertaking—"and I DO mean YOU."

CO-OPERATION DOES THE TRICK

THE JUNIOR BROTHERHOOD

The Junior Brotherhood members could co-operate with other parochial organizations in this matter of getting prospects for Confirmation. There is the foot work needed to deliver copies of the Broadcaster, notices of Confirmation lectures, cards of invitation, etc., etc. Then, too, every boy gets a chance to put over the Confirmation idea to other fellows if he sort of keeps his eyes open. What we boys need to learn now —right this minute—is that we have some serious business to do for God and His Church and we ought to begin now. If you don't get just what I mean, get your Bible, dust it off and turn to ST. LUKE 2:46-50 and read for yourself how a certain boy felt about being about his father's business. Every boy of character wants to do a good turn for the other fellow and there is nothing you can possibly do for him that will have a more lasting effect on his character as influencing him to be confirmed. Your Rector is always ready to tip you off as to the most natural way to put across your stunt for the day. He knows that it is—

CO-OPERATION THAT DOES THE TRICK

Start with the GANG IDEA in the Parish. Keep adding new fellows to the group. Make your gang a real power among the men and boys. Do things that will attract the attention of the best in the neighborhood and tie them up with the gang itself and pass them on to be confirmed.

Let us tell you a true story of how our boys used to work. One year on the evening of Confirmation one of the boys who was in the Class was roller skating on Moyamensing Avenue. In an hour's time the Bishop was due for the service. Members of the Boys Club were standing on the church steps talking. One of them glanced at the skaters and recognized the boy who belonged in the Class. He called to him and told him he would be late for the service if the didn't hustle home and get washed and dressed. The boy called back he had changed his mind. The boys on the church steps talked it over for a while. Then they sauntered over to where the boy was skating; two boys grabbed him by his hands and pulled and two boys got behind and pushed; his skates did the rest. They got him inside the church, took him back in the kitchen, washed his hands and face and made him comb his hair. He had no necktie. One of his captors took off his and tied it round his neck. He had no coat. Each boy in turn tried his own coat on him until they found one that would fit him. Then they ganged him out to the Sunday School room where the Confirmation Class was assembled and stayed with him until they had him up in the Church, sitting with the other candidates. To make a long story short, that stray sheep was confirmed that night, and he never held it against his pals for forcing him to carry through.

We don't exactly say that's the way you fellows ought to work for Confirmation candidates, but we must confess those boys of fifteen years ago had scriptural authority for their stunt. For it was none other than Jesus Christ himself who said, go out in the streets and COMPEL them to come in; which by the way, is a free translation. The true interpretation is go out, stun them and drag them in. And remember your team work, boys. It's—

* * * *

Sunday, May 28, Whitsunday, is a double date for you to keep. Our 27th Anniversary and the Confirmation service.

* * * *

Shake hands with the Bishop and tell him how many candidates you had confirmed.

* * * *

Frank Drum was high man last year—he had 18 candidates in the class. Who challenges the champion and will beat that record?

* * * *

Is a child of 6 years too young to go to public school to learn to read and write? Is a child of 6 years too young to go to church to learn the ways of righteousness?

* * * *

That magic change takes place in a child at 10 or 12 years that makes him more eligible for Confirmation than a younger child?

* * * *

Why is an adult more fit for Confirmation than a minor? If we are not mistaken in our figures there are more men and women in jail than there are children.

* * * *

Are you a missionary? Prove it!

* * * *

Had that old church sign fallen down on a church member he would have left earth for another abiding place at once. That's the reason we had it removed.

Now we need a new electric sign. Why not give it to the Rector for an anniversary present? Bring, send or mail your anniversary contribution to the anniversary service, Sunday, May 28th.

* * * *

SLOOK-MONTAGUE POST WILL HOLD THEIR MEMORIAL SERVICE SUNDAY EVENING, MAY 21st, AT 8 O'CLOCK. DO NOT FORGET YOU ARE THEIR HOST, AND IT IS THE POLITE THING FOR YOU TO BE PRESENT TO RECEIVE THEM.

* * * *

Have you turned in ALL of your weekly church envelopes.

* * * *

How long would YOU work for a boss who paid you no wages?

* * * *

As YOU are one of the bosses of the St. John's Corporation it is up to you to pay the wages of YOUR employees PROMPTLY. THEIR pay envelope is YOUR church envelope. Be sure they receive their pay on the day it is due.

* * * *

Don't be guilty of an evil you condemn in your bosses—delayed wages and long hours.

* * * *

Be sure all your church envelopes are in the Treasurer's keeping before you go on your summer vacation.

* * * *

DON'T FORGET

That new church sign.

REMEMBER

The Bishop is coming Sunday evening, May the 28th, at 8 o'clock. (Whitsunday).

A RADIO PARTY

FRIDAY, JUNE 9, AT 8 P. M.

As a sort of social wind-up for the season the Woman's Auxiliary is staging a Radio Party on the above date. The proceeds are to go towards the current expenses of the Parish. Every summer we are faced with the embarrassing problem as to how we are going to pay the salaries of our regular church staff during the season when the parishioners are on their vacations. Our usual method of solving it has been either to make our staff wait for their salaries or try to borrow enough to pay them. This summer we are trying to raise enough money to meet the salaries by means of a big Radio Party before we scatter for the summer.

Valuable door prizes will be given away. Also the prizes awarded during the game will be far above those usually given, both in beauty and in value.

A Cake Walk will be part of the evening's entertainment. These have always been popular, and this one will be more fun than any ever before given.

Refreshments will be served also. It may be a warm night, in which case all of us will be grateful for something to keep us cool.

Two bits will buy your way in. And we are pretty sure that if you buy a ticket for the Party you will soon realize that you have bought more fun for your money than you ever did before in your whole life.

Remember the date—Friday, June 9th.

P. S.—When we all learn how to make our regular weekly offerings through our church envelopes we will have more than enough money to pay our summer debts. Our unpaid offerings for the year are over $1500.00. How much of that $1500.00 are you holding back?

THE DEVIL'S BEST TOOL

It was once announced that the devil was going out of business and would offer all his tools for sale to whoever would pay his price. On the night of the sale they were all attractively displayed, and a bad-looking lot they were. Malice, hatred, envy, jealousy, sensuality, and deceit, and all the other implements of evil were spread out, each marked with its price. Apart from the rest lay a harmless looking wedge-shaped tool, much worn and priced higher than any of them.

Some one asked the devil what it was?

"That's discouragement," was the reply.

"Well, why do you have it priced so high?"

"Because," replied the devil, "it is more useful to me than any of the others. I can pry open and get inside a man's consciousness with that when I could not get near him with any of the others and when once inside I can use him in whatever way suits me best. It is so much worn because I use it with nearly everybody, as very few people yet know it belongs to me."

It hardly need be added that the devil's price for discouragement was so high that it was never sold. He still owns it and is still using it.

—Selected.

ALTAR VESTMENTS

FRONTAL

A cloth covering the front of the Altar, often elaborately embroidered and of rich material.

SUPERFRONTAL

A cloth covering the top of the Altar and hanging over the front edge for a distance of nine to twelve inches, concealing the top of the frontal. This part may or may not be of the same material as the frontal, either plain or embroidered, but the part covering the top is best made of linen. It can be kept in place by a two-inch hem at the back into which a flat bar of brass, or some other heavy material is inserted. It is better to divide this bar, otherwise it is unwieldly. Rings and small hooks can be used if preferred. When the Altar is a carved one, a superfront is generally used without a frontal.

SILK CHALICE VEIL

A square of silk, of the color of the season, often finely embroidered, which is used to cover the Chalice.

BURSE

A case, or pocket, of the same material as the silk Chalice Veil, also embroidered, in which the Corporal is kept; it contains also the linen Chalice Veil and extra Purificator, if required.

DOSSEL OR DORSAL

A curtain of cloth or needlework suspended at the back of the Altar and in some churches changed according to the season, to correspond in color with the Altar hangings. Side curtains are spoken of as "wings" or "riddels."

COLORS

When a church has a full set of colors they are changed according to the season, to emphasize the lesson of the day. The Stoles, as well as the Altar Vestments, correspond in color. Some churches use no colors at all; but where it is desired to do so and a full set is not available, red is recommended as being the most useful.

WHAT ARE YOU TO DO?

Begin At Once

You know members of our Parish who do not go to Church. Get in touch with those members.
Write Postal Cards,
Use Your Telephone,
Make Personal Calls.

Urge them to come to Church next Sunday, and every Sunday. Press home their duty. Get their promise to come.

You know persons who are not Church members. Invite them. Have a guest in your pew next Sunday, and every Sunday.

Keep up your efforts until our Parish Church is full of worshippers.

We Must Gain Souls for God

Use your influence. Be not satisfied until you produce results.

Use the same methods of influence to make every one a WORKER —somewhere—in some organization. Make our Church a Bee-hive of industry to do well the work in the Master's Vineyard. Remember, you are "called of God to be a workman that needeth not to be ashamed."

When the Parish Church is full of WORSHIPPERS and every organization full of WORKERS—earnest and efficient—then we shall have secured a congregation of GIVERS—"not grudgingly or of necessity, for God loveth a CHEERFUL GIVER" —to push forward the cause of Christ at home and abroad.

This is Our Church Program.
Make it YOUR Program.
Begin at Once, and Persevere.

TO FIND EASTER

"THIRTY days hath September,"
Every person can remember;
But to know when Easter's come
Puzzles even scholars some.
When March the twenty-first is past,
Just watch the silvery moon,
And when you see it full and round,
Know Easter'll be here soon.
After the moon has reached its full,
Then Easter will be here
The very Sunday after
In each and every year.
And if it hap on Sunday
The moon should reach its height,
The Sunday following this event
Will be the Easter bright.

HOW ABOUT IT?

Life would be so full and free if you and I should really be
A sun to cheer some pathway dim—a happy song, a prayerful hymn;
A ray of hope to those in sorrow, some joy and comfort they may borrow;
A silver lining to each cloud, a stilling voice amidst the crowd;
A stalwart staff, the very best, on which some weary soul may rest;
A light, a burning candle flame to guide someone bowed down with shame;
A rainbow shining through each shower, a living faith each day, each hour.
How wholly worthwhile life would be if this were true of you and me!

—Frances E. Walker, Northfield, Mass.

OUR 27TH ANNIVERSARY

Sunday, May 28th (Whitsunday) we celebrated the 27th Anniversary of our Rectorship of the Parish. We were one week ahead of schedule in so doing, for our advent into the parish actually occurred on Trinity Sunday. Our reason for advancing the date one week was due to the Bishop who chose Whitsunday to visit the Parish for Confirmation.

We were glad we did not arrange an elaborate program because the day turned out to be a scorcher and everybody was uncomfortable. As it was Whitsunday we would have the Celebration of the Holy Communion in any event. The Parishioners, however, honored their Rector in coming out in unusual numbers to the Communion. At the point in the service, where we usually make the announcements, the Senior Lay Reader, Vernon Matthews, made a short address of congratulation and presented an enormous basket of pink carnations, the Rector's favorite flower, to the Rector and Mrs. McHenry. The Rector responded with a short address of thanks for both the beautiful flowers and the congratulations. Then he commented upon the 27 years of service at St. John's and what it meant to him, spiritually as well as mentally. He called attention to the presence in the congregation of the first man who met him on the front steps of the church, Matthew McKeown and his beautiful wife, Lillian, were present. The Rector was so happy in having them in the church for the celebration he could not resist the temptation of calling the attention of the congregation to them. Twenty-seven years had made little change in Mr. and Mrs. McKeown except "Mat" hasn't quite as much hair as he had a quarter of a century ago. The Rector wanted "Mat" to attend the Confirmation service in the evening for he wanted to introduce him to the Bishop as the Reception Committee of one who welcomed the Rector twenty-seven years ago.

In the afternoon we had an informal anniversary gathering of hymn singing and Bible and Catechism contests. It was worth while in that it gave some of our Confirmation Candidates an opportunity to exhibit their training to the assembly. The congregation was astonished at the ease and efficiency with which the boys and girls answered the questions.

At 3.45 P. M., the Rector appointed several committees to go visit the sick, aged and shut-ins of the parish. Then we adjourned to meet later for the Confirmation Service. But that is another story!

A PLEASING INTERLUDE

St. Johnites are always doing something nice. Our 27th Anniversary was no exception to their way of showing their affection for their Rector. After the morning Celebration he was invited by his Sr. Lay Reader and his other half to go to lunch with them. Feeling a bit weary and thinking a mild indulgence in a good lunch might "pep" one up for the other duties of the day, he consented. They drove to the Ben Franklin Hotel and entered into the Carol Room. Over in a remote corner there was a huge round table. Sitting around that table were a crowd of St. Johnites, waiting for the Rector. Was he surprised? He was! And very greatly pleased, too. It makes one feel good when he finds himself an object of love so great as this.

The lunch was both satisfying and appetizing. The service was perfect. We had an enjoyable time and returned to the celebration greatly refreshed. The menu was:

Fruit Cup
Soup
Chicken a la King or Lamb Chops
Potatoes Peas
Tomato Salad — Italian Dressing
Coffee or Tea
Cakes and Ice Cream

The Rector wants to thank all concerned in the delightful little plot and to say he enjoyed every minute of it.

OUR 1939 CONFIRMATION CLASS

Bishop Taitt had appointed Sunday, May 28th, Whitsunday, as the time for his annual visitation to St. John's Parish. We had been working all year, ever since our last Confirmation, preparing our Class and we felt pretty sure of the training, as well as the intelligence, of its members. Twelve of the youngest boys and girls received prizes for perfect work in their Catechism. When we say "for perfect work" we do not mean for reciting the answers to the questions in parrot fashion, but in answering understandingly—knowing what the big words, they could scarcely pronounce—meant. Following are the names of the prize winners:

Dale S. Brown	Edna A. Moore
Sarah A. Forde	Harry T. Peltz
Margary L. Hager	Robert J. Pettit
William Edward Jensen	Beatrice C. Robins
Robert H. Johnson	George A. Trainor
William H. Kaufman	Dorothy M. Westfield

The Rector is no respector of age when it comes to preparing and presenting candidates for Confirmation. With him it is a question of mental and spiritual receptivity rather than age, that count. A man of sixty years may be a moron while a child of six shows every evidence of strong spiritual concepts. The man of 60 needs special mental and spiritual training before he is fit to assume moral responsibilities, while the child of 6 is ready to respond to the higher training of the Church. The Rector has met many a child who could play the violin beautifully while he, even though well advanced in adult age, can't even produce a respectable squeak from the instrument. And so it is with many children. They have a wonderful aptitude towards God.

The above paragraph is a leader up to the personnel of the Class which in age ranged all the way from 6 years to a great grandmother. And that, by the way, leads up to other things of interest concerning the Class. There was indeed a great grandmother in the Class and her great grandson was confirmed with her. Again there was a family of five persons, the mother and four children all confirmed together. Then nearly all the children, thirty-five and one adult confirmed had been christened by the Rector. Also a boy, a namesake of the Rector, was in the Class. His name is David Cresson Diamond.

The candidates met at 7.15 P. M., for registration. We were surprised at the size of the Class. It was almost equally divided between the males and females. According to our count there were 33 women and girls and 31 men and boys.

The evening was even hotter than the day. But the younger members of the Class endured valiantly. Not one was restless but we knew they were anything but comfortable. The program was brief. The outstanding feature was the singing of a hymn by the Junior Choir. The boys and girls measured up to the occasion beautifully and we congratulate Margaret Nelson for her training and the selection of so appropriate a hymn. The Bishop was very pleased with the singing.

All through the service it was thundering and lightening outside as though the heavens were about to fall. All were waiting and hoping for a downpour but all in vain. After raising our hopes to high pitch the clouds just went rolling on. And we, the people of St. John's, just went sweltering on.

The Program for the evening was:

Processional—"St. John the Evangelist Hymn" tune McHenry
Creed and Prayers
Notices
Hymn by the Junior Choir
Sermon by the Bishop
Hymn—"Come Holy Spirit"
Confirmation Service
Offertory Anthem—"Spirit Divine, attend our Prayers" Senior Choir
Closing Prayers and Benediction
Recessional—"Onward Christian Soldiers"

MEN

Gorman, Woodrow W.	Heisler, Franklin
Miller, Horace A.

You may believe it or not, the Rector was sorry when the sexton came along, turned out the lights and locked the front door.

The Bishop was in a particularly happy mood and had the Class with him from the start. Among others he told the story of the man who lived to be 91 years old. Somebody asked him to what he attributed his longevity. He replied, "My ability to run so fast at the Battle of Bull Run." "If," said he, "I had not run so fast that day I would have been dead years ago."

That was a sample; but you know the Bishop when he gets into that mood. He seems to have just the right funny thing to say when he is making a point.

Considering everything the evening was as enjoyable as it was important.

What we are praying for now is that all those who were confirmed will persevere in their new way of life until the end. The way to do that is to get in the habit of attending church functions of all sorts and taking an active part.

THE BROTHERHOOD OF ST. ANDREW

Congratulations To Its Members

The Parish has every reason to be proud of the Senior Chapter of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew. The size of our Confirmation Class was largely due to their fine loyalty and cooperation. When we came to analyze the set-up of the Class we learned the following facts:

William (Happy) Gilbert was responsible for 21 candidates; the Rector, 8; John Gallagher, 6; Walter Pine, 7; Jake Preole, 4; Frank Drumm, 3; George Keener, 8. In other words 57 candidates of our Class of 64 are credited to the Brotherhood of St. Andrew.

It was really funny to hear the comments of the members at the meeting of the Brotherhood after the Confirmation. In spite of their fine work all of them were irritated over the way many of their prospects backed out at the last moment. One of the men said, "Why, would you believe it, one of my candidates told me Sunday morning she would be in the class and before five o'clock she sent word she had changed her mind. Then there were two of another family who were on my list and the mother had promised to send them but when I went for them they said another minister had them confirmed in his church."

Another member said, "I'm ashamed of myself. Next year you bet I'll round up a proper crowd." And so the comments went around the room. Discontent rather than elation was in the air and plans were made at that meeting for another and a bigger campaign for 1940. The first thing they did was to make a list of the fish that got away this year and go angling for them for the next catch.

The splendid work of the men is an impressive proof of the golden harvest of souls for God in South Philadelphia.

May we suggest that what the Brotherhood did can be duplicated by every other Parish organization and on just as large a scale if the members plan a campaign and cooperate and advise with the Rector in pushing the campaign. We feel that every parish organization ought to develope and constantly exercise the missionary spirit activity in adding souls to the church is the main object of having such organizations. "By their FRUITS ye shall know them." St. Matthew 7:20.

We sometimes wonder whether the failure in the growth of many organizations, whether christian or secular, is probably due to the lack of a missionary spirit among its members. They form a closed corporation for pleasure and don't pretend to get new members. The result is loss of strength and finally a fading out.

What we would like to get from each of our parish organizations is the assurance that with God's help every member will work to get at least one candidate for our 1940 Class. We would like each organization to do as the Brotherhood does—discuss this matter of adding souls to the church at every regular meeting.

Another thing—every member of every parish organization has the assurance of the cooperation of every member of the Brotherhood.

And let our 1940 Slogan be—

100 FOR JESUS CHRIST!

LEST WE FORGET

We are on the threshold of the summer season. Soon we, you and I, will be searching for a retreat from the heat of the city streets. Some will go to the country where there is lots of space and the air is filled with the song of birds and the fragrance of flowers; where the nights are still and dark and cool, and one can sink into refreshing sleep; where we can idle away the hours of the day in luxurious laziness, forgetting all our cares, going where we please, eating when and as much as we please and sleeping or reading in a shady nook if we please.

Some of us will hie away to the mountains where vigorous breezes blow down the passes and chill the air with stimulating pine scented ozone which one breathes in one's lungs and feels all sense of languor and heaviness of heat tortured nerves revived and tingling with new life. Where the mountain brooks leap gurgling and laughing from crag and stone and rush away into some dark, cool, shady pool where mountain trout sport the hours away. Where the nights are cold and camp fires are the vogue and the night is filled with forest noises of timid denizens of the wild lands, seeking their food and drinking of the sparkling springs. The wild life of the mountains so full of freedom, grandure, vitality and physical well being, is the life for us.

But others will enjoy the roar of the restless surf. The shore, the salty tang of the air, the brilliance of the sun, the battle with the waves while bathing, the deep sea fishing, the sailing and the evening boardwalk strolls which are veritable fashion parades; the rest pavilions, the sea breezes, even the storms which sweep up and down the coast add zest and interest to living and we forget the hot city streets, the hot business office, the hot, stuffy homes and sigh and say, Oh! What bliss to be where breezes blow and ocean waves are cool and soothing. One can endure the summer if one can forget the heat in such surroundings.

Yes, if one can forget! It is good to forget the unhappy things of life. But it is not good to forget one's duties and obligations neither in summer nor in the winter.

For you know you do have certain obligations you must meet—even when you are away on your summer vacations. You have an obligation which is both moral and spiritual. Your obligation is to your church. If you are really loyal to your Master, you must see to it that provisions are made for the church's continued support by your offerings while you are away reveling in God's beautiful world which He has created for your happiness and welfare. The joys of the country, the mountain and the sea ought to fill your hearts with a hymn of thanks—giving to the Father of us all who supplies His good things so abundantly.

"Lest we forget" our obligation to God and His Church let us head our summer budget with our church offerings paid up to the time we go away. DON'T LET IT BE SAID THAT WE LEFT THE CITY ON OUR SUMMER VACATION OWING GOD AN OFFERING!

You surely could not get the same enjoyment out of God's big, beautiful, wonderful nature life, if you forget to support His Cause in the hot city you left behind you.

We must square our accounts with the parish and show a clear sheet to our credit with the Church the same as we do with the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker.

When you go on a summer trip you pay your rent in advance so you will have a home to which to come back. When you go on your trip this summer please do not forget to pay your Church Obligations in advance for the same reason.

BRING YOUR CHURCH ENVELOPES UP TO DATE

GO AWAY AND HAVE A GOOD TIME WITH A CLEAR CONSCIENCE

WAR ON WAR

What a remarkable change has come over the land. Not so many years ago Memorial Day was an occasion when all the professional orators, soldiers, politicians and even clergymen, rose up and raged against our defeated enemies and defied them to come out and take another licking. Veteran soldiers and sailors marched to marital music from cemetery to cemetery to lay flowers and flags upon the mounds of deceased comrades, who fought and died for their country.

And over those graves speeches were made extoling their supreme sacrifice and exhorting all American patriots to rally round the flag and protect our nation from invasion as did our fathers. In those days there was no such creature as a pacifist. If he did exist the country had another name for him and that was—Traitor.

After participating actively in celebrations of Memorial Day this year, we returned home late in the evening, tired and a little confused. We had determined that we would strike a new note in our speeches at cemetery gatherings and in Post Halls. The new note was MORE PEACE and LESS WAR TALK. Our confusion was due to the singular incident that almost every other speaker had by some peculiar means of telepathy been moved to choose the same theme. And even more curious, the masses gathered to listen to these Memorial Day Orations, seemed to accept with approval our denunciation of war and our exaltation of peace. More than half of every such gathering were veterans and military officers.

Personally, we made what less than ten years ago would have been considered a dangerously unpatriotic talk. We went so far as to say that we thought a certain member of the President's Cabinet should have his title changed from Secretary of War to Secretary of Peace, but his duties and perogatives should remain the same with increased power to carry on. Furthermore, we should drop the word "war" from our vocabulary and make "peace" the popular word; that newspapers and magazine and public documents and speakers who kept up the bad habit of talking "war" should be boycotted and treated as national enemies. We went further and said our armies and navies ought to be called Peace Armies and Navies. They should be used in spreading a desire for peace and good will within the nation and beyond its borders; that they, the Army and Navy, ought to be stepped up to the highest grade of efficiency in mobility and armed power so that they could back up our peace program with a force that the biggest international bullies would see and slink from. We went on to declare that the United States ought to start now and keep up accumulating the biggest PEACE CHEST for the maintenance of our peace forces for an indefinite period with an inexhaustible supply of money and munitions and not wait for the war lords to attack. We further stated that we would train our children to hate the word "war" as something malignant and to be exterminated as a deadly poisonous growth in every barbaric and uncivilized country and a threat to the peace and welfare of progressive civilization. We would teach them the glories of peace and its blessings and inculcate in them the desire to preserve peace at any price—even at the price and sacrifice of our blood and our property, if necessity arose.

Yes, we declared for Peace. We called on the Prince of Peace to lead our men and inspire our children TO WAR ON WAR and fight for peace until Peace sits on the throne of civilization and reigns supreme. Our speech was cheered to the echo and our veteran listeners, their women's auxiliaries, their sons and their daughters joined in the applause.

One little fellow, about six years of age, dressed in a sailor's suit of white, stopped us on our way to our car and said, "Please, Mr., may I say that was a wonderful speech."

TEN YEARS AGO WE WOULD HAVE BEEN MOBBED FOR EXPRESSING SUCH SENTIMENTS.

Thank God, at last sanity rules the minds of men and war is on the wane.

May our beautiful land ostracise it and may she become the world's champion for peace and demand peace sternly.

OUR NEW CHURCH SIGN

A new church sign is not a luxury but a necessity. In the first place the church is built of gloomy, brown stones which give it a prisonlike aspect and needs an illuminated sign to take away some of that gloom. Also, no sign is up-to-date if it is not a good advertiser and nothing is quite so attractive or informative as an illuminated sign, placed in such a position that it can be read easily by most passersby. Also, there are so many events which occur between the monthly issues of the Broadcaster, that it is only by using a sign to give the news that we can get such events before the public.

This year we asked the parish to contribute towards the expense of purchasing such a sign in place of raising a purse for the Rector for our Anniversary. On Whitsunday, we celebrated that event and the following persons placed their Anniversary Envelopes on the Alms Basin which is for the purchase of the sign. We want to thank these friends and hope others of the parish will join the ranks of givers so that we will raise enough to go ahead with the job. Of course, there is more expense than just paying for the sign. The electricians have their part and the lights must be supplied. Also the letters used for ordinary advertising must be bought by the church. We need more money than we have received before we can get on with the job.

STORY OF THE ROSES

CONDENSED FROM THE BEAUTIFUL STORY BY LUTHER DE YOE, D.D. AND PRINTED IN "THE BEEHIVE" OF GERMANTOWN

Six hundred years B. C. the great Greek Poetess Sappho lived. She was enraptured with the loveliness of flowers. She almost worshiped them. Of all the Flowers she chose the Rose as without doubt the most beautiful. She imagined a throne higher and grander than all the others in the Flower Kingdom. Upon this she placed the Rose. She bowed before it. On in those days so long ago, she called the Rose,—THE QUEEN OF THE FLOWERS.—That distinction the Rose has never lost. The Human Race bows before it just as reverently today. In China, in India, in Europe, in Africa, in America it is the beautiful Queen of the Flowers. The many years have not taken away one shade of its glory. The gardener of today shows you this beautiful bloom and that and then says; but wait—you have not seen the best—You have not seen my ROSES.

It is interesting to hear or read the fanciful stories that tell how the different colors of the roses were secured. The stories that go back for centuries tell how these flowers have laid hold of the attention of the world.

In the old Grecian Mythology it is said that the color red came to the roses in this way. Narcissus the handsome youth, the Messenger of the Gods was in distress. Venus the wife of Jupiter was hastening to help Narcissus. She stepped upon a thorn. It was the thorn of a rose bush. Roses before this were always white. The blood from the wound of the foot of Venus soaked into the rose thorn and vine. The bushes that grew from this blood soaked vine and all the vines that have grown from it have borne red roses. Christian traditions say that one of the thorns in the Saviour's crown of thorns was from a rose vine. It became permeated with the blood of the Master. Those vines, this tradition says, began the bearing of red roses.

You may know a beautiful white rose that is called the Rose of Mary. It is named after the Virgin Mary. It is said that during her flight with Joseph and the child into Egypt this occurred. One evening she hung the veil she had upon a rose bush. The bush until then had been bearing just ordinary white roses. The morning after the veil had been upon it the bush was glorious. It was covered with these wonderful White Roses. The bushes that have multiplied from it have continued the same glorious Virgin Mary Roses. A beautiful rose was developed in France during the reign of Louis 18th. It was called the Rose du Roi. Afterward when Napoleon became Emperor it was called the Rose of the Emperor. When the Republic came it was called the Rose of the Republic.

In the first verse of the Second chapter of the Book of the Bible called—The Songs of Solomon—is an interesting expression. It is generally used as an expression describing Christ. Jesus is represented as speaking concerning Himself. The expression is poetic and beautiful. He is represented as saying—"I am the Rose of Sharon. The Lily of the Valley"—Sharon was the place in Palestine where the most glorious Roses grew. Their beauty was way beyond that of any other flower. The most beautiful Rose in the World was the most beautiful Flower in the World. The Son of God Jesus is the grandest of all persons who have ever lived.

How kind our Heavenly Father has been placing them as one of the facts of beauty and helpfulness in this world of ours.

The real history of the Roses has in many respects been kept true as the History of no other flower. They were first known in India and China. Very early they were cultivated in Persia. It is said that Alexander the Great brought them from Persia over into Greece and Europe. That was about 336 B. C. There is a bush that is supposed to be the oldest Rose Bush in the world today. It is healthy and blooming today. It is known to be 1100 years old. It is said to have been planted by Charlemagne. It was planted and is growing along side of the wall of the Cathedral of Hildersheim, Germany. It is not a climber but a bush. It is today about twenty-six feet high. It covers a space on the wall of the old Cathedral of about thirty-two feet. It is said that Charlemagne planted the bush on the occasion of the visit to Charlemagne of the Mohammedan Caliph of Egypt. The Caliph was Harounal Haroun al Raschild. I am glad the name of Charlemagne is associated with the Rose. Charlemagne was the Saviour of Western or European Civilization. He saved all of Europe from utter distraction. About the year 800 he had fought his great battles and was crowned King of all of Italy and Germany and France. I am glad that Charlemagne has a touch with the story of the Roses.

A number of our cities and states are named after the beautiful flower.

I believe every flower has some helpful wonderful word to speak to us. The Roses have a blessed message. A number of the flowers tell us of a struggle through which they have passed in overcoming some unpleasant ugly fact connected with them. They deserve much credit for fighting their battle. The Roses have no such story. The simplest rose is beautiful. The development of the Rose is simply the development of something beautiful into something more beautiful. Its message is, take the good that is in your life and make it better. Find some worthy talent in art or business that you have and make it greater. To develop a worthwhile gift you have is as noble and helpful to the world as to overcome something that is wrong. It often brings a more helpful result. Make the good that is in you better is what the Roses say. Make your worth while knowledge greater Knowledge. Your excellent Character grander Character. Your Kindness greater Kindness. In 2nd Peter 3:18 is this wonderful direction. It not to overcome evil. That is grandly necessary but just as grandly necessary is—TO GROW IN GRACE, AND IN THE KNOWLEDGE OF THE LORD AND SAVIOUR JESUS CHRIST.—In this same book of 2nd Peter, Chapter 1, verses 5, 6, 7, it says add to your Faith virtue and to virtue knowledge. And to Knowledge Temperance and Temperance patience. And to Patience Godliness and to Godliness Brotherly kindness and to Brotherly kindness CHARITY. What a development of GOOD THINGS. To overcome the evil is all right. The Rose however directs attention to something fully as noble. It says take a noble attainment you have and increase that. Do not be satisfied. There is always a new victory. It is so in practical achievements. The Telephone that could do the wonderful thing of carrying the voice a mile has been developed until it makes it possible for the voice to envelop the WORLD. Men have taken Roses of one size and degrees of beauty and added until the victories of today have been secured. Make life nobler, make the good that is in you BETTER as the years pass by.

Beside the Rose this verse mentions the flower that is next in beauty. I asked a noted man, one who loves flowers, what Flower in his judgment stood next to the Rose. At once he answered there is but one flower that stands next and that Flower is the Lily. Let your thoughts go over the different Lilies you know and you will agree with him. The Second Chapter of the Songs of Solomon brings an exquisite picture of the Saviour. He is the Rose of Sharon. He is the Lily of the Valley. This is a fascinating prophecy. These references in Mythology and Fancy and real history show something of how earnestly Roses are woven into the story of human life. What wonderful symbols of life Roses have been. Those symbols have come down the centuries with much the same meaning. Hippocrates was the Greek God of silence. His symbol was the Rose. Many things that Hippocrates knew were not to be repeated. They were hidden back of the sign on the Rose. Cupid the God of true lovers was said to give real lovers Roses. What the lovers said and did was not for the public. All was their own concern. The ancients placed a rose or a bouquet of roses on the ceilings of the rooms in which they held many of their important meetings. What they said SUB ROSA or under the Rose or Roses was for themselves. Only a miserable traitor would betray the Sub Rosa words and actions. Things that are said and done by agreement Sub Rosa are SACRED..

What an interesting Story the wonderful Roses have for us. What a blessed MESSAGE they have for each one of us.

THE DREAMS AHEAD

What would we do in this world of ours,
Were it not for the dreams ahead?
For thorns are mixed with the blooming flowers,
No matter which path we tread.

And each of us has his golden goal,
Stretching far into the years;
And ever he climbs with a hopeful soul,
With alternate smiles and tears.

That dream ahead is what holds him up
Through the storms of a ceaseless fight;
When his lips are pressed to the wormwood's cup,
And clouds shut out the light.

To some it's a dream of high estate,
To some it's a dream of wealth;
To some it's a dream of a truce with Fate
In a constant search for health.

To some it's a dream of home and wife;
To some it's a crown above;
The dreams ahead are what makes each life—
The dreams—and faith—and love!

THE SUMMER BIBLE SCHOOL

As usual the Summer Bible School was a delightful success. We got an early start—Sunday, June 18th, was our opening session and Sunday, September 10th, marks the closing of the school.

The schedule of work was really a continuation of the system used in other years. Our time was fully occupied with the study of the Prayer Book, embracing the Collects, Epistles and Gospels for the regular Sundays, as well as those of the Saints and holy days as they would occur through the month. Then, too, we spent a great deal of time in the fundamentals of our Faith as set forth in the Creed, the Lord's Prayer and the Ten Commandments. But most of our Doctrine period was consumed in a study of the Sacraments of the Church. We never have been quite satisfied with the rather sketchy training we have given our children in this most important study of church doctrine. Now, we feel we are prepared to state that our children do have at least an intelligent idea as to what the Sacraments are and why the Church uses them.

May we state also that through patience and perseverance Margaret Nelson taught the children chapters of the Holy Bible to memorize and repeat. Every Sunday morning part of our period was spent in repeating the verses and chapters they learned during the week. They know so many now that it takes nearly fifteen minutes of quick going for them to repeat all they know.

We hope Margaret will carry on and continue teaching the Sacraments of the Church and more chapters of the Scriptures during the fall and winter term.

I would like also to have our Kindergarten teachers to continue teaching the first things of the Catechism—how to say the Lord's Prayer, the Creed and the Ten Commandments. This is a pretty ambitious program for little youngsters I know, but I'm sure that the simplified forms of the ten commandments, for instance, can easily be absorbed and understood if we are patient and take trouble to explain in simple language the meaning of each commandment in turn.

Another feature of the Bible School was the interest the boys took in distributing and collecting the Bibles, Prayer Books and Hymnals. Seldom would you see a book of any kind five minutes after the service.

Another little thing we did this year which helped to keep up the school interest—In other years we collected the offering while the school sang a hymn. This year we stood at attention. Then on the first chords of a march we swung in position to march out of our places and up the main aisle to the table on which a glass money bowl rested—in which we would deposit our offerings and march back to our positions. Here we would stand till the leader would give the order to salute the flag; then to salute the cross, with which the session was closed.

VACATION SCHOOL

August 24th marked the close of our Vacation School at the church.

The summer just fairly flew by. We were very sorry to have such a pleasant summer end. We tried to make the session interesting, as well as profitable.

We hope all those attending had an enjoyable time. We have reason to believe they did, for about thirty-five of them had almost perfect attendance. We had an average attendance of fifty-five.

Our School began at 9.30 and closed at 12 o'clock. For a short time the pupils played various games such as Chinese Checkers, Ball, Old Maids, Cards, Jacks, Marbles, Rope and Darts.

They entered into these games with great enthusiasm despite the hot weather. (In fact we never knew it was hot until we left the Church on our journey home.)

Next on our program came the serious, really worthwhile work of the summer. We began by repeating the Creed, Lord's Prayer, General Thanksgiving, General Confession and the II Corinthians. Next we had the books of the Bible, divided into sections. This was followed by the Ten Commandments and the Sacraments. (I think we have really mastered these.) We learned a Grace which we hope many of the children are using in their homes. A great many Bible verses were committed to memory, verses I thought would help the children in their daily living, such as "Love never faileth," "A soft answer turneth away wrath." "A good name is rather to be chosen," "The Lord is my Shepherd," "No man can serve two masters," "Ask and it shall be given," "The Golden Rule" and "Where your heart is there will your treasure be also."

We conquered and sang with zest, seven new hymns.

Each day we had a Bible Story read. It is amazing how many of these stories are remembered by the children. On several occasions we had each child give a fact and you should have been present. From two to sixteen, all contributed.

We played competitive group games, radio, sewed religious mottoes on cardboard, made picture frames and did some crayon work. We had candy on Wednesdays and Ice Cream on Friday. We visited Atlantic City, had our picture taken and had a glorious time. Mrs. Hopkins and the children join me in sending our thanks to Mr. McHenry and all those kind friends who made our Summer School possible.

55 FROM ST. JOHN'S ATHLETICS' GUESTS AT BOSTON RED SOX GAME IN SHIBE PARK ON AUGUST 17

Fifty-five baseball fans from St. John's "broke into" the Big Leagues Thursday, August 17, when, as guests of the Philadelphia Athletics they helped hold down the left field stands while the A's dropped a 7-1 decision to the pennant-contending Boston Red Sox. The party was made up of St. John's boys and girls between the ages of 8 and 16, under the supervision of Mrs. John J. Nelson, Jr., Mrs. Harry Hopkins and John R. Chisholm.

Preparations for the party were begun several weeks ahead of time when a request was made to Mr. Roy Mack, vice-president and secretary of the Athletics, for a pass admitting 75 boys and girls from St. John's to one of their American League games. While awaiting word from Mr. Mack, boys and girls were signing up with Mrs. Nelson. The sole requirement was that each boy and girl bring at least 15c transportation money. When this was found to be insufficient to cover the cost of chartering a bus additional money was raised by the boys and girls themselves by the sale of chances on a box of candy, under Mrs. Nelson's direction, and through contributions by interested individuals.

The group met at the Parish Hall at 1 o'clock, the day of the game, and left shortly thereafter, 48 going by bus and 7 in Mr. Chisholm's car. They returned immedately after the game, reaching St. John's a little before 6 o'clock. For a treat, each boy and girl was given a bag of peanuts and a lolly-pop, which undoubtedly added to the enjoyment of the game.

While it is regretted that a full quota of 75 did not turn out for the game, nevertheless it is felt that St. John's first Big League Baseball Party was quite a success. For most of the group it was the first major league game they had seen, and, as was to have been expected from a St. John's group, the boys and girls reflected credit on the Parish by their orderly behavior.

Those attending the game were as follows: Billy Kaufman, Sonny Tomlin, Robert Pettit, Billy Ward, Eva Branton, Mary Weissinger, John Tittermary, Eleanor Keough, Harry Tittermary, Eddie Rassman, Billy Smith, Harry Clemens, Billy Tomlin, Sammy Bennett, Gilbert Paulin, Bobby Beck, Jackie Lusher, Margaret Heisler, Joseph West, Charles Bennett, Chris. Henderson, Edna Moore, Elizabeth Easterday, Frances Stunder, Effie Stunder, Rose Heisler, May Rudderow, Ruth Rudderow, Bobby Munion, Billy Weisse, Jackie Weisse, Harry Weissinger, Emma Keough, William Substale, Eddie Heisler, Joseph Heisler, Mary West, Catherine Munion, Dorothy Weisse, George Weissinger, Mary Bradley, Ornett Kraft, Billy Rodebaugh, Joseph Shuey, James Jepp, Albert ——, Earl McCarey, Dolores MacAbee, Catherine Ward, James Crevetti, Edward Connor, Jimmy Collins, Mrs. Nelson, Mrs. Hopkins and Mr. Chisholm.

For their assistance our thanks to Mr. Giles, Mr. George Gregory, Mr. John F. Preole, Mr. John C. Preole, Mr. Maey Kotzin and Mr. Raymond Cresse.

A LETTER FROM HELEN & RUTH

September 4, 1939.
Shack In the Pines,
Browns Mills, N. J.

Dear Mr. McHenry:

As the summer draws to an end and we look back upon the weeks that have flown so swiftly by we wonder if the other councilors have had as many experiences crowded into such a short space of time.

Each group had one outstanding characteristic. The first group were little beavers. They helped to put the house in order, after being empty all winter.

The jitterbugs came next and they made the "Shack" shake with their rhythm.

The older girl scouts followed the jitterbugs and there was not much difference except for being a little more sophisticated than the others.

A fun loving crowd came down next and all gained a few pounds because of the excessive laughing.

Independence was the chief characteristic of this group. They preferred to be on their own as much as possible.

Keeping this group of girls out of the water was our "chief" problem. They were regular water babies.

Silence was the motto of the next group. They seemed to be awed by their "old" councilors. By the end of the week they found we were not so old after all.

The young gentlemen believed in "The early bird catches the worm." They loved to get up while it was still dawn.

The few boys that came down spent most of their time with our summer boarders, the boys in the garage.

Swimming and canoeing were the chief delight of all. The walk into town each day to spend their allowance and loiter with the other vacationists added to their list of friends.

The boys and girls had their choice of a doggie roast, marshmallow toast or a party with fruit punch and pretzels. To many this was something new and interesting.

Chores had to be done. Each group made their own beds, set the table and washed and dried dishes. Twice a week they assisted in keeping the place presentable.

Getting weighed after arriving at Browns Mills and before leaving always caused a great deal of chatter on the pounds gained.

Mr. Wentzel gave each group ice cream before leaving.

They all disliked the idea of going home but as the bus neared the city the thought of seeing mother and dad made them impatient to be home.

The boys who stayed in the garage helped to entertain each group and were helpful in keeping the grounds clean and fixing odds and ends in the Shack.

All that came down went home with memories that will not be forgotten for a long time.

Sincerely,

HELEN ASHMEN,
RUTH BRIGHT.

A LETTER FROM THE BOY CAMPERS

BROWN'S MILLS

Dear Mr. McHenry:

We, the boys that were down at the Shack, wish to send our thanks to you for the use of the garage. Without the garage we would not have had our vacation at Browns Mills this summer. Most of our time was spent swimming and occasionally we borrowed the canoe which Ruth and Helen graciously permitted us to use. We started a hike to Fort Dix once, but ended up at Fallen Leaf Lake, swimming and eating berries. Helen and Ruth invited us to all of their "doggy roasts," marshmallow roast and parties in which they served us fruit punch and pretzels. They treated us wonderfully and extended many privileges to us. We were invited to card party, scavenger hunts and such by our neighbors. All in all we have had the most wonderful time of our lives this summer and do not know how to extend our thanks.

If there is anyway in which we can show our appreciation please let us know and we will sincerely endeavor to do it.

The boys from the Shack.

WHAT DO YOU KNOW OF THE DAUGHTERS OF THE KING?

In order that the women and girls of the parish may have a clearer knowledge of the Daughters of the King, we have formulated the following questions. We trust you will be interested in endeavoring to answer them and check with future issues of the Broadcaster to see how many of your answers are correct.

1. What do I mean by "The Daughters of the King?"
2. How did the Daughters of the King start?
3. What are the obligations of the Daughters of the King?
4. Is it wrong for a Daughter of the King to participate in innocent pleasure?
5. What kind of work do the Daughters of the King perform?
6. Are the Daughters of the King allowed to belong to other organizations?
7. Are the Daughters of the King interested in Missions?
8. In what particular Missionary Field are they interested?
9. What kind of an Emblem do the Daughters of the King wear?
10. When do they wear their Emblem?
11. Where do they wear their Emblem?
12. What inscription is on the Emblem?
13. What does this inscription mean?
14. What is the Object of the Order?
15. What is the Motto of the Order?
16. Do the Daughters of the King take part in any kind of study?
17. Who is eligible for membership in the Daughters of the King?

"ON MY HONOR"—

The Girl Scout Troop at St. John's has never had to beg girls to join the organization. There are always many waiting to come in, for a Troop can register only thirty-two girls. That means that we can pick and choose girls who are willing to live up to the requirements of Girl Scouting. What are the requirements for a girl who wishes to become a Scout?

1. That she is ten years old or over.

2. That she is willing to fulfill all the obligations of the troop, and that she will try to live up to the Laws and Promise.

What are the obligations of the Girl Scout Troop? A good starting place is to remember one of the Laws of Girl Scouting—"A Girl Scout is a friend to all, and a Sister to every other Girl Scout." That means cooperation and team work in meetings. It means being willing to "give" a little on all sides so that the youngest and the oldest can all find happiness in meeting together. It means, what every one in the United States must learn, to try to live in harmony with people who do not think or act just as we do.

Another requirement, and a very important part of team work is the willingness to meet the financial obligations of the Troop. The girls who are really interested in their troop can find ways and means to pay their weekly five cents dues and their yearly fifty cents registration fee.

We promise, "on our honor", to live up to the Girl Scout Laws and Promise, which means doing our duty to God and our country, helping other people at all times, and obeying our laws. Before a Girl Scout can receive her pin, she must answer one question—"What does your honor mean to you?" The answer comes back, sometimes all too quickly—"My honor means that I can be trusted!" Does it?

Then trusted—how? The answer for a Girl Scout is that she can be trusted absolutely. Then think what she promises! On her honor,

That she can be trusted to be loyal to her God and her country, her friends and relations, and to the work that she has to do.

That she can be trusted to be a useful and helpful citizen, that she can use her imagination, and that she will be willing to learn, so that she must not be continually pushed and directed by parents and teachers.

That she can be trusted to be careful of the things that have been given to her, whether they are money, clothes, time, pets, or the things of nature around her.

That she will try to grow up to be a good, useful, and cheerful citizen, interested in her neighbors and the things about her, and that she will be trying, on her honor, to live up to the very highest ideals that she knows.

Are there thirty-two girls like that at St. John's? If there are, they belong in our Girl Scout Troop, and we want them to come when the meetings open for the fall on Monday, October 9, at eight o'clock.

HELEN WEIR MCHENRY.

OUR FALL OPENING

The title reads like a department store advertisement. It could be that, but as a matter of fact it is just our way of introducing the thought that, for we St. Johnites, the vacation period is past. Our folk are returning from Atlantic City, Browns Mills, Wildwood, and the country and mountains, and are settling down to work. Public schools are opening and already our thoughts are turning to Thanksgiving and Christmas. Our Church Schedule is changed too. We are about to shift from our Summer time table to that of the fall and winter. Sunday services will again be 11 A. M., 2:30 P. M. and 3:45 P. M. The Parish organizations will meet on the usual weekdays at the usual time. The Church, Sunday School and Parish organizations will become active without delay. The object of each society is to be the deepening and spreading the spiritual kingdom of God among the children of men in our part of Southwark.

WE NEED MEN AND BOY WORKERS

Every man, every boy of the Church is urged to make good on getting other men and boys interested in our Church. Now we do not mean getting them interested in basketball or men's or boys' clubs. What we want you to do is to use all our social interests as a means to an end and that end is to induce them to enter into God's Holy Temple to join us in the worship and adoration of our Heavenly Father.

Last year the male part of our Parish established an enviable record in bringing persons to Confirmation. I want that stunt repeated, and redoubled if such is possible. The Senior and Junior Brotherhoods will meet at the same time on the same night as last year.

THE WOMEN AND GIRLS

Our urge to the men we duplicate to the women and girls. Your times of meeting will be the same as before. And your meetings will be conducted in your usual way. We would appreciate it if each group will add something to your weekly program that will make your meetings more attractive. We wish too that you would go after all those women and girls who were confirmed in June and get them to join your respective groups. If we do not show an interest in our newly confirmed they may get an idea that now we have persuaded them to be confirmed we are no longer interested. We must not let them think so! We must make them feel how glad we are to have them fellow members of our beautiful church. We must get them to join our different parish groups and help us carry on the work of spreading God's work in Southwark. We have groups of women or girls for all ages. There is, first and foremost, the Woman's Auxiliary, then the Daughters of the King, with two senior and one junior chapter, also the Girl Scouts. Certainly every newcomer ought to find their place in one of these five organizations, where they will feel at home and inspired to work for the growth of Christianity in our particular spot of Philadelphia.

I believe in encouraging efforts and rewarding workers.

Therefore, we are offering awards to all scholars who bring new scholars to our Church School. The FIRST award is a large picture of the Good Shepherd to hang in the parlor. This is the largest picture we have ever offered. To the boys and men who succeed in bringing two or more scholars within the month ending Sunday, October 29th, we will give a beautiful lapel button in the form of a Cross within a wreath. To the girls or women we will give a beautiful silver Cross, large size, on a silk cord to wear around the neck. These awards are already bought and ready to be distributed to the winners.

For the boys, men, girls and women who work and succeed in getting candidates for Confirmation we will give another present of value. So let's get off with real action and make this a great year for St. John's Parish.

And don't neglect your Communion—whether it is on the first Sunday of the month—or upon a holy day.

Last May I received from California a card which is so clever and suggestive that I pass its message on to you. Here it is:

WHY I DO NOT ATTEND THE MOVIES

(If this isn't sensible when we say "movies"; is it sensible when we say "church"?)

No one speaks to me; the movies are so unfriendly. When I go they ask for money. One ticket should admit my entire family, because there is only one source of income for all of us. When I get home from business I am tired and must rest. I saw a poor picture once; it made me nervous and I decided not to go again. There are so many hypocrites attending the movies that I think I should not go. Movies may be a good thing, but I got out of the way of going. I don't like the manager's attitude toward social questions. I stay away from the movies because I went too much when I was a child. I don't go to the movies because they admit undesirable people. I don't go to the movies because the manager never calls on me.

DOUBLE TALK

On a busy day a woman walked into the office of the courtroom at Atlanta, Ga., and addressing Judge Blank, said:

"Are you the reprobate judge?"

"I am the probate judge."

"That is what I was saying," she said, "and I have come to you because I am in trouble. My husband was studying to be a minister at a college infirmary, and he died detested and left three little infidels, and I have come to be appointed their executioner."

THE CHURCH'S INVITATION

To God's Sanctuary

I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord.—Psalm 122:1.

To Spiritual Companionship and Assured Comfort

Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me.—Rev. 3:20.

To Splendid Opportunity of Doing Good and Getting Good

And whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant.—Matt. 20:27.

To Closer Fellowship and Greater Privilege in Christian Experience

I have called you friends: for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you. —John 15:15.

YOU ARE AN EMPLOYER

Did you ever think what an important "fella" your employer is? He is sort of a duex-ex-machina. He is the man who gives us a job; who tells us what sort of work we must do; how long we must work each day and what wages he will pay us for our time and labor.

Because he does these things he is, in a very big way, the moulder of our destiny. He tells us, by inference, how we may live; what sort of house we may occupy; what rent we may pay; what price you may pay for a dress or a suit of clothes; whether you may eat meat every day or only once a week; how often you may go to the movies; whether you may indulge in candy or ice cream now and then; whether you may smoke cigars or cigarettes or, for economy's sake, smoke a pipe; whether you may take the family on a picnic, or go on a vacation; how often you can have a party and serve refreshments; how much pocket money he will allow you for personal expenses, how often and how far you may ride in the trolley; and whether he will allow you to have a new or a second-hand car. There are a million other privileges he controls and permits or forbids—because he is

OUR EMPLOYER AND THE SOURCE OF OUR INCOME

When and if he "lays you off" or discharges you outright, your income stops. In that case you lose your means of support. That means calamity to you and your family—especially if you cannot find another employer. Because you and yours just keep on living and to keep on living one must have money to pay one's bills—or "go on relief" and be content with the barest necessities. Some of us know all about that already—don't we?

THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN A GOOD AND A BAD EMPLOYER

If your employer is a just and good man naturally yours is a pleasant lot and you are or ought to be happy. For the first care of such an employer is the comfort and wellbeing of his employees. On the other hand, if your employer is a slave driver who demands the utmost you can give in time and labor for the minimum wage or if he is a short change artist and deducts from your wages, or if he plays on your fears by threatening to lay you off or fire you or cut your wages until you are driven almost frantic, then you are most unhappy and discontented—are you not?

WELL, YOU ARE AN EMPLOYER!

And with certain people, or employees of St. John's Parish you are either a good or a bad boss. You are either just or unjust, you are either thoughtful or thoughtless of the comfort and welfare of your employees.

As a member of St. John's Corporation—parish—you require the services of certain persons to perform certain duties and you of course must agree to pay the wages of these employees. Also you must be prepared to pay for necessary supplies—stationery, prayer books, bibles, hymn books, chairs, fuel, gas, electricity, repairs and lots of other necessities. Your employees must do parish visiting, provide church music and train the choirs; must keep the church, Sunday school and parish house clean and warm; must put out the ashes, must shovel snow in the winter and sweep the pavements in the summer. To these employees your Rector and your Vestry must agree to pay them wages. The only source of income to pay wages is your weekly church pay envelope. Upon YOU depends the welfare of those you employ. If you are a good and kind and just employer you will never default in helping to make up the weekly payroll by turning in your weekly church envelope. Furthermore, if you are a good employer, you will pay the highest wages you can afford—and demand the best service. Furthermore, if you are a good employer you will not try to short change or cheat your employees by holding out a pay envelope just ever so often. You will be a Christian Employer and pay regularly and generously those who are working for you.

I think the best way of being an employer worthwhile is to think of your employer, how good or how bad he is to you—then govern your acts towards your employees as you would have him (your employer) treat you.

Start right this Fall and pay up what you owe the Sexton, the Parish Visitor, etc., at once.

HOW ARE YOU?

THUS WE SALUTE EACH OTHER IN PASSING

It is a common form of greeting. I wonder who used it first. Joseph greeted his brothers thus. At least so we read in Genesis 43:27. He asked them of their welfare, then said—is your father well, the old man of whom you spake, is he still alive? We can feel how eagerly he waited for the answer. He had been a mere stripling when he had last seen his father and many things had happened in those intervening years.

Since then, and probably before, there has been this eternal expression of interest in the welfare of each other. In the majority of cases it is just a formality—the person making it expects no real answer while the person addressed passes it back in the same absent minded way.

Yet it is a suggestive greeting and ought to be made and answered intelligently. Why be casual and why not greet each other with the heart interest Joseph showed for his brothers and for the old man? Why not ask the question with such inflection that the one addressed will know that you are really interested in him—that you want to know how he is physically and financially and, yes, spiritually too. All of us like to know others are interested in us.

How are you, can imply that a friend is interested in my economical state for instance. That is he wants to know if I am prosperous or otherwise. And his tone is so friendly and interested that you get the feeling that he would not be indifferent to your condition should you need a friend.

How are you, can imply his interest in your physical condition. That he has learned you have been ill and that he is interested in your way back to health. Everybody likes to feel that others are really interested about one's physical state. It makes one feel that such a greeting comes from the heart of a friend and well wisher.

But, How are you can imply also that you have a friend who is interested, a matter even more vital than either your worldly or your physical condition. He can give a spiritual implication to the question. He can mean for instance—is it well with thy soul? You know we should concern ourselves with the spiritual development of our friends more than we do. If we do not feel awkward or embarrassed when we ask a friend as to their state of health or finances we certainly ought not to become suddenly self conscious in inquiring into their moral or spiritual condition. We ought not only be able to ask such a question unselfconsciously, but with a real wish to intimately discuss with each other whether we are morally and spiritually strong or whether we are sick and ailing. If we are not as well as we ought to be, to discuss just what is the trouble, what sort of treatment we need to restore us to a normal state, who is the best specialist to consult—just the same as we do when we grow intimate over any unsatisfactory financial or physical problem.

An atrophied spirit is as much in need of a specialist as is a withered arm. And I am sure that there is no illness so dreadful or dangerous as that awful moral sickness we know as hardening of the heart.

Then, too, many of us are troubled with spiritual fainting spells and prostration of courage under attacks of ordinary afflictions and troubles.

Why, I knew a man who was so lacking in spiritual strength that as soon as he was subject to the least discouragement he would go out and get drunk. We should pay more attention to an utter collapse of our moral stamina when under an attack of temptation. And we should be very careful in allowing friends to persuade us to dose our sick selves with the opiates of loose-living, over-indulgence.

If we can discuss how tuberculosis, cancer, etc., kill their hundreds we certainly ought to be able to discuss the killing attacks of incurable sin and who is most expert in making us well again.

In the meantime, when ever in the future you ask a friend the all important question—"How are you?"—ask it as though you were really interested in his answer so that he will respond frankly. It is well with my estate; it is well with my physical being—it is well with my soul.

OUR JUNIOR CHOIR

It would be very ungracious of us if we were to miss telling you about the summer work of the Junior choir. Every Sunday on the dot of the hour the members of the choir were lined up ready to go. We will not say they completely filled the place of the Senior Choir, but we will say with emphasis that they made a good substitute. Lots of people love to hear children sing. The writer is one of them. There is an element of true harmony and freshness in the voice of children still under their teens which is frequently blurred out later. Many of our fellow worshipers were pleased with the singing of our junior choir and expressed their pleasure with enthusiasm.

HEALTH AND HAPPINESS
In ELEVEN EASY LESSONS

In these days of unrest and uncertainties, those who cultivate calmness and self-possession will live longer and enjoy life better. Hence, someone has collated a number of precepts to practice, as follows:

Learn to like what doesn't cost much.

Learn to like reading, conversation, music.

Learn to like plain food, plain service, plain cooking.

Learn to like fields, trees, woods, brooks, fishing, rowing, hiking.

Learn to like life for its own sake.

Learn to like people, even though some of them may be as different from you as a Chinese.

Learn to like to work and enjoy the satisfaction of doing your job as well as it can be done.

Learn to like the song of the birds, the companionship of dogs, and laughter and gaiety of children.

Learn to like gardening, carpentering, puttering around the house, the lawn, and the automobile.

Learn to like the sunrise and sunset, the beating of rain on roof and windows and the gentle fall of snow on a winter day.

Learn to keep your wants simple. Refuse to be owned and anchored by things and the opinions of others.

—Rays of Sunshine.

THE LIVING TEMPLE

A builder builded a temple,
He wrought it with grace and skill;
Pillars and points and arches
All fashioned to work his will.
Men said as they saw its beauty
"It shall never know decay;
Great is thy skill o' builder
Thy fame shall endure for aye".

A teacher builded a temple
With loving and infinite care;
Planning each arch with patience
Laying each stone with prayer.
None praised her unceasing efforts,
None knew of her wondrous plan;
For the temple the teacher builded
Was unseen by the eyes of man.

Gone is the builder's temple,
Crumbled into dust;
Low lies each stately pillar,
Food for consuming rust.
But the temple the teacher builded
Will last while the ages roll,
For that beautiful unseen temple
Is a child's immortal soul.

THE TIME HAS COME

Yes, the time has come when we must remind you that the end of our church year is approaching, and that hundreds of our weekly church offerings still remain unpaid. We hope you will make a special effort to pay in all you—personally—owe. Sunday, November 26, which, by the way, is the Sunday next before Advent, is the zero hour. All your year's envelopes must be in by that date. A week later, December 3rd, is the First Sunday in Advent or the New Year's day of the Christian Church. On that day you will receive your church offering envelopes for the year. Naturally you do not want to have any overdue envelopes floating about on that day. As we have so often told you—there can be no true worship without offerings and sacrifices. Even the heathen, whom you pity for his ignorance and his barbarianism knows that much about worship and will sacrifice his most precious possession to his gods. Many of us pretend, nay actually believe, that we are much better than the Jews; yet they knew better than to worship God without offering sacrifices of the best and most desirable of their flocks and herds. They could not conceive of such a queer thing as worship unaccompanied with an offering. You never read in the Bible nor in any other Hebrew literature that the Jews raised funds by giving church suppers or holding radio parties, card parties, dances, bazaars for the support of the Temple. They did start a bazaar and sold cattle and sheep and doves to pilgrims who came from foreign lands to worship at Jerusalem on the observation of the Passover feast. But there are two incidents connected with those transactions worth noting. The first is the money received from the sale of the sacrifices went into the purses of the hucksters and not into the treasury of the church. The second is, Jesus was so angered over even this indirect commercializing of the Temple worship that he took whips and beat up the cheats and swindlers who took advange of the devout pilgrim and overcharged and robbed him because he was forced to buy his sacrificial animal from them—the Jews who had so wickedly converted the very Temple of God into a den of thieves.

One thing we must learn about worship is that it is not only the duty but also a blessed privilege to us to make these weekly offerings to God as a token of our gratitude for all the material as well as spiritual things he gives us—not once a week—but every second of every minute of every hour of every day. There is not even the smallest fraction of time that is not loaded as fully as its capacity will contain precious gifts for you—for me. God never tires of bestowing his bounty upon His children—even to the most selfish of them. It is only the shallow and selfish child who cannot be happy in sharing. A church full of such folk is always weak and aenemic, and most likely dies in time. Where members give of their best and generously towards the support of the church you will always find a church full of people glowing with happiness and radiating the sunshine of God's love. They know the secret of offerings and sacrifices and they profit thereby.

If we could only get across to you the beauty of offerings with prayers and how we buy joy with our sacrifices to an all-loving and careful Father we would need to coax you longer to accompany your worship with offerings, for you would voluntarily offer your best and shout "ALL things come of thee oh Lord. And of thine own have we given thee."

LET'S PRAISE GOD WITH OUR PURSES.

OUR ANNUAL BAZAAR

We still maintain that the business of the Parish should be supported by voluntary offerings of the communicants. We still maintain we have no Biblical precedent for raising church funds by means of suppers, dances, radio parties, bazaars or any other such means.

Our views about our moral and personal responsibility for paying our church bills straight out of our pocket—like we pay our rent—is the only honest way to act. Therefore, when we beging rooting for our annual bazaar we want you to understand that so long as we are so unresponsive to our personal financial obligations, we must still run bazaars and other side shows to the glory of God and the success of His church.

We want you to come to the bazaar and bring the family and friends. We want you to meet your old friends, to sit down to supper or a plate of ice cream and talk over old times when you were kids in the same Sunday School Class with Tom, Dick and Harry. How long you've been married and how many children you have and where you are living now and how are all the folks and did you hear who got married at St. John's this year?

And now that we are through with our supper, which by the way, reminds us that Mrs. Pine is as always taking charge of the restaurant in her very capable way and has lost none of her culinary cunning—let us saunter over to see Mrs. Schmidt at the Fancy and Novelty Table where I know I will find many things I can use as Christmas gifts and also very attractive articles for the home.

We must not forget to stop at the Men's Booth. All our men folks are down to their last hanky and sock and tie and we must lay in a new supply of everything. By the way, do you know our supply of men's furnishings were of such fine quality that they, the men and boys, got tired wearing them so long? Well, it just goes to prove it's economical to buy good durable goods for our men folks.

I see Mrs. Miller has charge of the Domestic Table again this year. She certainly improved the sales of that table last year. Wonder if she has any kitchen sets. Let's go over and see. We need a supply of almost everything. It's terrible how pots and pans and towels and things wear out.

We told our grocer today he needn't expect our usual weekly order tomorrow. We are having a Bazaar at the Church and, of course, we must patronize the grocery and provision counter or Miss Nuttall and Miss Schabacker and their able assistant, "Mickey", will be "mad at us". And then Mr. Snell always donates such delicious things that we rally round and buy as much as we can afford. Our grocer is always nice about it and sometimes he sends a donation, too.

I wonder if we will have any pies or cakes or candied apples the parish women always make for the Bazaar? I hope we have for the women of South Philadelphia are the best cooks in the city and we love to eat what they bake.

The girls are going to have the Candy Table again, I hear. Whoever selects the candy they sell certainly knows what people like. Their candy fairly melts in your mouth. Did you hear whether Helen McHenry was going to make some of that very good fudge again this year and those coated grapes? We hope so, because they were delicious.

Feel thirsty? Let's go over and patronize our drink dispenser. Do you suppose Mrs. Young makes that root beer herself? Sure hits the spot, doesn't it? I think Walter Pine is in league with her and helps her pick up sales by turning on the furnace full blast!

OH, BY THE WAY! DID YOU HEAR THAT BILL LITTLE HAS GIVEN ANOTHER GOLD WRIST WATCH TO THE BAZAAR THIS YEAR? That's going to jack up our sales a lot. You know the watch he donates is always high grade stuff and carries with it a guarantee. So, whoever wins it, gets a time piece that will last the lucky winner a lifetime.

The kiddies never get tired of the fishing pond, do they? We can remember when WE were kids how the fishing pond was always the center of attraction in the Bazaar. It was a great sport to go fishing and get a whistle or a horn. Like Pop used to pull up an old boot when he went fishing.

How about strolling over to look at the Dolls? Oh, I mean the mechanical and not the animated ones like Marguerite and Elizabeth. Of course, we NEVER get weary of gazing that direction. This time let's turn our back on THEM and look at those babies on the shelf. Pretty nifty, what? And reasonable, too. There will be lots of happy girls in our parish by the end of the Bazaar and here's hoping every little girl gets just the dolly she wants.

How about sitting down and having a game of Radio? It will give us a chance to rest and occupy our time playing the game. Oh we almost forgot. If you want any cosmetics or toilet articles for Christmas presents, see Minnie Shoch and let her show you the stock on the counter over near the door. There are all popular brands and everything is very economically priced.

Say, this Bazaar is some interesting spot, isn't it? How about coming back tomorrow night and see the fun, and find out who the winner is of the WATCH!

The date of the Bazaar is December 8th and 9th. Admission is 10 cents. Every ticket has a coupon attached and will give you credit on any purchase in the Bazaar, BUT WILL NOT BE REDEEMED BY MONEY.

DOOR PRIZES BOTH NIGHTS!!!

OUR NEW PRESIDENT

At the last meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Parish the Rector announced that he had appointed Mrs. William J. Shives President of the organization.

Mrs. Shives is peculiarly fitted for the position and we are naturally pleased to know she is willing to assume the responsibilities of the office. She has served a long time as chairman of the Indian Hope Committee and in that capacity she attended regularly the monthly meetings of the Indian Hope Committee at the Church

House and always returned to us with a most interesting account of the proceedings. It is through these reports that we are kept in close touch with the Indian Hope work.

Mrs. Shives is a woman of pleasing personality and of good executive ability. She is most acceptable as a leader to the women and girls of the Parish and we have every reason to believe she will fill her new position with wisdom and discretion.

In another part of this issue there is an article on the subject of the Woman's Auxiliary written by Mrs. Shives. It is a most interesting description of that organization's work and we are sure will be a revelation to the women of our parish.

Now that we have a real president we must not think she can do all the work alone. We must assure her of our active co-operation and volunteer our services under her leadership.

The first thing we MUST do is to turn out enmasse at the next Auxiliary meeting to be held Monday, October 23rd, at 8.00 P. M., and give her the glad hand of welcome and pledge of support. The first announcement she will make, no doubt, is the date of the regular fall Corporate Communion. Incidentally we may mention that Mrs. Shives has been Choir Mother of the Junior Choir ever since Florence Armstrong retired owing to ill health, and a splendid job she has done and is doing. Mrs. Shives is most anxious to get all the young women of the parish interested, too, in the Auxiliary work. So let's give her all the encouragement we can and when she asks us to do anything, let's do it promptly and cheerfully.

ARE WE A MISSIONARY PARISH?

It is most important to us to answer that question definitely and in the right way. Some would have us think we are pretty much behind the procession and we that need "pepping up" to bring us abreast of the leaders. We must not let the observation go unchallenged, because it is false and will tend to discourage some of us who have not much of time or offerings to give.

> We are like every other parish. We have our workers and we have our drones. We have our givers and we have our takers. We have our boosters and we have our booters. We have our saints and we have our sinners. But even if we are not all good, neither are we all bad and we feel pretty sure if we were judged according to the law or averages, we would show just enough deficiency to prove our humanity and enough efficiency to allow us some claim to interest and devotion.

Some are always ready to respond to a call to service. They give their offerings to the church in the spirit of worship. They encourage their children to "carry on" in like spirit. During Lenten season, the big missionary season of the year, our communicants give generously not only to the needs of the Parish but also to the Church at large. The children of the Parish enter into the spirit of the occasion and generally give a good account of their efforts on Easter Day by making a big Easter Offering to Missions.

Of course, everybody knows that the boys and girls could not do this without the help and encouragement of their elders. Therefore, the missionary activities of the Seniors of the Parish are hidden in the offerings of our juniors.

But that is not altogether true because a long list of senior members make their Grace Thank Offering each day during the Lenten Season, too, from which we realize a pretty respectable sum. Besides this, the Woman's Auxiliary have their Thank Offering Boxes which they present to the Auxiliary Fund for Missions. Also we donate a sum of money to as many of the auxiliary activities as we can afford, and then sit and worry every auxiliary meeting because we cannot afford more. We have considered Radios and such things as means of increasing our gifts, but somehow we don't like the idea of gambling to pay our missionaries salaries. We would rather make a voluntary offering and make it as big as we can possibly afford.

Of course, there is a limit to our ability. We are a pretty poor parish and it does not take much to exhaust our resources. We give what we can and give it with a prayer.

And why are resources so limited?

Well, because we are a community of working men and women. When jobs are plentiful we are in the money and can and do give cheerfully to our church. But when jobs are non-existant we are in debt and we can do nothing but pray for the missions and our parish.

Many of our parishioners are out of work now. They have been out of work a long time. Some are on relief—which amounts to 10 cents per capita per diem. Out of the abundance of their poverty they get starvation; consequently, they are helpless to be of financial or material aid to missions. They need our help instead. Their need is our first obligation and we do what we can as a parish to meet that need. It is heartbreaking and discouraging sometimes to see our own suffer and know there are others who need our aid just as sorely. However, we give our food, our clothing and what little money we can afford for their relief; but we must confess that the poverty of our brothers is a serious handicap to our general missionary ambitions.

Oh yes, we have those who can but won't help. They are the selfish brothers and sisters of our church family. They pretend to be impatient with the rest of us because of many short comings they charge against us. We know their criticisms are false and are not sincere; that they are made simply to cover their shameful miserliness and lack of spiritual co-operation. What a different story we could write about our parish and its influence if our carping brothers should be converted and become normal children of God.

LET'S PRAY FOR ALL WHO CRITICISE US AND OUR MISSIONARY EFFORTS.

To the WOMEN OF THE PARISH

At the September meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary, Mr. McHenry appointed me your new President, an honor which I feel has been conferred upon me.

I can only hope to fill this appointment by having the co-operation of every woman, young and old, of the parish.

All baptized women of the Church are eligible for membership and it is the aim of this branch to have 100 per cent membership. The missionary work of the Parish Branch is to send delegates and money to the five committees, the Indians' Hope Association, Domestic, Foreign, Colored and Diocesan meetings at the Church House. They in turn bring back reports of the workings of these committees to the Parish Branch. Money sent to Missionaries from the Pennsylvania Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary through the five Committees in 1938, were as follows:

Indians' Hope Association	$6,953.54
Domestic Committee	5,839.39
Foreign Committee	5,763.24
Colored Committee	4,202.62
Diocesan Committee	4,182.12

The United Thank Offering is another committee of the Woman's Auxiliary, to which every woman, young or old, should contribute. The United Thank Offering was founded by Mrs. Richard H. Soale, of Massachusetts, in 1889, and the first offering was used to send Miss Lisa Lovell to Japan.

Since 1889 the women of the Church have shared in the United Thank Offering, which provides for the training and sending of women workers into the Missionary Fields and cares for them when sick and disabled.

More than 400 women have served the Church under the United Thank Offering as doctors, nurses, teachers and missionaries. It also supports one man, Bishop Rowe of Alaska. Churches, schools, hospitals and parish houses have been built from this Offering.

The total amount given to the United Thank Offering by the women of the Church for 1938 was $23,275.00! Think what an offering would be presented if each woman's offering was a penny a day.

The United Thank Offering gives us an opportunity to express thankfulness for countless blessings and to share this thankfulness with many other people. The money given represents a part of ourselves, our time, our energy, and our thoughts. It is a gift, not an assessment, but a Thank Offering for many small daily blessings.

(Below you will find Questions and Answers which I feel will be very helpful to every woman of the Parish.)

1. What is the Woman's Auxiliary?

   Ans. The women of the Church organized to help the National Council in its work of bringing Christ's Kingdom to all men and women everywhere.

2. When was the Woman's Auxiliary organized?

   Ans. General Convention meeting in Baltimore in 1871 passed a resolution that the women of the Church should be organized for missionary work.
   Following this Convention the W. A. to the Board of Missions was organized with Miss Mary Emory as its first National Executive Secretary.

3. Has any change been made in the organization of the Woman's Auxiliary since 1871?

   Ans. Yes. In 1919 General Convention reorganized the work of the Church and created the National Council. The W. A. in triennial session voted to become Auxiliary to the National Council and our charter was amended in 1920 so that we are now W. A. to the National Council.

4. What is the National Council?

   Ans. National Council is the Executive Committee of General Convention, organized to put into effect the plan and program adopted by General Convention.

5. How many departments of the National Council are there and what are they?

   Ans. There are six:
   1. Foreign Missions
   2. Domestic Missions
   3. Christian Education.
   4. Christian Social Relations
   5. Publicity
   6. Finance.

6. Are there any women on the National Council?

   Ans. Yes, four. These are nominated to General Convention by the triennial session of the W. A. and may serve for two terms of three years each.

MAY I. SHIVES.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS ON THE DAUGHTERS OF THE KING

Published in Last Month's Issue

1. By The Daughters of the King, I mean an Order established for women and girls of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the hope that The Order may be helpful in deepening the Spiritual Life of its members and that through them other women and girls may be brought into closer fellowship with Jesus Christ and His Church.

2. The Senior Bible Class for young women in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre (now Church of the Resurrection) New York City had for its class name "Daughters of the King." The teacher, Mrs. Margaret J. Franklin, was desirous of stimulating the class to greater activity and more zeal for Christ and His Church and called a meeting of the class on Easter Even, April 4, 1895. The purpose of the meeting was to arouse a deeper interest in the spiritual life of the members and to enlist their co-operation as a class in some definite work in the extension of the Kingdom of Christ. The consent of the rector being obtained for the forming of this larger association a committee was appointed for the purpose of selecting an emblem and a motto.

3. The obligations of The Daughters of the King are to so far as they shall be able to faithfully obey the two rules of The Order, the Rule of Prayer and the Rule of Service; to offer at all times such aid to the rector as may be deemed necessary to the furtherance of the cause of Christ; to wear habitually the Cross of the Order and to spread the principles of the Order as God and may give them opportunity.

4. It is not wrong for a Daughter of the King to take part in any innocent pleasure. Any pleasure that is proper for any follower of Jesus Christ to join in is proper for a Daughter of the King to enjoy. Most pleasures are innocent in themselves but we should be careful to participate in them in a proper manner and at an appropriate time and place. On the other hand all pleasures can be made sinful if we desire to make them so.

For instance: Checkers is usually considered a very innocent game but when we fall into the Sin of Anger or Cheating in an innocent game of Checkers it ceases to be an innocent game of checkers but a sinful pastime.

QUIZ ME

Don't you get a big kick out of the "Information Please" Radio program?

We do!

Just to listen in is an education. We learn facts about things we never knew. Then, too, we often learn new things about old subjects. Lots of times we also flush with shame over our ignorance concerning commonplace facts we thought we knew all about. Also, lots of our misplaced information gets readjusted.

The Quiz Program strongly reminds one of those old fashioned party games of question and answer we delighted to play when we old timers were young and gay.

Now I wonder how a private quiz between myself and myself would go. For instance, if I ask me a question about myself as to how I spend my time, my energy and my money, would I learn anything either interesting or worth while concerning myself?

Let's make up a list of questions with a space for answers and try out the idea. It may be fund and then, too, it may be revealing.

We really do think that if we answer the questions honestly we will get a pretty clear photograph of our character. So let's go!

OUR TIME QUIZ

Question Answer

1. How many hours a week do I work?
2. Play?
3. Spend helping someone in need?
4. Spend in Sunday worship?
5. Spend in Sunday pleasure?
6. Spend in Prayer?
7. Spend in reading the Bible?
8. Spend in personal examination?
9. Can I divide my time more equitably between God, my fellow man and myself?
10. Am I really interested in moral and spiritual things?

OUR ENERGY QUIZ

(The following are best answered by much—little —or none)

Question Answer

1. How much energy do I spend on my work?
2. In my play?
3. In my Social and Christian Welfare work?
4. In resisting temptation?
5. In helping others (either materially or spiritually?)
6. In doing Church work?
7. In winning candidates for Confirmation?
8. In radiating good cheer and smiles wherever I go?
9. In suppressing gossip and expressing good opinions everywhere?
10. In forgiving as I would have God forgive me?

OUR MONEY QUIZ

Question Answer

1. Am I employed ?
2. What do I do?
3. How much do I earn?
4. How much board do I pay?
5. If married how much do I spend for food, fuel, light, rent, clothing, etc.
6. What do I spend a week for
   a. tobacco b. candy or chewing gum c. drinks
   d. movies e. suppers f. cars
   g. gas h. oil i. repairs j. carfare
   k. any other luxury.
   (Note: Add cost of all items and enter a lump sum.)
7. What do I spend on a vacation?
8. What do I spend on Christmas presents?
9. What do I give to the Church each week?
10. Do I ever give towards the special needs of the Church, such for instance as Christmas and Easter Offerings or Fireside Dues and how much?
11. How much for charity?
12. How much for all my lodge dues?

If you answer these questions as you should answer them, you are allowed to consider yourself a fairly normal man or woman, and even God will say, "Well done!"

A LETTER OF APPRECIATION

Not so very long ago a very dear friend of the Rector and a hard worker in the Parish said: "What you ought to do is to get older people to teach Sunday School classes. The young people are not successful and its children do not have the same respect for them—they are too near the same age.

The thing that made the rector chuckle was the speaker started a most successful career as teacher when she was a very young girl.

FUNNY, ISN'T IT?

How do you spell Constantinople?

Why, C-o-n-s-t-a-n-t-i-n-o-p-l-e, of course.

Now without counting them, how many letters are in it?

Well, fourteen, I think.

Wrong, there are only two letters in it!

THE BOYS WIN

Something very significant occurred Sunday afternoon, October 1st, at St. John's Sunday School. It happened when the Supterintendent read out the list of scholars entitled to advanced period Buttons. At the end of the list it was announced that in May Thomas Dean was entitled to his ten year gold pin. The reason he did not receive it then was due to the end of the Sunday School sessions previous to the summer vacation.

Sunday, October 1st, two more young men—brothers by the way—won the 10-year button also. On the same day John Dean, brother to Thomas Dean, received his 9-year button.

We congratulate the young men most heartily for their enviable achievement. It is something to look back upon with pride. How we wish other former scholars had carried on and won the same honors. These four young men do not need any badges or buttons to prove they have attended Sunday School for nine or ten years. All you need do is to look them over and you will soon see they are clean-looking, self-respecting young men who believe in right things and right ways of living. Furthermore, they are all strong, aggressive fellows who can play rough games with the toughest and play them with decency and honor. They are fine examples of what a fellow can make of himself when he chooses to follow the champions of champions—Jesus Christ.

Keep going young fellows, you are showing the rest of us how to live well. We need your example of true manhood. Oh, yes! we know you make a fumble and miss placement just ever so often, but we like the way you recover and carry on.

Now, young women, this attainment of the four winning young men ought to act as a spur to you, to show the Parish that, after all, the feminine of the species is just as capable doing a 10-year stretch in Sunday School as are our young men. We are looking your way, girls, and are waiting for you to come through with a record, too.

SUPPOSE

Suppose you were a member of a very large family where every one was supposed to share the expenses of maintenance of the home. And suppose you sat at the table three times a day and ate your fill.

And suppose you used the snug and warm sitting room as often as you chose.

And read as many books you wished to read.

And suppose you had a nice comfortable bed to sleep in.

And suppose there were servants to do all the work in the house so that all you needed to do was to go to work or to a reception, or to a lodge meeting, or go to the movies.

And suppose you spent your income on nice clothing, and vacations, and amusements when and as often as you so pleased.

And then suppose at the end of each week the members of the family circle were expected to pay the per capita cost of the home and its upkeep.

And suppose you would say to the others you could not afford to give anything. Or you were sick and tired of being pestered about the cost of living. And that any way living at home was not so good. And you argued it was an imposition for you to pay any part of the home expenses—what do you suppose your family would think of you?

Well, I'll tell you what they would think! They would think that they had at least one drone in their bee hive and they would not be very happy to pay your share of the expenses as well as their own.

Do you know what bees do with drones once a year? Of course you do! The workers—or honey gatherers—rise in their might and kill the drones. They thereby solve what might become a family social problem by ridding the hive of non-supporting members.

Of course we humans like to think we emulate the busy bee but we cannot countenance his rather abrupt and complete extermination of his lazy good-for-nothing drone brother. Yet we cannot help feeling that the bee way of punishing selfishness and laziness does almost really fit the crime and that the drone member of our family would richly deserve some such punishment, but we cannot be so radical in our methods.

Any way we do see that a drone, who takes all and gives nothing, is a very unpleasant person to have around—sometimes perhaps we wish we were a bee.

Why all this Supposing?

Why this is why:—We of St. John's Church are one big family—just like other churches. And just like our family life we must have means to pay for our support. We must have coal; we must have electric light and gas; we must have employees to work for us; we must have books and musical instruments and stationery, and money to feed and clothe God's poor children living in our parish. Many of us know our responsibility of giving of our means to pay our honest debts. And we give generously of what we have. But we cannot help being sore when we see certain others of our church family sit back and never dreaming of their responsibility for any of our church expenses.

They are those who complain that the only thing you hear any more in church is the rector standing in the choir every Sunday and saying giveme, giveme, giveme. And if this indecent begging does not stop they will go elsewhere to church. Others say they are too poor and instead of the church expecting them to support it, the church ought really support them.

Now there is a startling difference between these professing poor and the really poor of the church—the really poor give liberally of their scanty means to the church's support.

We wonder what would happen if the names of all the drones and no-givers were read out in open church once a year—as they do in the lodge, and every man who did not pay his weekly dues—unless prevented by sickness or loss of a job—should be publicly suspended for non-payment of dues! Wouldn't some faces of our church family be red!!

Do you think they would get "mad" and leave the Church? Well, what if they did—would the church suffer such a big loss?

Personally we think there ought to be a Canon presented in the next triennial Convention demanding that every church member who stubbornly refused to contribute his just dues towards the support of his Parish Church should be suspended and not allowed to come to Holy Communion or receive any of the offices of our religion until he paid in full his dues. Oh, but you say—that would not be at all Christian. Perhaps it would not and again perhaps it would. Anybody except a confirmed sentimentalist would feel that there is no place in the Christian church for the stubborn and selfish hypocrites who use Christianity for a cloak of their meanness and refuse to pay for the cloak.

We are prepared to strike from the register of St. John's parish the names of any of all professing Christian who is "mad" at us for insisting they shoulder their own burden of support and work of our church. But we will serve notice now that we will not give them letters of transfer to any other parish, all we will do will be to tell the Rector of any other parish that a certain Mr. — is a church drone. He never comes to church, he never receives his communion, he never pays his weekly church offerings. He never works for his Master or his church and is using his church as a sort of hiding place for all his meanness.

MUTE EVIDENCE

At evening I have watched beside
Some river, with its ebbing tide
And seen the waters soothingly
Come lave the shore, then flow to sea:
A river which, at flood, can beat
Great rocks to pebbles at my feet.

In pastures, hard on early Spring,
I've seen the dainty violet bring
Its flowers forth from places where
A month before the ground was bare;
I've seen arbutus blossoms twine
Where sprawled a brown, denuded vine.

When June arrived I've often stood
In silent pause within a wood
And gazed at all the old things new,
Resplendent in the gowns they grew,
To grant me such a pungent air
From limbs and twigs I once saw bare.

I've seen the clouds dismiss their blue,
Then watched the sun come peeping through;
I've seen the rainbow build its arch;
I've watched the moon's nocturnal march.
Oh, atheist! Thou sullen clod,
How can'st Thou say, "There is no God"?

THANKSGIVING DAY

Be Sure You Observe It This Year With Understanding and Appreciation

This is the day of days! Never in the history of our nation had we as great reason for giving thanks to Almighty God for His providence as we have this Thanksgiving Day in the year of our Lord 1939. Just once glance at the changed map of the world and the most unthinking will see and understand.

In almost every section of the earth war and its attending horrors are destroying nations and centers of Christian civilization, leaving death, ruin, famine and wandering tribes of homeless families in their path. Untold wealth and property have been ruthlessly squandered and destroyed. The earth is full of woe. All the nations of Europe and many nations of Asia have been victims of the holocaust—the frightful monster sprung from the womb of infernal greed.

Yet, as if by a stupendous miracle, we as a nation have come through unscathed. Peace and good will reign within our borders. Friendship and understanding we enjoy with our South American and Canadian neighbors. Also we are separated from the zone of strife by wide oceans so that we feel that with common sense and discretion we may continue our present peace indefinitely and, when the time comes, lend our good offices in restoring Christian civilization to the stricken nations of the world.

Therefore, let us on this Thanksgiving Day render praise to God for so shielding us from war and all its attending perils and suffering and for reserving us as the hope of the world. Who can be so ungracious towards God and so blind to His own interests as to neglect to praise God for His goodness towards us?

While war is raging among other nations, prosperity is abiding with us. Not for a generation have we been as nearly prosperous as we are today and happily we can say this good condition has no foundation in the wars and sufferings of our sister nations. It is success growing out of good business in supplying the needs of our own and the other nations of the Western Hemisphere. There have been—perhaps still are—certain savage groups of war profiteers in our land, who try to batten on the suffering of unhappy nations and by jacking the prices of necessities so that they may claw in filthy dollars smeared with the blood of their suffering victims. But they are so abandoned to all sense of decency that it is a shame even to name them. However, aside from these beasts and birds of prey, our people are clean and decent and we can with a clear conscience praise God this Thanksgiving Day—for He is good for His mercy and endureth forever.

Yes, we have the orphan, the widow, the poor, the maimed, the blind and many unemployed, for with our prosperity has come a keener sense of our responsibility for God's special children—the unfortunate He provides for our pity and help.

Yes, this is a special Thanksgiving Day. We ought to celebrate it in a special way. One special way open for us is to fortify the Church of Jesus Christ where we are and prepare it for the day of Grace, when the Angel of Peace returns to the stricken nations, so that we will be strong to serve.

Among other means of preparation we must finance our church adequately. To do this we need only to bring our offerings, so long overdue, on Thanksgiving Day as our way of acknowledging our personal obligations and strengthening our church against the day of opportunity.

Now that work is more plentiful and wages are somewhat more easy to obtain we are in a better position to meet our obligations and make our offerings.

Let us, therefore, make Thanksgiving Day an holy jubilee, and with joy and love wipe clean our debts to the Church.

Let us make it a special day to offer all our overdue envelopes and other obligations to the God of our Fathers as with holy enthusiasm we sing, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

15. "Be careful for nothing, but in every thing by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God." (.....)

THE MIRACLE OF THE CHRISTMAS CHIMES

CHRISTMAS EVE. A chill lay deep in my soul for Cornelia, my wife, had been taken that day to a private hospital to be treated with the sobering-up processes for acute alcoholism.

I stood on the corner of Fifth Avenue and 57th Street in New York, shivering with cold in spite of a heavy camels hair topcoat and fur-lined gloves.

The fact of its being Christmas Eve brought sharp realization that life had given me a raw deal; I had been cheated. The situation revolved in my mind; I was young, not yet thirty and with a good job; married to the only girl I had ever loved; we had two children, little girls aged six and four. On the surface it was a perfect set-up for happiness and there I was, by and large, the most miserable person on earth!

My mind was made up. It was not a sudden decision for it had been formulating for months. I intended to make a clean break-away and start life over again. No one had a right to ruin my life, not even the girl I had loved enough to marry.

In the gay jostling crowds, I was on my way to a florist to order quantities of flowers to make "cheery and bright" Cornelia's awakening next day, as "Mamie," her mother, had instructed. Her chauffeur was to call for me there.

Mamie! As she had wept above Cornelia's bed in the hospital, a strange feeling came over me; a horrid thought that I was, after all, a mother-in-law dominated male. That old stuff.

I asked myself savagely, to what extent had this woman been the cause of the wrecking of my home? Beginning with Cornelia's birth, she had rested on soft satins. At that very moment, her form was reclining under a satin-rose coverlet of fluffiest down, thoughtfully brought along by her mother.

My thoughts raced; I honestly did not know that Cornelia's family belonged in the big money class until after we were engaged. It was love at first sight, a whirlwind courtship during three weeks in Florida moonlight.

They called me selfish and stubborn because I rebelled at accepting Cornelia's standards, with her mother to pay the bills. I wanted my wife to come into a home that I could provide. Mamie triumphed. "Why shouldn't Cornelia continue her life among her own set?" The triumph had extended through the years, even to the expensive topcoat I had on my back and the imported gloves. I curbed a crazy impulse to tear the garments off and throw them into the gutter.

I loved my little daughters though they scarcely seemed to belong to me. Perhaps that was a blessing, as things were going. Mamie had taken care of them. She adored them as she adored Cornelia. I, a mere father, was devoid of responsibility.

Suddenly I found myself gazing into the windows of a Ten Cent Store filled with cute little gadgets for youngsters. In Mamie's regime, her grandchildren should never soil their patrician hands with things so cheap, however amusing.

Cheap! The word stirred memories of a conversation with my own Mother. She was displeased that my wedding gift to Cornelia had been a silver cocktail set. She said, "You think it's sophisticated, my son, to present your bride with this beautiful gift. It isn't. It may prove to be cheap, even tawdry."

It was cheap, even tawdry, to watch a beautiful wife, conventionally correct before dinner, lapse into a maudlin, driveling, disgusting drunken woman. Liquor did something to the gray matter of her brain. Of course, I had sense enough to know it wasn't the fault of the cocktail set.

As I recalled the many shameful, pitiful scenes incidental to sobering-up, physical collapse and humiliation, an icy sweat broke out on my temples. I felt sick. I was haunted by the specters of our love. "And love is dead," I said aloud. How often my mother had told me that true love never dies. She was wrong. I believed I knew better.

I had wandered past the florist's down into the Thirties. Suddenly from far off, it seemed as though from space, I heard strains of music like soft tinkling bells. As I walked, it came closer, until a full harmony floated above the crowded sidewalk, "Nearer, my God, to Thee, nearer to Thee! E'en though it be a Cross that raiseth me."

I stopped in my tracks. Was I going crazy? Was I hearing things, my mother's favorite hymn, from that invisible far-away heaven where she was? I spoke to a man, "What's that music?"

"Chimes. Bells. In a store window. Next block," he grinned.

I don't know how long a time went by; I was rooted to the spot, listening to the bells. Suddenly I found myself sobbing; the hard ugly sobs of a man unused to tears. I was making a fool of myself and didn't care. I couldn't leave; those chimes were playing on my soul strings. My whole being was reaching out for God and a mystic power was being infused into me. It was a strange sensation to feel God's Presence stirring, winged on the vibrations of the chimes, "Nearer my God to Thee, nearer to Thee! E'en though it be a Cross that raiseth me."

Involuntarily I clenched my teeth with a groan. What was a Cross? A new emotion caught and shook me, tore me. True I had been cheated, but not by Cornelia, not by Mamie and her money, not by life, but by my own weakness.

I knew then where every quest for the source of failure ends. In one's own soul. No one else can rob your soul of its integrity. Again the pealing bells cut across my stumbling thoughts, "E'en though it be a Cross that raiseth me."

Christ faced His Cross and triumphed. He gave up His life. Here was the unexpected twist; with the intrusion of a remembered verse of Scripture, "He that findeth his life, shall lose it: but he that loseth his life for my sake, shall find it." Matthew 10:39.

I had made up my mind to save my life at whatever cost to others. Now I knew that it was not that I had a wife and children to break away from, but the important fact was that they had me. It was I who had been a weakling and a fool.

I was not given to sudden violence. This present crisis would pass. Cornelia would be herself again and then, we'd start together anew; I'd pay every bill myself.

This resolve rested on a substantial, triple foundation; Cornelia had brains; she was a good sport; and she loved me. Henceforth she must understand that I am her husband. I had plenty of reasons for faith in success. Nothing can defeat anybody on fire with faith. And with love thrown in.

Retracing my steps to the florist where Mamie's car was waiting, no urge to flight was left in me. All that had died, been swept away in the tones of the bells. Only determined faith remained, buried deep in love and the quiet stillness of peace. After all, it was a happy Christmas Eve!

—"Your Faith."

THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

The Woman's Auxiliary had a splendid meeting on Monday, October 23rd, with thirty ladies in attendance. I was greatly impressed by the way I was received by the ladies and by their assured cooperation. With the cooperation of every member we can be of great help in the missionary work of the parish.

On Sunday, November 19th, at 9:30 A. M., the women of the parish are going to have a Corporate Communion, so won't you all try to make a special effort to attend. As you know all women are members of the Woman's Auxiliary.

We are going to have a Radio Party, Friday, November 24th, and would like to have as large a gathering as possible in order to try and raise as much money as we can for our treasury. We should have money to be used in missionary work in the parish, for you know there are plenty of places where it can be used to good advantage. We are going to have a Turkey for a door prize.

Remember, Monday, November 27th, is our next meeting. Come out and have an evening of pleasure. William MacVaugh has kindly offered to show moving pictures of the World's Fair, in color, taken by himself which are exceptionaly clear and fine. If you don't come you will be missing a real treat.

It is our sincere wish that every woman of St. John's Parish will join with us in doing and enjoying the missionary work so necessary in our parish life.

MAY I. SHIVES.

YOU CAN'T GIVE GOD ANYTHING!

The title may appear a little crude but it is true all the same. There is one human trait that always makes the blood of the writer seeth, simmer and sizzle. It is the cockney air of patronage assumed by many of the brethren towards God. To observe them you'd think they were doing God a favor when they graciously spare a few moments out of their busy little lives to go to church and open up their purses for some spare change to deposit upon the Alms Basin.

There are three particularly unpleasant specimens of church goers who take the joy out of worship. The first is the pompous little man who gives big money with a flurry and a now-don't-bother-me-again air. He makes you feel you ought to lay flat in the dust and grovel with gratitude for his "gift" to God. The second is the christian skin flint who counts the pennies as he drops them on the plate, growling all the time that the rector is always begging for money, money, money. One can never go to church these days and not be made to feel he is worshiping in an almshouse. The third is the man with Uriah Heep airs, who "gives" gushingly and fulsomely to God with a what-a-good-boy-am-I air.

The only big thing tbout such poor little mankins is their exaggerated ego. If they would only stop for only one minute and consider who God is and who they are, they perhaps would have the grace to blush with shame. They probably would call to mind that they started life the most senseless, weak and helpless, naked, little animal in all God's creation. If they had not received attention immediately at birth perhaps they would not have survived the strenuous ordeal of getting started right. Summed up, we come into this world with no clothes, no sense, no strength, no sight, no power of speech, no means of defense, very little sense of sight or taste or feeling. Of all the animals in creation we are the most helpless.

That being the case whence cometh our help? Even a half wit could answer that question like a shot. If God provides for all our needs what have we that is all our own we can give him in return? We are reminded of the Offertory. "ALL things come of THEE, O Lord and of THINE OWN have we given THEE." In other words we share with God the gifts of God.

That is why we maintain you can't give God anything. What you can do, and with good grace, too, is to show Him that you do realize how manifold are His gifts to us, by offering a portion of His gifts as a gesture of our love and gratitude for his providence and care for us.

Don't you think you would feel a lot more satisfied with yourself—don't you think you would give a larger offering more cheerfully if you would just try to remember that if it were not for God and His watchful care over us all the time, we would not have any time, any strength, any initiative, any material substance to offer him?

Suppose we try to forget that GOD depends upon our WHIM and remember that WE depend on HIS PROVIDENCE.

THEN SHALL WE BE WORTHY OF HIS BLESSINGS!

A LETTER FROM OUR TREASURER

Dear Rector:

The Treasurer submits the following report:

October 1, 1939—Receipts		$ 951.27
	Expenses	1040.90
	Deficit	$89.63

This report is as of October 1st and as you see shows a deficit of $89.63. As I told the congregation last Sunday this is due to the fact that the Envelope Collections this summer decreased $120 in comparison with the summer of 1938.

I could give you more figures but for what purpose. Figures are essential to statisticians, tax collectors and for business men to compute their profit and loss. But we are not dealing in commodities or tangible things to be sold for profit or to be speculated with. We are not paying taxes to avoid the consequences of the law or from a sense of civic duty. No, we are dealing in the spiritual. We are concerned with the soul. We are in a business that is absolutely voluntary. We must contribute freely, not from a sense of duty, but because we want to and because we are laying up profit in heaven. If we have not kept up our Church Envelopes, should that alone not be sufficient reason to do so?

As I write this I think of a young man in Pawtucket, Rhode Island, sitting in a wheel chair, who has suffered the tortures and agony of Arthritis. I received a letter from Donald recently. He speaks of St. John's Church. He says he would like to be able to walk into the Bazaar and surprise Mrs. Schmidt at the Novelty Table. He mentions that a certain name has been added to the Cradle Roll. In a spirit of fun he adds "when in need of Cummings Anthracite, call Gladstone 0900," which proves he says, that he reads and enjoys his Broadcaster.

I shall always keep and treasure that letter, when I am disheartened, when I feel like quitting on the job. I shall read Donald's letter and feel ashamed of myself for the thought.

Donald's physical self may be confined to a wheelchair but spiritually and intellectually he is freer than most of us. He thinks clearer, he is more kind, he is not selfish and he has a greater interest in the worthwhile things that we allow to escape us. He has been able to grasp and comprehend the great work to be done in our parish and if Donald Dawes, 300 miles away, has been able to show such a real and enthusiastic interest in our church and make himself a part of it, we who can enjoy the privilege of gathering there to worship, should place our church not on an equal plane with the material pleasures and necessities of life, but on a higher one! We should consider its functions of greater importance to us than those of our ordinary daily life. We must learn to love our church and then we will never have to want or ask for money. It will be given freely and gladly without stint.

Mr. McHenry, I should like you to meet Donald. I should like every one in St. John's Church to meet him. I am proud of him and as he is certain to read this in the Broadcaster I say to him, "Thanks, General."

VERNON MATTHEWS,
Treasurer.

EVERY MEMBER CAMPAIGN

An Every Member Campaign is not a new idea to the old timer St. Johnite. That's the way we started the Parish on the upgrade 27 years ago. We started by taking stock of our assets and liabilities and then laid the plan of survey of the whole section of the city from the Delaware River to Broad Street and from Washington to Martinsville and beyond. We did not have many workers in those days, but the ones we had were real workers. They were interested in reorganizing the Parish and gave all their time, energy and money to the job. Our Every Member Campaign could better have been called an any member campaign, as we were taking in all we could persuade to come and worship with us. We were not after funds nearly so much as we were after souls. Now that we look back upon those first days we wonder at our nerve for tackling that problem.

Then too, we used to have a little every member campaign once every two months, when our Sunday School scholars, teachers and officers went out of a Sunday afternoon and rounded up the absentees of the month. So today we are more or less mentally and spiritually prepared to go into this big venture of the whole Church of the nation under the leadership of our Presiding Bishop.

Sunday, November 3d (the 22d Sunday after Trinity) will ever remain a memorable day for us at St. John's Church. We sent out a special call for Holy Communion as our individual act of consecration to the campaign. A stiff northwester was beating down with drenching fury upon the city. One could scarcely walk half a city block without getting soaked to the skin. Nevertheless the congregation of worshipers was larger than any Communion Service of the year, and almost equal to an Easter or Christmas Communion. We did not attempt to preach a sermon—we made first a simple address to the effect that at the call of our Presiding Bishop we were about to start a nation wide Every Member Campaign by the celebration of the Holy Communion.

In the afternoon we assembled for a Consecration Service for the Sunday School in the church. The storm raged outside and cut down our attendance to a mere handful. Yet, we had a most inspiring session and the time fairly flew. Before we realized it our hour and fifteen minutes were up and we had to knock off for the afternoon with a lot of work unfinished.

Our next move now is to get out and visit the parishioners and get our family records up-to-date. It has been the custom to have a card made out to each member and take them and call upon them. The principal dope we sought to acquire was on the question of how much the member would pledge towards the support of the parish. We have drawn up a survey sheet by means of which we hope to carry our campaign far beyond the pledge for support. For the convenience of our readers we print below our substitute for the individual card system. At a glance you will see it is a family sheet and covers the church activities of every individual of the family—from Dad to the baby—including the pledge of support. We ask you to study the sheet carefully, get acquainted with the meaning of the initials, so that when the committee member calls you will be prepared to answer promptly and intelligently all the questions.

We are hoping our campaign will be most successful and IT WILL BE IF YOU WILL CO-OPERATE.

THE EVERY MEMBER CAMPAIGN IS ON

PRE-SALE OF OUR BAZAAR is now on at the City Mission, 225 South Third Street
COME AND SEE AND BUY!

How about returning all your over due weekly church envelopes NOW?

Vernon Matthews has been invited to give a monthly statement of the Parish finances. His first statement was startling. It showed we had slipped behind over $100.00 in our envelopes and that he had to borrow money to pay our salaries.

Just some COMMON CENTS will save our poor old Treasurer from an attack of N. P.

Please, won't some of our church debtors change their COMMON CENTS into dollars and save the Doctor's bill.

Remember! Our Annual Bazaar is our way of raising funds for parish support. Our system is cash (and lots of it) and carry everything you buy. If you buy enough we will carry it for you.

Patronize our grocery counter—everything is fresh and everything is cheap.

Take chances on that gold watch. Its worth real money.

Come early and get one of Mrs. Pine's tempting suppers.

Visit the Men's Furnishings and lay in your stock of ties, socks, hankies, mufflers, etc.

Be sure you buy a dolly.

Call on Mrs. Schmidt and buy your Christmas presents.

Look around for Mrs. Young and buy a drink.

Get your cakes and candy at the girl's counter.

Stop at the Toilet Counter and don't go away empty handed.

Go Fish,—and make the children happy.

When worn out sit down and play Radio.

Ask Margaret Miller for everything you need in the kitchen. She has an unlimited supply.

A MAN WHO HEARD GOD'S VOICE

Sheng-Min had been captured by Chinese bandits. The others of his family had escaped, but Sheng-Min was only just recovering from fever, and was not strong enough to get away in time. The bandits handled him roughly, and Sheng-Min at first was terrified, but suddenly he heard a voice, a quiet voice that was heard by no one else, "My strength is sufficient for thee."

He was for a moment lost in wonder, but then at once he felt calm and brave, and even when he was forced into a horrible pit, and left there in the darkness, he did not lose courage, for again the quiet voice sounded clearly in his ears, "My strength is sufficient for thee."

For over thirty days and nights Shen-Min was kept in his filthy prison, unable to do more than turn over on a narrow ledge on which he had been placed, until it seemed as if he would be too stiff and weary ever to walk again.

Then at last a day came when he was dragged out and told, "Your ransom has been paid. You are free."

At his home, his family anxiously awaited his return. He had been ill, how could he possibly have lived through that terrible experience? When at last he walked into the courtyard, strong and radiant, they were amazed.

"How is it?" they asked, and Shen-Min told them, "I heard the voice of my lord, 'My strength is sufficient for thee,' and truly He gave me the strength I needed."

THE DEVIL'S ASSURANCE

Genesis 3:4: "The serpent said unto the woman—'Ye shall not surely die.'"

This remark is taken from a very interesting conversation said to have taken place between Satan and Eve, the mother of us all. No doubt you remember reading it in the Bible story of the creation and the fall. You may be one of those who do not accept the record as authentic. But whether or not you are, the fact remains I am sure that though very old, the sentiment of the sentence expresses in almost identical words what we have heard, perhaps used, on scores of occasions. The desire of Eve to dispose of the forbidden fruit was keen. The urge to take the risk was strong and the doubt as to whether Jehovah would punish the act of disobedience if his command were broken was born of the wish to satisfy curiosity and desire. According to the conclusion of the incident she learned to her sorrow what a dreadful force for evil and sorrow she had loosed on the world forever. Yet, how very like Eve are her children!

There are many moral and spiritual things in our lives that are taboo. The commands of God, the dictates of our conscience, and the wisdom of experience warn against disobedience of certain high laws of life. For instance, the laws of chastity, honesty, temperance, truth, fidelity, gentleness and others run counter to our desires. We know we ought to obey these laws—but, if we do we know we cannot enjoy the fruits of their opposites which are carnal. It is just when we are weighing the wisdom of yielding that the Devil throws his assurance that we shall not surely die if we yield just once to our wish to do evil. And it is almost a hundred to one shot he fools us into breaking the moral law with results which sometimes are far reaching and terrible.

The queer part is we never seem to get wise to the Devil's assurance. Over and over again he tricks us into sin with the same old line of lies.

The effects are not at first so very apparent, but every time we listen and yield to the assurance our power of resistance is weakened so much the more. Finally we find ourselves with no power to combat an evil suggestion. The Devil's assurance wins and we are the losers in the struggle towards spiritual decency.

Our will power is dominant.

Our won't power is dead.

And we may as well be dead too for we have fallen from our high estate as Sons of God and are now miserable slaves of sin.

BEWARE OF THE DEVIL'S ASSURANCE!

PRE-SALE OF BAZAAR ARTICLES

We have so many really attractive things to sell that we feel you might be interested in them and the very reasonable prices of each. We are having a pre-sale at the City Mission, 225 S. 3rd Street NOW and would be glad to have you drop in and make your purchases while our goods are fresh.

We assure you that there are no second handed articles among the lot nor are there any seconds as to quality. Every article on sale is direct from the jobber or factory and is guaranteed to be perfect as to quality.

As for the prices you can judge for yourself whether or not they compare with stores selling the same quality of goods. You can buy at lower prices but you sacrifice quality and wearing endurance if you do; and in the long run you prove yourself an extravagant buyer.

CHRISTMAS BELLS

I heard the bells on Christmas Day
Their old, familiar carols play,
And wild and sweet
The words repeat
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!
And thought how, as the day had come,
The belfries of all Christendom
Had rolled along
The unbroken song
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!
Till, ringing, singing on its way
The world revolved from night to day,
A voice, a chime,
A chant sublime
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!
Then from each black, accursed mouth
The cannon thundered in the South,
And with the sound
The carols drowned
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!
It was as if an earthquake rent
The hearth-stones of a continent,
And made forlorn
The households born
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!
And in despair I bowed my head,
"There is no peace on earth," I said;
"For hate is strong
And mocks the song
Of peace on earth, good-will to men!"
Then pealed the bells more loud and deep:
"God is not dead; nor doth He sleep!
The Wrong shall fail
The Right prevail,
With peace on earth, good-will to men!"

HENRY WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW

OUR PASTORAL LETTER

Dear Parishioner:

Do you ever have an inferiority complex?

You know what I mean. Do you ever feel that you, personally, are of no special importance to others. For instance, if you stay away from a social function, to which you have been invited, you doubt if your absence would be noticed. There will be so many more important persons there that you won't be missed.

That is one form of inferiority complex. But like all other forms of this soul disease, it is false in its conclusions. You must always remember that your prospective host invited you because he valued your presence and the charm of your personality. Even if it is only a political convention, there the wise ones know your real value and they want to exploit you before those whom they have reason to believe you stand for a political ideal.

Then there is another form of inferiority complex. Sometimes you are asked to do something, for instance, like visiting the sick in the parish, doing missionary work for our next Confirmation Class, getting delinquents back in the church and Sunday School, paying visits to the poor, using your car to bring boys and girls, living down south of the parish to Sunday School; or bringing old folks to church. Such parish chores may seem of little consequence to the Church; yet, would you believe it, if every parishioner would overcome his inferiority complex and perform some of these little acts of kindness and consideration, there would be lots more activity in our parish and a deeper interest would be developed in the Church.

Sometimes you hear church members say, "Oh well, my absence from service never is noticed. Others, more important than I, will be there, so I think I will stay home." I wonder how many souls afflicted with this sort of inferiority complex ever stop to think that the Rector, as he stands before the congregation engaged in his priestly functions, sees the vacancy in the congregation which your absence has caused, and that he is wondering whether you are sick of disgruntled. There are very, very few absentees, either rare or chronic, who are not missed by your Rector. If you were to take the trouble to fill those vacant places with yourself, he would be the first to notice your presence and I am sure would show how much he valued your coming to service by the warmth of his handclasp after the service. His greeting would kill your inferiority complex.

Do you know why the congregations are so small at times? It is because several communicants are having attacks of inferiority complex on the same day. Each says to himself, "Oh, I will not be missed, so I'll stay in bed, or go to the country, or loaf about, or do some work about the house instead. By so doing they commit two errors. First, they deprive themselves of the means of grace as such a service affords. Second, they reduce the attendance one more. If you knew how discouraged your absence makes your Rector, I'm sure you would revise your estimate of yourself and would attend the services and the Holy Communion regularly.

There is another phase of inferiority complex which is serious, not only to those who are so afflicted, but also to the prosperity of the parish. We refer to those who whink the little they give in the Church Offerings is of no importance and is not seriously missed; consequently, they are not careful to keep their financial obligations to God and the Church goes into debt. If everybody in the Parish would give the price of a two-cent postage stamp each day, the Church would be richer by $7.30 at the end of the year.

Quite a few parishioners had a serious attack of this inferiority complex last summer. By the way, it is a malady which should be classed with other summer complaints and diseases. The suffering was most disastrous to the parish and cost the parish over $100 before the summer ended. Many who were victims of the disease must have died—at least they have not recovered yet. Their offering envelopes are still minus and here we are off to another year.

How is YOUR inferiority complex? Are all of you convalescing? That's fine! Come out next Sunday and let's see how much you have recovered.

Affectionately,
YOUR RECTOR.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS

Well, here it is again and we are worried to death about our Christmas presents—not the ones we expect to get but the ones we expect to give. We never realize how many friends we have until we make up our Christmas list. There is Tom and Dick and Harry, etc., etc. Every one of them will be terribly disappointed if we do not remember them. The ones who are going to get the biggest, the best and the most expensive presents are going to be those we love best. Their names will be right at the top of the list. Then those who are pretty close friends will come next. A few acquaintances with whom we feel it good financial or social policy come next. And last of all will come the Christmas card brigade—those who have done a few favors for us now and then, or who we met at the shore or mountains and who afforded us pleasant diversion of a summer afternoon or evening. It will be nice to meet them again and perhaps a card at Christmas will remind them of us and they will look forward to renewing the friendship.

And speaking of Christmas gifts—of course you know why we celebrate it so universally. It is the birthday of the God Child, who was the first Christmas gift ever given; and, if we only knew it, the most valuable too. On the first Christmas day God gave His only Son to the world that whosoever believed in Him should have everlasting life. You may give your Christmas presents of gold or diamonds or rubies or other rich and costly things, but when they are all put together and weighed in the scales of God's love they are overbalanced and outweighed by the sacrifice of His Son. We believe in giving presents at Christmas because it always reminds us of God's gift.

Suppose God had not given His Son for us—we would never have had a Christmas. We would never have known the joys the season brings; we would never have received the hope Jesus brought with Him,—a hope that sustains us eternally through every experience of life.

Therefore, to the one we love the most, let us give the most in value and in beauty because it is Christmas; that is to say, the feast of the birth of Christ whom God gave as His most precious gift to us, because He loves us so dearly.

I wonder what sort of present I ought to give Christ on Christmas? It is His birthday you know!

"I WAS SICK AND YE VISITED ME"

VISITING THE SICK RATES HEAVENLY RECOGNITION

For many months your Rector has been trying to arouse an interest in the spiritual ministrations of the sick. Not only because of the shut-ins but also because of the sympathetic influence of such visits upon the young men and women themselves. He announces every Sunday that shut-in services under the auspices of the young people will be held at 3.45 P. M. in one or more homes of the sick or aged. These services have brought sunshine with them and for many days after sweet and soothing memories of them have lingered in the sick, helping them forget for at least awhile the suffering they must endure with so unhappy monotony.

Unless one has suffered such confinement it is rather difficult to understand what the visit of young folk means, and the reaction of such visits are very worth while to the visitors themselves. Some days ago the writer visited a little girl parishoner who was in the Jefferson Hospital. Now one would scarcely suppose that a child would appreciate a visit very much. Yet she was so tickled to see me come in the ward that she waved her hands frantically to attract my attention. And did we have fun! I asked her how she was coming along. Oh, said she—me and the baby are doing nicely. Did she have me mystified? Seeing no infant in sight and wondering what on earth the child meant, I asked her what baby are you talking about? Giggling she reached down somewhere on the left side of her bed and brought up a rubber doll who had a patch of gauze held in place on its left side by adhesive. The funny little girl pointed to the gauze and said—see when she can take that off she will be well. From there I went to the Pennsylvania Hospital and visited a young woman, who, years ago had been a regular communicant of St. John's Church. My visit was a total surprise to her for she did not know I knew she was sick. If I had any doubt as to how I would be received the glad look upon her face on seeing who was calling on her assured me that I was very welcome. What a grand talk we had about old times and old friends at St. John's. When I was about to leave she promised to come back to church and asked me to have a package of church envelopes sent to her.

Then I went over to Ward F of the same hospital to visit a sick man, communicant of the parish. Here, too, I received a cordial welcome, and though he was uncomfortable and could not talk long I felt the visit had given him something to think about and would help him bear his pain.

From the Pennsylvania Hospital I went to the Christopher Columbus Hospital, Broad and Wharton Streets, to visit another member of the parish. She is having a very serious and a very dangerous experience. I would like all members of the Parish to pray for her recovery. She is a married woman with a family of very interesting children and has suffered greatly. It certainly warmed me inside to see the glow of pleasure that came over her face when I entered her room. Somehow when we prayed together for her recovery both of us felt as though the Master himself was right there listening to us. It was an holy experience, and both of us were glad for that visit.

Leaving the Christopher Columbus Hospital I went to the Methodist Hospital to call on another member of the Parish who had fallen down stairs and broken her leg. There were other visitors in the room when I arrived. I told the patient that hereafter she must not run away every time she sees me and she will not break any more legs. Anyway I would finally catch up with her, even if it ended in a hospital. Well, we had a hilarious time. You never would have supposed there was a cripple among us had you been outside listening.

So the day was over; the time to go had come. Before we left that room, however, we all bowed our heads in prayer and asked our Heavenly Father to watch over our sick ones and help her bear her hurt. It was with a feeling of deep happiness I left the patient. I knew God was watching over the shut-ins of my flock and all was well with them.

My object in telling you these tales of visits to the sick is to impress upon you two truths—first I was able to cheer the sick, and second the sick were able to cheer me—and God blessed all of us.

THE OBVIOUS

What do you mean by obvious?

According to people who know things about words it means plain—unquestionable.

Now it seems to me that most of us should know more about the obvious than we do.

For instance it is obvious that we have certain responsibilities and duties.

Furthermore, it is obvious that these duties have to do with our relations to the State, Society and the Church.

It is our obvious duty to be good citizens. Good citizenship involves doing everything in one's power to obey its laws, not because we fear the "cop" but because we have the common sense to know that it is only by doing so, we are able to maintain the dignity and the authority of the State. Now maintaining the dignity and authority of the State is very vital to the citizenship. It does more than merely restrain the lawless and suppress crime. It does better than that. It clears the way for right-living and right-thinking and makes room for development of security and peace. Where the laws of the State are respected, the property and rights of the whole community are safe and confidence and good fellowship reign.

As it is with the State so is it with Society.

By Society we mean our social relations with each other. A State in which we either do or do not apply the principle of the Golden Rule.

It should be obvious that happiness is found only by putting yourself in the other fellow's place—mentally speaking—and work out to your satisfaction your obvious course in the way of judgment and execution. Were you on trial for an offense against him, or were you in need of his good offices, such a course of reasoning would help you wonderfully in your decision in his behalf if he had injured or cheated you without a cause, or if he needed your help. The Golden Rule of mercy is the only obvious road to social peace and good will.

The Iron Rule of Justice crushes and ruins, but seldom breeds happiness; much less in the gloomy lives of those who live by the law—for others.

Again, as it is with the State and Society so is it with the Church. There are certain obvious duties for you and me to do. You know what duties are, do you not? They are the things that we are morally bound to do or not do for the purpose of preserving the ideals of life. Happiness is approached by the path of duty only. Therefore we must seek and find that path. The obvious place to begin the search is where duty is revealed—the church. If you get the right idea of the church—the divinely founded school of spiritual revelation and applied science of service and sacrifice—and you regularly and conscientiously follow its precepts, you will eventually graduate with the full knowledge of the meaning of life. You will have an intelligent and sane idea of God and your mutual relations to each other. You will have a new sense of value of your relations to your brothers about you. You will sense, for the first time in your life that you are more than a creature of flesh and nerves and blood and bone. You will realize you are a Son of God and all ye are brothers. And realizing this spiritual relation to God and your brothers you will know it is your obvious duty to love and serve both Him and them.

When the day comes in which you do the obvious thing to God; to your brother, to yourself your joy will be full. Because that is the day when you will hold in your hand for the first time in your life the key to all knowledge.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS

WHAT DO THEY SIGNIFY?

The first Christmas giver was God.

The first Christmas day was proclaimed by the Angelic host.

The first people to learn it was Christmas day were Judean Shepherds.

The first Christmas gift was Jesus the Son of God.

The first Christmas presents He received were gold, frankincense and myrrh.

The first mortals who gave Jesus his first Christmas gifts were the Magi.

THAT WAS THE WAY CHRISTMAS BEGAN

Now by a curious twist, which happened somewhere along the chain of years, Christmas has changed in its significance.

It is a season of supreme joy and extravagant celebration.

The core of the day appears to be the same. It is the feast of the birth of Jesus Christ.

The Christian church celebrates it with pomp and beauty.

The choirs sing their special Christmas anthems and their beautiful Christmas carols.

The Holy Eucharist—or the Thanksgiving feast—is the central point of rejoicing. Men, women and children kneel before the altars of Christendom and again receive the blessed Christ symbolically.

The world joins the church in Christmas joys.

Stores are crowded with Christmas shoppers and business has boomed five hundred per cent above normal.

Billions of gold pass across the counters of business in payment for the Christmas presents we buy.

The purse and check book are open.

If we are very poor we sacrifice our little hoard.

If we are wealthy we sign big checks with a flourish and a smile.

In both cases we spend what we can afford with a warmth in our heart and a flow on our cheeks.

Whether automobiles, diamonds, mink furs, rubies, sapphires or emeralds; or whether just a box of candy toys and a few cheap articles of clothing—it is all the same—we give without count of cost. Because it is Christmas day!

The birthday of Jesus the Son of God.

It is therefore fitting we show our joy by giving Christmas gifts to each other.

But the Wise men from the East gave their Christmas gifts to Jesus Christ and not to one another.

We have changed that custom. We give our Christmas gifts to one another and not to Jesus Christ, whose birthday we are so joyfully celebrating.

I wonder why?

PRAYER FOR WORLD PEACE

ALMIGHTY GOD from whom all thoughts of truth and peace proceed, kindle we pray thee, in the hearts of all men the true love of Peace, and guide, with thy strong and peaceful wisdom those who take council of the nations of the earth that in tranquillity thy kingdom may go forward, till the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of thy love, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

THE CHURCHMAN CALENDER, 1940.

THE PRINCE OF PEACE is coming on CHRISTMAS DAY to this world of war. Let's welcome Him gladly.

If I knew you and you knew me—
If both of us could clearly see,
And with an inner sight divine,
The meaning of your heart and mine,
I'm sure that we would differ less
And clasp our hands in friendliness,
Our thoughts would pleasantly agree
If I knew you and you knew me.

NIXON WATERMAN.

PLEASE don't "GIVE" God anything on Christmas. Do as the Wise men did—bring OFFERINGS out of the best and most costly of your possessions—such, for instance, like gold, frankincense and myrrh—a sacrifice fit to lay before the King of Kings. You know, you cannot give God anything, for all you have is his already.

EVERY MEMBER CANVASS

"A man can afford, and ought to contribute to philanthropic purposes, such as a part of his income as his informed intelligence guided by a sincere concern for the common welfare, dictates:—and this amount he can afford, and ought to give, even though he be the poorest man in Israel."

LILLIAN BRANDT.

Probably there is a suspicion in the minds of some of our brethren that there is an ulterior motive in urging each communicant to increase his pledge to the church—sort of a sly way of raising the revenue of the parish by making a sentimental appeal in the name of religion, to our church loyalty. Their suspicion is near the truth except there is nothing shy or deceitful about the urging. No man can conscientiously refuse to sustain an institution which sustains his existence, and every man is glad to offer a substantial portion of what he possesses to a real benefactor and philanthropist as a sign of appreciation and gratitude.

So it is, my brother, in this matter of pledging an offering to the church. By so doing you are helping to support the greatest philanthropic as well as spiritual and inspirational of the ages; but you are also offering a just portion of your substance to the God of that institution. It is the recognition of the truth that—"ALL THINGS comes *o*f thee, oh Lord, and OF THINE OWN have we given thee.

AND MAY YOU HAVE A HAPPY NEW YEAR

THE BROKEN RING

At the crossroads on a great plain, a lone traveler once lay flat on the ground watching the busy goings and comings of an army of ants. He noted how some foraged for food and others stood guard; others tended the young, and still others fed on the aphids that clustered under soft, green leaves near at hand.

As he lay there, a second traveler came and stood over him. "Friend," said he, "what think you of yon ant that has just come across the dead body of a bee? Was it not fate that that bee should die and fall where it did, and that the ant should find it and carry it off?"

The first traveler looked up and smiled. "Nonsense," he answered. "Had the ant taken another road from the nest, the bee would have rotted where it lay. Pure luck, my friend, led him to his feast, as pure luck leads all of us to the things that we prize most."

While the two were arguing, a third traveler appeared and stood near them. "Friends," said he, "if I may venture a remark it would be to the effect that both of you are wrong, and that the ant came upon the bee as a result of its own intelligent toil. Toil, therefore, is the solution of all things, the cause of everything and the explanation of every consequence."

"A thousand facts dispute your theory," answered the first traveler. "Nothing in this wide earth can escape doing that which it is fated to do."

"I agree on the thousand facts," said the second traveler, "but pure, blind luck is the influence that rules the doings of us all."

JOIN THE FIRESIDE CLUB

"So be it," said the third traveler. "Convinced against his will, a man is of the same opinion still. Therefore, I shall argue no further but propose a test by which we may find an answer. Here is a silver ring, coiled in the likeness of a snake. Behold, I break it into three equal parts. I give the head to one, the tail to another, and the body I keep myself. Let us go our several ways and do our several deeds and live our several lives, and then, on a day fifteen years from now, meet again in this spot to give testimony to the truth or falsity of the doctrines that we hold."

Since the first traveler had not yet finished the study of his nest of ants, he lingered after his two companions had vanished. Suddenly, as he watched, he saw an ant struggling backwards out of the hole, dragging a tiny stone slowly into the light. Another ant pushed from below, and a third lent what sideways help it could. "'Tis strange," said the traveler, "that so small a piece of gravel should tax the strength of three strong ants."

Just then the light shone on the surface of the stone and gave back a soft golden glow that was beautiful to see. The traveler picked up the stone and laid it in the hollow of his palm. "As I live," he cried softly, "it is a nugget of pure gold. Where this came from there is more. Luck has been with me this happy day. Here shall I pitch my tent. Here shall I wrest riches from the world."

* * * *

Meanwhile the second traveler was pressing on to a city a hundred leagues away, and he tarried at a well under a palm to refresh himself. At just the precise moment, a beautiful maiden left the door of her father's house and walked down to the well under the palm. She bore an earthen water jar on her head. The shadows of the two lay side by side, as from different parts of the world, and the man and the maid reached the well on the same quest for the cool water that sparkled below.

As the two looked into each other's eyes, the ends of the world seemed to fold together and enclose them, and imprison them each in the heart of the other. "Come to my father's house," said the maiden, "and be our guest, for you are weary with the long way."

The maid's father was a mighty builder of castles and bridges, and a maker of roads, and the man, having a heart for that sort of work, eagerly applied himself until his name grew greater than even that of his father-in-law. "Fate," said he to his beloved wife, "drew you and me from the ends of the earth to the same well curb at the same moment and thus laid the foundation for all our happiness in life."

The third traveler went his own way, filled with scorn for the beliefs of the others. Onward he journeyed for a hundred leagues till he came to a city by the sea. Here he took up his abode and began collecting from all parts of the world the writings of the great minds of the past. Day and night he labored, until the walls of his home were piled high with the wisdom of the ages. His fame spread to all parts of the world, and the stone steps before his door were worn hollow with the feet of philosophers who came like bees to the honey of wisdom he had stored away.

As he looked about at the results of his years of labor, he smiled and said, "Could luck ever have accomplished this, or fate brought it about? Behold I have proved to myself and to the world that work is the great guiding principle of success."

* * * *

On the appointed day, the owner of the gold mine went to the crossroads, and afar he saw another man, a stranger, approaching. The first man said: "I await two others who are to meet me here at the crossroads."

"I, too, await two others, who made solemn promise fifteen years ago to meet me here this very hour, and they have not come," complained the second man.

Just then a third drew hither hastily. "Tell me, strangers," he exclaimed, "have you seen two men of grave appearance at these crossroads, inquiring for a third?"

"This is indeed marvelous," cried the wealthy one, as he recognized the others. "Behold here is the head of the silver snake!"

"And here is the tail," exclaimed the builder.

"And I have the body," shouted the wise one.

When they had made merry over the happy reunion, the builder said: "Could this strange meeting on such a noble mission be other than the doings of fate?"

"Could this have come about at all," asked the wealthy one, "save for good luck?"

"Are not my years of hard work a sufficient reason for it all?" asked the collector of wisdom.

"My good men," said the voice of a philosopher who, unobserved, had overheard the disputings, "the great seat of wisdom came into being by the faithful toil of one, and by the gold of another, and by the craftsmanship of a third. He, therefore, serves into whose hand is poured the gold to enable another, of inventive mind, to house the creative energy of a third. There is no fate, there is no luck; there is only the slow and painful process of Father Time, over whose shining ways travel eager men striving to labor freely and intelligently, each according to the capacity of his soul, in the upbuilding of the great Universal Purpose."

"SILENT NIGHT"

Undoubtedly the best known and most loved of all Christmas melodies is the tenderly beautiful "Silent Night, Holy Night." So perfectly fitted to the occasion is the soft cadence of the music, so vivid is the picture painted by the simple words, that it stirs the heart-strings as no other song has the power to do. And here is the pretty little story that brought this song to life:

It was Christmas Eve of the year 1818. At Oberndorf, a little village in the Austrian mountains, a young clergyman was much perturbed. At St. Nicholas' Church they had been preparing for special music for the Christmas services, and Josef Mohr, the assistant pastor, had been very enthusiastic about the program. But alas, the church organ had broken down. Repairs were in process of being made, but it was found the organ could not possibly be used for the Christmas occasion. Joseph Mohr had an old guitar hanging on his study wall, and he glanced hopefully at the instrument. An inspiration came to him. He sat down to his desk and wrote. And they were beautiful, heart-warming words that flowed from his pen!

In a few minutes there was a knock at the door of Franz Gruber, the church organist. He too was much troubled over the collapse of his instrument, so he hastened to answer the call at the door. There stood Josef Mohr, a bright light in his eyes and a piece of paper in his trembling hands.

JOIN THE FIRESIDE CLUB

"I have here a song that I have written," Josef Mohr explained; "a Christmas song. Could you compose a suitable air for it? If you could arrange it for two solo voices, a chorus, and a guitar accompaniment, we could use it at the church tomorrow."

Franz Gruber was catching at straws. Certainly he would try. He read the verses, and as he read, his heart swelled with joy. At once he went to his spinet and began to search for the chords he desired. After many heart-searching attempts, he completed the beautiful and immortal melody.

Franz Gruber took the written score to Josef Mohr, who played it over on his guitar. Then Gruber and Mohr sang the song together. When they had finished, they stared at each other. But unknown to them, the dearest song known to Christendom had been created.

THE PEACE-MAKER

Priscilla Baker was an alert but sad young woman as she waited in a suburban grocery store to make belated purchases on New Year's morning. She and her Uncle Richard found themselves in the same place at the same time, and neither deigned to speak.

Eight years before, when Priscilla was a mere strip of a girl, her father and the uncle had quarreled over the division of a piece of land, and the two had not spoken to each other since. Priscilla had been an innocent victim of her uncle's "unrelenting stubbornness," as her father had called it.

Richard Baker was a big, ruddy bachelor—an uncle to be proud of, Priscilla thought wistfully as she surveyed him unawares in the store—if only he were like other people's uncles, or, indeed, as he used to be! An only uncle, she remembered how, as a young girl, he had romped with her, and they had been great friends. But that was before the quarrel, and now he seemed to include her in his rancor.

"I didn't intend going over until this afternoon," Priscilla overheard her uncle tell the clerk, "but Joe sent word he wanted to see me at eleven, so I have to tote along, and that means, since my housekeeper went over to Jonesboro for the day, I'll have to eat a cold snack for my New Year's dinner when I get back at one."

"I should think New Year's would be pretty much the same as any other day to a man without a family," said the clerk untactfully.

"Well, a feller gets mighty lonesome-like. A good dinner on Christmas—and New Year's—and such, is about the only way I can celebrate."

Priscilla slipped out of the door without making her purchases. She had planned to spend a nice, lazy holiday with the new book a good friend had given her—and a five-pound box of creams. But her uncle's remarks rang in her ears. Just a cold snack on New Year's—coming home, cold and hungry, and no dinner nor nobody! Enough to chill the whole new year! Priscilla felt sorry for her uncle the first time as long as she could remember. Why could she not cook his dinner? Would she dare? Oh, she wouldn't tell anybody—just go and do it—and slip away before Uncle returned. Why, no one would ever know!

Priscilla hurried home, took a regretful peep at her unopened book, and told her mother she was going for a walk and would not be back till one.

It was only half a mile to Uncle Richard's house. She found the kitchen door unlocked, but entered nervously. She would not have Uncle suspect her for the world—he would likely throw the dinner out of the window if he knew she cooked it, she thought.

There was still a fire in the range, and in the pantry Priscilla found an array of raw victuals fit for a king's feast. Soon the kitchen was filled with appetizing odors. Priscilla had no time to lose. "He said he'd be back at one," she exclaimed somewhat panicky as the clock struck twelve. "I'll set the table, dish up the dinner, and then—I hope he'll think a neighbor cooked the dinner!"

"Well, well! What does this mean?" It was a loud, gruff voice. Priscilla whirled around like a shot. There stood her stubborn uncle—face to face! Priscilla turned crimson, with a horrible choking in her throat.

"I—I came up to cook dinner for you, Uncle Richard," she stammered—"honest I did. I heard you say—in the store—that your housekeeper was away, and you had nobody to cook your New Year's dinner. I didn't want you to have to eat just a cold bite. Honest, Uncle Richard—I meant to slip away before you came back." Priscilla thought she would never come to the end of her explanation.

"It was very kind of you," replied the uncle, dryly. "It's a wonder your father let you come."

"Father doesn't know—but I am sure he wouldn't care. Father has no hard feelings, Uncle Richard."

"Humph! Well, since you've cooked the dinner, you must stay and help me eat it. It smells good, I must say. My housekeeper always burns the roast. Sit down, Prissy; I'm hungry."

Priscilla felt quite breathless, almost too excited to eat. The uncle ate ravenously, in full justice to the New Year's repast. Finally he spoke:

"I'm much obliged to you, Prissy; and I don't mind owning to you that I'm sorry for my share in the fuss, and have wanted for a long time to be friends again with my brother. But I was too proud and stubborn to make the first move. You can tell him for me, if you like. And if he's willing to let bygones be bygones, tell him I'd like him to come up here with you tonight, and we'll start all over again with the New Year."

Priscilla ran impulsively around the table and kissed her uncle. He looked up at his tall, girlish niece and said, almost inaudibly, "Bless you, my little peacemaker!" And clutching Priscilla's hands, he pleaded fervently, "You must promise to come and cook your uncle's New Year's dinners as long as he lives, as a bond between brother and brother."

And "Prissy" promised.

OUR ANNUAL BAZAAR

It is now a matter of parochial history and a very pleasant chapter it is, too. We dropped Thursday evening from the schedule this year as an experiment. In the past the sales were so small on Thursday evening that we felt they did not justify the time, effort and expense entailed. Now we have every reason to feel that we were justified in making the change. The receipts for the two nights equalled those of the three nights and the expense of gas, etc., was eliminated, which of course goes on the credit side of the ledger.

QUALITY AND CLASS RECOGNIZED

The members of the parish were quick to recognize the high grade of our stock, especially that of our groceries and provisions. After the Bazaar a member of the parish remarked to the writer that "folks got a sample of good groceries for once in their lives."

The vegetables and fruit were donated by SAMUEL SNELL and his gift deserves special mention. Everything was not only fresh and sound but the donation was most generous. There were baskets of apples, boxes of oranges and grape fruit, bags of onions, bags of cabbage and baskets of turnips.

Our dry groceries and canned goods were supplied by Montgomery Company whose reputation as to price and quality is of the highest. We heard nothing but praise from our more than satisfied patrons. Especially was that true concerning those Christmas boxes of groceries which sold for three dollars each.

One little incident occurred just before the official opening of the Bazaar which best illustrated the satisfaction our patrons felt over their purchases. A very good friend of ours phoned and inquired if he might stop over before the Bazaar and buy some things he needed. His reason for making the call before the official opening was because he could not come in the evening. Of course, we agreed and he came, glanced over our stock and in a disappointed voice said he thought we had a much larger stock and more variety of groceries, etc. Instantly, we were on the job. Our sales complex was aroused and we came right back at him with the statement that we were ready to do business with him on as big a scale as he was ready to name, to a million dollars, if he would give us his certified check for the bill. He thought we were bluffing and determined to call our bluff. So he started to order canned goods, soaps, etc., in case lots. We took his order and told him it would be ready for delivery next morning, and we kept our promise.

How did we do it with so little stock on hand? Well you see we happen to be the buyer for several large institutions; consequently, all we had to do was to call up Montgomery Company, order the goods and have them delivered. Mr. Leonberg was so pleased with the quality of his order that re recommended us to his partner, Mr. Fusco, and between them we sold almost $100.00 worth of goods. And we know they will be back next year because of the quality of our goods. After the Bazaar was over Walter Pine said to us, "There's no use talking, those groceries you sold were fine. It was a treat to get such quality." As a matter of fact everybody was expressing pleasure over the quality and paid the price without complaint. SATISFIED CUSTOMERS SELDOM DISPUTE THE PRICE.

JOIN THE FIRESIDE CLUB

OTHER INSTANCES OF SATISFACTION

Two friends stopped at our Gentleman's Good's Table and, after examining our stock, each of them bought 15 ties and 30 pairs of socks. They were doing their Christmas shopping. Our goods were straight from the factory, we carried no seconds and our prices were fair, and 100 per cent lower than the same quality of goods on sale at the regular shops.

As with our grocery and gentleman's goods, so was it with the household department. For instance, for a sample of a satisfied customer we put on sale an electric kitchen clock. It was bought by a woman who is hostess of a convalescent home. She was so pleased with it she ordered another after the Bazaar.

The Kitchen re-sales were evidence sufficient that Mrs. Pine was keeping up her reputation as one of the best cooks in Southwark. She is such an artist that she could take a belgian block and treat it so expertly that it would taste like roast turkey and digest as easily as a poached egg.

Mrs. Schmidt and her aides sold all sorts of household novelties and fancy goods, fine linens, lamps and glassware, at startlingly low prices. The reason we sold so much candy, especially fudge, was because it was of such fine quality that it melted in your mouth and the price was right. As for our dolls, it was a shame to let such fine stock go for such small prices. The quality was so fine and the prices so reasonable that for the first time in several years all the dolls were sold before the Bazaar was closed, yet our stock was much larger than in other years. We must say something about the toilet articles table presided over by Minnie Schoch and Ornette Krafft. It was a beautiful display and every article was of superior quality and worth much more than the sales tag indicated. The fine toilet set was chanced off by Ornette, too. The money raised on it was credited to the Toilet Table. In order to get the real Bazaar feeling we must have one of those delicious candy coated apples which Mrs. Moore so generously donates each year. Personal donations like these are what help to make our Bazaar a success in every way. They stimulate interest and save expense. Mrs. Young supplied the drinks. Her most popular thirst quencher this year was that fine ginger ale bottled by Montgomery Company.

Ruth and Emma provided our juvenile fishermen and women with the usual sport at the pond. The kids had the time of their life. We noticed, too, that R. and E. had several little fishes swimming round them just begging to be hooked. How those two girls kept their heads on straight with so many he sun fish floating round trying to dazzle them is more than we can figure out.

Last but not least we owe a very special word of thanks to George Downes and the men he brought with him for decorating our Bazaar in such a beautiful and effective way. Frank Drumm, Herman Jaeschke and others were on the job as usual and again we all said, "This year it is more beautiful than ever before."

Yes, the Bazaar was a great success both financially and socially and we look forward to our next with pleasure and anticipation. In round figures our receipts amounted to $800.00.

AS TO THAT WRIST WATCH

The Number that won the Watch was 595. It was held by E. Bowen & Son, Incorporated, Funeral Directors. Mr. Leonberg was the partner in the firm who held the winning ticket. When he learned he had won the watch he immediately signed it over to the rector to be chanced off again and the proceeds to be used as the Rector thought best.

The Rector has been thinking of many ways to use the money. The one which appeals to him most is to get each Sunday School class interested in selling the chances and let the price of the tickets sold go towards the Sunday School Lenten Offering of each class. For instance, Class #1 takes ten books of one dollar each. The members of the class sell them. The $10.00 the class gets in return for the tickets is credited to the S. S. O. O. apportionment of that class. If Class #2 disposes of twenty books they are credited with $20.00. In other words the classes can raise most of their apportionment by selling these books and the parish will be greatly aided in raising the parish Sunday School Lenten Offering which, of course, goes toward the parish apportionment.

THIS YEAR WE MUST STRIVE FOR $1,000.00

CONTRASTING ILLUSTRATIONS

We expressed our wonder at the continued absence from Sunday services and the Holy Communion of a certain family living in the parish. This is what we learned.

Several months ago Mrs. —— was very ill, so ill in fact that her family despaired of her recovery. The Rector called and gave her the Sacraments. Also, he paid one or two visits after that. But not another church member even stopped to inquire of her progress back to health, although her illness was generally known throughout the parish. Mrs. —— felt so hurt over this show of indifference that she had ceased coming to church services, naturally concluding that her physical condition was a matter of no consequence to the church and that she was not missed in the least.

This morning we received the following letter from one who years ago was a conscientious and regular attendant of old St. John's. She married and moved some distance away. Because of this she stopped coming to St. John's. A few weeks ago we learned she was confined in the hospital and about to undergo an operation. We lost no time visiting her. Here is a copy of the letter:

"Dear Reverend—

How can I ever express my appreciation to you. Not only for your visit at the hospital but the beautiful flowers and mostly your prayers. I will never forget this and you will never know how happy you made me."

Most sincerely,

The two incidents illustrates the point I am trying to make with our parishioners. If we neglect our sick and shut-ins we force them to the conclusion that we are not interested enough in them to bother about their welfare and, consequently, they do not bother about the church and the spiritual help it boasts for all the suffering children of God. Again, the note of appreciation we publish above certainly expresses most impressively what joy a visit gives to one who is in pain and more or less alone with their thoughts.

JOIN THE FIRESIDE CLUB

We hope such contrasting illustrations as these will arouse a desire to visit and serve our sick and shut-in members in the hearts and minds of all of us and that we will dedicate at least part of our time in visiting them, or at least writing bright, cheery notes to them or taking or sending them flowers to brighten their tedious hours of pain, or spending a few minutes with them in prayer and Bible reading.

The deepest regret your rector has in his inability to visit more frequently the suffering of his parish. How he envies other rectors who can give ALL their time to pastoral calls. He feels jealous of these joyous experiences in easing the pain, both physical and spiritual, of those who need their ministrations so acutely. If we could possibly afford to do so, nothing would give us greater pleasure than to resign all other occupations and give our whole time to such visits of mercy. Unfortunately, we must work to earn money to live and our work is such as interferes with many a parochial call. At times this is most distressing, our duty to our job and our duty to our sick, conflict only too frequently.

What your Rector asks of the young folk of the parish is to form groups for shut-in services or Sunday or at any other convenient time and make it their PERMANENT job to cheer up our sick and shut-ins with their youth and light heartedness. And also he asks the adults of all church organizations to appoint visiting committees to call on all who are sick or in distress—regardless as to what other parish groups have already visited them.

We want to make our unfortunates know that they are our special care and for them we have our special prayers, for their cure and convalescence.

There is one woman of the parish whose heart must always be singing with joy. She is most quiet and modest, but she is constantly in and out of the homes of our sick. Everybody knows and loves her for her patient, quiet visiting of the sick. In the final day she is going to be right up in front of all of us and we are going to hear the voice of the Divine declare to her, "I was sick and ye visited me." Then she will answer in that self-effacing way of hers, "but, Lord, did I visit Thee?" And he will answer so that all of us can hear, "As thou hast done it unto the least of these, thou hast done it unto me. Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Lord, inspire us to follow her on her errands of mercy that we too may share in her joy.

Your Rector does not want volunteers to do professional visits. He wants volunteers to do personal visits. He wants you to visit with a smile in your eye, with a prayer on your lips and with pity in your heart.

If you will read Isaiah 6:1-8, laying stress upon the question of Jehovah and the answer of Isaiah, you will KNOW who asks this service of you and how you should answer the call.

COME! TELL YOUR RECTOR YOU WILL SERVE!

SINISTER PHILANTHROPY

It is the annual custom of the President of the United States and the Governors of all the states to issue a proclamation setting aside a Thursday in November for national Thanksgiving to Almighty God for the many and great blessings vouchsafed us throughout the year and bidding the faithful to assemble in their several places of worship on that day for that purpose.

It is a holy gesture and one which since Abraham Lincoln was president, has been regularly observed. Our churches are opened, our fellow citizens flock to them and with grateful hearts offer praise and thanksgiving to our all provident Father.

That is—until a few years ago.

Then the Sinister Philanthropist entered into the festivities with a scheme to empty our Churches by staging a counter attraction to divert the attention of the unthinking from the original idea of worship and use the day as an opportunity to advertise business by means of a grotesque and fantastic parade.

Some newspapers claimed that nearly 400,000 persons lined the streets to witness the sight. Think of it, 400,000 persons, all of whom should have been in their several churches giving God praise for His goodness, were enticed to forget the purpose of the day. However, like the Hebrews of old, there remained a remnant of the faithful who did not forsake their God for the tinsel of pleasure on the solemn feast day.

Personally, we were troubled by this scoop of mammon over the church. We grieved over what seemed to be an ill advised and thoughtless act of a big hearted man, who, when his attention was drawn to the spiritual damage he was doing, would correct the error and be open to suggestions wherein God would be honored and the advertisement of his business would be enhanced.

With that idea in mind we proposed a compromise two years ago.

OUR SUGGESTION WAS TO MAKE FRANKLIN BOULEVARD THE STARTING POINT OF THE PARADE AND, BEFORE THE TIME OF MARCH, TO HOLD A POPULAR SERVICE OF THANKSGIVING FOR THE CROWDS COLLECTED. GET A BIG COMBINED CHURCH CHOIR TO LEAD THE SINGING. HAVE THE MASSED BANDS PLAY APPROPRIATE SELECTIONS. HAVE EITHER A SOLO OR A QUARTETTE ON THE PROGRAM. GET A PROMINENT CLERGYMAN TO MAKE AN APPROPRIATE AND SHORT ADDRESS. HAVE BRIEF PRAYERS FOR THANKSGIVING. AND CLOSE WITH THE DOXOLOGY.

Then on with the Parade.

We received a polite letter of acknowledgment in return. From its construction, however, you could tell he was mentally telling us to go jump into the lake. The original purpose of the day was ignored. Thanksgiving Days of 1938-39 were ruined in the same manner. Evidently, from now on, it will become known as Parade Day to attract the public mind to Christmas shopping, especially to the bargains the store of the Sinister Philanthropist has to exploit.

The only reason we can see for converting the day into pagan buffoonery is because, by acts of our President and our Governors, a holiday is proclaimed which, as the store MUST close in consequence thereof, provides an ideal time to stage a big advertising stunt without loss of a day or of receipts to the firm. It provides a chance to make a business virtue of a necessity—even if it does effect the spiritual sentiments of the community.

In the meantime, the nation is tirred to its center by the horrors of race extermination and the murder of small nations this year in Europe. In the Americas we know nothing of these terrible experiences, because God has bestowed on us His stupendous gifts of peace, prosperity and racial tolerance. As we compare our good fortune with the terrible suffering of the victims of Atheism and hate, surely we must feel some stir of gratitude to our Heavenly Father which calls for something deeper than a tinsel procession. Surely the day should have found us crowding the Temple to render Him Thanksgiving for our happy condition and praying him to protect and provide for the sufferers abroad whose nations and race and homes and families are being ruthlessly ground under the feet of intolerable beasts in human form.

May God have mercy upon us for our thoughtless turning from His Temple, to follow the show of Sinister Philanthropy.

OUR PASTORAL LETTER

Dear Parishioner:

We have come to the time of the year when the wise business man audits his accounts. He takes an inventory of his stock and he examines the assets and liabilities of his position so as to know just what is the condition of his business, whether it is prosperous or whether it is slipping into insolvency. He strengthens the assets on the one hand while he eliminates the liabilities on the other.

What is an asset and what is a liability?

An asset is something which adds value.

A liability is something which diminishes value.

If your assets are greater than your liabilities you are solvent.

If your liabilities are greater than your assets you are insolvent.

The difference between solvency and insolvency is the difference between prosperity and bankruptcy.

You may apply that piece of philosophy to everything in every walk in life with consistency.

You may apply it to the Christian Church, or to the individual parish of St. John the Evangelist and you will prove the truth of it by the results you get from its application.

For instance—

The Parish has started the new year of 1940. Perhaps it would be wise to take an inventory of our stock and look into our assets and liabilities. The study of them will help us to plan the work for this new year.

What is our stock?

I should say our membership is our most important block of stock. A church without a membership is like a grocery store minus groceries or canned goods. Furthermore, our membership represents our real assets and liabilities. Therefore, if we want to know whether we are in a solvent or an insolvent condition we must take an inventory of our stock.

In this case the active, worshiping member, who strives always to build God's truth on solid foundations, adds to the value and therefore to the spiritual solvency of our parish.

On the other hand the inactive and non-worshiping member, who ignores his obligations of worship and offering subtracts from the value and therefore the spiritual solvency of the parish.

Now, as in business, so in the church, if our assets are greater than our liabilities, we are at least solvent. If, however, our liabilities are greater than our assets we are spiritually insolvent, therefore bankrupt.

If we are spiritually bankrupt we cannot hope to be of any value to the community. The only thing we stand for is failure and the church stands out a gloomy monument to that fact.

However, sometimes a shrewd business man will bunch all his liabilities and turn them into paying assets by renovating and polishing them up and displaying them at attractive prices. Lots of poor business has been converted profit by such manipulations. Maybe, if we are shrewd too, we can convert our liabilities into assets of value. It means to me the venture is worth trying.

The best thing to do is to place OURSELVES under inspection. A little mycroscopic analysis will not be injurious; in fact, it may turn out to be the wisest and timeliest thing we ever did. Self-complacency and egotism may come up under the lense and show us that all unconsciously we were developing specks of moral rust and disintegration which in a short time would destroy our value to the Church. Or the corroding spots of greed and selfishness may appear to spoil the sheen of our christian character. Or in some corner of us may be revealed the spreading of the rust of christian inactivity and inertia which sooner or later will lay as an ugly crust over the glistening beauty of our original christian character.

If we can spot these germs of christian deterioration in time and are honest enough to recognize their menace to our spiritual development, and will act at once to retard and destroy the germ, our value to our parish is saved and the solvency is assured.

Because we were or even are liabilities is no reason why we must continue as such. A sincere desire with a little cooperation with God can easily eradicate all spots and blemishes in us and restore us to the status of a really valuable asset to our parish and therefore to christianity.

NOW is the time to make this self-analysis. NOW is the time to help our parish go on record as one of the most spiritually solvent parishes in the Diocese.

By prayer, by meditation, by reading of the Scriptures, by constant service in God's Temple, by insistant kneeling at the Altar of the Redeemer, by offerings, by service to our brothers, by extending the hand of christian love, we can ever keep our assets growing and erase forever all spots and blemishes which threaten to destroy the beauty of our christian idealism.

Affectionately your Pastor,

H. Cresson McHenry.

OUR CHRISTMAS ROLL OF HONOR

We present below the names of the loyal St. Johnites who believe in supporting the cause of Christianity in Southwark by contributing to its support—especially at Christmas time.

We know the list would be much longer were there not so much unemployment and sickness among our members. And again, it would be much, much longer if many others of our members realized their personal responsibility in supporting the Christian Church in Southwark.

If any member has been delayed in sending his Christmas Offering to the Church we will gladly publish his or her name in the next issue of the Broadcaster if they will present their offering as soon as possible.

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

THE GROWLER'S CORNER

Every growler should have a corner! He is entitled to it! This is especially so of the cold church growler. So if all our cold church growlers will go to their corner we will hold a convention.

The first statement we wish to make EMPHATICALLY is—No church has any right to be cold. That is a motion every cold church growler will vote for unanimously. So that's out of the way and we can proceed to further business.

The next question before the assembly is—Why do we have cold churches anyway? Of course, it would be both silly and facetious to say, because we have no heat.

Any dummy knows that!

A more pertinent question is—why do we have no heat?

The answer of the anvil chorus is—the sexton—the sexton—the sexton—ad infinitum. Well, before we agree too enthusiastically on that point, let's go snooping around and be sure there are not other reasons.

Clue #1. We saw in the newspaper an item which stated several schools were closed because of the cold weather. Were the janitors to blame?

Clue #2. One of our choir singers nearly froze stiff while singing at a wedding in a nearby church. Was their sexton to blame?

Clue #3. Over 75 per cent of St. Johnites have NOT JOINED THE FIRESIDE CLUB nor paid anything towards the coal bills of the church and our coal pile is small. Is the sexton to blame?

Clue #4. If the majority of St. Johnites paid as little for heating their homes as they pay towards heating their church, they would freeze to death. Would the sexton be to blame?

Clue #5. The fan which forces the hot air up into the church has been out of order for a long time but we could not afford to have it repaired because so many St. Johnites are so far behind in their offerings —sixty per cent of our members still owe their Christmas offering envelopes to the church. Is that the sexton's fault?

Now on the other hand we growlers WANT to be fair even if we DO growl. Therefore I wonder how many of us are aware that during almost every cold season he—the sexton—remains in the church building all night in the men's choir room catching cat naps with an alarm clock—belonging to Miss Fisher—close to his ear and set to go off every hour so he can go down and stoke the fire. On extra cold nights he don't go to sleep but stays up all night. And on very extra cold nights Bill King shares shifts with the sexton all night because the job is too much for one man.

In the meantime the sexton tries to be as economical in stoking his fires as possible because so many people refuse to pay their share of the coal bills. If he burns up what little we have, what will he heat the church with at all? All in favor of the cold church Growlers Convention adjourning say—Aye!

Contrary "Neigh" (like a horse).

Motion carried! Growler's Corner is empty!

BROADCASTING FROM STATION S. T. J. C.

May the year 1940 bring you as much joy and peace as you give to others.

Never be disappointed or resentful if others do unto you as you do to them.

ASH WEDNESDAY—FEBRUARY 7TH, 1940

The money received from the chancing of the wrist watch will go towards the S. S. Lenten Offering. Each class selling chances may add the proceeds from their sales to their Class Apportionment.

JANUARY 23RD, the S. S. Classes of Tom Dean and Eddie Pine will give a dance and an unusual entertainment to raise their S. S. Lenten Offerings.

Emma Kaiser informs us that her class is arranging another SKATING PARTY as a means of raising their Lenten Offering.

The Intermediate Department will give a Radio Party—FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 26TH. Proceeds to go towards their Lenten Offering Apportionment.

THE RECTOR has 100 Thank Offering boxes to contribute to the group of 100 helpers to raise our S. S. Lenten Offering. All you do is to place one of the beautiful boxes on the table and every time you sit down to eat you put a small coin of Thanksgiving in the box for the food you are about to eat.

These boxes will be ready for distribution in the near future. You will not be urged to take a box, you must ask for it. Otherwise yours would not be a true Thank Offering.

If you are not an ACTIVE member of the FIRESIDE CLUB you will be arrested for assault and battery if you so much as lay a finger on our defenseless Sextion. SO BE WARNED!!

There are about 300 CHRISTMAS ENVELOPES missing. If you have one please be at least kind enough to send us a dime to pay for it, also the Christmas program we sent with it. Also the stamp required to mail it to you.

REMEMBER we must raise $1000.00 during Lent to pay our Sunday School Lenten Offering and our Parish Apportionment. You MUST do your share to raise this sum.

It is a debt like rent or taxes or death. You MUST meet it or else—

HERE IS A DANDY STORY FOR ALL SLOTHFUL PARISHIONERS.

Once upon a time, many years ago, Otto I was king of Germany. His subjects called him "Good Otto". His palace was close by the road through his duchy, over which traveled women in wooden shoes, men on ox-carts, and gay soldiers on horseback. But the people were very lazy, and the king resolved to teach them a lesson. In the dead of night he went down the stairs of his palace and out into the road and there he rolled a huge boulder into the path along which they all must come.

For the next 30 days every one complained that no one would remove the stone. Then one day the king sent heralds who summoned all his subjects. When they were come, he himself went into the road and rolled away the boulder—using all his strength. How ashamed they all were then! And lo! from under the stone he took a small box that he had buried there, on the cover was written:

"For him alone
Who moves this stone."

He opened the box before the eyes of all, and it was full of gold.

Dear Slothful Parishoner—you are missing the gold of endeavor every time you shirk a duty.

LENT

Lift up Thine eyes unto the hills,
For now has come that season when
Each contrite heart communes with Him,
Who cleanses all the stains of men.

Walk not as one whose steps be trod
In unrelenting slough and mire,
But lift Thine eyes unto Thy God
And seek such joys the Saints aspire.

Just once have things terrestrial been,
Enhanced by clear Celestial strain,
That we might see anointed souls
Made clean and pure and sweet again.

Then lift, O clay! Thine eyes above
That level where you blindly stood,
And try, by penance, prayer and love,
To reach His arms: to kiss His Rood.

JOS. R. CUSHING.

LENT

HISTORY AND TRADITIONS

The word Lent is derived from the old English word "Lenckten," and referred to the Spring fast of the church which ended in the Feast of Easter. It is usually supposed to be in commemoration of the fasting and temptations of our Blessed Lord in the wilderness. But more probably it originated from a regard of our Lord's words—"the day will come when the Bridegroom shall be taken away from them and then shall they fast in those days." S. Matt. 9:15.

LENGTH OF LENT VARIED

We learn from Christian Church History that the primitive Christians began this solemn period on the afternoon of the day on which they memorialized the Crucifixion and continued it until the day of the Resurrection. The whole interval being about forty hours. To these forty hours originally observed additional days were added, but with great variety in their numbers, according to the judgment of the different churches in different parts of the world. Some prescribed fasting three days in the week before Easter. Others four, and still others six days in Holy Week. A little later some of the churches extended the fast to a period of three weeks, others to six weeks, and still others to seven weeks. In order to reduce the period of fasting to a definite number of days to be observed throughout the Christian Church it was eventually fixed to forty days commencing on the Wednesday in the Seventh week before Easter (Ash Wednesday) and excluding the intermediate Sundays which are always observed as festivals of the Resurrection.

OBSERVANCE OF LENT IMPERATIVE

The 61st Apostolic Canon reads thus: "If any Bishop, priest, deacon, reader or singer do not keep the holy Fast of Lent, forty days before Easter, or the Wednesdays and Fridays, let him be deposed, if he be not hindered by some bodily infirmity; but if he be a layman let him be suspended from Communion."

BY AUTHORITY OF THE CHURCH

That the term of forty days was settled at an early period is evident from the writings of the Bishops of those times; who refer us, in vindication of their Episcopal letters to the examples of Moses, Elias and our Lord, all of whom fasted forty days. Naturally, therefore, we arrive at the conclusion that, though fasting is frequently alluded to in the Scriptures as a Christian duty, yet the set time for its observance is referred solely to the authority of the church.

DAYS NOT INCLUDED

As we previously stated, the Lenten Fast does not include all the days between Ash Wednesday and Easter; for the Sundays are so many days above the number of forty and are referred to as Sundays in Lent and not Sundays of Lent.

PRINCIPAL DAYS OF LENT

The principal days of Lent are Ash Wednesday, see article in this issue, and Passion week—particularly Thursday and Friday of that week. Passion week has always been considered its most solemn season. It was one time called the "Great Week," from the important transactions which were then commemorated. And also

Confirmation, Sunday Evening, May 12th

Holy Week, because of the increase of the devotional exercises in the churches and among the believers. Thursday in Passion week (Maundy Thursday) is that on which our Lord instituted the Holy Eucharist. Good Friday is the day following Maundy Thursday on which we commemorate the suffering and Crucifixion of our Saviour Christ. As this day has been kept holy by the Church from earliest times so has it been made a day of the strictest devotion and humiliation for all time.

THE MIGHTINESS OF THE MITE

This is the issue in which we ask you each year to consider the strength of weakness, the size of littleness and the might of the mite.

About 99 per cent of folk do not realize that strength, power and size, no matter how great, are, after all, just the simple multiplicity of tiny units. There is nothing really big or forceful or strong. Everything is nothing but a bundle of electrons, which form the atom which forms the molecule, which forms matter, etc.

Now an electron is so small that it is invisible to the naked eye. It is so light it cannot be weighed. It is so inconcievably weak as to apparently possess no power. But the mighty mountain is the startling picture of the invisible and weak electron multiplied a trillion, trillion times.

To illustrate, how inconceivably small and weak is an electron we can use the mighty ocean. Its bulk and the power and force of its waves are made up of drops of water and each drop of water in turn is formed in size and weight by billions of electrons. Yet the mountain and the ocean are sired by the electron. Should the electron disappear from nature, nature itself would disappear.

Come to think of it, the earth, the sun and the moon, the stars; in fact, the whole universe and all life are the eminations of the invisible and weak electron.

So you see that there is strength in weakness, there is bulk in minuteness, when certain laws attract and hold them together in one common mass.

A wealthy man is wealthy because what he owns is calculated in dollars. Those dollars in turn are calculated in cents. So after all a man's wealth depends upon the cent and not on the dollar.

At last I've reached the point I want to make. To me a little coin which by multiplication makes the dollar is the cent. Consequently I do not want you to try and fill your Lenten Mite Chest with dollars, but I do want you to fill it all the way up to the top with coins worth only one cent each. If all our boys and girls will do just that and no more each mite chest will contain two dollars on Easter Day.

And I'm sure that after hearing Archdeacon Boyle tell about his Indian friends, and other missionaries tell their interesting stories you will want to add your mighty mite to the mites of others and help build a mountain of gold for the spread of God's Kingdom.

I want you to receive your mite chest with a prayer that you will fill it and guard its contents and turn it back to your Master on Easter day filled to bursting with your Easter Offerings for Missions.

$1,000.00 IS OUR GOAL

ASH WEDNESDAY

Western Church—the first day of Lent, so called from the ceremonial use of ashes as a symbol of penitence in the service prescribed for the day. The custom, which is ultimately based on the penance of sackcloth and ashes spoken of by prophets of the Old Testament has been dropped in those reformed churches which still observe the fast, but is retained in the Roman church, the day being known as Dies Cinerum (Day of Ashes). The ashes, obtained by burning the palms or their substitutes used in the ceremonial of the previous Palm Sunday, are placed on the altar before High Mass. The priest, vested in a violet cope, prays that God may send his angel to hallow the ash, that it may become a "remedium salubre" for all penitents. After another prayer, the ashes are thrice sprinkled with holy water and thrice censed. Then the priest invites those present to approach, and, dipping his thunb in the ashes, marks them as they kneel with the sign of the cross on the forehead or, in the case of clerics on the place of tonsure with the words—"memento, homo, quia pulvis es, et in pulverum reverteris" (Remember, man, that thou art dust, and unto dust thou shalt return). The celebrant himself either sprinkles the ash on his own head in silence or receives it from the priest of highest dignity present.

This ceremony is derived from the custom of public penance in the early church when the sinner to be reconciled had to appear before the congregation clad in sackcloth and covered with ashes. When it was extended to the whole congregation is not known.

The phrase dies cinerum appears in the earliest extant copies of the Gregorian Sacramentary and it is probable that the custom was already established in the Eighth Century. The Anglo-Saxon Aelfric, in his Lives of the Saints (996 or 997) refers to it as in common use, but the earliest evidence of its authoritative prescription is a decree of the Synod of Beneventum in 1091.

Of the reformed churches, the Anglican alone marks the day by any special service. This is known as the "combination service," its distinctive element being the solemn reading of the general sentences of God's cursing against sinners, gathered out of the seventh and twentieth chapter of Deuteronomy, and other places of Scripture. The lections for the day are the same as in the Roman church (Joel 2:12 and Matt. 6:16). In the American Prayer Book, the office of Commination is omitted with the execption of the three concluding prayers, which are derived from the prayers and anthems said or sung during the blessing and distribution of the ashes according to the Sarum Missal. The ceremonial of the ashes was not prescribed in England during the Reformation; it was indeed enjoined by a proclamation of Henry VIII (Feb. 26, 1538) and again in 1550 under Edward VI, but it had fallen into complete disuse by the beginning of the Seventeenth Century.

"SAYING GRACE"

How do you say grace?

Maybe somebody wants to know what is "saying grace" anyhow?

Confirmation, Sunday Evening, May 12th

Well maybe it would be better if we did know what we are talking about before we talk about it. "Saying Grace" means giving thanks to God in a short prayer at breakfast, dinner or supper for the food we are about to eat.

It's a quaint old custom which goes back thousands of years. It was much more common in the past than it is now.

Long before the Christian religion men of all faiths and religious practices—even the benighted heathen—offered thanksgiving for the good things of life.

Sayers of Grace belong to one of two classes: First, there is a big crowd of folk who never say it—they really are non-sayers. Things are put on the table, then somebody shouts "dinner served" and all rush pel-mel to the table, grab food and gobble. They may be nice people but they have distressing table manners. Then, some of the more refined will respond to the call for dinner in a quiet, dignified way—conversing genially all the time while spreading the napkin on the knee and helping themselves to food offered to them by the server or a table companion. Grace is not said—it is not even thought of. The food is accepted as a matter of course.

Some people love to seem like nice people, and when the parson comes to tea they always ask him to say Grace—just as though it is a daily occurence whereas, were truth to pop up and speak the cat would be out of the bag. For grace is only said when the parson comes to tea.

Sure there are those who can and do say Grace—and they say it gracefully. They are the elect of God. They know who provides for all their needs, and always provides abundantly.

Now such folks realize that just "Saying Grace" is not much return for what they receive. They would like to show they are truly thankful for what they get by giving something in return. That's a good idea and easy to put in practice. All you need do is to get a Grace Offering box from our Parish Visitor or Sexton, put it in the center of your dining room table and before each meal drop in it a small coin with a word of thanksgiving you are about to receive.

Nobody will ask you to take a Grace Offering box. It is there if you want it. But you must ask for it because unless you do your Grace Offering will not be voluntary—and no thanksgiving is real thanksgiving unless it comes from the heart and not from the suggestion of a friend. If you want one you will find a pile on the table in the lower hall of the church. Take one!

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LENTEN OFFERING

The Sunday School Lenten Offering means more to the Parish this year than it has for many years gone by. Many members of the Parish think that we are overdoing our support for missions when we so sorely need money to meet our current expenses. If you do not know facts you would naturally make this mistake. We want to explain the reason behind our efforts because we are sure when you do understand you will no longer object to our methods but you will become one among our hearty supporters.

IN THE FIRST PLACE—

we are morally responsible to raise as large a Lenten Offering as we can possibly raise. Because, years ago, when St. John's Church was helpless and its future hopeless the money raised by other parishes and missions for missionary development was spent generously upon us and our financial needs were settled. Thus our church was saved from total annihilation.

Certainly no loyal St. Johnite could think of repudiating such an obligation.

IN THE SECOND PLACE—

the proceeds of the Sunday School Lenten Offering liquidates our debt to the Diocese of Pennsylvania by meeting the apportionment. We, along with all other parishes, must pay. St. John's Parish must raise $1,000.00 to meet this yearly tax and other fixed expenses of the Parish. If we fall below $1,000.00 we must make up the difference by other means.

IN THE THIRD PLACE—

if we over subscribe our apportionment then we can afford to use the balance for repairs and improvements which we need but cannot afford.

Perhaps somebody is thinking—why should we be taxed by the Diocese? The answer is—because the Diocese must be maintained. It has no source of income therefore the Parishes must support the central administration. The cost of maintenance of the Church House and Diocesan Institutions is a legitimate claim upon the Parish.

SOME WAYS YOU CAN HELP

With these facts before us the appeal is to do our very best to make as large a Lenten Offering as possible and here are some of our suggestions:

1. HELP THE KIDDIES FILL THEIR MITE CHESTS.
2. BUY TICKETS FOR WHATEVER IS GOING ON.
3. HELP THE BOYS AND GIRLS SELL THEIR EGGS.
4. TAKE CHANCES ON THAT WRIST WATCH.
5. BUY CHANCES ON THOSE BIG CHOCOLATE EGGS.
6. Make a personal offering unto the Lord daily. Get a Grace Offering box for your dinner table and thank God with a coin everytime you partake of a meal. Each meal is just one more blessing He is adding to the thousands and tens of thousands gifts you have already received from Him.

Also there are other ways and means of raising our Easter Offerings which you will hear about if you come to church and stick around.

WHAT SAY YOU—

GUILTY OR NOT GUILTY?

A few weeks ago some boys of our community stole an automobile. The police gave chase with the usual result. There was an accident, the machine was demolished, one boy was killed outright and two more were seriously injured. They, the injured, are now awaiting trial and are sure to be convicted.

Confirmation, Sunday Evening, May 12th

One of the boys is known to us and although he has posed as a hard boiled hombre, we rated him a bluffer, not nearly so "tough" as he would have folks think. But, like all such bad actors, he has now very definitely classed himself among the public enemies. Yet, we still feel that, had his background been different, this little braggart might have been molded into a self reliant honest young man. It is all very well to say that sin is personal, but one must never lose sight of the influence of the environments of the sinner. For instance our moral and spiritual training in our youth are bound to fix our personal standards of behavior. And our parents are our preceptors. It is natural that we follow their example and do things they do. If what they do or say is right we, following their lead, will do right. If what they do is wrong we, knowing no better, follow them and do likewise.

For instance, if the father or mother is careless in their behavior in the family circle, we of the circle assume it is right to do as they do. If a father curses and swears and gets drunk and fights we, the children, assume that is the way men act. If the mother swears and call the children vile names and slaps them across the face on the least provocation they assume that is the way a mother acts. If the parents do not go to Church or any other religious gathering and sneer at religion, the children get the idea that the parents have outgrown such superstitions of childhood and they shape their own careers accordingly.

Many times we have visited homes of delinquent S. S. scholars to inquire into their continued absence, only to be told by the man or woman, who talks through the crack of the front door, that "they don't care whether the kids go to Church or Sunday School or go somewhere else—that they are safe enough wherever they are, so don't bother."

With a background of such chaotic moral and spiritual conditions and atmosphere what can you expect the future behavior of kids will be who are bred in them from the cradle?

Therefore we say the children are not always responsible for their deeds—they are what they were trained to be, even before they could think or feel or talk. And they, the parents, who trained them, are largely responsible for their acts.

Lincoln said—"What I am I owe to my mother." I heard that same sentence repeated by a boy convict in a cell in the Penitentiary. It was in answer to my question how he got into such a mess at his early age? He said, "All that I am Mom made me. She never told Pop when I got into trouble. She never beat me herself. All she did was to sit down and cry when I got caught. And that made me so mad I'd go out and get into more deviltry."

I wonder if the scamps who stole that automobile were children of such thoughtless, lazy, selfish, spineless parents. I wonder if their parents cared so much as a thin farthing for their moral and spiritual development—whether their fathers and mothers knew with what sort of gangs they prowled at night and on Sundays—whether they set the children the example of Church going and Sunday School attendance by attending Church themselves—whether they ever had any serious and friendly talks with their kids about life—whether they are careful how they act and talk before them. You know KIDS are APES when they watch Pop and Mom.

Well, boiling down this all too long thesis the question we want answered is this—THE PARENTS . . . are they Guilty or Not Guilty of the wrong doings of their children?

We are inclined to be affirmative in the matter. The children follow in their footsteps because they (the parents) are their only moral and spiritual directors.

There are two considerations we want to note right here, however: The first is—Some boys and girls, by maladjustment of moral and spiritual ideas, go wrong in spite of their early moral training, The other is, some parents, because of the press of circumstances, have little or no time to train their children properly. They do not neglect them, they just do not have a chance to help chart the right course for them because of unavoidable conditions.

Taking all these things into consideration I still maintain that the parents of erring children are generally responsible for the child's behavior until he has reached man's years or the girl has attained woman's estate. And if the child goes wrong, and comes in conflict with the law during that time, the parents should be punished equally with the child. If he is sentenced to two years for his crime, that sentence ought to be divided with the mother and father; and, because of the result of their lack of training the child, they, in justice to the child, ought to serve one of those years for him.

ONLY TOO OFTEN THE CHILD COMMITS THE CRIME BUT THE PARENTS ARE GUILTY.

THEY ARE CRIMINALLY NEGLIGENT.

BROADCASTING FROM STATION S. T. J. C.

Lent is the Church Hunting Season for Souls. Unchurched men and women expect you to join up and be regular. So don't disappoint them.

The "Grace Offering" boxes may be had on application to the Parish Visitor, the Sexton or the Rector. We will not ask you to take one but we shall be glad if you do.

All loose offerings of the special Lenten services are added to the Sunday School Lenten Offerings.

All the Easter Offerings are used in meeting the current expenses of the Parish.

The prizes for regular attendance at the special Lenten services are better than ever.

God gave His only begotten Son to suffer and die that we might be saved. What do you offer in return?

Suppose a church member should go on a strike for higher wages and shorter hours—would you think him consistent if he holds up his weekly church offer-

Confirmation, Sunday Evening, May 12th

ing knowing all the time that by so doing he was holding up the wages of the employees of the church? Your money pays the Sexton, the Parish Visitor and the Assistant. If your wages were held up the way you hold up theirs what would you do about it?

Why don't you start coming to the special Lenten services and get back in the habit of attending church and Sunday School.

The best Lenten literature is the Holy Bible and the Book of Common Prayer. Get a copy of each and start a course of reading in them. You will find them most interesting and helpful.

1940 SLOGAN

GET YOUR MAN . . . for Confirmation.

SAY GRACE WITH A COPPER

Every Lenten Season we distribute GRACE OFFERING BOXES to communicants who are conscious of God's Providence and welcome this means of showing Him they realize whence cometh their blessings.

The GRACE BOX is a beautiful cardboard bank. It is placed on the dinner table and all who sit down to partake of a meal are encouraged to SAY GRACE WITH A COPPER by dropping a cent or more in the bank.

On Easter day you bring your GRACE OFFERING BOX to the Sunday School Lenten Offering Service and give it to any S. S. Class you choose to help meet its apportionment.

We need to raise $1,000.00 to pay our Diocesan debt and this S. S. L. O. is our means of so doing. Therefore you realize the importance of receiving money from every source.

Boxes are obtainable every Sunday at the church. YOU WILL NOT BE ASKED TO TAKE ONE, but if you do, your name will be put on our special Roll of Honor. So be sure to leave your name.

ARE YOU LOOKING FOR A JOB?

PRAYER FOUND ME ONE

"Have you any money?" my wife asked.

"I have a nickel," I said. "That is all."

It was after breakfast. We had a home, it is true, and there was no sign of poverty, but—I had no job. I had been going the rounds of the Agencies for weeks, with no results. With three children, besides ourselves, things looked serious.

"We have eaten the last food in the house," my wife said. "If we don't have money by noon, we'll go hungry."

"Then let's pray. We've always paid our tithes and God has promised such people protection from want," I told her. And right there I knelt, the five of us, and prayed. While still on our knees, someone rapped at the door, and my wife answered the call. A woman we barely knew stood there holding out money. She said: "God told me that I must give you this eight dollars." She refused to come in, and my wife took the money.

"We are two fools, Mollie," I said. "Why have we not asked for a job in earnest?" And again we knelt and asked God's forgiveness and then asked for a job. After that I started for the Agencies, and at the first one got a temporary job, substitution for a stenographer who was sick.

That night there was a message at home to "Report at the express office tomorrow at eight." The next morning I went back to the temporary job, but the man I had replaced came in and paid me off, and I went to the express office and was put to work. God moves strangely, as this proved to me, and He will answer prayer when prayed according to His will and promise.

Signed,

Charles Elmo Robinson.

P. S.—If you are looking for a job why don't you sit down and think how you have been treating God all your life. If you have been paying tithes regularly to Him, I'm sure you can begin to draw interest on them now. Just ask Him about it.

Or, if you have not been paying tithes or making regular offerings to God in the past and you have no deposits in your account with God, I'm sure He will honor a promisory note from you and will get you that job you need.

Only don't try to swindle God. If you negotiate a note with Him be sure you honor it when it falls due. Or else . . . .

DON'T MISS THIS ONE!

Your Lenten experience will be incomplete if you fail to come through to Easter bringing an unchurched friend with you.

During Lent the missionary spirit is in the air. You sense it. Your friends feel it. They do not think it strange for you to speak to them of spiritual things for the time is appropriate.

If there is a time you can hope to bring that one you are praying for to Confirmation and active membership in the Church it is during the period of Lent.

Therefore, make your attack with confidence and press home the responsibility of service with perseverance and you will receive the blessing of success.

YOUR RECTOR SAYS—

I want to make a special appeal to the communicants of St. John's Parish to be careful to observe every day of Lent this year.

I want you to attend every service of the church —especially the extra evening services on Sunday and Wednesday.

I want you to pray fervently for a fuller spiritual experience for yourself and others, whether loved ones or strangers.

I want you to practice the spirit of self denial in all things, not as a Lenten gesture but as a sincere desire to bring the body in subjection to the spirit and more amenable to the will of God.

Confirmation, Sunday Evening, May 12th

I want you to use this Lent as a season for special missionary efforts for Jesus Christ. Turn it into an old fashioned revival and bring both friends and strangers to the foot of the Cross, in repentance, seeking Grace. I want you to think how Jesus Christ offered Himself a sacrifice for sin on Calvary, and pledge Him on your word of honor that you will do all in your power, by gifts and service, to show Him how deeply you appreciate His act of love for sinful men.

I want you to make a covenant between God and yourself that, with His Grace, you will endeavor to carry the lessons of Lent throughout the year. To make the atmosphere of repentance and service—like spicy incense—ever envelope you and keep your resolutions strong.

I want you to pray daily for old St. John's Church and its mission of loving service to our community where its best influence is so seriously needed.

I want you, individually, to offer your time, your money, your strength, your thought, your loyalty, YOUR ALL to our dear old parish that it may be no mean power in building up Christ's kingdom on earth as it is in heaven.

SPEND LENT SPLENDIDLY

CONFIRMATION

SUNDAY EVENING, MAY 12th

The Bishop of the Diocese has appointed the above date for his visitation to St. John's Church for the purpose of administering the Rite of Confirmation.

This is a much earlier date than usual and it means that we must get VERY BUSY at once in order to prepare a class for presentation. Coming as close as it does to Easter it is going to be very difficult to organize a class in time for the Bishop's visit. This means, of course, that we must get busy NOW, even though we are up to our heads in Lenten activities, and do some intensive missionary work in our parish. Fortunately, our Sunday afternoon training in the Catechism will be a help and a good start in training the children. What disturbs us most is the lack of time we have to reach the adults in the parish and prepare them for the service.

LENT IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY

What we must do is to use every minute of our Lenten Season to do missionary work. As a matter of fact, if we are really awake to our opportunity we will realize that there is no better time in the church year to arouse an interest in spiritual things than during the period of Lent. It is the season that is universally accepted as the time to turn one's thoughts to God. Even those who are not interested in a personal spiritual experience are more or less touched by the sentiment in the air. At other times of the year they probably would treat any advance from us as to interesting them in their spiritual welfare with cold indifference, but in Lent they have an intuition that it is the right and proper attitude for you to assume towards them. If there is a time in the year when they will be responsive to you, it is in Lent. Why not turn missionary NOW and spend every day in Lent seeking out and persuading those unchurched friends of yours to avail themselves of the opportunity and present themselves for Confirmation, Sunday evening, May 12th?

I want every Sunday School teacher to get busy at once and canvass the classes for candidates. I want every church official, every member of the Woman's Auxiliary, every member of the various chapters of the Daughters of the King, every member of both and Senior and Junior Brotherhood of St. Andrew, every member of the Senior and Junior Choirs, every member of the Boys' Club, every District Superintendent and EVERY MEMBER OF THE PARISH, both adult and minor, to be on the job from now until the Bishop comes.

WRITE A LETTER

There are various approaches you can make. One way is, you can sit down and write a friendly, little note, telling your object of interest that now is a good time to take the serious step of becoming actively interested in (his) spiritual welfare and that you would consider it an honor to have (his) consent to present (his) name as a candidate for Confirmation.

GOSSIP

Another way is—you can keep up an incessant talk, with everybody you meet, about St. John's Church—how nice are the members, how well the choir sings, how big are the Communion services, how interesting is the Sunday School and what good times the members have at their social gatherings, and how St. John's has done much to improve the community. And always wind up your praise of St. John's Church and the congregation with an urgent invitation to go with you to hear some of our guest preachers at our special Wednesday and Sunday evening services. People can do a vast amount of good by saying good things about the church while gossiping with one's neighbor. What you say "sticks" in one's mind and starts one thinking. Yes indeed, if you want to fill St. John's Church with newly confirmed candidates, just go on a gossip spree among your friends and acquaintances.

PRAY WITH FERVOUR

There is another way you can gather in candidates. You can select persons in whom you are interested and you can spend a period of each day in praying for them by name—that they will be led by the Holy Spirit to surrender to Grace and offer themselves for Confirmation. A quiet little talk in between will help wonderfully in bringing them to a right and a definite conclusion.

BE PERSUASIVE

A number of persons want to argue how good they can be without the Church. Just where that idea gets them is a puzzle. If they can be good without the Church, then why not add their goodness to the goodness of the Church and so cooperate to make the world "gooder."

SET THE EXAMPLE

And there is still another way of approach. Be very careful of YOUR PERSONAL ATTITUDE to spiritual things; because the eyes of the world are upon you. We remember a true incident of a man who tried to live a christian life inconspicuously. One day an acquaintance approached him and said, "I have been watching you and the way you live for a long time. I want to tell you I admire the way you live. Personally I am a sinner who has lived recklessly all my life. I go on periodical drunks. I have lived a vile immoral

Confirmation, Sunday Evening, May 12th

life. I have never gone to church. I never considered the ethics of how I got my money. Now lately, your way of living has disturbed me greatly, because you seem to get so much more out of life. In a word, I am tired of my life of sin. I want to live more like you. Do you think I have a chance?"

His friend not only assured him that he had every chance in the world, but that he would take a personal interest in guiding him to the light. The results were amazing. The man was confirmed. He overcame his evil ways—especially his tendency to use horrible profanity. He persuaded his whole family to be confirmed. He presented his children (all married) and his grandchildren for christening and he engaged the services of his friend, who happened to be a clergyman, to marry his youngest son and his bride.

Yes, sometimes if you just let your light shine, your friends will see your good works and glorify your Father who is in heaven.

SEND NAMES OF PROSPECTIVE CANDIDATES

There is still another way you can help organize our Confirmation Class. You can send the Rector, without delay, the names, ages, addresses of your family, friends or acquaintances whom you know are not confirmed. He will file them and give the names to the proper District Superintendents and they will begin to visit them and try to break down their power of resistance.

AND REMEMBER

The emergency is upon us and we must act!

ELIZABETH VOLUNTEERS

This Popular Little Lady Is Helping the Rector Valiantly

" God moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform." When Elizabeth was taken so seriously ill that she had to resign from the City Mission Staff, we missed her greatly. Later, when she had that serious operation and had to give up her Church work we wondered why so much was happening to her. Perhaps God intended her for the work which she is doing now and used these means of leading her to the task He chose for her.

She is back now and is just as busy as she can be. She is in the choir again and has volunteered to take over the visiting of the absent kiddies of the Kindergarten and find out why they are absent. She is going over the Cradle Roll carefully to cull out the names, addresses, and ages of children old enough to be promoted to the Kindergarten and to visit the parents to consult with them about the transfer. She will visit all the little ones to get them in the state of wanting to come to Kindergarten. She will consult with the parents in cases of need and will advise the Rector of all cases of destitution or sickness that might be holding the children back from school.

Also, Elizabeth has volunteered to prepare the Confirmation class for the Rector. And what a relief that is to him! For Easter comes so early this year that we will have scarcely any time to plan our Confirmation work because the Bishop has advanced the date a month earlier. Our Confirmation class work must begin, therefore, immediately after Easter—perhaps the Friday after Easter.

Who is Elizabeth? Why she is that little blue-eyed rainbow girl with the winning smile that makes her so popular with all of us. She is the only Elizabeth Jaeschke.

MISS LYDIA EDGERLY

Volunteer

We welcome Miss Edgerly to the Church of St. John the Evangelist. Miss Edgerly joined by letter of transfer from Holy Trinity Church, Memphis, Tennessee. Evidently she has been used to Church work for even before her letter reached the Rector she volunteered to do whatever visiting was necessary among our people. The Rector has long wanted a tactful woman to act as a benevolent truant officer for the Main Department of our Sunday School. He suggested that she take over the job, which she did and got right down to business. Her reports on the delinquent scholars she has visited are most enlightening and helpful to the Rector. She submits typewritten reports on every scholar she visits and the reports show how conscientiously she is doing her job.

If Miss Edgerly should happen to drop in your home in her search for wandering Sunday School sheep, be sure to welcome her cordially. She is a friend worth cultivating.

HE LIVES

'Twas Mary, when she stooped, who say
Twin Angels, as they stood,
Where was The Head and was The Feet
Of Him from off the road.

Celestial forms in raiment white
Envisioned she, instead
Of spear-torn side, and nail pierced hands,
And thorn crowned, fevered Head.

An empty tomb, save these pure forms,
Beheld she there: and lo!
An angel spake, "Why, weepest Thou?"
Cried she, "Whence did He go?"

"Why weepest thou? Yea, verily!
Let ash and sackcloth be Cast far aside and mourn no more
This marks the hour He Put under Him the final foe.

Rejoice! By such He gives
Eternal hope: immortal life.
He lives! Our Christ! He lives!

JOSEPH C. CUSHING.

"LET'S GET CONVERTED"

No, I am not in a frivolous mood and trying to be smart. I really mean LET'S GET CONVERTED. I say it because I'm convinced that nearly one hundred "Christians" out of one hundred need just that very experience.

Why "kid" ourselves? You know, and I know, that neither know Jesus Christ and His Gospel of love. We call ourselves Christians—followers of Jesus Christ. What a libel to Jesus! Were He really leading us in the direction we are headed, our journey's end would be far from the Kingdom of God.

I wonder if we have all gone crazy! How can we possibly delude ourselves into thinking we are followers of Jesus Christ and continue to live in sin, as we are doing?

Most of us think respectability is a sign of the Faith; yet, some of the most criminal minded are respectable. Even we are respectable in spite of our grasping, spiteful, petty ways. Some give lavishly to the Church and get their names enrolled among the generous givers—where they who run may read of their gifts—and at the same time consider it "good business" to cut the wage of an employee to the last bleeding cent. Some "keep the fast" weekly and abstain from eating flesh—and gorge themselves on all sorts of succulent dishes of fish and oysters and crabs, etc. Most of them indulge in this weekly change of diet because they like fish foods better than they do meat and welcome the chance to prove their piety while satisfying the inner man with preferred food.

Perhaps it would be more like keeping the fast days were the fish eaters to go on a meat diet.

I wonder how many "christians" ever see the inside of the Temple of God except on high occasions, such, for instance, as christenings, weddings, funerals, Easter and Christmas?

I wonder how many thousands of "christians" we would find on the golf links on Sunday during the hours of worship.

I wonder how many thousands of "christians" indulge in the week (weak) end practice of leaving home and church and worship behind, to patronize roadhouses on Sunday morning, noon and night without so much as a thought of worship while they indulge in over eating and lusts of the flesh and spend more money on one meal than they put in the Alms Basin of the Church in five years.

I wonder why so many christians are so deaf to the cry of the needy, the sick, the aged, the widow and the orphan for relief in the name of God, yet can hear the demand of ten dollars to one hundred dollars for one night's entertainment for self and family.

I wonder how many thousands of "I thank thee for making me different" christians and how few "penitent sinner" christians go to our Church.

The more we think on this matter the sadder we feel. How can we delude ourselves that we ARE christians—followers of Jesus Christ—yet walk in paths where Jesus never walked. Personally I feel we are lost and are traveling away from Jesus instead of following him. I know Jesus would never DO the things I do. He would never THINK the thoughts I think. He would never SAY the things that I say. He would never FEEL as I feel. Something has happened to us—WE HAVE LOST JESUS CHRIST!

Confirmation, Sunday Evening, May 12th

Our only hope of finding him again is to turn around—get off the road of sin and self-indulgence. In a word—LET'S GET CONVERTED! OUR style of christianity is NOT the style of christianity of JESUS CHRIST.

YOUR EASTER COMMUNION

Every Communion is an extremely important event in the Christian's life. Yet there are two such celebrations in the year which are of even greater importance than your regular Communions. These are the celebrations which occur on Christmas and Easter. Both are days of special obligations and cannot and must not be ignored by any confirmed member of the church. A really conscientious Christian would no more ignore or evade these means of grace than a man would default in his life or fire insurance. Even that comparison is inadequate to explain the importance of receiving your Communion on these two occasions. Maybe, however, it will properly impress the minds of some who can understand values when compared to familiar things. Your Easter Communion must not be neglected. It is not necessary for us to explain why. It is a duty fraught with real consequences to those who neglect to perform it. Its significant symbolism of the sacrifice and resurrection of the Lord Jesus is enough in itself to stress the importance of the Easter Communion. The lesson of a great spiritual battle fought and won for our salvation is so plain and simple that we cannot fail to know how intimately connected we are to the Master. He did not fight the forces of evil for a principle only. He fought them because they menaced our eternal welfare. Consequently, for our sakes, he destroyed forever their power over our souls and we are free today from the thraldom of those forces because He fought and won our freedom for us.

We give universal expression to our respect for Washington and Lincoln on their birthdays for their great service to America.

We surely ought to give greater and even wider expression to our reverence for Jesus Christ on His Resurrection day for the great service to humanity in every nation, in every generation, to every individual everywhere.

YOU MUST NOT NEGLECT YOUR EASTER COMMUNION!

EASTER FLOWERS

One of the beautiful traditions of St. John's parish is the loaning of potted plants and cut flowers to adorn the choir, chancel and altar on Easter day. Many of the members buy Easter plants and flowers to place upon the graves of their departed loved ones during Easter season; but before doing so they bring the flowers to the church and all Easter day they lend their beauty and fragrance to the services. After the final service of the day the owners of the flowers come forward and take them to the cemetery later. Many of our Communicants have formed the most generous habit of contributing flowers and plants to the church with the request that they be distributed among the sick of the parish who have been unable to attend Easter services.

We hope the same custom will prevail this year. We know that many of us will have scarcely enough to buy the necessities of life because of unemployment; but may we hope that the more fortunate of the parish will see that flowers are contributed to the church on Easter day in order that we may preserve the traditions to the Glory of God.

HOW JESUS COMES VISITING

Old Martin was a cobbler and lived in a gloomy basement room where he mended the shoes of the village folk. Every evening Martin read from his New Testament, for he loved Jesus and often wished that the Christ might come to his home as a guest.

One evening he rested his head on his hands, thinking. He seemed to hear a voice say, "Look on the street tomorrow, Martin. I am coming to meet you."

Early next morning Martin was up and eagerly he watched for his guest through his small window. Once he saw a street cleaner staggering from want of food and warm clothes. Martin fed him and gave him a warmer coat, then hurried back to the window. After some time he noticed a poor woman and her baby, trying to brave the snowstorm. They, too, were fed and warmed. Later in the day Martin made peace between two who had quarrelled and sent them away friends. But still the Christ had not come.

As night fell, Martin lighted his lamp and sat down again with his Bible. He opened it and read, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

How many times have you seen Jesus Christ sick, or in rags, or in prison and have ministered unto him?

UNSEEN POWER

Jesus, before His ascension, when the disciples were assembled together, commanded them to "wait for the promise of the Father." And what was that promise? The Baptism of the Holy Ghost.

"Ye shall receive the power of the Holy Ghost coming upon you, and ye shall be witnesses unto Me . . . even to the uttermost parts of the earth."

They were to be endued with power for service, and as the records in the Acts of the Apostles clearly show, this enduement was followed by extraordinary effects. Men and women were added daily to the church. It was the effect of preaching with the wisdom of God in it. It was the telling of something which had come into their experience and made them bold in witness. They had seen the Master and had been with Him. They had His promise and they had seen Him go away from them into Heaven and they now had a power in their hearts and lives which was to turn the world to God. It was a practical experience. It was an individual experience. It wrought conviction, as all preaching will, when the preacher is a man of God.

It is the Unseen Power of the Spirit which makes men unafraid of the face of men. The man who has "lived, seen God's hand through a lifetime" is the man who is able to guide others into the way of truth.

Confirmation, Sunday Evening, May 12th

WHAT DOES YOUR FAMILY THINK OF YOU?

The real test of a man's religion is how he acts at home. Are you kind, amiable and sweet in your family circle? "Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ," is the teaching of Christianity. The church helps men lead lives that are reflected in the lives of their children.

Some claim they can follow Christ's teachings without going to church. These same people deny themselves many opportunities to help others by neglecting the church and its means of grace. This is an appeal to you to join our ranks and help the church exert the influence in the community that it ought.

Link your efforts with the energies of those who are trying to build up the best things in your community. Come to church.

THE TREASURER'S REPORT

The Treasurer submits the following report for the year ending December 31, 1939. It is very gratifying to be able to show a balance; whereas, the last time I spoke to you we had a deficit. You will see in going over this report that the income from our envelopes is not sufficient to meet the Current Expenses. It is therefore necessary each year that our loose offerings are maintained at, at least, their present level and in addition, funds must be raised by some other means.

I wish at this time to express my thanks to the Assistant Treasurer, Mr. William J. Shives, for the splendid way in which he has done his part. And my earnest desire is that each of you not only continue your obligations but make a sincere effort to help us remind others to keep theirs.

VERNON MATTHEWS,
Treasurer.

GIRL SCOUT TROOP, No. 50

THE FIRST THIRTEEN YEARS

When Betty (Harper) Griffith stopped in last Monday night and remarked, after looking around at our group, "There are not many of the old girls left, are there?" I was surprised and had to look around at the group myself to realize that there were only three or four girls left that she would know. Then I remembered that I could look back upon a time when she was one of our newest Scouts, and some other girls probably looked at her and said, "She's new, and most of the old girls are gone, aren't they?"

What did this do to me beside making me feel like a grandmother? It made me wonder just how many girls there are who have at some time in their lives belonged to Troop 50! It would be fun to hold a reunion for them some time, and one of the first questions I should like to ask would be, "Did the Girl Scouts help you at all in planning your way of life, and in carrying out your plans? I should like to know this especially since a friend of mine said to me the other day, "Girl Scouting is really pretty selfish, isn't it? They are always learning to do things to pass tests and help themselves!"

My answer was, "One of the parts of the promise, and one of our laws is, to be useful and to help others. How can a Girl Scout be selfish?"

There are girls in the Troop who have stayed for six, seven and eight years! I wonder why? What is Girl Scouting doing for them now? At present we are working on a handcraft project, learning how to knit and crochet, but is that the most important thing? I wonder if we are not learning something, too, in having to be patient while we wait our turn for help or instruction, by having to share our little balls of wool when the supply runs low, and by helping a beginner over a hard place—showing how to put stitches on a needle, or how to pick up a dropped stitch?

Whatever it is that makes them come, the Girl Scouts are on hand in full force every Monday night. There is always a full troop of 32, and always many more on the waiting list, anxious for a chance to join. In all these thirteen years, there has never been a chance that the troop might fail through lack of members. What is the answer? I should love to hear it from the girls!

THE SECRET PLACE

There is a place where thou can touch the eyes
Of blinded men to instant perfect sight.
There is a place where thou cans't say "arise!"
To dying captives bound in chains of night.

There is a place where thou cans't reach the store
Of hoarded gold, and free it for the Lord.
There is a place here, or on a distant shore,
Where thou cans't send the worker and the word.
There is a place where heaven's resistless power
Responsive moves to thine insistent plea.

There is a place, a silent holy hour,
Where God himself descends and works for thee.
Where is that secret place? Dost thou ask where?
Oh Soul! It is the secret place of Prayer.

THE JUNIOR DAUGHTERS OF THE KING

Every Monday night, at seven o'clock, a small but loyal group of Junior Daughters of the King, meets in the front room of the Parish House for prayer and study, and service of some kind.

During Lent we have been studying the life of Christ with the help of Alice Brookman's Work Book, "My Own Life of Christ." We hope to finish it in time to take it with us to the Diocesan meeting of the Junior Daughters. After that, we plan to offer it to Mr. McHenry to use in the Sunday School, if he would like to have it. It would be hard to enumerate the many times we have stopped to discuss various phases in our Lord's life and to try to see how they apply to us today. If the girls have learned half as much as the Directress, it has been a Lent well spent!

It is time now to make plans for the meetings after Easter. Here are a few suggestions:

1. Try to bring some more girls who would be interested in the group, and to bring back others who have drifted away.
2. Plan regularly and conscientiously to help the parish in some definite way. Mr. McHenry has offered us the opportunity of holding cottage services for shut-ins. If the girls could only realize how much their visits are appreciated, they would be only too happy to do it faithfully!
3. Begin to work again on the bedspread we are planning to give to the parish for the Annual Bazaar.
4. Make some special scrap books to send to the missionaries in China and Japan, to help them in teaching English to their charges. How? By pasting one picture on a page, and labeling the picture,—a baby, ball, table or whatever it happens to be!
5. Ask all our new members for help in planning new activities.

The Junior Daughters are looking forward with pleasure to a promised visit from Miss Edgerly, who has joined the parish this winter. We want her to come and tell us if there is any way in which we can help her in the work she is doing for the Sunday School.

The aims of the Daughters of the King are Prayer and Service. Surely there must be many girls in the parish who would like to express their Christianity in this way!

Helen Weir McHenry,
Directress.

WHAT IS IN YOUR HEART?

PRAYER: Create within me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me. Let the words of our mouth and the meditations of our hearts be always acceptable in Thy sight, O Lord, our strength and our Redeemer. Amen.

In a missionary exhibit at a Convention some time ago I saw a heart-shaped object on a table and asked the attendant what it was. "Oh," she said, "that is a Hungarian Valentine. You see it has a mirror in the center of the heart. A young man in Hungary will send the valentine to the girl he loves, with a message saying, 'See what is in my heart.' Of course, when she looks at it she sees herself and is assured of the first place in his heart."

Day by day God is looking into your and my heart. He sees what others cannot see. It is important that we "seek always to think God's thoughts after him" and to cherish His spirit always in our hearts.

When Jesus looks into YOUR HEART, what does He see?

Does He see Himself reflected there?

Does He know when He looks at you that He has first place in YOUR heart?

The Secret Place.

TO A FRIEND

IN APPRECIATION

Who can say how much you mean to me?
How deep, how true, how sure your love can be!
My constant prayer, "Dear Father, give Thine aid
To prove me worthy of such care,
Show me how such love can be repaid
And help me value truly this Thy gift so rare."

THE WOMAN'S AUXILIARY

I am taking this opportunity to thank you for your splendid cooperation in making the Auxiliary meetings a success.

At our October meeting we had an attendance of 43 and in November 76, but the attraction was the very fine showing of the moving pictures of the World's Fair by William MacVaugh.

On November 26th we gave a very successful Radio Party, every member doing her share, so now we feel that with such a splendid group of women working together we will be able to make a showing in our parish, by helping with the much needed repairs.

At the December meeting 38 members were present, at which time we had a Christmas Party. The members also brought sugar, which we made into 175 attractive packages to be given to Father Ware to take to the Home for Indigents on Christmas morning. We have a list of twenty shut-ins, to each of whom a personal visit was made and a glass of homemade jelly given. The ladies enjoyed doing this as it made them feel that they were having a share in the spirit of giving.

At the January meeting we had 24 members present and February there were 28 present, which was splendid when you take into consideration the bad weather that we had this winter.

We are wondering what is wrong with the rest of the women of the parish, as to why they do not want to belong to an active organization of the parish? One that will help the Rector whenever he calls upon them.

We are asking all the women of the parish to come to our next meeting, Monday, March 25th and see for themselves what grand meetings we have.

We are very proud to say that we have delegates who attend the five Missionary Committee Meetings each Wednesday of the month at the Church House, and bring back to the Auxiliary splendid reports of the workings of these Committees.

At this time we are not in a position to help a lot financially, but we are sending $5.00 to each of these committees, the Colored, Diocesan, Domestic, Foreign and The Indian Hope Association. We gave a Christmas Offering and will give an Easter Offering to our Church.

Friday, March 29th, we will give a Radio and Card Party, half of the proceeds to go to the Church Treasurer, who is trying to build up a surplus to carry over the summer months. With the other half we are going to try and replenish the kitchen, which is badly in need of dishes and repairs.

Ladies, bear in mind these two dates that you have this month; first, the Auxiliary Meeting, March 25th and second, the Radio and Card Party, March 29th.

MAY I. SHIVES, President.

FASTING AND PRAYER GAVE BACK MY HEALTH

The doctors—I had tried four of them—all agreed that there was a spot on my lung which, unless something was done about it, would develop rapidly into tuberculosis, and the last one threw a genuine scare into me by saying I would likely be an undertaker's prospect within a year.

I am a chemist, or was at the time I was hopefully—and hopelessly—making this round of the doctors. My work was confining and the hours were long, and much of my time, naturally, was spent in the gas impregnated atmosphere of the laboratory.

On the way home from the last doctor's office, I passed the parish house of our church just as our pastor, Dr. Gale, was leaving his study there. I stopped to chat a minute for I had known him for years, ever since I played on the church ball team which he coached. After a few moments he sized me up and said, "Roy, what's wrong? You look as worried as a rookie pinch hitter with two strikes on him, the bases full and two men down."

"I guess that about calls the play for me," I told him. "I've just heard that another wild swing and I'll be chased to the showers, and maybe let out of the league—for keeps."

"They're not firing you down at the plant?" he asked seriously.

"Worse than that," I told him.

"Let's get this straight, lad," he said. "Come back into my study and tell me about it." And a few minutes later I was sitting across the desk from him, telling him everything the doctors had told me.

"That sounds bad," he said when I finished. "But it might be worse. At least you have a chance to do something about it."

"Sometimes doctors are wrong, lad," he said after a moment. "They are a fine lot and I admire them, but . . . sometimes they're wrong. They get so full of man-made wisdom that they forget there is One whose wisdom is greater than theirs, One who can do things they can't do. You've consulted these doctors, now let's consult God."

Confirmation, Sunday Evening, May 12th

It seemed perfectly natural that we should kneel down there together while Dr. Gale talked to God about me and asked Him to take my case and in His infinite wisdom direct my affairs so that my health might be restored.

When we arose from our knees, Dr. Gale said, "Roy, you talk this over with God in your own way. He'll see you through if your faith is strong enough. Stop worrying and trust Him. He won't let you down."

Before retiring that night I spent some time reading God's word and talking to Him, and that in itself seemed to help. I had worried a lot during the past few months after becoming conscious that my health was failing. But Dr. Gale's calm faith seemed to have been imparted to me, I had confidence in him and because of that confidence there grew the assurance that God would do something about me. And those nightly sessions with God and His Word strengthened that assurance.

A week passed and nothing happened. Some of the old worries began to raise their heads. Another week went by, and another. Still no plan had been evolved and my faith was beginning to waver. Then one afternoon the lab phone rang and Dr. Gale was on the wire. He said, "Stop in my study on your way home tonight, Roy. I think I have something."

I finished the experiment I was working on and left a few minutes early. At the parish house I found Dr. Gale in his study and he said, "I got a line on something today which may help." And then he told me a friend of his had a cabin in the Adirondacks which was used only in summer and he had borrowed it for my use. I was to go up in the mountains and live in the open. He wanted to know when I could go.

I told him I could leave as soon as I had given reasonable notice at the plant, although I had explained to the head of my department that I was expecting to have to make a change. Dr. Gale said, "I've taken care of that. I know the head of your organization and I phoned him today. He understands. All you have to do is get your personal affairs in shape."

So I followed instructions and a few days later was on the train, but before leaving I had had several talks with Dr. Gale. One of the things he said which impressed me—and it also surprised me—was that fasting would contribute definitely to restoring my health.

I had thought that a cold part of the country such as I was going to would demand hearty eating if I were to "keep warm." But Dr. Gale disillusioned me on that. H said, "What you've got to do is to correct a condition created by neglect, abuse, and ignorance. Your thoughts now are centered on that defective lung. But your lung never would have reached that stage if your whole body had been at peak efficiency. It's lowered physical fitness which gives most diseases a chance to get a start and is responsible for most sickness in the world. So to repair that lung, you've got to put your entire body back in prime condition. That is why I'm talking to you about fasting.

"You've read in the Bible of the fasts they observed in those days. They were observed largely for spiritual reasons, but there was a physical side as well, for a physical well-being makes for a spiritual clarification which brings keener understanding of God's will.

As Dr. Gale paused a moment a large gray cat promenading the wall outside the study window caught his eye and he went on, "There's an example. Have you ever known a cat to eat when it is ill, or a dog either? They follow the instincts of nature and fast to combat disease. But men go on stuffing themselves. And they call animals dumb! The reason they stop eating when ill, and the reason man should stop eating from time to time, is that a chance may be given to the system to eradicate the poisons which have accumulated from eating too much, or eating the wrong kind of food. These poisons pollute the blood stream and are carried to every part of the body to do their damage. Purify this blood stream and the whole system is revitalized.

Thus enlightened, I undertook my self-imposed exile in search of the health which was to prove the verdicts of those individual doctors wrong. It was an entirely new routine of living for me, and at first it was hard to adopt. But I did it.

I spent long hours out of doors, even when later the ground was deeply covered with snow. Snow-shoes took care of that. I slept with the whole cabin open at night. I even did my reading with the windows open. What writing I had to do—for recreation I was translating from the French a treatise on chemistry to be included in the research library of our plant—was difficult at first with mittened hands, but I finally got the hang of it and was able to read my own notes without too much difficulty.

I read books and magazines Dr. Gale had recommended that I take with me which explained more fully the advantages of proper eating and adapted the suggestions I found, making my meals simple and cutting down the amount of food I consumed. On one day a week, I ate nothing at all, drinking orange juice sometimes on these days, if I was lucky enough to find oranges at the settlement store two miles down the trail.

So when spring came, I was ready to return to the city. Again I made the round of those same four doctors who had lightly tossed me to the undertakers, and every one of them, after an examination, gave me a clean bill of health. Is it any wonder that I have continued to follow the same food routine I had adopted in the mountains, with a fast day once in seven? Is it any wonder that I continue to talk things over with God each night before retiring? The best proof of anything is that it works. And this combination of fasting and prayer worked with me. That is proof enough of its worth.

HELP US

Lord of the quiet heart, who knew the sound
Of raging streets with anger loud,
Yet walked serene in faith that saw
Beyond the blindness of the crowd—
Help us to find the even way,
Through all the clamor of this day.
Lord of the gentle eyes, who saw the bright
Spear-points beneath Thee gleam and toss,
Yet heard with tenderness, the thief's
Faint cry for mercy from his cross—
Remember us, that we may hear
The whispered hope, the accent near.
Lord of the steadfast will, whose vision clear
Saw all the travail of the years,
Beyond which lies the world to be
That knows no human wrath or tears—
Help us to see with eyes unsealed
Thy harvest, that the years shall yield!

OUR GOOD FRIDAY SERVICE

It is our pleasure and privilege to tell about the Evening Service at St. John's on Good Friday. This year the Choir presented selections from Maunder's Cantata "Olivet to Calvary."

Those who were present, and we did have a large congregation, are still talking about the splendid singing and general response of the Choir to training and leadership. The members excelled themselves in their earnest devotion to rehearsals and cooperation in making this an occasion to be remembered by us all. The entire rendition showed not only long hours of practice, but most important of all, that each member of the Choir had grasped the deep, spiritual beauty of this melodious composition.

This was particularly evident in the singing of the Baritone and Tenor Recitatives by Mr. John J. Nelson and Mr. Jeremiah K. Rutter. Each interpretation was presented with dignity and brought to us so clearly our Lord's sacrifice and suffering.

St. John's Church is very fortunate in having a choir of young men and young women who are devoted to the one purpose of serving their church at all services to the best of their ability.

We extend to you a special invitation to attend the Evening Service on Good Friday in 1941 when the Choir will present the entire Cantata.

HOW OLD IS OLD ENOUGH?

When is a person "too young" and when "too old"

When the Rector goes forth on his annual "round up" for Confirmation he is constantly met with parents' objections that he, or she, is not old enough, referring of course to the child of the family. So now we have acquired the habit of asking, "How old is a child when he is old enough?" Is it not so that most children of six show a keen moral sense and a clear spiritual vision of life? If you lack that knowledge you lack knowledge of your child. On the other hand do you not know that many persons of both sexes of adult years are morons? They may be twenty-one years of age and over, yet they have mental and moral concepts of a child less than ten years. Do you get what we mean?

Tell me, dear objector, which would you rather do—present a normal child of seven or a moron of twenty-one or forty years for Confirmation?

Have you ever asked yourself why there are so many unconfirmed adults? Did it ever occur to you that THEIR parents insisted they were "too young" when they ought to have been confirmed; and then neglected them until THEY, the unconfirmed, concluded that they were "too old"? The result being that they NEVER get confirmed.

WHO IS TO BLAME FOR THIS NEGLECT?
The Parent or the Child?

Perhaps it is your misconception of the Church and its functions that is misleading you. Perhaps you have picked up the idea from somewhere that the Church of Jesus Christ is a Society of Saintly Persons who never do wrong; and, in order to be eligible for membership you must be saintly. Therefore a child, who does not know all the fundamentals of right and wrong, is not in a fit state of mind or spirit to be admitted to Communion with Jesus Christ.

Confirmation, Sunday Evening, May 12th

Now if you will just take time out and enlighten yourself on the subject WHY IS THE CHURCH, you being a reasonable person will, of course, change your mind. As a matter of fact the Church is divinely instituted for TEACHING the fundamentals of our faith and the methods by which we may approach and apprehend God so that by contact with the Divine we may LEARN to live right.

Why don't you use the common sense in spiritual things which you do in material things? Who ever heard a parent claim that a child is "too young" to go to school. Why, in order to get the child under instruction at the earliest possible age, the pedagogist has reduced the school age of the child to the earliest possible age year—even before the child can pronounce clearly the simplest words and cannot spell or read at all, he is sent to school. How come the child is not too young for that?

Oh, you say, the child starts in the kindergarten to LEARN and as he learns he is promoted to the First Grade; eventually to College Preparatory; eventually to College; eventually to Post Graduate and University Work and, perhaps, eventually to the Seminary. We start him at an IMPRESSIONABLE age so that the habit of mental application becomes second nature to him.

THOU HAST WELL SAID—

In other words, you sent your child at the earliest possible age to prepare for the higher intellectual, literary, professional or scientific career, because they are his impressionable years. You watched his physical and mental development with an anxious eye that he might have every advantage in attaining the goal.

But why so careful about developing that which must grow old and die, and neglect that which must stay ever young and live eternally?

In short, your Church is not a mystical Society of Saints—IT IS THE TRAINING SCHOOL TOWARDS THE HIGHER LIFE. The mysteries of the Church are the stimulating tease to urge you solve the spiritual world.

If you really believe in education, then educate your child properly. Start him in both the CHURCH and the PUBLIC SCHOOL at the earliest possible age, and remember that his progress along one line of learning is as important as it is along the other line.

Do you still feel that there is something to be said about the AGE of the child before he is confirmed?

Very well, then. Let us take two text books of authority and learn what they reveal on the subject. I refer to the BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER and the HOLY BIBLE.

What does the PRAYER BOOK say about the AGE of the child about to be confirmed?

NOTHING!

All it does is to ask the question, "Wilt thou take heed that this child, so soon as sufficiently instructed, be brought to the Bishop to be confirmed by him?" And you answer: "I will, God being my helper." Prayer Book, Page 27. Would you say that the AGE of the child was considered when that question was formulated? Would you not say rather that evidently stress was laid upon the training and knowledge of the child? And when the child had been so instructed he won promotion into active membership in the Church, REGARDLESS OF AGE.

Also, what does the BIBLE say about children and the Kingdom of God?

READ PROVERBS 22:6

And you will get what I mean.

But we have another and a very beautiful instance in the Bible to show that AGE does not count in the matter of entering into the Kingdom of Heaven. In St. Matthew 19:13-15, St. Mark 10:13-16 and St. Luke 18:15-17, we read of this tender incident in our Saviour's ministry: "Then there were brought unto him little children, that HE SHOULD PUT HIS HANDS ON THEM AND PRAY: And the disciples rebuked them.

But Jesus said, Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me: for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven.

AND HE LAID HIS HANDS ON THEM."

This incident is interesting for many reasons if we study it in the light of child confirmation. The first fact that strikes one is they brought LITTLE children to Jesus. It is scarcely necessary to say that "little" as used in this passage does not refer to size but rather to age—the children brought to Jesus were YOUNG children, so that he could take them up into his arms.

Next, there WERE adults there to rebuke the parents for bringing such YOUNG children to Jesus, who succeeded only in being rebuked by the Master for attempting to bar little children from His presence.

Not only did he rebuke these adults but he COMMANDED that the young children be brought to him—for said he OF SUCH SWEET INNOCENCE AND UNQUESTIONING FAITH IS THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN PEOPLED; therefore they MUST BE ALLOWED TO ENTER.

Then HE PERFORMED THE FIRST RECORDED ACT OF CHRISTIAN CONFIRMATION

By Invitation—"Come unto me"
By Laying on of hands
By Invocation
By the sentence—"Of such is the Kingdom of Heaven"

WE ALWAYS LIKED TO THINK THAT THAT WAS REALLY THE FIRST CHRISTIAN CONFIRMATION CLASS AND THAT IT WAS COMPOSED OF ONLY LITTLE CHILDREN AND THAT IT WAS JESUS CHRIST THE GREAT HIGH PRIEST, WHO PERFORMED THE SACRED OFFICE.

Did you ever read the beautiful story of Hannah and her son Samuel? Get out your Bible and learn from her how very young was her son when she took him to the Temple and loaned him to God.

Bring YOUR CHILD to God while he is still sweet and innocent and cooperate with the Church in teaching him while he is still teachable to walk in the ways of truth and live always in the beauty of holiness. If you start with an unspoiled life you may succeed in keeping it unspoiled until from the school of experience he may graduate into the highest life in the world—that of the Sons of God!

EASTER AT ST. JOHN'S

The day was like a haughty debutante, beautiful but cold. When we emerged from our hole-in-the-wall at 5.30 A. M., to go to church, the thermometer registered 22 degrees, and there it stuck for the greater part of the monring. At no time during the day did it register as high as 30 degrees.

There was a great out-pouring of the Faithful at the early service. The sun was shining gloriously through the big rose window. Its rays of blue and red and green and gold struck across the church and slanted down upon the flower decked Altar, Chancel and Choir. The effect was breathtaking.

But the most exquisite picture of all was when the Junior Choir in their scarlet vestments, marched two abreast in slow and measured tread and ranged themselves in terraced form outside the Choir rails and sang their sunrise Easter Carol. The lilly adorned Altar and Choir, the scarlet robed singing boys and girls, all bathed in the vari-colored rays of the rising sun, formed a picture of unforgetable beauty. Many of us regretted we had no means of taking a photograph before the picture faded. The big congregation listened spellbound to the sweet tones of the Junior voices as they sung Hall's "Have Thine own way, Lord." Then as a fitting close to that part of our service the Juniors proceeded slowly and in double file to their place of formation for the Processional.

Then the service was on in full swing. Through the crowded Church marched the combined choirs singing that ever inspiring Easter Hymn, "Welcome, Happy Morning." As usual in St. John's Church, the congregation joined lustily in the singing and the music rolled and tumbled among the curved and arched ceiling in a storm of melody. One's nerves tingled with ecstacy. It was the triumphant march of the Resurrection.

Then the hush.

And suddenly the organ pealed forth the opening notes of "Christ our Passover" by Schilling. As every one knows it is a great anthem and affords good opportunities for Tenor and Alto solo work. This was followed by the Kyrie, Gloria Tibi and Gratias Tibi by Stults.

After the Nicene Creed the anthem "King of Kings" by Stults was magnificently rendered by the Choir. After the Announcements the Choir sang the Offertory "And when the Sabbath was Past" another composition by Stults; also the Sursam Corda, the Sanctus and the Agnus Dei. At the conclusion of the Communion Service the glorious music of Mozart's Gloria in Excelsis was sung as only St. John's Choir can sing it. Following the Blessing the special musical program was brought to a close by the choir singing Stainer's "Sevenfold Amen." Throughout the morning program the Baritone Solos were rendered by Mr. John J. Nelson, Jr., and the Tenor Solos by Mr. Jeremiah K. Rutter, Jr. Both were in superb form, while the whole choir so completely surpassed their past best efforts that, as a whole, they seemed a new group of singers and were near-professional. Their work was a revelation and the congregation realized they had listened to one of the most beautiful Easter musical programs ever rendered in old St. John's. We congratulate the Choir and the Soloists on their very beautiful and very reverent service.

The Recessional Hymn, sung by both Choirs, accompanied by the whole congregation, was that old fourteenth century Latin Hymn, "Jesus Christ is Risen today, Alleluia."

The Second Celebration of the Holy Communion at 10.30 o'clock was a repetition of the first in every respect except it was an entirely new and much larger congregation. As usual, there were scores of folk present at both services we have not seen for many, many months. We are always glad to renew all such ties on such occasions.

The number of Communicants who received were 436 persons. This is the largest Easter Communion of St. John's history. We were proud of our Parish as we ministered to them and recalled our first Easter Communion 27 years ago when we rejoiced over a congregation of 75 persons. This Easter 500 St. Johnites were present and worshiping.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL EASTER SERVICE

As usual, we got started an half hour late. In a way, this cannot be avoided owing to the extra time it takes for the classes to count their Mite Chest, Grace Offerings, Candy and Entertainment money. However, at 3.00 P. M., we got under way by singing an appropriate Easter Hymn. This was followed by the Presentation of the Lenten Offering. After the Auditing Committee left with the offering the Intermediate Department, in their bright way, rendered a beautiful Easter child's selection. After that, things moved fast and furiously.

We awarded the prizes for full attendance to the Lenten Services. The prizes were Crosses, to be worn around the neck for the women and girls; and beautiful wreathed cross pins for the men and boys. Right there the feminine nature became obstreperous. Instead of being satisfied with the really beautiful silver crosses, they turned them down and insisted that they must have the wreathed pins instead. Of course, we had only enough for the male population, consequently when the females insisted we were greatly embarrassed because we ran out of pins. Did that stop the fair sex? No sir! They were determined and demanded that we take their cards and order more wreaths. So here we are, with an hundred silver crosses and cords on our hands and short over twenty-five pins. Maybe we can sell some of the crosses. We are willing to sacrifice them for twenty-five cents each to raise more money to buy more wreath pins.

After that tangle was straightened out to the satisfaction of the ladies at least,—we joined in singing another Easter Hymn, after which we gave chocolate eggs to everybody and had a few left over for sick scholars who were not present. This distribution was followed by another hymn and then we began to call for volunteers to take the potted plants and Easter lillies to the homes of the sick and shut-ins.

Then the auditors returned with their report which was as follows:

Class	#1	$134.16
"	2	76.04
"	3	25.69
"	4	31.39
"	6	49.65

After receiving this report the Rector asked all to stand and sing "The Doxology." Then we saluted the Cross and the Flag and adjourned.

IT WAS THE END OF A GLORIOUS DAY!

SPECIAL REMARKS OF PRAISE for the SEXTON AND HIS ASSISTANT

Right here we want to sing a song of praise to our worthy sexton. That man has brains and knows how to use them. He reads the weather report and noticed on Good Friday the weather manipulator promised sub-freezing for everybody from then until after Easter. Acting on the hint, our sexton, whose initials are W. P., unrolled his mattress and literally slept beside the church heating system until 2.00 A. M., Easter. Then he was relayed by no less a personage than W. K., who carried on and sent W. P. home to his well earned rest. The result of such team work in coal burning was a most comfortably heated church. Not one person said an unkind word about the sexton or his worthy assistant. And nobody complained of having a chill.

All of which added great joy to our day!

EASTER ROLL OF HONOR

It is with special pleasure we acknowledge the Easter Offerings of the following for their prompt response to our Easter appeal. There were over 1000 Easter Offering Envelopes issued and these are they who brought their Offering on Easter. In a few cases the offerings were mailed to us because long distance or illness made it impossible to bring them.

The number of offerings received is far less than the number of envelopes mailed before Easter. We hope many which have not yet been received are only delayed and will reach us finally. Of course, we know there were dozens of envelopes received by commnicants who are so desperately poor that they can not possibly give even so much as a cent. They are excused from giving because of their extreme poverty.

But what about those who are NOT in the needy class and who have not yet sent in their Offering? We know some of our communicants who spent quite a tidy sum on their cars and banquets and suppers and movies and luxuries and long trips during the past year, who have not so much as given a thought to their Easter obligations. THERE ARE MANY NAMES MISSING FROM THIS ROLL OF HONOR THAT OUGHT, BY ALL MEANS, BE ON IT; for your Rector well knows how much happiness God has brought into your lives since last Easter. If you cannot feel humbly and deeply grateful for your eternal redemption through the sacrifice on the Cross, surely you still must have enough common courtesy to acknowledge with material tokens the debt of gratitude you owe to God for the common necessities of life and the vast amount of pleasure he gives you every day of your life. The next time, O Ye Easter Delinquents, you spend Two or Three Dollars per capita on a social affair, may your unused Easter Envelope rise up and haunt you. We are in desperate financial need and your holding out on your obligations is causing an unpleasant and embarrassing crisis for the church. ARE YOU PROUD OF BEING A PARTY TO SUCH EMBARRASSMENT? Even though it IS late won't you be converted and open up your purse and do your duty towards your Church?

THRICE BLESSED ARE THESE

We take special pleasure in calling your attention to the list of names that follow. They know how God cares for their every need. They know why the sun shines by day. They know why the moon and the stars light up the heavens by night. They know why earth flowers and trees and shrubs are all so beautifully vari-colored and aromatic. They know why the mountains and the hills are so grand and strong. They know why the valleys are so cool and beautiful. They know why the oceans and lakes and rivers and waterfalls in constant restless motion move. They know from where the fruits and grain do come. They know who supplies the cattle on the thousand hills and the sheep of the fold. They know the WHY of it all. They know that all these things and a million more are God's love gifts to His earth children. And, knowing this, they bow their heads in Grace and give back to Him a token of the bounty He has given to them.

These are the Grace Box Givers. Their gifts are voluntary. They give because they love Him who gives everything to them.

BOYS ATTENTION ! ! !

TUESDAY, APRIL 2nd, 1940, is going to mean something to the boys of St. John's Parish who are of Boy Scout age. It is the night when the Boy Scout Executive Committee met a number of boys in the Parish house to discuss the organization of a boy scout troop. The meeting was called for 8 P. M. At that time we had a fair representation of our boys present. The first thing we asked before organizing was whether the parents of the boys were aware of their joining. Upon being assured upon that point the Rector gave the boys a brief talk on Scout life—its fundamentals and what we hope to attain through its rules. He pointed out that it was a youth organization instituted to give the best possible good to every boy who was received into it. He said the boys must know from the start that the Scout Troop is not a mob in which every boy does as he pleases; but it is a systematized and disciplined group trying for big ideals. He told the boys that membership would be limited in the beginning, but that the names of all applicants would be put on a waiting list and as soon as a vacancy happened, one of the waiting boys would be elected to membership. He wanted the boys to remember always their moral and financial responsibilities to their Troop. The dues we believe are to be five cents a week. There is a membership fee of $.50 a year which, the Rector said, must be paid. He remarked that a boy would be allowed to go two weeks "in the red" in his weekly dues. But if after the THIRD week he did not pay up IN FULL he would be suspended from attending the Scout meetings There was very little business done at this meeting aside from learning the Scout oath, the laws and the salute.

As soon as a sufficient number of boys have passed their tenderfoot test we will have a regular service of installation at St. John's, to which all the troops of the District will be invited.

This summer ought to be a great experience to our Boy Scouts. We hope by vacation time to be organized and settled down.

So here's good luck to the new Troop; may it grow and prosper in power as well as in numbers.

TUESDAY, MAY 21st, the Rector and Mrs. McHenry extend an invitation to the whole parish to the Anniversary Reception including the Woman's Auxiliary, the several Chapters of the Daughters of the King, the Girl Scouts, the Senior and Junior Brotherhoods, the Senior and Junior Choirs, the Teachers, Officers and Scholars of the Sunday School, the members of the Parish Committee, the Chancel Guild, the District Superintendents, the Boys' Club and all others the Rector may have missed.

SOME NEEDED REPAIRS

Sooner or later all things wear out. Our turn for making certain important repairs has come. In the coldest period of the winter the boiler tubes of our heating system began to go bad on us. We were in a panic for awhile. Here we were in the midst of our Lenten Services and were using the Church for evening and weekday services as well as Sunday services. Our church was uncomfortable and we faced a practical breakdown of our heating system. We made quick repairs, however, so as to carry us through the winter. But in the summer the heating system must be thoroughly renovated and put in proper shape for next winter. We have called for estimates on the work. We know the cost is going to be plenty big. In the meantime we are warning you that now is the time to devise ways and means to pay when the job is completed. We must remember that this heating system was installed when the Parish house was built and has had very little done in the way of repairs all these years, twelve years to be exact; consequently we have no cause to complain about the cost of repairs.

At the same time the winter winds and storms carried away some of the shingles of the church roof. We had them replaced, but in going over the roof we found our tin work and spouting in very bad condition. Of course it is imperative to have our roof in the best state of repair possible. When the roof goes—if it does not get immediate attention—we are in for real trouble and expense. We have advertised for estimates on this work, too. Here again we are facing a big expense and must raise the money somehow.

What we want to know is—how are we going to do it?

We are open to suggestions and if anybody in the Parish can give us a good money raising idea we will fall on his or her neck and kiss em.

Seriously—we do want you to think over our problem and give us suggestions.

OUR OWN SUGGESTION is—if all the delinquent Church, Christmas and Easter envelopes are paid up we can pay both bills when they fall due and have a tidy sum left over to do a lot of necessary carpenter work and painting that the church needs so badly.

Why is it that our delinquent members cannot appreciate the embarrassing position they put us in by not keeping their obligations paid up?

If the Rector starts a block collection for funds with the guarantee that the money you give will be credited to the amount you owe the church will you pay up?

That goes for all your Christmas, Easter and offerings reaching back to the time you stopped your obligations.

Every dollar you give will cancel a back Christmas and Esater obligation and another dollar will cancel four weeks' back church dues.

Let your Rector know how you like the idea.

Probably beginning with May we may start the block collections if you approve. Let me know by postal or a card handed to me at any service, giving your name and address.

We are thinking of taking orders for the sale of that fine grade of coffee we sold at the Bazaar. If we can work up a big enough clientel we can make good money which will help pay the debt.

Will you buy coffee if we sell it?

Let us know soon.

FEAR

Lord, take away from me
Fear thoughts that cloud my days,
And let me move serene
To meet life's every phase.
Blot fear from out my mind,
And let my soul be clear
Of it forevermore,
Nor feel its presence near.
Whether I lose or gain
On this terrestrial sphere,
Lord, grant me this one boon,
To miss the curse of fear.

GEORGE ELLISTON.

PENTECOST AT ST. JOHN'S

Besides being the day set aside to memorialize the Advent of the Holy Spirit of God it was also Mother's Day and the day appointed by our Bishop to make his annual visitation.

In the morning we observed the day in the usual fitting manner of celebrating the Holy Communion. The church was rich and colorful with its red hangings and red gladiolas on the Altar. The Junior Choir robed in red vestments intensified the beautiy of the occasion. In the afternoon we spent our time in Sunday School on the study of the significance of Whitsunday and the Pentecostal Season. It was most interesting. We learned that it was celebrated with great pomp and joy in the early Church and was considered as important as Christmas because, as God had promised to send Jesus Christ to tell the world the good news of forgiveness, resurrection and eternal life, so did Jesus Christ, at his Ascension, promise to send the Holy Spirit to guide, teach and comfort until the final rule of God was established.

We also learned that the Holy Spirit descended upon the Apostles on that day in the form of flaming tongues of fire; hence the color of the season is red. We also learned that Pentecost is the birthday of the Church.

We also learned that the Holy Spirit is with each of us ALWAYS. His presence is real and we are conscious of his nearness all the time. If we are tempted to do a wrong we feel his restraining power, warning us not to do it. We call it the voice of conscience. It is really the voice of the Holy Spirit. If we ignore him and do wrong in spite of his warning, then we have a sense of fear that we will be found out and be punished. That fear is the Holy Spirit condemning and rebuking sin.

On the other hand we learned that when we see a chance to do good and we seize the opportunity we feel a peculiar glow of satisfaction for yielding to that impulse; which of course, is another manifestation of the Holy Spirit who inspires in us the desire to do good and rewards us afterwards with the warm feeling of satisfaction and pleasure for what we did.

Then we learned why the day is commonly called Whitsunday. We were told that on the feast of the Pentecost the Church observed the Sacrament of Baptism and Confirmation of the Catechumen or those who are prepared, through special instruction (Cathechism) into the Church and that all such were clothed in white robes for the ceremony. Hence the title White Sunday or Whitsunday. We spent a most interesting afternoon. Everybody seemed to want to know all about the day. Many did not realize that the Church had appointed two sets of Collect, Epistle and Gospel for the day the same as is provided for Christmas and Easter; nor did they know the Church had provided a Collect, Epistle and Gospel for Monday and Tuesday in Whitsunday week; indicating that the feast of the Pentecost is co-equal in importance to those great festivals and in the early church it was celebrated just as joyously and enthusiastically as were they.

All felt sorry that the feast is so indifferently observed today. Perhaps in some future day we will be awakened to its great significance and we will again honor the Advent of the Holy Spirit with real joy and understanding.

But the evening was the great occasion for us. It was the date chosen by our Bishop to visit us to confirm the Class of 58 which we presented. Think of it! On the feast of the Pentecost, the occasion of the Holy Spirit descending in the form of flaming tongues of fire upon the Apostles, ordaining them for their ministry, the day which the ancient Church set aside to receive the Catechumenor into full Communion, our Bishop came and received the members of St. John's Confirmation Class into the full Communion of the Holy Catholic Church.

The service was very simple and dignified. The Junior Choir gave color and beauty to the evening by rendering a selection in parts and the Senior Choir sang the beautiful and devotional anthem "Jesus Saviour, Pilot Me" by Dr. Adam Geibel.

Thus it happened that our class of 1940 was received into the Church on the Feast of the Pentecost, the day of the Advent of the Holy Spirit. May he also have descended on each of our candidates to their sanctification to His cause.

OUR 28TH ANNIVERSARY

The Rector has received many a fine tribute of affection from his parish in past years; but none quite reached the peak his 28th Anniversary reached on the night of the reception given by Mrs. McHenry and him, Tuesday, May 21st, at the church.

The first thing we must do is to thank the weatherman for the courtesy extended us. All day long he poured tremendous libations of rain water on our fair city. He flashed lightning and hurled his thunder bolts all day long, until about 5.00 P. M., when he turned off the water and stowed his fire and noise away and polished up the sun and gave us a lovely evening. It stayed nice all the hours of the reception. As soon as it was over he turned on the hose and got out his fire works and noise makers again and dripped and thundered through the night.

The big Sunday School room was jammed to the front doors. Every chair in the building was occupied, every window sill in the room was occupied back of the chairs; men, women and children stood four deep clear to the walls.

Many friends of the Rector, including the City Mission Staff and representatives of his Masonic Lodge and brother clergymen were present and apparently were glad they came.

Mr. Vernon Matthews started the ceremonies by announcing we would sing some folk songs to get us limbered up. When that was over he asked the Rector to make a speech. The Rector responded with a brief account of the 28 years development of the church—from the time the Bishop closed its doors until last Tuesday night. He asked the question—has old St. John's made good? Then he answered it by quoting parochial statistics from the Register. "For instance," said he, "the records show that 2035 infants were christened in that period, meaning of course, that many souls added to the church many of whom, in all probability, would have been lost to the church had old St. John's remained closed.

Then, too, 2862 men, women, boys and girls had been presented for Confirmation during our 28 years of service. We once were asked, but where are they now? The answer is quite easy. Many of that number have been translated through death to their Saviour's keeping. Many have married and made their homes outside the parish. Many have been driven by unemployment to seek work where work might be found. Many have lost their first enthusiasm and have backslid. Many are sick and aged and cannot come to church, but many there are whose names remain on the parish rolls and are active co-workers with the Rector in spreading the Gospel.

Also there were 322 weddings performed in that period. The Rector acknowledged that possibly every other parish and mission in the Diocese outstripped St. John's 100 to 1 in this respect. He said he was happy to acknowledge the apparent failure to measure up with the marrying parsons and magistrates because he was never so ambitious as to add up statistics at the expense of people's happiness. He confessed the number of his weddings would have been much larger had he not consistently confined his offices to those whom he knew well and whose records were clean. It is his invariable rule never to marry itinerant couples or strange couples of mixed religions. He rejoices in the fact that almost all of those married by him are still happily united.

As to burials, 860 souls have been given over into our Heavenly Father's keeping. May they rest in peace until the summons come.

The records show also that the children of the parish contributed $28,000.00 towards the Sunday School Lenten Offering in that period. We feel that this is a pretty full return for the few thousand contributed by the Convocation towards the maintenance of the parish in the first three years of its struggle back from the grave of the dead and forgotten things. Had old St. John's stayed dead and buried the general church would have been $28,000.00 behind in its missionary work.

The money raised for repairs and improvements reached the most astonishing heights of all—$65,000.00 is evidently the figure. We must acknowledge at once, however, that $25,000.00 of that sum was given from Bishop Garland's Fund to help finance the building of the Parish House. The remainder was raised by all sorts of means devised by the parish and was used to install a new pipe organ, new roof, new floors and ceilings, new heating system, new stained glass windows, new cement pavement and many other things too numerous to mention.

So we concluded finally that the best way to start a successful church is to hunt up a locality of several nationalities where few natives reside, see to it that the church is a wreck, be sure there is no congregation to serve, then go out and get a few persons just as goofy as yourself and start in and dig up gold nuggets of a successful venture. Some days you will almost die of fright; then other days you will almost die of happiness.

Young theologues are foolish to chase rainbows of well ordered parishes, where nice people worship and where financial compensation is assured. It's a lot more satisfactory to dig in the dirt and uncover virgin gold where nothing but rocks are expected. In other words our 28 years of service at old St. John's have been a changing series of heart failures and hilarious successes and "we praise God from whom all blessings flow."

After the Rector finally reached the end of his speech, the Junior Choir took up the thread of the program and rendered two numbers as samples of what they can do on Sundays. Then in quick succession followed selections by the Senior Choir, solos, speeches, the Reception, ice cream, strawberries and cake and finally dancing in the Parish House.

The speakers who honored us were the Rev. Walter Ware, Mr. Harry Gerber, John Patterson (incidentally our first layreader) and Vernon Matthews. Among our visitors were George Seeds, long loved by the Rector; David Magee, whom all who know him honor him; Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Seidel, the parents of the Rector's godchild; the whole Missionary Staff of the City Mission, the office force and the members of the Family Welfare Department.

The parish presented Mrs. McHenry with a marvelous basket of Gladiolas, coral color, pink carnations and baby's breath. In her address of appreciation she rose to oratorical heights and said five more words of thanks than last year. And did she get the applause! But the real surprise of the evening was the beautiful gift of sterling silver flatware of 59 pieces. They were selected to match the family silver.

Then came Jerry Rutter, looking big and round and jolly, like an English Innkeeper carrying a birthday cake a yard wide, every way, and stuck up with 28 burning tapers. The Rector was told to blow out the lights and with a regular cyclone of ecclesiastical hot air he "doused 'em all" at once.

Then the real reason of the evening happened. The Rector and his family stood up and each member and friend in turn were well shaken by the hand.

But like all things, both good and bad, the night came to an end. But memory never ends. Until we are done with years the events of that eventful evening will still be clear and bright and cheerful. So may it ever be!

SOME IMPRESSIONS OF THE TWENTY-EIGHTH ANNIVERSARY

The writer has attended every Rector's anniversary that has been held in all these years; and the twenty-eighth one, in our opinion, surpassed them all.

At the service of Holy Communion on Trinity Sunday morning, one was deeply conscious of the spiritual atmosphere. We sat directly behind the Junior choir, and we were impressed by the reverential attitude of these young children during the entire Communion service. They too seemed to be attuned to that mystical fellowship that was everywhere evident. The smallest children in the Confirmation class, who were taking their first Communion, felt its influence.

We looked at the Senior choir, who rendered so beautifully the musical parts of the service; and, in spite of the lure of the beautiful May morning calling to the out of doors, we could not think of one absentee from that fine choir, which is largely made up of former children of St. John's who have grown into adult years during Mr. McHenry's ministry. Whenever there is a celebration of any kind connected with his rectorship, you will always find this group on hand one hundred percent or nearly so. They are a fine lot, and fine looking.

On Tuesday night there was the biggest crowd, we think, that ever came together at one time at the Rector's parish reception. This year it was not the annual "surprise" party, because Mr. and Mrs. McHenry were the hosts and the parish the invited guests. The attendance in itself was a wonderful tribute of the love and loyalty of the members of the parish. Every seat was occupied, every window sill was overflowing with young people, and scores stood all evening.

There was the largest representation of the City Mission staff that we have seen at any anniversary, some nineteen in all. One could count the few members of the staff who were absent. Their presence in such large numbers—the clergy, Dr. Newell and the social workers of the Family Welfare and Children's Departments, and the office force showed that they too wished to do honor to the General Secretary of the City Mission on this occasion.

There was a small representation of friends from the Masonic lodge.

The music, the speeches, the presents of silver, flowers and the wonderful cake lighted with candles, all breathed the same love and loyalty to one who has done so much for the spread of the Kingdom of God in the building up of Old St. John's. It was really a lovely occasion, and we were glad to be there. The Rector was in his happiest mood, and he and his family were good to look at as they stood in line to receive the parish and friends.

1912 - 1940

A room crowded to the doors with the members and friends of St. John's; a look of expectancy on the faces of child and adult alike; the soft sounds of restlessness and agitation; the necessary last minute preparations; and then suddenly appears the person who is the cause of all this excitement, and with a grand burst of applause, we welcome to our midst the one and only Harry Cresson McHenry! Young folks and old folks in a unanimous desire to express their liking and admiration for their leader.

One can always sense a truly spontaneous action on the part of an individual or a group of individuals and that condition was decidedly present on this very happy occasion. Even our few lukewarm participants would concede this point in our bit of a narrative.

My personal thoughts? They were all those expressed before, plus a deep consciousness of those who were no longer with us and who were more or less responsbile for our being there because of their labors in the early part of these twenty-eight years.

Remember Aunt Annie Beisser and Hannah Read (dear, old Mrs. Read) and Annie Morozzi and Bill Forster and Tommy, who always had their hands in their pockets to help out in everything that was needed; and good, steady John Weber, who never failed us, rain or shine, and scores and scores of others who were the richest blessing a Rector or Parish could have. God bless them all and may they be a symbol and inspiration to us always to do the Lord's work in the Lord's way.

One of our friends commented on the many young folks everywhere they looked. They represent the heart and soul of any parish and from the number present, the Rector is to be congratulated on his ability to hold them against all the invading forces of the present day.

An occasion like this is one long to be remembered, not for the crowds and the speeches and the gifts, but for the one thing that makes an everlasting success—the Spirit of Good Fellowship, the Spirit of Cooperation, the Spirit of Love and the Spirit of Neighborliness.

Rev. H. Cresson McHenry,
225 S. 3rd Street
Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Mr. McHenry:

I want to take this opportunity to tell you how pleased I was at seeing the wonderful results of the Church of St. John the Evangelist on your twenty-eighth Anniversary. I saw the Church when it was almost down and out and ready to close up. I think that this has been one of the outstanding jobs in the Diocese. You deserve a lot of credit for this wonderful work.

Very truly yours,
MAURICE J. CREAN.

MEMORIAL SERVICE

SLOOK-MONTAGUE POST No. 354 VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS

Sunday evening, May the twenty-sixth, being the Sunday immediately preceding Memorial Day, we had the pleasure and the thrill of being the hosts of the Post on the occasion of their holding religious service in memory of their deceased comrades. The parade of the Post from their headquarters (2113 S. 13th Street) to St. John's Church was a stirring scene of color and music. The Veterans with their Women's Auxiliary and their own uniformed band playing, and flags flying, certainly aroused old Southwark to a pitch of excitement. They witnessed the Post going to church in full panoply to worship the Nation's God and pray for their departed comrades.

Old St. John's is glad to receive such visitors and does everything in its power to make their short stay a pleasant and memorable occasion. After the processional hymn and prayers the service was turned over to the Post. The Calling of the Roll of those who died during the year is most impressive. The birth and life record, especially that part of it that has to do with service in arms, is read and while the drums beat, a charming, young woman, in beautiful white uniform advanced up the aisle bearing a sheaf of flowers and laid it on the "vacant" chair in front of the Choir. There were three names on the Roll this year. One of them was that of George L. Slook, an honorary member, and the father of one of the men after whom the Post was named. The Roll Call was closed by that most solemnly sweet of all bugle calls, "Taps."

Then followed a selection by the Post's Drum and Bugle Corp. This year the music was greatly enhanced by the playing of the "Glockenspiel" by our own Ruth Rutter. The acoustics of the church are so perfect that every tiny note of the Corp was amazingly accentuated. Incidentally, St. John's Church is one of the most perfectly constructed buildings from the standpoint of acoustics of any building in Philadelphia.

The other features of the service were the hymn sung by the children and the anthem presented by the Senior Choir. Also the Duet sung by Jerry Rutter and John Nelson. Those two men certainly can sing!

The text of the memorial sermon was taken from Isaiah 2:4. "They shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into scythes. Nation shall not lift up the sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

The gist of the sermon was first,—how the occasion must awaken memories of the past in the mind of each soldier present. The call, the parting from loved ones, camp life, over there, the first battle, the Armistice, the missing who sleep in foreign soil, the home coming. How, in the face of the present world disturbance, the sacrifice of life for the perpetuation of peace must seem futile.

How, perhaps we are not reading the lines intelligently and that after all the sacrifice was not in vain, for the new idea of good neighbors was born out of the first war and the Western Hemisphere was already committed to the doctrine of peace and good will.

That we must remember from the remote days before history, Europe had always been a battle ground at the mercy of one invader after another. Not an inch of ground was there that had not been fought for, blood spilled on it by invaders and invaded. The long procession of land grabbers and murderers was being augmented by other "dictators." Such men as William the Conqueror, Caesar, Alexander, Napoleon and others, knew no other way to solve the problem of expansion and commerce and industry except by means of war.

Europe has not yet learned the lesson of good neighborliness. But inevitably that time is coming. After they have been weakened by loss of man power, by loss of wealth, by loss of hope, they will begin to search for a new and wiser solution of their power and they, like us of this hemisphere, will find it in the peaceful way of reasoning it out between themselves. After the horror of war comes home to them who have caused it, they will eventually agree that more peaceful ways of approach are best. And "they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into scythes; nation shall not lift up the sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

In the meantime, we, the survivors of the other war, can still hail our dead as the exponents of the true ideals of Peace.

After the sermon, the closing prayers and the Recessional ended a service so beautiful and so tender, that we shall long remember.

IMPORTANT

FOLLOWING IS THE NEW DIRECTORY OF PAROCHIAL DISTRICTS AND THEIR SUPERINTENDENTS

District #1—North and South from Spruce to Dickinson Street. East and West from Delaware River to 8th Street, including all side streets within those boundaries. Superintendent—Walter Pine, 1242 E. Moyamensing Avenue.

District #2—North and South from Dickinson to Mifflin Streets. East and West from Delaware River to 8th Streets, including all side streets within these boundaries. Superintendent—William Gilbert, 233 Watkins Street.

District #3—North and South from Mifflin Street to Snyder Avenue. East and West from Delaware Avenue to 8th Street, including all side streets within these boundaries. Superintendent—John F. Preole, 116 Daly Street.

District #4—North and South from Snyder Avenue to Wolf Street. East and West from Delaware Avenue to 8th Street, including all side streets within these boundaries. Superintendent—B. Frank Drumm, 2128 S. Lee Street.

District #5—North and South from Reed Street to Oregon Avenue. West of Broad Street, also all side streets within these boundaries. Superintendent—William King, 2955 Gerritt Street.

District #6—North and South from Wolf Street to Porter Street. East and West from Delaware River to 8th Street, including all side streets within these boundaries. Superintendent — Charles Clendenning, 2520 S. Front Street.

District #7—North and South from Porter Street to Oregon Avenue. East and West from Delaware River to 8th Street, including all side streets within these boundaries. Superintendent—William Clendenning, 2520 S. Front Street.

Mailing List—All communicants living north of Spruce Street, including North Philadelphia, Germantown, Chestnut Hill, Frankford, Wissinoming, Camden, Gloucester, Mount Ephraim, West Philadelphia.

It is important for communicants to know the name and address of their District Superintendent in order that they can get in touch with them in case of emergency and also to refuse to pay any money intended for the Church to any other than the District Superintendent.

The District Superintendent is the block collector of his District. Fireside Club Dues, Christmas and Easter envelopes, weekly Church Offering envelopes, subscriptions to the Broadcaster or any other money whatsoever is officially in his custody to turn over to the Church weekly. If he cannot make the rounds that often, you can leave it at his residence, getting his receipt therefor.

Report to him all new families coming into the district and those moving out of the district belonging to the church. Also give him the names and addresses of all prospective candidates for Confirmation that he may call upon them and leave them Bibles, Prayer Books and other printed matter explaining the object of the Christian Church.

LETTERS OF TRANSFER

IGNORANCE OF THE LAITY LAXITY OF THE CLERGY

In Canon XIV: Sec. II P. 2, we read: "No one shall be registered as a Communicant in more than one parish at a time and anyone connected with, or attending, two or more churches shall elect the one in which he wishes to be registered and shall so notify the Minister thereof."

Section III of the same Canon under the title of CERTIFICATES OF TRANSFER reads as follows: "Whenever in accordance with the Canon of the General Convention on the Regulations of the Laity, a Communicant of the Church in good and regular standing in any parish removing to another, shall ask of the Rector of any parish in this Diocese from which the communicant removes, or, in the absence of such Rector, of one of the Wardens, a Certificate of Transfer. It shall be the duty of such Rector or Warden, within one month after date of request, to furnish such a certificate, or assign the reasons for refusal, which shall be subject to the approval of the Bishop."

Our object in bringing this matter to your attention is because few, if any, communicants of the parish, have any knowledge of the existence of such Church Laws and because of this ignorance, we fear that they are frequently coaxed into severing their connections with the parish in which they live and joining another in the neighborhood because of inducements held out to them, to entice them away. But the ignorance of the law is not the only cause of such embarrassing situations as carrying names of communicants on two Parish Registers. Naturally, if a parishioner lacks such knowledge and is not courteous or thoughtful enough to notify their rector of their desire for making such a change, they, in their ignorance will make such a move, especially if a communicant of the other parish of proselyting tendencies entice them away from their church home with all sorts of flattering inducements such as joining the Choir, or making one presiding officer of a parish organization, or a member of the basket ball team or to become a Boy or Girl Scout or some other position.

But even the proselyting laymen could not succeed in stealing sheep if it were not for the astounding ignorance of the law concerning Certificates of Transfer or the reprehensible laxity of failing to request such certificate of transfer from the rector of the parish with which the communicant desires to sever his relations.

According to the Canons of the General Convention and of the Diocese of Pennsylvania, the Clergy MUST apply for such certificate before adding the name to the church register. This is for the two-fold purpose of eliminating the danger of carrying the name of a communicant on two church registers and also to insist that no rector receive a communicant from another parish without the knowledge or consent of the first rector. Such a discourteous act does not only reflect upon the probity of the priest, but also lays him open to the act of receiving into his parish one whose desire for a transfer is of a very dubious nature.

St. John's Parish has experienced the loss of several communicants to other parishes because of this ignorance of the law on the part of the communicant as well as the laxity of the clergy towards the plain letter and intention of the law.

If any persons, living within parochial bounds of St. John's Church, have transferred themselves or have permitted themselves to be transferred to another parish without the knowledge or consent of the Rector of St. John's Church, or without a request for a Certificate of Transfer from the Rector of the Church which they wish to join, we would request that they proceed according to Canon Law to request such Certificate of Transfer through the Rector of the Church they wish to join. If such applicant fulfills the requirement of the Canon and is in "good and regular standing" in St. John's Church, we will be happy to purge St. John's register of such names, so that the name of each communicant will appear on only one register.

Of course, it is generally conceded that if the Priest from whom the Certificate of Transfer is requested fails to reply within the month the rector requesting the transfer can write a formal letter stating that he has asked for the transfer and having received no reply, wished to notify the communicant's former rector that he was about to place the communicant's name on his register, requesting that his name be dropped from the other register so that the same name will not appear upon both parochial lists.

GOD KNOWLEDGE

COL. 1:10 "INCREASING IN THE KNOWLEDGE OF GOD"

How much do you know God? For instance, do you know He is our strength in time of trouble? And do you smile when misfortune threatens or do you worry and fret and try to beat your way through trouble without a thought of God?

When faced with a choice between good or evil do you know God well enough to know what you ought to choose?

Do you know God well enough to remember that God is a spirit and they who really worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth?

Do you support God's work with your material means and thereby lay up riches where moth nor rust cannot corrupt and where thieves cannot break through and steal, or do you stack up riches here which you must eventually leave behind and go before God naked?

Are you more afraid of man's than of God's opinion?

Is there any time you are afraid of the truth? Why?

Do you act apologetic when your faith is ridiculed?

Do you think that helping others gets you nowhere?

Do you know how to forgive and forget?

Whom do you love most—God or yourself?

Do you give generously and secretly so only God will know what you are doing, or do you give ostentatiously so that the world can see how generous you are?

Which has the greater pull with you—the world or the church?

Would you pay as large admission fee to a religious service as you would pay to an opera?

Which is the most congenial Sunday occupation for you—fishing or worship?

Do you think it is stealing if you take six days and nights for work and recreation and then snatch Sunday from God?

Do you really believe in God?

Do you know that despair, suffering, infidelity and crime are the fruits of God Ignorance?

BROADCASTING FROM S. T. J. C.

58 CANDIDATES WERE CONFIRMED IN OUR 1940 CLASS.

—o—

It being the Feast of the Pentecost (Whitsunday), the altar hanging and flowers were red. Also each candidate wore a deep red carnation and the children carried red cloth back prayer books. It was most impressive.

—o—

Judging from the size of the congregation, it is evident that Bishop Taitt is growing in popularity. And so he should. He has always been most sympathetic towards St. John's. Then too he was a Southwark lad.

—o—

So it wasn't the Sexton's fault after all. The heating system is very much out of order and extensive repairs are needed. Which means we must raise money. How about donating the price of a doctor's bill and a bottle of cough syrup to the cause—and stay cozy?

SUMMER SCHEDULE:

Bible School, 10:00 A. M.

Morning Service and Sermon, 11:00 A. M.

Christenings every Sunday after morning service.

Sacraments administered to the sick, weddings and burial services by appointment. Phone Lom. 6441.

INFORMATION WANTED: Certain parties, posing as collectors for St. John's Church, are victimizing the neighborhood storekeepers by soliciting ads and collecting money for same. Unless such collectors can show credentials signed BY THE RECTOR, they ought not receive your patronage. The Parish officials will be grateful for any information leading to the apprehension of all such persons.

THE RECTOR AND MRS. McHENRY EXTEND THEIR SINCERE THANKS TO THE MEMBERS AND FRIENDS OF THE PARISH FOR THE BEAUTIFUL ANNIVERSARY GIFTS THEY RECEIVED.

The Rector is glad to welcome back among our Parish organizations the Cresson Club under new management. Mr. William Clendenning is Secretary and Mr. James Kee is Treasurer. The club is arranging a season's program for the fall.

Be sure to patronize the Fireside Club the new way. During the summer Frank Drumm, Secretary of the Senior Brotherhood, will be present to receive the dues of 10 cents every first Sunday morning after Service. The District Superintendents will make their District collections previous to the first Sunday and turn over the receipts to him, receiving acknowledgement of the same.

WE HOPE THAT MANY PARISHIONERS, NOT MEMBERS OF THE FIRESIDE CLUB, WILL CONTRIBUTE THEIR DIME TOO. We are laying in our winter supply of coal now and are paying for each ton as it is stored.

Last winter all our coal was in the Church cellar and paid for before the cold weather began. And though the winter was long and cold we had enough fuel to see us through.

SO BRING AN EXTRA DIME EVERY FIRST SUNDAY AND GIVE IT TO FRANK.

CHURCH GOING

By
GEORGE I. HILLER

I go to Church, but not because of the preaching, nor of the music, nor yet for the sociability. I do not go simply because it is a habit, though it is an established habit with me. I go with no thought of being inspired to something new, because I am rather tired of new things, new orders and new deals. I go with no thought of my example, though I am continually reminded that my example makes others think. I go with no thought of getting something for myself though invariably I do feel better for the experience. I go with no idea of being superior to my fellow men who do not go, because I am continually confronted with examples of sacrifice and service on the part of non-Church goers which put me to shame.

I go because in the midst of a busy life, in a week crowded with cares and worries of one kind and another, it is the only opportunity I have of remembering my God; because my prayers have a reality I cannot find any other way. I go because in the worship of the Altar, I am able to concentrate as I cannot do at any other time. I find a relationship with Jesus in the sacramental worship which I cannot find in any other way. There is nothing selfish about it, I simply feel as if I wanted to know Him better. I have tried to explain it to others—I have failed, they felt I was mystic or hypocritical. Perhaps so, but in the experience of practical every day life, when I find one whom I like, I want to know him better. Neither the Scripture nor nature give me any such consciousness of Jesus' personality and presence as I get from worship and so in practice I seek Him in worship.

I confess that sometimes that experience is marred by the failure of the preacher who injects the idealism of a philosophical lecture; sometimes by a choir whose object seems to be that of advancing my musical education; sometimes by the Church which seems to have more machinery than anything else. But despite such interruptions, I can still find no better way than worship to know and relate myself to Him.

Perhaps I am old-fashioned, perhaps I do not put up a logical argument for going to Church—really I am not trying to do so— in fact, I would give it up if someone would show me a better way. Not a better way to live, not a more pleasant or easy way to improve myself; I would appreciate that help too, but a better way to know Jesus the Christ, the greatest teacher who ever lived and who lived and died in the one idea of drawing men unto Himself. I feel that drawing power. Therefore, as St. Paul said, "For me to live is Christ." I go to Church because I have not found a better way to attain my heart's desire.

Not that I succeed, because "my reach still exceeds my grasp," but I know what I want and other leadership offers only glittering substitutes.

—The Witness.

SEZ I TO MYSELF "I'M SICK OF MY CHURCH"

From the Baptist Observer

Sez I to myself, as I grumbled and growled,
"I'm sick of my church," and then how I scowled;
"The members unfriendly, the sermons too long!
In fact, it seems that everything's wrong.
I don't like the singing; the church—a disgrace!
For signs of neglect are all over the place.
I'll quit going there; I won't give a dime;
For I can make better use of my money and time."

Kind of Getting Sassy With Myself

Then sez my conscience to me, sez he,
"The trouble with you is, you're too blind to see
That your church reflects you, whatever it be.
Now, come, pray and pay and serve cheerfully;
Stop at your fault finding and boost it up strong.
You'll find you'll be happy and proud to 'belong.'
Be friendly and willing and sing as you work—
For churches aren't built by members who shirk."

ST. JOHN'S VACATION WORK

Some parishes go out of business, more or less, in the summer time, but not so with old St. John's. As soon as Public School closed ST. JOHN'S DAILY VACATION SCHOOL and the SHACK-IN-THE-PINES CAMP opened. Every day from Monday until Friday the Vacation School was in operation and, although attendance is not compulsory, there were seldom less than one hundred boys and girls present. This summer activity has always been under the control of Margaret Nelson. Her public school teacher's training and her unusual magnetic personality form two potent factors towards the success of the school. She understands children and children understand her. You can see this close tie between teacher and pupils the instant you enter the room. They move together on the slightest suggestion or gesture.

We know the boys and girls had a profitable, as well as a pleasureable time, because of what they learned about the Holy Bible and the Book of Common Prayer. It is marvelous how much of the Book they have memorized and how many of the Church prayers they can repeat without the aid of the Prayer Book.

One may think that all such learning is forgotten in a very short time. I am very doubtful about that. Not only from personal experience but from a rather remarkable demonstration given by my own mother when she was over eighty years of age. One day I was teasing her and said that no doubt she was a good little girl when she was young but I'd bet anything she had forgotten all she ever knew of her catechism. Her dark eyes snapped with indignation as she challenged me to prove what I said. So out came the Prayer Book and I turned to the Catechism, and began to ask questions. Of course, the first were easy. I more or less expected her to get through them well enough but all the time I was chuckling within as I thought what was going to happen when we reached our lesson from the Creed, Our Duty to God and Our Neighbor and what we desire of God in the Lord's Prayer. Imagine my amazement, therefore, to hear her give the answers with the speed of a streamlined train through a tunnel. Think of it. Over eighty years old and could still repeat her catechism!

That is proof of the real value of storing such memory jewels in one's mind. Long after the thrill of summer vacation school is just a dim recollection the man and woman of tomorrow will always remember the lessons they learned as the boy and girl of today.

But you must not get the idea that the children did nothing but learn Bible verses and prayers. They had their sing period, their play period and their manual work period. The school sessions were made so interesting that everybody wanted to come back next day.

Then the big excursion to Atlantic City at the close of the season! Wasn't 'at somethin'? How the ocean seemed to welcome the kids with a chuckle and how the kids greeted old ocean with monkey antics, was a sight to behold. And we are glad we had played our part in making the long, hot summer short and pleasant for the boys and girls of the parish.

OLD SHACK-IN-THE-PINES
Nearly Thirty Years Old Now

In the early spring the older boys of the parish asked for permission to go down and paint the "Shack."

We gave our consent, not expecting much more than an amateur job which would be good enough for cleaning up the bungalow. But we did get a surprise when later in the summer we visited the camp for inspection. The boys had done a job of painting that would have been a credit to an experienced mechanic. It was beautifully done. The "Shack" never did look so big and clean and comfortable. Maybe next spring they will paint the exterior, too.

The "Shack" has not been furnished for years. All our money was spent for the entertainment of our young guests. The result was our furniture, our oil stove, our floor covering, our cooking utensils, our bedding and our dishes, were all but out of commission. Such a state of affairs made the soul of our hostess, Helen Ashman, writhe. She called Davenport 3259 one day and said things about the "Shack" which made us think she didn't like the looks of the place. The upshot of that phone talk was a shopping tour which ended in the purchase of new floor covering and furniture for the living room. The installation of the new furniture completely changed the atmosphere of the cottage. A more cozy and homey place you could not imagine.

And did the girls and boys love it! It was delightful to see how careful they were and how they contributed their bit to beautifying the place. New covering for the new furniture, new hangings for all the windows and a new arrangement of the sleeping porches, were parts of the general renovation.

Since the reconstruction of the dam and the refilling of the lake, Browns Mills seems to have put on a new charm and beauty. It is so lovely that one is reluctant to leave it. How our guests love it!

THE "SHACK" BECOMING AN ALL YEAR RESORT

Nostalgia is a common affliction of those who have spent a vacation at the Shack. A longing to go back to all its beauty and stillness is irresistable, so much so that all through the fall, winter and summer parties and individuals seek permission to spend weekends or even single days "down at the Shack." Halowe'en, Thanksgiving, a part of Christmas holidays, Easter and other seasons, are always the times for pilgrimages of the faithful. And no wonder folk like to go back in the fall and winter. The beauty and wonder of the forest and the lake is incomparable.

The summer was overcrowded with guests and visitors. Even today the camp is supposed to be closed for the season and there is a group of young men living "down there" reluctant to go home.

What a boon has been this summer camp on Little Pine Lake for the boys and girls of Southwark. And what a big debt of gratitude we owe to our generous friends who have made it possible for us to continue this camp for nearly THIRTY YEARS. Many of our first guests are married and have families now. Still they ask permission to visit "our Shack." The virus when once injected can never be eradicated.

Next spring the young men plan to give the exterior of the "Shack" a coat of paint.

This winter the girls are going to raise money to buy a natural gas stove for the kitchen.

Soon we will need a new canoe.

Because we all expect to go back next year. WE CANNOT STAY AWAY.

ARE YOU READY?

Vacation is over.

You've had your fun.

Now, are you ready to get on your job?

There are lots of chores in the parish and the church awaiting you, jobs that only you can and must do if we are going to start a successful year.

THERE IS YOUR SUNDAY WORK—Morning Service, Sunday School and Shut-In Services. EVERY MEMBER of the parish is responsible for the successful attendance at Morning Service, at the Celebration of the Holy Communion and at all special services.

EVERY PARENT, as well as every Officer and Teacher, is responsible for full classes in our Sunday School.

EVERY YOUNG PERSON, whether young man or woman, is responsible for carrying the Gospel and the service of prayer to the homes of the shut-in, the sick and the aged who cannot come to church on account of a physical weakness. Every confirmed man and woman, boy and girl, is PERSONALLY RESPONSIBLE for his or her presence at Holy Communion.

EVERY MEMBER of the parish is responsible for the financial state of the Church. Too many neglect this duty through a lack of their sense of responsibility. Too many neglect to support the Church and help pay its many bills because they THINK they are paying good money for nothing, and refuse to be argued out of their blind selfishness.

EVERY MEMBER ought to identify himself or herself with at least one parish organization. For instance:

The boys and girls with the Sunday School.

The girls with the Girl Scout Troop and the Junior Daughters of the King.

The young men and young women with the Teacher's Staff of the Sunday School and the Choir.

The women, especially the young women, with the Senior Daughters of the King.

All the women of the Parish with the Woman's Auxiliary.

All the men of the Parish with the Senior Brotherhood of St. Andrew which meets on the first and third Thursdays.

All the boys of the Parish with the Junior Brotherhood of St. Andrew which meets on the second and fourth Thursdays.

Every member of the Parish, including EVERY MAN, EVERY WOMAN, EVERY BOY, EVERY GIRL, no matter how rich or no matter how poor, ought to be a member of the Fireside Club and pay the dues of ten cents a month for the purchase of coal.

Every member ought to apply for a package of weekly Church Envelopes and return them regularly every Sunday, not only because the parish must have money to pay its debts but because you are in duty bound to OFFER unto God a portion of your income as an acknowledgment of your debt to God for all his blessings and provident care for you and your family.

You ought to BE PREPARED to make a generous Christmas gift to our Lord Christ in acknowledgment of God's love in sending Him to be our protector from temptation and sin.

You ought to BE PREPARED to come on Easter Day bearing generous tokens of your gratitude for the hope of eternal life revealed in the Resurrection of Jesus Christ.

You ought to LEARN TO PRAY fervently for power to live for others in love and sacrifice so that cruelty and selfishness shall disappear from all hearts and the Kingdom of God shall be established on earth as it is in heaven.

You must learn not TO CARRY CHIPS on your shoulders but, rather, learn TO BEAR ONE ANOTHER'S BURDENS for Christ's sake.

You must stop worrying and cast all your care upon the Lord for "HE CARETH FOR YOU."

Finally Brethren, "Be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might."

This is your program of service for the new year. Are you ready to cheerfully take up your Christ life and carry on for another year?

CONSCRIPTION

Much is being said upon this subject by everybody throughout the U. S. A. Many are violent in their criticism. Some of these critics are mothers or wives of men who are liable to be called if conscription is enacted.

There are just two points I want to suggest which I hope will allay any fears such mothers and wives may have.

The first is this: Conscription is the only just method of selection. It drafts the rich, as well as the poor, the financier as well as the mechanic or laborer and EVERYBODY must respond to the call.

The second is this: The conscription does not mean rushing men into war now. It means the men are called out for physical training and an education in handling arms and getting acquainted with military routine so that in case an enemy threatens America, our men will have strong bodies and trained minds to meet the foe on more than equal terms and win.

The mothers who object to conscription are unconsciously exposing their sons to certain death and defeat; for your sons, untrained, cannot hope to oppose the trained and seasoned armies of Europe.

Wives, parents, sisters, take our advice and encourage your men folk to learn the ways of a soldier for defensive, not offensive purposes.

Whoever tells you that your men are being slyly prepared for attack is a fifth columnist and your and your son's or husband's or your father's enemy and wants to see our country fail in protecting her shores.

None of us want war.

None of us want to learn to fight.

But if we must, then we must be prepared.

If you love "your man" and want to save him from death, give him a chance to learn to fight even if nothing comes of it but experience.

DON'T LET YOUR LOVE FOR HIM SENTENCE HIM TO DEATH.

THAT WEEKLY CHURCH ENVELOPE

While you were away to the shore or the mountains getting a good tan we were home in the hot city getting a good tanning.

First, we received a bill for $150.00 for renovating our heating system. You remember, last winter we refused to include our sexton in our prayers because he kept the church so cold. Then later we learned that it was not his fault at all but it was the condition of the heater.

SO, WE HAVE A REPAIR BILL OF $150.00 TO PAY

Then, whenever it rained, and believe me it did rain last summer, the conductors would overflow and the water would cascade from the roof down to the street and deluge every passerby. We had a roofer to inspect the roof and find out what was the matter. The report was eleven base balls had got lodged in the conductors and had choked them up so that the roof rain could not be carried off. But the inspection showed up something more serious than choked rain conductors. It developed that all the tin work around the towers and all the gutters were in such bad shape that immediate repairs were needed to save the interior of the Church. The estimate for the repairs was about $65.00. As the need was immediate we placed the contract at once. There is no sense in being caught in the winter with a leaky roof, so the job was done.

NOW WE HAVE AN UNPAID BILL OF $65.00

The two bills added together amount to $215.00. But that is a mere bagatelle to us when we have $1500.00 OWING US IN UNPAID WEEKLY CHURCH ENVELOPES, as well as SEVERAL HUNDRED DOLLARS OF ENVELOPES NOW DUE.

We are confidently expecting to hear from our delinquent members and have money in hand to pay these repair bills 24 hours after you have read of this debt.

We trusted to your honor that you would pay these bills and went right ahead and had your church property put in good shape for the winter.

PLEASE PAY ALL OVERDUE CHURCH ENVELOPES AT ONCE SO THAT WE CAN MEET THESE BILLS.

OUR FUEL PROBLEM

Our experience during the winter of 1939-1940 taught us that it is foolish to wait until winter comes before considering the fuel question. Early in the summer of 1939 we tried the experiment of raising what money we could while the weather was hot, and as soon as we had the price of a ton or two we ordered a ton or two and stored it in the cellar and paid cash for it. Much to our surprise and gratification, when winter came, we had thirty tons of coal stored and paid for, ready to cope with the cold weather. As you well remember, it was a long and very cold winter. In fact it was not until the last of May the chill was out of the air and one could worship in comfort in the church—without stoking the furnace.

The best thing about our plan was, we did not feel the drain on our finances. We gave our "dime-a-month" and forgot about it. In the winter our warm church reminded us of our provident act. That "dime-a-month" chased Jack Frost right out of our church. He's one very unwelcome church attendant, especially in zero weather.

We hope this fall to make it easier for us to remember our "dime-a-month." Frank Drumm will be prepared to receive your dime in the lower hall of the Church every first Sunday morning. We will order a ton of coal as soon as he tells us he has the price of a ton. We will keep this up all through the months, both hot and cold, so we may be warm when cold comes creeping on us.

I know you will be glad to learn that we have about twelve tons of coal STORED AND PAID FOR already. That is about one quarter the amount we will burn next winter.

NOW IF YOU JUST BRING THAT EXTRA "DIME-A-MONTH" WHETHER YOU ARE A REGULAR FIRESIDE CLUB MEMBER OR NOT, AND GIVE IT TO FRANK, I'm sure we will have our coal bin stocked to capacity and paid for when we need it.

Incidentally, let me put you wise to your home heating problem. Too many of you give no thought of the coming cold weather and the misery accompanying it. Why not be wise and start now to put aside in a special bank or pocket book a little money each week and as soon as you have the price of a ton of coal, order it, even if the thermometer registers over an hundred degrees. It will come in mighty fine when the thermometer drops to zero and below.

EVERY WISE MAN WILL BUY HIS COAL AND PAY FOR IT IN THE HOT MONTHS. Do not wait for charity or half price fuel. You take your chance with hundreds of other foolish folk about getting a share of it and very likely lose out in the end.

GET YOUR COAL NOW!

There is another matter which provides food for thought. If the European war should last any length of time we are likely to witness the spectacle of millions of tons of coal being shipped from the United States to Canada which will profoundly affect the price of fuel and make it almost prohibitive to the poor.

BE A SQUIRREL! Lay in your stock of "nut" coal before winter comes and make a snoot at J. F., when he comes looking in your window.

Then, too, you may escape a visit from the two terrible "D's"—

DISEASE AND DEATH

P. S.—Be sure to welcome your District Superintendent with an open purse when he calls for your Fireside Club dues.

A CHANGE OF POLICY

Since October, 1926, we have published the PARISH BROADCASTER monthly with the exception of July and August, the vacation period. During these fourteen years the magazine has been self-supporting. Not one dollar of church funds was ever paid towards its upkeep. On the other hand we are confident that it has been the means of raising thousands of dollars for St. John's Parish. It has been the source of information to the stay-aways as well as the shut-ins and the migrants who, for various reasons, were forced to move from the parish.

The time has come, however, when we must change the policy of the BROADCASTER. For some unexplained reason we never have been able to persuade our parishioners—with but a dozen exceptions—to pay the subscription of $1.00 a year. Our total source of income has been the advertisements printed in the paper. Sometimes that source was insufficient and then the Rector was forced to hustle around for funds.

But the one real burden we had to bear personally and alone was the contribution of articles for each issue. All the parishioners seemed to be interested in what we wrote but we could not arouse them to write things for publication, except on very rare occasions. Our style may be good but it is getting monotonous; consequently, we are about to change the BROADCASTER from a monthly to a quarterly periodical, keeping strictly to the church year.

If, at any future time, the parishioners are interested enough in resuming the monthly publication of the BROADCASTER so that they will pay the $1.00 subscription, we will be glad to resume monthly issues. Roughly speaking the cost of its printing is $500.00 a year. If 500 parishioners will pay $1.00 into the BROADCASTER we will continue our monthly issues; otherwise beginning with the October issue we will prepare only fall, winter, spring and summer numbers, covering all seasonal events as thoroughly as possible; also publishing the names of all persons making special Christmas, Easter, Coal or any other special contributions.

The BROADCASTER will undergo no change whatsoever apart from curtailing its issues.

REMEMBER

any time the parish wants the BROADCASTER restored to a monthly magazine a multiplication of $1.00 subscriptions will turn the trick.

COMING EVENTS

THANKSGIVING

Americans everywhere have every reason to turn out "en masse" to their churches and synagogues to give thanks to Almighty God that our land so far is free from the terror that is demolishing the nations abroad. This is no time for sport or parade. IT IS THE HOUR OF PRAYER. We must lay aside frivolity and play and turn our eyes to Almighty God and His Christ in thanksgiving for our peace of the present, and to make supplication for its continuance for the future.

It is a solemn occasion for Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jew to make an holy pilgrimage to their places of worship, to beseech our Heavenly Father to continue His blessings upon our land and make us strong to minister to the woes and sufferings of our blood brothers abroad. This year SPORTS and PARADES on Thanksgiving Day will be as horribly out of place as reveling and dancing while one's mother is dying. Think of the rape, murder, robbery and denationalizing of the Jews in Europe, the destruction of churches and cathedrals of christianity, the throwing into the concentration camps of priests, ministers and rabbis, the long trek from home to nowhere of hundreds of thousands of sick and starving mothers and babies, old folk and weak into an utterly homeless wilderness.

If only our brother Americans of all races and creeds could get the picture of horror and suffering over there, they surely would not have the cruelty to turn our national day of Prayer into a time of buffoonery. God help the unfeeling man or woman who can forget to bring the cause of his suffering brother before the throne of Jehovah and spend the day in revelry.

Any man or business who diverts our people from their places of worship this Thanksgiving Day by staging public demonstrations which conflict with our service of prayer and supplication, is an unwholesome citizen and places personal business success above our country's welfare. Such a man or business has no right to claim anything but contempt from every true American. History is replete with the stories of nations ruined because their people, in time of stress, turned from Jehovah to play, instead of gathering round their Altars in supplication and prayer for strength to withstand the assaults of their enemies. Let us be real patriots this year and refuse to be drawn from our Temples of worship to follow Mammon.

ST. JOHN'S BAZAAR

Friday and Saturday, December 6th and 7th, are the dates for St. John's Annual Bazaar. This is a very important event. It is a necessary source of income to make up the deficit which generally catches up with us about that time of the year. We ought to begin now to get our Bazaar materials together. There will be very little change in our way of conducting it and the different parish organizations will have charge of the tables. We will need all kinds of novelties, fancy goods, bed spreads, table linens, crocheted pieces, bureau scarfs, table covers, napkins, lace work, sheets, towels, wash cloths, aprons, kitchen utensils, silver wear, groceries, fruit, vegetables, canned goods, soap, laundry supplies, candy, pies, ice cream, gents furnishings or anything else that is salable. We ought to start now to build up the Bazaar. The Woman's Auxiliary, the Senior and Junior chapters of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, the various chapters of the Daughters of the King, the Boys Club, the Girl Scouts, the Choir, both Senior and Junior, the Officers, teachers and scholars of the Sunday School and everybody else who is either closely or remotely connected with old St. John's, are the agents upon whom we rely to work for the success of the Bazaar. Please do not fail us. The success of the Bazaar is vital to our support.

CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS

Everybody knows what efforts we put forth for a happy Christmas. In some parts of the world Christmas may not be so merry this year. However, amid all the world's suffering we must still remember that the Prince of Peace was incarnated on Christmas Day. He still lives and in His good time He will reign over this stormy world. Again men will hear His "Peace be still" and even the winds and waves of hate will obey His commands and men and nations will be at peace again. It is very fitting, therefore, that we hail with joy the natal day of Jesus Christ, the Prince of Peace. If ever the world needed a Saviour, it is NOW.

LENTEN SEASON AND EASTER

It may seem we are looking pretty far into the future in speaking of next Lenten season and Easter. There are TWO reasons why we should nudge your memory now. FIRST, time seems to have the bad habit of flying on swift wings; and SECOND, because we have much work to do, especially our children, towards raising our Lenten Offering. We take pride in telling you that already we have several dollars saved for our next offering.

CONFIRMATION SERVICE

The Bishop has appointed WHITSUNDAY, JUNE FIRST, for confirming our 1941 Class. We tell you now because we hope every member of the parish will go on a treasure hunt for souls between now and then. There are hundreds and hundreds of men and women, boys and girls, who have neglected this great opportunity to enlist in God's army to fight for a better world. We ask EVERY parish organization and every individual of St. John's Parish to enroll new members without delay. We want 100 candidates for Whitsunday!

SEND YOUR CHILD TO SUNDAY SCHOOL

You feed, clothe and shelter your child because your child has a body. You send your child to school because he has a mind. But your child has something more central and controlling; he has a moral nature. His conscience must be trained. Your child also has a soul, which only God and religion can satisfy. God and religion are basic to personality and society. Are you providing for the religious education of your child? The Sunday School, next to the home, is offering this training. Take your child to Sunday School.

THE FATE OF THE INNOCENTS

Who has not read with horror the crime of Herod in St. Matthew 2:16. "Then, Herod, when he saw that he was mocked of the wise men, was exceeding wroth, and sent forth, and SLEW all the children that were in Bethlehem in all the coasts thereof, from two years old and under."

Probably you have heard how the worshippers of the god Moloch, the God of Fire, sacrificed their newborn babes as an offering. Also, possibly you have heard the horrible tales from Africa of the ignorant mothers tossing their children into the River Ganges to be devoured by the crocodiles, and have wondered at the awfulness of their acts. And may we remind you that these are only three of hundreds of incidents of child murder in sacrifice. One other terrible incident of human child sacrifice was the offering of living beautiful maidens of the Incas of Mexico, who were bound to the Altar and their hearts removed and offered to their god.

We wonder at the hideous nightmare children passed through in the cause of religion and worship.

But I wonder if all this bloody slaughter of the innocents was not more merciful than the sinister sacrifice of innocent children by the mothers of modern civilization?

For instance, I picked up a pamphlet a few minutes ago and read that "ONE HALF OF THE CHILDREN IN THE UNITED STATES RECEIVE NO RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION."

IN ANOTHER PAMPHLET I READ 85 PER CENT. OF OUR CONVICTS ARE UNDER 21 YEARS OF AGE.

Is this last statement due to the neglect put forth in the first?

But in the minds of the parents this is not neglect. It is deliberate. The parents have conceived that the spiritual education of the child is a useless waste of time and energy. Their ambition is to prepare the child, in mind and body, for his social and industrial struggle in life. Every effort must be in that direction; hence, one half of the children of the United States receive no religious education, TO THE DETRIMENT OF THEIR MORAL AND SPIRITUAL DEVELOPMENT.

The parents' ambition in these modern days run the gamut of I want my child to be president, to be rich, to be popular, to be strong, to be intellectual. All these, curiously enough, are legitimate ambitions—there is nothing wrong with them. The one terrible omission from that line of desires is the desire for the child to be SPIRITUALLY STRONG.

That omission is fatal to the child and his future. For without a strong and lively spiritual urge, no child's future is clear.

Now, there goes the croaking of the out-of-date moralist, you say. Such ideas were swept among other moral rubbish in the ash can long ago.

Yes, you modern parents are right, they are in the ash can.

AND TENS OF THOUSANDS OF YOUR CHILDREN ARE IN THE OTHER "CAN" for juvenile delinquents. Whether parents are ignorant of their personal responsibility for the child's criminal predicament or not they cannot escape the charge that they are deliberately ignoring the spiritual side of the child's being and thereby permanently crippling him and making him unfit to live a normal and clean, as well as a useful life. Yet you insist, this is just a lot of "boogy" talk and children are no worse today than they were in the old fashioned days of the family church pew.

We are not asking you to listen to our croaking about the good, old days of christian worship and decent living. We just suggest to you to get your own statistics from any source that can supply the information and read what is happening to our modern sons and daughters.

They are not victims of bloody Herod.
They are not food for the crocodiles.
They are not thrown into the fires of Moloch.

As a matter of fact, it were better if they were, for such sacrifices can destroy the bodies only; whereas the modern slaughter of the innocents destroy both body and soul.

Our contention is—FOR EVERY CRIME A CHILD COMMITS THE PARENTS SHOULD BE TRIED, AND IF FOUND GUILTY OF MORAL AND SPIRITUAL NEGLECT, THEY TOO SHOULD BE PUNISHED BY LAW FOR THE CHILD'S MISDEED.

Everybody thinks the world is growing worse, that civilization is on its last lap.

Of course it is—but it can be saved if—

THE PARENTS AND THE CHURCH COOPERATE.

P.S.—See that you children go to Church at least once every Sunday in the summer AND ATTEND CHURCH SCHOOL DURING THE FALL, WINTER and SPRING. It may keep them out of the House of Detention.

THANKSGIVING DAY—St. John's Church will be open to all who wish to join us in praise and thanks to Almighty God for sparing America the terrible affliction of war, and to beseech Him to send His mercy and help to all our suffering brothers abroad and to send destruction to the incarnate forces of hate and death which are so ruthlessly crushing civilization to the dust.

Do not, we beg of you, neglect your duty to God, your brother and yourself, by being absent from your Church on Thanksgiving Day.

"If sinners entice thee, consent thou not."

Remember Thanksgiving Day is the Day to render thanks to God for His blessings and protection. It is not a day you turn your backs to the Temple of God to follow foolish pageants. That is what caused the fall of Jerusalem.

SUGGESTIONS FOR 1940-1941 SUNDAY SCHOOL

1. That we observe always to be P. and R. Prompt - on time. Regular - present every Sunday.
2. That we get new scholars and win an American Flag pin or button.
3. That the KINDERGARTEN learn at least three new hymns and the Creed and the Lord's Prayer before Christmas, winding up with a play period.
4. That the INTERMEDIATE DEPARTMENT learn ALL the Catechism before Christmas; also review the Books of the Bible, and as many hymns as possible; also have a Bible Story period every Sunday.
5. That the MAIN SCHOOL have first a fifteen minute period for the distribution of tickets and collecting ticket money BEFORE the lesson period; also twenty-five minutes for the Sunday School lesson which must not be interrupted.
6. That every class plan means to raise the class S. S. L. O., and submit same to the Rector along with dates on Sunday, September 29th.
7. That Mrs. Pine be asked to help us have a free Sunday School supper sometime before or after Thanksgiving and every man, woman, boy and girl be invited. The Rector will contribute $10.00.
8. That every Class helps to get material for the Bazaar, especially for the Fish Pond, also candy and fancy pieces.
9. That every boy and girl give not less than five cents in the Sunday School Offering.
10. That every class sends up a list of absentees every Sunday so that Mrs. Weise can visit them.
11. SUGGEST THAT PARISHIONERS OWNING AUTOMOBILES BE ASKED TO GATHER UP THE YOUNG CHILDREN, ESPECIALLY OUR KINDERGARTEN KIDDIES LIVING IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD AND BRING AND TAKE THEM HOME FROM SUNDAY SCHOOL.

MY CHRISTMAS GIFT

Christmas is indeed a blessed season. It is a season in which the IMPULSE TO GIVE is strong within us. We spend time and anxious thought in choosing an appropriate gift for each near one and close friend. The price of the gift is of little importance. The sentiment the gift is calculated to inspire is the real consideration.

The words EXTRAVAGANCE and ECONOMY are not found in the language of Christmas. We want our gifts to be vehicles of love. They must satisfy that desire in our hearts. Probably we are not always worldly wise in this matter of Christmas giving. But why should we be? I wonder if anybody ever thought God was extravagant when He gave to the world our first Christmas gift—JESUS, THE SAVIOUR OF MANKIND! If he did then God set us the example of extravagance, and with that high example we are warranted in following through with our gifts—

BOTH TO OUR LOVED ONES AND OUR GOD.

We know, or soon will know, what we will give to the loved ones. How about our Christmas gift to God? Sometimes we make out Christmas lists. They help us wonderfully in our choosing. Now if we could only find a list from which to choose our God's gift most, if not all, our Christmas shopping would be over.

I think I can help you by supplying just the right list from which to choose God's gift. I found it in an old Hymn Book. It is what used to be called the Christian Consecration hymn. I know there is someone, if not all, of these offerings that will please God greatly if we in love will bring them to Him on Christmas Day, just like the Magi did.

Here it is and may it help you!

Take my LIFE and let it be Consecrated Lord to Thee;

Take my HANDS and let them move
At the impulse of Thy love.

Take my FEET and let them be
Swift and beautiful for Thee;

Take my VOICE and let me sing,
Always, only for my King.

Take my LIPS and let them be Filled with messages from Thee;

Take my SILVER and my GOLD
Not a mite would I withhold.

Take my MOMENTS and my DAYS,
Let them flow in endless praise;

Take my INTELLECT and use
Every power as Thou shalt choose.

Take my WILL and make it Thine,
It shall be no longer mine:

Take my HEART it is Thine own
It shall be Thy royal throne.

JOIN THE FIRESIDE CLUB

Take my LOVE, my God, I pour
At Thy feet its treasure store,

Take MYSELF, and I will be
Ever, only, all for Thee.

OUR ANNUAL BAZAAR

We have chosen Friday and Saturday, December 6th and 7th, for our Bazaar. We HOPE to make it successful. We PRAY that we have fine weather. And we must WORK with all our might because the financial returns to the church are important. We need the money to pay our debts.

St. John's Bazaar is important for two reasons. The first is, as mentioned above, FINANCIAL. The second is its SOCIAL ATMOSPHERE.

We depend on the receipts from the Bazaar to cover our indebtedness. Bills we contract and must pay to keep our credit good. We ought not finance a church by such methods. Our offerings ought to be sufficient to pay our debts and help our poor and sick; but so long as many cannot see their personal responsibility as Christians to support their parish with gifts, the church must go into business and buy and sell and make profits to help the parish.

SOME DAY WE WILL HOLD BAZAARS AND GIVE THE PROFITS TO THE POOR OF THE PARISH AND TOWARDS MISSIONARY EFFORTS OF THE CHURCH. That will be fun.

In the meantime, we can go on developing the social side of the Bazaar by coming out with all the family and INVITED FRIENDS for one of Mrs. Pine's grand suppers and spend the evening in going around meeting and gossiping with old friends and getting acquainted with new folk. Of course, you will want to buy some groceries, or give the kiddies a nickle for the fish pond, or buy a box of candy, or buy toilet articles or novelties for Christmas presents, or stock up on kitchen goods, or buy Pop and Sons, socks, mufflers, ties, etc., at the Men's Counter, or take a chance on a dolly for the kiddies; and, after you are good and tired, you can stagger into the Radio Room and rest your poor, tired feet and forget your troubles playing the game.

An admission of ten cents, 3 for 25c, will be charged so as to keep undesirables out of the Bazaar. On each ticket is a coupon entitling the purchaser to ten cents credit on the purchase of any article. If you buy three tickets you have bought a credit of 30 cents for 25 cents. In other words you are a nickle ahead.

NO COUPONS WILL BE REDEEMED FOR CASH.

You can use them as credits in making purchases in the Bazaar.

The plan of the Bazaar will be about the same as usual. Following is a provisional arrangement of tables and the names of those in charge.

1. The Restaurant—Mrs. Frank Pine, Chairman and Assistants.
2. Groceries—Miss Carrie Strang, Chairman, Miss Anna Schabacker, Mrs. Amelia Slabey, Mr. Howard McFadden.
3. Fish Pond—Miss Ruth Rutter and Miss Emma Kaiser.
4. Soft Drinks—Mrs. Laura Young, Chairman.
5. Candy Table—Miss Helen W. McHenry, Chairman, Miss Helen Lotz.
6. Toilet Articles—Mrs. Edward Krafft, Chairman, Miss Eleanor Britton.
7. Dolls—Mrs. John J. Nelson, Chairman, Mrs. Herman Jaeschke, Mrs. Elizabeth Moore.
8. Novelties—Mrs. Frank G. Schmidt, Chairman, Mrs. Harry Hopkins, Mrs. William Shives, Mrs. Georgia Weise.
9. Household—Miss Helen Ashman, Chairman, Mrs. Wesley Ashman, Mrs. Ethel Sutterlin.
10. Gents Furnishings—Frank Drumm, Chairman, John McHenry, John F. Preole.
11. Radio—Herman Jaeschke, Chairman, assisted by Joseph Robins' Class.
12. Cakes—Miss Margaret Kensil, Chairman, Mrs. Margaret Holton, Miss Elizabeth Devlin.

THE CRADLE ROLL

Mrs. Weise, secretary of St. John's Cradle Roll, has just completed the list of babies from 1938 to 1940. Naturally new names appear on it and we are anxious that every child, who was born in the parish and christened in St. John's Church, should have his or her name on the roll.

We want you to study the list carefully to see whether the name of the child in whom you are interested, and whose name ought to be there, does appear. I want both parents and sponsors to keep an eye on St. John's CRADLE ROLL and report to the Rector any oversight which may seem to have occurred in writing in the name of the baby you stood for. If your baby's name does not appear in case the birth occurred between 1938 and 1940, be sure to report the omission at once giving the day and place of the birth and the date of the christening and the omission will be rectified.

THOSE BAPTISMAL CERTIFICATES

Every clergyman in the country is being pestered

by applicants for copies of Baptismal Certificates to prove they are native born, or have reached the proper work age, or are eligible for old age pensions and for other reasons too numerous to mention.

It is astonishing how many thousands of persons lose their certificate. No doubt the parents thought they were sort of souvenirs of an event. Now that schools, business and the government demand them as evidence of age they are realizing their importance and we are spending three and four hours, sometimes that many days, in searching the back records of St. John's and the old St. Paul Registers for the data so as to supply the applicants with duplicates. The time we spend in these searches is time we are paid to do other things. We cannot afford this time unless applicants pay for our services which is one dollar for every duplicate baptismal, wedding or burial certificate. Do not imagine we keep the dollar. It is turned into the Cradle Roll Fund of the Parish.

WANTED—TEACHERS

Sometimes Sunday Schools get in a jam because of the fading out of the teaching staff. St. John's School is suffering that experience now.

WE NEED VOLUNTEER TEACHERS to supplement our regular staff. We MUST get them from somewhere for our School is beginning to show, by diminishing numbers, this lack of teaching force. When scholars come to school they are disappointed if the teacher is not there to welcome them. If the teacher gives up then the members scatter and the class disappears.

EVERY CLASS THAT ST. JOHN'S SUNDAY SCHOOL HAS LOST IN THE PAST died out because the teacher either could not, or would not, due to conditions, take their teachers' job as seriously as he or she should.

Now we NEED more teachers.

AND OUR NEED IS URGENT!

The Rev. F. P. Houghton, D. D., Executive Secretary of the Diocese, once said to your rector, "If you want to do successful Sunday School work, among other essentials, be sure to choose attractive personalities for teachers. Well, we have no lack of attractive personalities in St. John's Parish but for some reason the job of teaching does not appear attractive to them.

Is it not possible to interest at least three of our young people in at least volunteering to pinch hit for absentee teachers?

Must our school, so prominent for its good works in the mission field, suffer a decline in numbers, in interest and effectiveness, for lack of teachers?

Don't you realize that the Sunday School is the life source of the Church and the Church is the spiritual support of our community?

Please do not be so self-indulgent and pleasure seeking that you are blind to your duty to God and your church.

Please try to adjust yourself to the thought that Church membership entails certain IMPERATIVE DUTIES you dare not ignore. Among them is the training of the mind and spirit of our boys and girls in the nurture and admonition of our faith.

When the time comes, your ticket of admission will not be for PROFESSING but for PERFORMING. God is not interested in IDLE SERVANTS. HE LOVES THE HUSTLER. THOSE WHO USE THE TALENTS HE GAVE THEM, for the advancement of His cause. Will YOU volunteer to teach?

GOD IS LISTENING FOR YOUR CONSENT TO SERVICE

This is a SPECIAL MESSAGE to the DAUGHTERS OF THE KING, the WOMAN'S AUXILIARY, the SENIOR and JUNIOR BRANCHES OF THE BROTHERHOOD OF ST. ANDREW.

LEADER OF MEN OF GOOD WILL

A name almost to conjure with throughout the Far East is Ronald Owen Hall, so Henry P. Van Dusen discovered on his recent travels in that region. On the Church of England clergy list Ronald Hall is "Lord Bishop of Victoria," meaning that he has jurisdiction over a stretch of southern China which reaches from Hong Kong to Burma, named in 1849 the Diocese of Victoria or Hong Kong.

"He came to meet us in a Chinese restaurant in Hong Kong," Dr. Van Dusen relates. "Youngish face, close-cropped tawny hair; clad in faded and much patched khaki shorts, shirt open at the throat, hatless and, hidden beneath a gray tweed coat which was immediately shed, a silver Nestorian cross, altogether the most engaging episcopal garb we remembered seeing."

Oxford and Cuddesdon Theological College were followed by a few years of English parish life when he was also missionary secretary for the Student Christian Movement and in that office became known to student leaders in other lands. During a period of acute tension between Chinese and British in China in 1925, a Chinese YMCA secretary persuaded the Chinese student leaders to cable for Ronald Hall to come out and help. That the Chinese should actually send for a Britisher greatly impressed the other British in China. Mr. Hall took the lead in bringing together men of good will from each side.

He went back to England but after five years he was recalled to China, this time as Bishop of Victoria-Hong Kong. The diocese is of increasing interest to American Church people because it is here that so many thousands of Chinese have migrated during the Japanese invasion.

These thousands of newcomers have brought problems of pastoral care far beyond the resources of the English diocese. Bishop Hall has only forty clergy, Chinese and foreign, for his 400,000 square miles with some seventy million people. He has two Chinese assistant bishops, the Rt. Rev. S. T. Mok (1935) and the Rt. Rev. Y. Y. Tsu (1940) formerly of St. John's University, Shanghai, now in charge of work among the incoming settlers.

GET THE POINT?

We received a personal bill from a certain business house not long ago. Pasted on it was a tag—

"WE HAVE A NUMBER OF SMALL ACCOUNTS, AND IN THE AGGREGATE THEY MEAN CONSIDERABLE TO US. PLEASE."

Such a tag would be most applicable to hundreds of our church member accounts. If they inspired the delinquents to pay up, it would mean hundreds of dollars to the parish.

HOW'S YOUR SMALL ACCOUNT?

Christ be with me, Christ within me,
Christ behind me, Christ before me,
Christ beside me, Christ to win me,
Christ to comfort and restore me,
Christ beneath me, Christ above me,
Christ in quiet, Christ in danger,
Christ in hearts of all that love me,
Christ in mouth of friend and stranger.

FIGURES DON'T LIE

An Irishman working for a Scotchman asked for an increase in pay. The Scotchman replied: "If you are worth it, I would be pleased to give it to you. Now, let us see what you do in a year, Pat. We have 365 days in a year, you sleep 8 hours every day, which makes 122 days you sleep, taken from 365 days leaves 243. Now, you have 8 hours recreation every day, which makes 122 days, taken from 243 days leaves 121 days. We have 52 Sundays in a year which you have off, leaving you 69 days. You have 14 days vacation, take this off and you have 55 days left. You don't work Saturday afternoons; this makes 26 days in a year. Take this off and you have 29 days left. Now Pat you are allowed one and one-half hours for meals which totals in a year 28 days. Take this off and you have 1 day left. I always give you St. Patrick's Day off, so I ask you, Pat, if you are entitled to a raise?" Pat then answered, "Well, what the heck have I been doing, then?"

Husband, over the telephone: "Is there anything to bring home, dear?"

The Bride: "Yes, some more cups. I've used ours all up."

Husband: "How?"

The Bride: "Well, the cookbook says any old cup without a handle will do for measuring, and it has taken all we've got to get the handle off without breaking the cup, too."

With sense to keep it at its best,
Give me a healthy mind, Good Lord,
To keep the pure and good in sight,
Which, seeing Sin, is not appalled,
But finds a way to set it right.
Give me a mind that is not bored
That does not whimper, whine or sigh.
Don't let me worry overmuch
About the fussy thing called "I".
Give me a sense of humor, Lord,
Give me the grace to see a joke;
To get some happiness in life,
And pass it on to other folk.

"The great men are all dead," she said, with insinuating regret.

"But the beautiful women are not," he replied, looking at her.

"Of course," she added after a moment of reflection, and change, "I always make it a rule to except present company."

"So do I," he replied.

THE GLORY OF LIFE

The Glory if Life is to love, not to be loved, to give, not to get, to serve, not to be served; to be a strong hand in the dark to another in the time of need, to be a cup of strength to any soul in a crisis of weakness; this is to know the Glory of Life.

SEND YOUR CHILD TO SUNDAY SCHOOL

A prisoner one time was visited by many people who came to speak to him about being a christian. He replied, "If you people had shown so much interest in me before I came to this prison, I would never have been here."

A few weeks ago we were sickened by the news that on a Sunday of the time mentioned the Philadelphia Police raided a Social Club and dragged out several girls in their teens in various stages of insobriety and companions of young "rakes" whose only object was the ruin of the girls.

Isn't this a lesson we can learn today? Children sent to Sunday School receive personal care of the school teacher, and are guided into truth and righteousness.

Parents, it is up to YOU to see your child is placed in Sunday School; not SENT but TAKEN BY YOU as an example they will long remember. Sunday School is the place where children begin their growth and develop into mature christian people.

ADVENT

THE BEGINNING OF THE CHRISTIAN YEAR, ADVENT, signifies COMING. It is designated to celebrate the coming of our Lord Christ in the flesh in humility to dwell among men and teach them the new Gospel of life.

It is also the time in which we look forward to and prepare for the Second Coming of the MASTER at some distant time to judge the children of men.

It is also the period of preparation for the observation of the great Christ-Mass.

The four Sundays in Advent teach the lessons of His Life—His Word—His Ministry—and His Spirit.

The first Sunday in Advent is always the Sunday nearest the Feast of St. Andrew (November 30th), whether it occurs before or after that feast. It is really NEW YEAR'S DAY FOR CHRISTIANITY.

ADVENT SUNDAY, which falls three weeks before the fourth Sunday in Advent, will fall successively on December 3-2-1, November 30-29-28-27 in never ending routine. To those seven days Advent Sunday is tethered.

HOW ABOUT THE FAMILY STOVE?

You never can tell whether the winter will be mild or severe. If it is mild you are in luck for you will not need to spend much hard earned cash for coal. On the other hand, if it is severe, you are not so fortunate because you will burn more coal to keep warm and you will spend more money to buy coal. Now let me give you our experience on the question of fuel supply for the church.

Buying coal for heating our church, Sunday School and Parish House is a major problem in our budget. I think, however, that I have found a solution.

IT IS THROUGH OUR FIRESIDE CLUB

You contribute only ten cents a month. By means of that 10 cents we have bought and paid for almost all the fuel we will use this winter, no matter how cold the weather gets.

Now, if YOU use the same system in accumulating fuel in your cellar for winter use, you will be amazed to find how easy you can get a winter's supply on hand and scarcely realize the expense.

For instance: The average small home family will use about five tons of coal a season This would mean, based on prevailing prices, that your bill would be $52.50 for the season. Now suppose you put aside $1.00 a week each week in the year and (this is important) buy a ton of coal and store it against the time of need AS SOON AS YOU HAVE THE PRICE OF A TON OF COAL!

You think you could not afford so much as $1.00 a week? Very well, then put aside 50 cents a week instead and you would still accumulate $26.00 during the year and this $26.00 would buy nearly three tons, which will be a mighty big load off your shoulders when winter comes.

Don't be foolish, look to your own interests and buy coal the easy way and be warm all winter.

If the war continues coal may go way up in price. If you already have two or three or five tons in your cellar you will have another reason to congratulate yourself.

HE WENT TO BRAZIL

"I am going if I have to go alone." So declared a venturesome young man when three expected companions were unable to start on a hoped-for mission.

A Missionary movement throughout the Church about 1887 had repercussions at the Virginia Theological Seminary. Graduates had already started missions in Africa, Alaska, India, China, and Japan. Four students in 1887 volunteered for South America, to them a continent almost unknown. James W. Morris was accepted; the other three failed to pass the physical requirements. Friends expressed regret that the mission would therefore have to be given up, but Mr. Morris said, "No, I am going if I have to go alone." He did not go alone, however, for his determination inspired others who later served with him in Brazil.

In the earliest days of Brazilian Episcopal Church, as the new mission soon was known, local patriotism was intense and the first two young North American missionaries, Mr. Morris and Lucien Lee Kinsolving, were not immediately understood. Once when they were holding an innocent meeting a mob gathered outside, yelling at them. The Americans asked each other instantly, "What would St. Paul do," and with their sympathetic interpreter they went out, faced the mob calmly and soon dispersed it.

Pioneer of the Brazil mission and co-founder with Mr. Kinsolving who later became Bishop, Mr. Morris served there ten years and then was obliged to return home. In 1920, after 18 years' absence the call of Brazil was still imperative and he returned for several more years as dean of the new theological seminary.

Bishop Kinsolving's son writes of Dr. Morris, "In spite of struggles that would have crushed most men, he never lost a radiant sense of humor, which was only surpassed by his simple religious sincerity."—Epics.

A BISHOP DESPITE HIS DRESS

"He was wearing khaki shorts and a rough shirt as he came down that African trail, so how was I to know he was the Bishop?" asked a friend of Alston May. "As Bishop of Northern Rhodesia for twenty-six years, he has traveled interminably," wrote another friend, "that he might know every corner of that country, and he has gone on foot that he might know his people well."

A young man out of Oxford, he became associate priest of a large English parish. After years of hard work in England he was called to be a Bishop in Africa, in a diocese five times the size of England and Wales, with more than a million people, speaking a dozen languages.

They were at first so completely uninterested in all that he tried to do that he declared they seemed more vegetable than human. But when they kept his twenty-fifth anniversary among them, Christian Africans from thirty villages with their chieftains came from miles around with drums and dances and songs in his honor, and hundreds of gifts.

Though friendly and affectionate, he was no easy-going shepherd and he could be stern. He was one of the few modern Bishops ever to place his whole people under an interdict. During a time when they were misbehaving, he forbade all services and sacraments except in serious emergency, and the discipline brought them to their senses.

His white population numbered only a thousand at first but with the development of copper mines it grew to ten thousand. One of the gifts he prized was the coat-of-arms of the diocese, presented by the Roman Catholic missions in gratitude for his kindness to them.

From the first, recognizing that trained African workers would be more effective than foreigners, he set himself to develop, even from his vegetable-like population, native teachers and clergy, and had the joy of ordaining the first three African priests for that diocese. There are more than one hundred native teachers. Bishop May has had only fifteen white clergy to care for ten thousand Christians and to reach the non-Christian thousands.

When he died in Africa in July, 1940, at the age of seventy years, it was said of him: "He has received his call from this world where he has consistently acquitted himself like a man and a saint."—Epics.

Keep a generous heart and pityful
For the sufferings of the cityful
See and sorrow for the faces
That you meet in all its places
For the striving and the struggling
For the tempted and the sinning
For the sick, the poor, despairing
And for all that need your caring
In the rushing heedless cityful
Be a generous heart and pityful.

THANK YOU, MR. NELSON!

In case you do not recognize Mr. Nelson by name we will call him John. However, the name is immaterial because, as the poest says, a rose by another name smells like a rose just the same—and makes me sneeze just as loud and just as long. Now the difference between a rose and John is—he don't make me sneeze—he makes me laugh for joy.

Why?

Why! Just because he does such nice things.

Next time you go to church just take a look at our kneeling cushion at the Communion rail. He took them apart—renovated them—re-padded and tufted them and made them like new and saved the church at least $50.00 by doing so.

That's the reason we say—Thank you, Mr. Nelson.

We understand there are some who are jealous of all the good things we are thinking and saying of Mr. Nelson, and they are determined to show the Parish that he is not the only fellow who can do his daily stunt, by doing something for old St. John's too.

Well, that's fine! But even then we must still say Thank you Mr. Nelson!

Because, you see, he did it first and "woke up" the rest of us.

There are lots of things we can do and save old St. John's many a penny. Some of us can lay a new pine board floor in the Kindergarten, some of us can build an altar for the Parish House. Others of us can renovate the room that is used for the men's vesting. There are odd jobs of repairs to the church pews, etc. Also little dabs of paint are needed here and there. These would take only a fraction of time and little effort, but the general appearance of the building would be greatly improved.

There was a time when the Rector's office was kept spick and span, but for more than three years it had to go with a lick and a dab. We are referring to his parish house office. It would be fine if a woman communicant would volunteer to keep it swept and dusted and the toilet kept supplied with soap and clean towels. Perhaps two or more women could take turns on the job.

Yes indeed, there are lots of little jobs to be done, all of which means saving of pennies to the church.

There is a young man who we call "Happy" who is going to build some tables for the kiddies in the Kindergarten. That means another necessity provided without cost to the church.

ARE THERE ANY OTHER MR. NELSON'S IN THE HOUSE?

OUR SUNDAY SCHOOL LENTEN OFFERING

IT'S IMPORTANT TO THE PARISH AND TO OUR MEANS OF RAISING IT

Lent is the season when we put forth every effort to raise as near $1,000.00 as possible for the missionary work of the church. In raising this big sum we are helping ourselves meet the apportionment (assessment) which the Diocese charges against the Parish. Of course this is perfectly just, because as a member of the Diocesan Convention we must expect to pay our just debt to the church. If we do not raise our parish apportionment by means of our Sunday School Lenten Offering then the Treasurer of the parish must seek other means to raise our debt to the Diocese. If, therefore, our S. S. L. O. is big enough to cancel the apportionment then we have nothing to worry about until next year.

So far, we have never failed to meet our apportionment. Generally we go over the amount required of us. This year I want it to be a repetition of the past. If we lay out a plan of procedure there is no reason for us to fail. Let us therefore get our plan of money raising before us as early as possible. These are some of the sure fire means of attaining our desired end.

THE MITE CHEST

First, every Sunday School scholar must take a mite chest the Sunday preceding Ash Wednesday and try to fill it with small coins until it is full. No doubt many members of the family will be glad to help and add a little now and then. I have known some scholars to raise as high as ten dollars by means of their mite chests. It certainly ought to be easy for any scholar to collect at least one dollar before Easter comes. Let's see, there are 46 days in Lent—counting Sundays. All you have to do is to give 3 cents a day and you will have $1.38 in your chest on Easter day.

THANK BOXES

Then we have distributed several Thank Boxes through the parish. The object of these is to place them on the dining table where one won't overlook them. Then after one has finished his or her meal it will be right there to receive your little thank offering and the box will be returned on Easter to help swell the offering. If a person having a Thank Box is interested in any particular S. S. class he can donate the box to that class.

CANDY EGGS

For many years we have gone into the candy egg business and raised many hundreds of dollars by this means. We are about to do the same this year. The scholars of the classes take boxes of eggs and sell them at a cent each. The profits go to the Lenten offering of the class to which the scholar belongs.

RADIO PARTIES

Some parishioners enjoy games and entertainment and are willing to pay for them. That's the reason we go "Radio" once in a while. It is an easy means of raising funds for the Lenten offering and has added many a dollar to our fund.

DANCING

A few classes are going to try to raise funds by giving dances—before Lent of course. How much money we will realize by this means is more or less a problem. We hope the members of the Parish will be interested and will support the dances by their presence and their pocket books.

RICE SALES

The kiddies of the Kindergarten are so tiny that they have a hard time to raise a Lenten Offering by any means at all. This year we are going to jump in and help them by buying and selling rice. We have begun already. A package of rice costs 10 cents. IT IS GOOD RICE TOO. We want to sell 1000 packages if we can. Rice is a vegetable that keeps and can be prepared in scores of ways. It is most economical and nourishing. So come along and help the kiddies raise their quota ($50.00) and buy rice.

RAG SALES

Old rags, old papers and magazines and junk can be converted into a source of profit with little effort and can help the cause along wonderfully if the boys and girls can persuade their mothers to clean house between now and Easter. One year a boy in one of our S. S. Classes raised $5.00 selling rags, papers and old iron. He went among his neighbors and told them what he wanted to do with the money he got for the sale of the junk and almost every person in the neighborhood gave him all they could scrape together.

TRY IT, BOYS AND GIRLS, THERE'S MONEY IN JUNK

If you know of any other money raising plan and will try it out I'm sure we will most gratefully acknowledge your efforts to help. We need the interest and the efforts of everybody for we MUST raise $1,000.00!!!

NOW I AM FOR THE CHURCHES

CONDENSED FROM THE AMERICAN MERCURY

Roger William Riis

ROGER WILLIAM RIIS started as a reporter on the New York Sun, served in the Naval Intelligence during the World War, became an associate editor of Collier's, did publicity work for several large corporations, and finally set up his own public relations office in New York. With all this, he has found time to contribute frequently to leading magazines. He is the son of Jacob Augustus Riis, the Danish immigrant who became one of America's great humanitarians, and whose books, How the Other Half Lives and The Children of the Poor, helped to bring about many needed reforms in New York's tenement districts

Six months ago I scoffed at the churches. Then one day, on a sudden whim, I attended a service. Since then I have been going steadily, first out of curiosity to see what the much-attacked churches are up to, lately out of rising excitement. I have not "got religion"; I always had that. But I have found out that churches today are dispensing something I need, and that church and religion go together.

One Sunday last May the newspaper offered me this: "Rotterdam is ablaze. Shooting is heard in every street." That was the morning I happened into a church, for the first time in 22 years. And what did the church offer me? A simple, reverent service, featured by a sermon on "Peter, The Rock," on the permanence and beauty of the church.

I found that I was acutely interested in hearing about anything that had permanence, beauty and unselfish endeavor. It fell on my spirit like water on a desert, and I went out stirred and grateful.

A week later I took my curiosity to another church and heard the minister, in a singularly lovely building, talk simply and beautifully on "The Ascending Life." Without a trace of sanctimonious heroics, he conversed informally about the insistent demand of life to rise, to grow, to improve itself. It was adult, it was spiritual; and to me, personally, it was helpful.

Since then, as business and vacation travel took me about the country, I have made it a point to attend and study churches—all kinds. I have tried to discover what makes the leading churches vital in their communities.

And I state with assurance that the critics of the churches today don't know what they are talking about. True, a minority of churches still offer a dull, repellent form of salvation, some in ugly buildings, some with painful music, some with humdrum ministers. But you don't have to go to those churches, nor need you condemn all churches because some fail.

It is obvious that the assailants of churches do not go to church. They don't know what the churches are doing these days. I suspect the critics rationalize what is really laziness into a superior intellectual attitude. At any rate, that is what I used to do.

Now I am for the churches because they have something for me, and something for civilization. Dr. Ernest Fremont Tittle, of Evanston, Ill., one of the clearest voices I have heard, says: "Let God be thanked there is on earth an institution that has a high opinion of man, declaring that he is in some sense a son of God who has within himself divine possibilities; an institution that transcends race, nation and class; an institution which is loyally undertaking to embody the spirit of Christ, and in his name to relieve human suffering, promote human welfare and carry on a ministry of reconciliation among men."

I find myself unable any longer to answer that kind of platform with "I'd rather go into the woods and worship alone. Many of the clergy are dull men, concerned over trivial taboos. Anyway, Sunday is my day for loafing."

Time and again, I have found in church something which lifted my spirit. That, I now believe, was what I unconsciously sought. The churches' varied social activities mean nothing to me. But if countless others find social outlets in churches, so much the better. They get what they seek; so do I.

New York's beautiful Church of the Ascension has great wooden doors which open outward, but they are carved on the inside because they are never closed. Every year over 30,000 persons slip in at odd hours for a moment of quiet meditation. They get what they seek.

The remote hamlet of Jonesville, Va., has been holding an annual four-day prayer meeting for over a century. The day I was there 2000 people were in attendance. Men, women, children, earnest and devout. Revival stuff? No. Simple, direct Christianity. Love-thy-neighbor stuff. Good stuff. These people come from hundreds of miles around; they get what they seek.

The Dominican Sisters at Corpus Christi Church in New York conducted a "project" in tolerance in their church school. Not an attack on intolerance, but a positive, laboratory experiment in tolerance. This demonstration by Catholic, Jewish and Protestant children raised a wild flurry of hope in my heart; if human beings can do this sort of thing, we'll get this world fixed right yet!

When you go to church you should actively seek something. You must not go like an empty bucket,

THE STEEL CHAIRS

A MUCH NEEDED SUNDAY SCHOOL IMPROVEMENT

We are proud of our seating improvement of our Sunday School. We are sure that there will be no collapse of chairs and scholars picking themselves up from the floor in the future as so often occurred in the past. New chairs was an imperative need. The chairs we were using were purchased from a second hand dealer twenty years ago. Considering the rough usage they got through all those years we feel we received the worth of our investment. Now, however, they are unserviceable—as a matter of fact not many of them are good for anything but kindling wood.

The steel chairs we have just bought—we purchased a hundred of them—are strongly built, sanitary and fold up so as to take scarcely any packing room. Best of all, they are noiseless. The silence was so thick the first Sunday we used the chairs that we felt a little lonesome. We missed the rattle and clatter of the wooden chairs.

The price was most attractive too. Each chair cost $1.96. The wooden chairs which were second-hand, cost $1.50 each. Our bill therefore amounts to $196.00, This is the cash price. Somebody loaned us the money and now it is up to us to pay it back. We are not used to being in debt for anything. If you, dear readers, like the chairs and want to show you really do appreciate them you might show your appreciation by giving a dollar to the Rector or the Treasurer with the direction that it is to be applied to the bill for chairs.

MOTHER SONG

Bright is the morning, and bright is my task,
And joy in the heart is a wonderful thing,
Yet ever, dear Lord, at my labor I ask
Thy blessing upon my beloved as I sing:
Keep them from evil, deliver from harm,
Help them to grow in Thy wisdom and grace,
Teach them to know the good strength of Thy arm,
Thy touch on their hand, the light of Thy face.
May they be selfless, and may they be kind
In a world that has need of much kindness today,
If they should wander, Lord, help them to find
The road that leads home again—show them the way.
Help me to mother not only my own,
But every small child I see faring alone.

GRACE NOLL CROWELL.

THE GOOD FRIDAY CANTATA

A very impressive and worshipful service was held at St. John's Church on Good Friday evening at eight o'clock, when the Senior Choir, under the direction of Mrs. Vernon Matthews, rendered the Cantata, "Olivet to Calvary," by Maunder.

The Cantata is the story, in music, of the passion of our Lord. The solo and recitative portions were sung very ably by Jeremiah K. Rutter, Tenor, and John J. Nelson, Baritone. The Choir was accompanied on the organ by Mrs. Matthews, Organist and Choir Director.

The Choir had practiced very diligently on this Cantata and their rendition on Friday night showed the splendid and perfect attainment of their practice.

The prayers were read by Vernon Matthews, Senior Lay Reader, and the Benediction was pronounced by the Rector, the Rev. H. Cresson McHenry. There was a good attendance to hear our "worship in music" service.

EASTER DAY AT ST. JOHN'S

The day did not start so promising meterologically. At 4.30 A. M., when we took a "squint" at the sky, it was overcast with clouds and the thermometer registered under 50 degrees. In other words, the day promised to be a raw, cloudy day and naturally that would react upon the spirits of men.

It did squeeze a few rain drops from the clouds just as we started for church. However, as the day wore on every unpleasant aspect of the weather cleared up until finally the sun shone gloriously and the day was perfect.

THE 6.30 SERVICE

As usual, the early celebration of the Holy Communion was very well attended. Many "old timers" were present, and also we had an interesting sprinkling of soldiers and marines—young men, members of the parish—who belong to us.

The music rendered by the Junior Choir was a sweet and an appealing hymn we used to sing in Sunday School, way back yonder when we were boys.

The general musical arrangement of the service was very interesting. After the Processional Hymn, 169, the choir rendered the anthem "Christ our Passover" by Schilling, with a snap and spirit and precision which gave a new and beautiful interpretation to that grand composition. Following the Ante-Communion the choir sang "The Resurrection" by Stults and after the announcements and during the Offering they rendered the third selection, "And when the Sabbath was Past."

Following the Communion Service the choir rendered the inspiring "Gloria in Excelsis" by Mozart and the service was brought to a close by the choir singing the Sevenfold Amen by Staner and the Recessional, No. 172, "Jesus Christ is Risen Today."

One hundred and thirty-one women and girls and eight-two men and boys receved their Easter Communion at this early service, making a total of two hundred and thirteen.

THE 10.30 SERVICE

The later Celebration was exactly like the first as to the musical program. The personnel of the congregation was altogether different. On glancing over the church we could see many an old friend who had not been in St. John's for many a year. Naturally, we felt happy in having them with us on this queen feast of the Christian year. As to size, the attendance was much larger than that of the first service. One rather curious circumstance occurred which is worth recording.

After the service our count showed that one hundred and ten women and girls and one hundred and ten men and boys received, making a total of two hundred and twenty souls participating. In other words, adding those making their Easter Communion at both services, we had a grand total of four hundred and thirty-three St. Johnites who bowed the knee before our risen Lord on that day.

No doubt there were many parishes who had five or six times as many, but then their circumstances and conditions are more favorable than ours. For us the count of over four hundred faithful communicants is something grand. If we were Methodists I'm sure we would shout, "Praise God."

And why not?

THE FINAL SERVICE

In the afternoon, the part of the day dedicated to our Church School Easter exercises, we had as usual, a most exciting session. As soon as the scholars arrived their Mite Chests were opened and contents counted and credited on the class slip opposite the name of the scholar who brought it. After all the Mite Chests were in and contents counted each class deposited the receipts in a canvass bag.

The real excitement came when we began to gather up the Grace Boxes. We had said that the holder of a Grace Box could give it to whatever Sunday School class they might be interested in. We are afraid they were somewhat overcome when suddenly representatives of classes sought them out and begged the boxes for their classes. After the battle was over we were surprised as well as pleased to learn that the Intermediate Department had captured almost half of the boxes.

CONFIRMATION, WHITSUNDAY, JUNE 1st, 8 P. M.

After several announcements, including the Confirmation Date, Sunday, June 1st, whch is Whitsunday and the date of the Confirmation Class for juniors of school age, Friday, April 18th, we distributed the prizes for regular attendance to services during Lent. This year we gave to each a beautiful wooden cross on a stand. Folks were well pleased with them. We have a few left which we will sell for twenty-five cents each if any parishioner should desire to buy one.

Then, of course, we distributed Easter Eggs to the scholars, teachers and officers of the School.

By this time a rough count of the Sunday School Lenten Offering had been made and the total appeared to be about $800.00. We will have more accurate figures later. One thing we know, we have maintained our standard of missionary effort.

The last item on our afternoon program was the distribution of Easter Lillies among the sick and the shut-ins of the parish. This is a tradition of old St. John's. We like to take some of our Easter joy into the homes of those who, through physical handicaps, cannot join us in our Easter services.

Then, after a massed salute to the Cross we brought to a close one of the happiest Easters we have ever experienced and turned our weary steps towards home.

OUR GRACE BOXES

Our list of Grace Box holders is always a sort of select list of our membership in the sense that each holder is supposed to ask for a box instead of being asked to take one. The idea being that whoever volunteers to take a box and place it on the table when food is served so that each member of the family can drop a small coin in it as a material token of his thanksgiving to God for the food He provides for his children. Then when Easter comes the GRACE BOX, as it is called, is brought to the Church and given to the Lenten Offering for Missions. A fund which enables us to meet our Diocesan apportionment too.

This Easter our GRACE BOXES played a significant part in swelling our Offering and, incidentally, was larger than that of Easter 1940. The total received thus far is $85.00.

The names of this Distinguished Company thus far reporting are as follows. Of course others may turn in their boxes later. If they do it will be noted in the next issue of the BROADCASTER.

THE MAN POWER OF ST. JOHNS

Easter day revealed the strength of the Parish in its man power which was most impressive and inspires us to want to do something about it. At the early celebration EIGHTY-TWO MEN AND BOYS made their Communion. At the Second Service ONE HUNDRED AND TEN MEN AND BOYS received. The total turnout for the day therefore was ONE HUNDRED AND NINETY-TWO. These figures do not include the men and boys who attended the afternoon Sunday School Lenten Service. Nor do we include many who were unavoidably absent from all services because of illness or work. Our estimate of the Man Power of St. John's is about TWO HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-FIVE. We believe the figure is very conservative.

It is rather a staggering exhibition of MAN POWER! One cannot help speculating what mighty things WE MEN COULD DO FOR GOD IN SOUTHWARK were we to co-operate on making the old church a big old Philadelphia force for AMERICANISM and CHRISTIANITY in the place where such a force is most needed. I would like to form a CHRIST-AMERICAN SOCIETY in the Parish. I would like to have for our Symbol the American flag. I would like to have the Sign of the Cross as the ever present inspiration of us all.

The Program of our Christ-American Society would be very simple: 1. A meeting once a month. 2. The Creed repeated at every meeting. 3. Making acquaintances with men and boys of the community in a natural social friendly way. 4. Give a smoker or an entertainment now and then. 5. Have no dues but take up a camp town whenever we want to have a social evening. 6. Always invite a friend to come with you. 7. Try to induce foreigners who want to live in America to take out naturalization papers and help them fill them out. 8. Consult your Rector on all matters that need advice. 9. Every member of the C. A. S. be careful never to miss his Communion unless it is unavoidable. 10. There will be no officers. When a meeting is held a chairman will be nominated and elected for that meeting. His term shall expire when the meeting closes. 11. A list of members with names and addresses will be in the custody of the Rector of the Parish. 12. Our Pledge to our flag and the Creed of our Church will be our only obligations.

A parish with not less than 275 men and boys banded together in a C. A. S. can work mightily for God and Country in Southwark and help drive out alien bodies who are working so zealously to destroy American and Christian ideals.

If the idea appeals notify the Rector. He is all for it.

CONFIRMATION SERVICE

Sunday, June 1st, Whitsunday, is Confirmation day at old St. John's. The service will be at 8 P. M. and Bishop Taitt will officiate.

St. John's Parish has the reputation of presenting classes important in numbers as well as in training. This year we hope to live up to our reputation; but we were somewhat handicapped by falling victim to the first serious illness of our experience last summer. The sickness did no particular damage and shortly we were back to normal. But our physician insisted that nature had given her warning and it was dicreet to heed and cut down on some of our work. Consequently we have not made the same progress along some lines of work. Added to this was the increased pressure of City Mission responsibilities because of the prolonged and painful illness of our Chief Executive. To make conditions even more difficult an epidemic of sickness and accidents and resignations seemed to overtake the C. M. and jammed the works pretty completely for months. As all know—our first responsibility is to the C. M. Therefore the parochial work of St. John's received very sketchy attention. However, we are hoping we have enough active and loyal members upon whom we can rely for help in the emergency.

CONFIRMATION INSTRUCTION

Elizabeth Jaeschke volunteered again to instruct the children of school age every Friday at 4 P. M. That offer to help is most heartening. She did a splendid job last year. Our program for Confirmation instruction for all grades are the same as that of a year ago: Friday, 4 P. M., Children's Class in S. S. room. Sunday, 10:45 A. M., Sermon of Instruction; 2:30 P. M., Intermediate Department Instruction; 2:30 P. M., Main School instruction.

CONFIRMATION, WHITSUNDAY, JUNE 1st, 8 P. M.

CONFIRMATION OF CHILDREN

When is a child old enough to be confirmed? Some parents say, when the child reaches the age of 12 years. Unfortunately we personally do not subscribe to that superstition. What can there possibly be about the age of 12 that makes a child immune from temptation and sin than is the age of 10 for instance? Upon what authority do parents base this peculiar claim? Certainly it is not upon that of the Book of Common Prayer where it specifically states that the child's sponsors are to take heed that the child about to be baptized, be brought to the Bishop to be confirmed by him so soon as he has been sufficiently instructed. In other words the Church places no age limit on Confirmation. Age has nothing to do with the qualification of a child for Confirmation. All of us know that many a child of 7 or 8 years are more spiritually conscious than many an adult of 70 or 80 years. Who was it who made the statement that unless our faith was as that of little children we could not enter into the Kingdom of Heaven?

Furthermore, there is a big advantage in confirming children at an early age. Train the twig and the tree will grow accordingly. So is it with children. Begin Christian training as soon after birth as possible through Baptism. Keep constantly at it through babyhood. Watch the awakening of moral and spiritual concepts—they are as buds about to flower. Do not lay stress on the age of the child but induct him into the mysteries of the Christian faith as early in life as possible. Note the way our Roman brothers approach the subject. If ever you have the chance observe the procession of Tots on their way for Confirmation. The Roman Church knows its business right down to the ground and brings the children into the bosom of the Church when very young on the principle that EARLY IMPRESSIONS NEVER DIE.

IN PROVERBS 22:6 you are admonished to train up the child in the way he should go; and when he is old he will not depart from it."

IN ECCLESIASTES 12:1 "We are told to remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth."

IN MATTHEW 19:13-15 is recorded an incident in our Lord's ministry well worth our study: "Then were brought unto him LITTLE children, that he should put his hands on them and pray. And his disciples rebuked them. But Jesus said, Suffer the little children and forbid them not to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of Heaven. And he laid his hands on them.

We would call your attention to two points in this story: FIRST, the children were little, i.e., young. SECOND, Jesus laid his hands on them. Perhaps this was the first Confirmation, when Jesus invited the little children to come to him.

IN ST. MARK 10:13. This beautiful story is repeated.

IN ST. LUKE 18:15. This same gracious story is told.

And note carefully that in not one of these stories does Jesus inquire if the children had reached the age of 12 years—talismatic to so many parents.

In the Greek church it was the custom of the priest to give the child his first communion immediately after he was christened.

CONFIRMATION OF ADULTS

We no sooner dispose of the false idea about children being too young to be confirmed than we are faced with the opposite statement that others are too old for Confirmation. Will some wise person please tell us just what is the right time to be confirmed! Certainly nobody is getting up and saying—you cannot be confirmed AFTER you are 12 years old just like you cannot be confirmed BEFORE that age! That would be a silly idea. And as a matter of fact there is no such thing as being too old. There is no such thing as being past redemption—no matter how wicked your life has been, nor how long you have been a sinner. God and His holy Angels have greater joy in Heaven over one sinner that repenteth than over ninety and nine just persons who need no repentance. So, if your parents were careless and neglected to bring you to the Bishop to be confirmed by him when you were a child—rest assured that, even though you have wandered far in evil ways—you are still his son—daughter—and if you will follow the path of the prodigal son it will lead you too back home where the Father awaits you with the precious gift of pardon and a place in his household.

There are many men and women in our Parish who are not active sinners who would make ideal Christian workers if they would but shake themselves loose from their spiritual indifference and come out on the Lord's side. If they would only CONFIRM before God and his Congregation the vows and promises that they made or were made by their sponsors for them in baptism and claim their kinship to Jesus Christ they would influence profoundly, for good, those whose lives they touch.

SOJOURNERS

Many men, and women too, have moved in the Parish and have severed their connections with churches from the community whence they came. Now they are foot loose and have made no church contacts since they came. In many instances they have a good spiritual background—and would be a credit to any church of their adoption. We cordially invite all such to take up their abode with us. We can do you good and you could help and strengthen us in our work for Jesus Christ. Confirmation would mean to you merely the conforming to the rules and regulations of the Protestant Episcopal Church. In much the same way as you might be received in full communion in some other Christian body by the right hand of fellowship; except to us, it would have a deeper spiritual significance.

Or, if you come from a branch of the Christian Church whose orders we accept as valid, either the Greek, Coptic or Roman branch, you would be received by our beloved Bishop into full communion with us in declaring your allegiance to the Episcopal Church.

We shall be the most happy to welcome such sojourners among us. We will give them a cordial welcome if they will cast their lot with us.

PLEASE COME, AND BE ONE OF US.

EASTER WAS A BIG DAY ALL DAY

* * * * *

1. Our Congregations were big.
2. Our Communions were big.
3. Our offerings were big.
4. Our Lenten Offering was big.

The FORWARD in SERVICE roll call will be May 4-11 inclusive.

Children of school age will receive their Confirmation instruction every Friday at 4 P. M. Mrs. Herman Jaeschke will teach the class. Bring or send your children.

CONFIRMATION, WHITSUNDAY, JUNE 1st, 8 P. M.

One is never too old to be confirmed and stand courageously for the cause of Christ and his church.

Some mite chests and grace boxes are missing. Please return them next Sunday and help increase our Sunday School Lenten Offering.

We are very pleased with the increase in our Easter offering. There are still some Easter offering envelopes missing. If we were to receive them too—our offering would nearly touch the $1,000.00 point. Why not turn in yours and help us reach the goal.

We tried to "say it with flowers" to all our shut-in members on Easter Day. If we overlooked any person we hope some one will tell us.

The Presiding Bishop's Forward in Service movement will make progress just in so far as you and I help it along.

Don't you remember how, years ago, we would choose a Sunday for a Missionary journey through the Parish to stir up our delinquent Sunday School scholars? Well, Bishop Tucker's Forward in Service plan is just exactly that—only on a national instead of a parochial scale. So, when your Chairman drafts you for service be good enough to respond and help draw the attention of Bishop Tucker to the missionary spirit of St. John's Parish.

And remember, the Forward in Service is your personal responsibility. If it fails in its purpose you and I will be at fault.

SUNDAY, MAY 4th IS THE BIG DAY!
DON'T DARE TO BE ABSENT!!

Bishop Francis M. Taitt, D.D., will visit the Parish of St. John the Evangelist Sunday evening, June 1st, at 8 o'clock, to confirm the class of candidates to be presented at that time.

The date of the service is the anniversary of the birth of the Christian church, Pentecost or Whitsunday—the day on which the Holy Spirit descended upon the Apostles and they went forth carrying the Gospel near and far.

HAVE YOU GOT YOUR CANDIDATE FOR CONFIRMATION YET?

CONFIRMATION, WHITSUNDAY, JUNE 1st, 8 P. M.

INFORMATION PLEASE

What does the feast of the Pentecost signify?

What happened on the day of Pentecost following the Ascension of our Lord?

Why is the day of Pentecost called Whitsunday by Christians

When does Holy Thursday occur?

REMEMBER THE DATE—SUNDAY EVE., JUNE 1st, AT 8 O'CLOCK.

When Bishop Tucker's messengers call on you they come representing one of the biggest misionary rallies ever conceived by the Christian Church. Help them therefore to do their work efficiently by co-operating with them 100 per cent.
